This is written in the hope that it may reach the eye of our Mission Board so soon to meet in St. Louis, and that in their apportio nment for the next ensuing Conf. year they will act on the principle of "honor to whom honor is due."

GBEETINGS from COLORADO.

Dear Methodist: Permit me in the name of our Conference to take you by the hand and assure yon of our interest in you all and the work you are doing in that white field.

We are standing "shoulder to shoulder" with you in similar fields, and reaching our hands back, and touching the hand of those in the solid ranks we would be the conductor of their spiritual life and energy to you.—

Some meetings of special interest have been held within our bounds lately. About fifteen conversions at "Colorado Springs" under Bro.Smilt, and helping brethren and about the same number at Trinidad, the pastorate of Bro. Garrison.

At Trinidad I found two brothers of yore—Rev. Eugene Lee — a L. P. in your Conf. bounds and a student at Central College. They are staunch Methodists and order the "Montana Methodist" sent to them at Trinidad.

Find enclosed amount and address

Onr hearts leap for joy at the gladsome news from the "coast" of widespread and deep revivals of religion. With such fires burning on three sides of us may we not hope to feel their warmth, and catch a spark?

The work here is very pleasant and hopeful. The seats (200 chairs) frequently filled at evening service and good spiritual state.

I send special greeting to your brethren whom I have "known in the flesh" Bros. Stanley, Britt, Parnall and Cockrill, and pray God's blessing on you all.

Cordially,

J. E. Squires.

OBSERVATIONS.

Butte, Montana, the metropolis of the state, held its municipal election April 14th. The "Democratic Daily" the following morning displayed a "crowing rooster." The reader of this will know the results. As a citizen we protest against drawing party lines in city elections. We prefer men above partisans, to control such interests. In this we are in a very humble minority. Patriotism and party preference are poles as well as at the polls. Do you see?

Rev. Barbee "talks back" to Rev. Raleigh about a certain pamphlet, which has been reviewed by both. Read and judge as to the merits of the rejoinder.

Bro. Raleigh should not forget how he headed an editorial, "Sophistry and Falsehood." If a man sow the wind he shall reap the whirlwind. Be fair in your reviews or say nothing.

If the opinions of some of the wisest men in the land are worth trusting, Mr. Edward Bellamy's remedy for our social defects misses the mark and will soon be known as a "still-born vagary." Indeed we can not ignore the fact that the national man is a selfish being—very.

"The Problems" of our times are difficult of solution. Who is sufficient for these things? Too many alas! Say, I am. Not by might, nor by power but by my Spirit—saith the Lord. Let us hold to the moorings, lest in the open sea our frail ships be wrecked.

What think you of this caption to a recent contribution to the "Arkansas Methodist?" "Steam and Electricity for Business-Ox-carts for the Church."

In the St. Louis Adrocate Rev. Dr. J. Ditzler closes a letter in answer to inquiries with these words: "There is not a great standard lexicon extant, of modern print, recognized by the European universities and critics that does not gives prinkle,or pour,or both, in the language in which the lexicon is published, as a definition or definitions of baptidzo."

A few days ago we registered, with a view to voting at the municipal election in Butte, Mont. While waiting for our turn it was interesting to note the birth-place of those giving their names. There were two from Ireland, one from Germany, one from Texas, one from Tennesee, and myself from Alabama. What the politics and religion, would be rather speculation. We associated one man with Rum, two with Rome, one with Rationalism. Suffice it to say I was a Methodist and a citizen.

The editor of a secular paper exhorts thus on the illiteracy and meagre funds for the public school system in Louisiana: "To parents, pupils and teachers,—this is a question of grand importance, and hardly less to the publicist and philanthropist who look with disfavor on whatever tends to retard the progress of education and enlightenment." This twinkle of the ——STAR is very bright, but what of that twinkle on the next page which displays a two-third column advertisement of the Louisiana State Lottery?

Chancellor L. C. Garland, of Vanderbilt University, was eighty years old, March 21st. We see it stated by Dr. E. E. Hoss, that with the exception of two years since nineteen, this octogenarian has been continuously in the lecture room, and there is not the slightest sign of abatement in his mental vigor. His knowledge of the Science of Physics has had less to do with this grand man's longevity than the practice of the Christian religion. Since the first day we met this man in his office in the Vanderbilt, we have held him in profound respect. Let us pray for more of "his kind", to guide our youth and strengthen our nation.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Following is a summary of the Church Extension work for the year ending March 31st, 1890:

Total payments by the church on general account, $61,039.77; total payment by the church on Loan Fund account, $5,516.50; total payment by the church on Parsonage general accounts, $4,401.78; total payments by the church on all accounts, $71,122.05 Increase during the year, $ 3,206.27.

WORK.

All the Boards helped this year 364 churches paying them, $84,-549.32; all the Boards helped last year 344 churches paying them $63,-664.03; showing an increase of 20 churches and increased payments of $20,885.29.

All the Boards helped this year 40 parsonages paying them $5,183.01; all the Boards helped last year 38 parsonages paying them $5.254.74; showing an increase of 2 parsonages and decreased payments of $71.73.

Your brother very truly,

David Morton, Cor. Sec,y.

More Secretaries, eh ? Let us add, more money and more men for the west, and we will do the thing up brown. That we will. "Let her roll!"

——

Let us have less of plush cushioned seats and lofty church spires in the south till we can give the sinews of war to the frontier preachers in the western wilds, who are trying to give the bread of life to the poor who are starving for the gospel. Save that "extra" on the out-side one hundred and fifty feet in the air, and lay a foundation for a chapel on the plaines. We know there are two sides to this matter. Please don't look at one side too much!

UNCHRISTIAN AMERICA.

It is truly humilating, to be confronted with the shameful fact set forth in the following from the CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN:

"Rev. O. F. Burgess says it is a sad fact that the four Protestant nations most interested in missions—viz Germany, Holland, Great Britain and the United States of America—are also most closely identified with the liquor traffic with those same countries they are trying to evangelize. Christian America has been sending liquor to other countries at the rate of 6.000,000 gallons per year, including 807,000 gallons to Africa. For every missionary sent to Africa, America is sending 100,000 gallons of Boston rum. For every hundred souls converted to God to American missionaries, a thousand are ruined by American rum. Well does Mr, Burgess add, "It is high time we made our hands clean of this innocent blood, or cease to claim the name of Christian."—Ark. Meth.

WESLEYAN MONUMENTAL.

[Below we give our readers a description of the church as it now stands. We copy from the WESLEYAN ADVOCATE, (Macom Ga.) reprinted from the SAVANNAH NEWS:]

"Wesley church was built as a monument to the founder of Methodism, and it belongs, it may be said, not to the Methodists of Savannah alone but to the Methodists of the whole world. The building of the church was conceived by Rev. A. M. Wynn, its present pastor, who began the erection while he was pastor of Wesley chapel at Lincoln and South Broad streets, fourteen years ago. When the matter was first brought before the congregation there was a great deal of enthusiasm over it, and subscriptions from all quarters were large. The idea of having a monument to Wesley was a very proud thought to Savannahians.

After the church was partly completed and Mr. Wynn's pastorate expired, work was suspended. The lower part of the edifice was so far completed, however, as to be occupied as an auditorium until the main auditorium could be finished. The work was practically at a standstill until Mr. Wynn returned to complete it; which has now been accomplished so far as the interior is concerned. The auditorium is the handsomest in the city. It is forty three feet in height from the floor to the ceiling. The organ and choir gallery are just behind the pulpit. The frescoing is in deep rich colors and is handsomely done. It purports to be the same as the frescoing of the masters. The design is in terra cotta. The walls are laid off in blocks with interwoven flowers. The ceiling is frescoed in large circles. On each side are large beams extending down fifteen feet, to which are suspended lamps. Two pretty chandeliers are in the center of the ceiling. Between each of the large beams are suspended three large circles, with ornamentations. In the organ gallery the ornamentation is very pretty. On each side of the organ gallery are three red columns. The wood-work of the pulpit and organ gallery is white ash. The pews are of white ash, finished in oil. All of the furniture corresponds, and is upholstered in old gold silk plush.

The windows are stained glass. The prevailing color is a beautiful amber, instead of blue, as in most churches. This corresponds with the light ash wood. The carpet is woven especially for the church It is an oak color. The stained glass windows are memorial windows, and on each are the names of the leading Methodists in America and England. Thirty-eight names are placed upon the bottom of the windows. In the large window, just in front of the pulpit, are life-size busts of John and Charles Wesley. The names of Wesley are in the middle section of the window. In the large circle in the top of the window is a globe representing the world, and across it is written Wesley's famous utterance, "The world is my parish."

Six flights of steps lead to the auditorum. Four are in the front and two in the rear.

The church has cost so far $60,000. It is estimated that it will require $6,000 to complete the towers, one of which will be 136 feet high and the other 196 feet, and to stucco the walls, which the building committee hopes to have completed within the next year.

HOW WE DO GROW.

Read the following from the TRADESMAN, let your heart expand with thankfulness. "What ails us?" Can it be possible that the South, the former home of chivalry, large-hearted hospitality, wise statemanship and unrivalled oratory, has been over-run and conquered by mammon worshippers? How humilating the meagerness of our Southern investments in colleges and charitable institutions, compared with this statement of material growth:

The growth of manufactories in the South, by decades, is shown as follows:

YEAR. ESTABL,	CAPIT'L.	VAL.OF PRODUCTS.
1850—20,405,	77,142,147	$ 97.642,439
1860—28,371,	116,241,387,	193,482,899
1870—36,335,	138,578.183,	257,618.236
1880—44,563,	179,366,230,	315,924,794
1890—55,531,	507, 349;000,	675.332,000

The increase in the number of establishments in the past ten years is 61.7 per cent. The increase in capital in the past ten years is 185.1 per cent. The increase in the value of products in ten years is 113.8 per cent.—Wesleyan Adv.

A Good Answer.

A young bride, of high social position, having just moved to the city where her husband lived, was called upon by one of the leading ladies of a fashionable dancing club and formally invited to attend its dances as an introduction into the society of her new home. With beautiful candor and great firmness she thanked the lady and those she represented for their courtesy, but she said:

"I am a Christian—and when I was converted I promised the Lord to abandon the dance and devote myself to His service. Besides, my husband is irreligious and his soul's salvation will depend upon my life. I must work to win him. Then, I dare say, I can find much to do in this city in visiting the poor and the sick, so that I will find employment without going to dances."

This reply was born of the spirit that made martyrs. That young wife astounded her worldly-minded visitor, who remarked after leaving the home: "I feel as if I had committed a great sin."

What a noble example to the cowardly, nominal Christians who throng the membership of our churches !

The worldly in her new home may shudder, but the godly should cherish her as one of the Saviour's brightest jewels.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Charity Thinketh No Evil.

"She has a royal nature, and I cannot believe that any influence will hold her long in a wrong path, even though it drew her into it temporarily. How necessary it is to know all sides of a case before passing judgment upon it."

Thus wrote a lady of her friend who under strong influence had adopted certain erroneous opinions and acted upon them. The first thought that must come to one on reading this charitable utterance is that the writer of it must be a large-hearted and noble woman—such a woman as one would love to have for a friend. She would not throw away an erring sister for one offense, perhaps not for many; but seeing the possible good in her would use her influence to develop it and to overcome the evil.

Is not this the true Christian spirit : and is it not a thousand pities that we do not oftener see it manifested toward those who fall into temptation and are taken in the wiles of the adversary?

He Didn't Know His Father.

The Secretary of a Young Men's Association, reading from a letter just recieved, said to Major Whittle, So and So,' naming a wealthy merchant in Chicago, 'and he says that his son has run away, taking some money with him, and that he has reasons to believe that he is in our city. He asks us to look out for him, and, if we can, persuade him to return, as he is willing to give him another chance, to keep him from going to utter ruin. He has placed money in his agent's hands to pay all his bills, and advance him all he needs for his expenses home. Just shortly after that letter had arrived, a young man came in to see if he could get a situation. He looked as if he had seen better days, and I asked him where he had slept last night. 'In a dry-goods box,' was his reply. 'How did you come to such a state?' And gradually, bit by bit, I got him to tell me all his story. How he got into fast company, and taken his father's money, and had to flee from home. But he was going to do right now, and if he could only get a situation I should see. 'But why do you not go back to your father?' 'Go back to my father? Ah, you do not know my father., But it was he who did not know his father.' When I handed him his father's letter, and he had read it he said, with tears in his eyes, 'I did not think my father was so good.' He started off at once for Chicago, there to meet his father, whose love he now realized, and returned more than he had ever done before. So the sinner does not know his Father. He thinks God is a stern Being, watching keenly the doings of men, that he may punish them, Oh, what a mistake. Though God hates sin, He pities and loves the sinner, and has given His Son to die for them."

Judge Not

The man who judges theism by the errors of its sects and the vices of its imitators is very much like the man who, having heard a good deal about the ocean, sets out from his inland desert to see it, and plants himself where a great sewer empties into it from a populous city. He sits down on a dock to contemplate the muck and mire when the tide is out. He looks at the oyster cans and paper collars and dead dogs; he surveys the sluggish refuse that bubbles and crawls in tepid currents, and he exclaims: "Well, is this the blue, sparkling sea, whose foam gave birth to Aphrodite and whose crested billows have rolled so long through poetry and song? It won't do." You feel like taking that man by the neck and lifting him up so he can see something.—A. C. Wheeler. But many judge not only religion and the Bible and churches in this false way, but their neighbor's character and life.—Peloubet's Notes.

Wesley and the Bird.

One day Mr. Wesley was sitting by an open window, looking out over the bright and beautiful fields. Presently a little bird flitting about in the sunshine, attracted his attention. Just then a hawk came sweeping down toward the little bird. The poor thing, very much frightened, was darting here and there, trying to find some place of refuge. In the bright sunny air, in the leafy trees, or the green fields, there was no hiding-place from the fierce grasp of the hawk. But seeing an open window and a man sitting by it, the bird flew, in its extremity, toward it, and, with a beating heart and quivering wing found refuge in Mr. Wesley's bosom He sheltered it from the threatening danger, and saved it from a cruel death.

Mr. Wesley was at that time suffering from severe trials, and was feeling the need of refuge in his own time of trouble, as much as did the trembling little bird that nestled so safely in his bosom. So he took up his pen and wrote that sweet hymn:

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly."

That prayer grew into one of the most beautiful hymns in our language, and multitudes of people, when in sorrow and danger, have found comfort while they have said or sung the ast lines of that hymn.

Advice to Young Men.

So you were a little too pert, and spoke without thinking, did you, my son? And you got picked up right suddenly on your statement, eh? Oh, well, that's all right; that happens to older men than you every day. I have noticed that you have a very positive way of filing a decision where other men state an opinion, and you frequently make a positive assertion where older men merely express a belief. But never mind; you are young. You will know less as you grow older. "Don't I mean you will know more?" Heaven forbid, my boy. No, indeed; I mean that you will know less. You will never know more than you do now; never. If you live to be ten thousand years older, you will never again know so much as you do now. No hoary-headed sage whose long and studious years were spent in reading men and books ever knew so much as a boy of your age. A girl of fifteen years knows about as much, but then she gets over it sooner and more easily. "Does it cause a pang, then, to get rid of early knowledge?" Ah, my boy, it does. Pulling eye-teeth and molars will seem like pleasant recreation alongside of shedding off great solid slabs and layers of wisdom and knowledge that now press upon you like geological strata. "But how are you to get rid of all this superincumbent wisdom?" Oh, easily enough my boy; just keep on airing it; that's the best way. It won't stand constant use, and it disintegrates rapidly on exposure to air.—Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

Simple Faith.

A story is told of a street boy in London who had both legs broken by a dray passing over them. He was laid away in one of the beds of the hospital to die, and another little creature of the same class was laid near by, picked up sick with famin-fever. The latter was allowed to lie down by the side of the little crushed boy. He crept up to him and said:

"Bobby, did you ever hear about Jesus?"

"No, I never heard of Him."

"Bobby, I went to mission school once, and they told us that Jesus would take you to heaven when you die, and you'd never have hunger any more and no more pain, if you axed Him."

"I couldn't ask such a great big gentleman as He to do anything for me. He wouldn't stop to speak to a boy like me."

"But He'll do all that if you ax Him."

"How can I ax Him if I don't know where He lives; and how could I get there when both my legs is broke?"

"Bobby, they told me at mission school as how Jesus passes by. Teacher says He goes around. How do you know but what He might come around to this hospital this very night? You'd know Him if you was to see Him."

"But I can't keep my eyes open. My legs fee so awful bad. Doctor says I'll die."

"Bobby, hold up hour hand, and He'll know what you want when He passes by."

They got the hand up. It dropped. Tried again. It slowly fell back. Three times he got up the little hand only to let it fall. Bursting into tears he said, "I'll give it up."

"Bobby, lend me yer hand; put yer elbow on my piller; I can do without it."

So one hand was propped up. And when they came in the morning the boy lay dead, his hand still held up for Jesus.

OUR WESTERN WORK.

"Our preachers in the Denver and Montana Conferences are looking anxiously to the meeting of the Missionary Board.

The action of the Board will be regarded as the chief factor to determine the progress that shall be made in the coming year, or whether any progress shall be made at all.

Many of those who plead the cause of our work in the two Conferences named, and on the Pacific coast, seem to assume that the Missionary Board and the bishops have little knowledge of the condition and needs of the church in those fields. In this they are mistaken. The work is not new. It has been in hand a good while, and we have had it written up from every standpoint. No doubt the Missionary Board will do the best they can for this part of the vineyard, not neglecting other needs as important and pressing. We have put our hand to the plough, and cannot look back now. If the ploughing be rough, we had better hitch a strong team and go ahead."

Thus writeth good Bro. Godbey, editor of the Southwestern Methodist. Now we do not know how our Denver Conference brethren feel about such deliverances as the above, but we believe we represent the sentiment of the Montana preachers and people as well, when we say, that we are not so self-sufficient as to think we know it all and that the Missionary Board and Bishops of the church know nothing about the condition and needs of the work. We know that the Board is composed of good men who are quick to discern the relation of things. We know that our Bishops, holy men of God, most of them have surveyed this field, each in turn and have a fairly correct idea of our possibilities. But we do say that neither the Board nor the Bishops have been on this field long enough, thus being given opportunity to study every thing in detail as these men on the ground who have knowledge of every brick and beam and board and shingle in the houses; of every family and in most every place of every individual in the flock; Who have personal knowledge of every friend of the church who supports us; just how old every town is, and what every thing sells for; who know just what the land will produce, ust what the products are worth; in fact, have such information as can only be gotten by spending years upon the ground. There are half a dozen men in the ministry of Montana who have such intimate knowledge of the facts here, as no connectional officer can possibly get under circumstances of a general visit. Now making allowance for our obtuseness in deductions for the wild fancy under the spell of romance among mountain peaks, gorges and solemnly silent canyons—for pride in rearing a superstructure in the foundations which "we have laid." We contend that three, five, eight, ten, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five years of close study of particulars place the men in the field beyond the line of theorizing—they are face to face with facts and to know something, and we think they have the right to a voice.

The Dr. says. "We have had it written up from every standpoint"—and a little further on, inadvertendly puts in a counter sentence, thus: "The mountains and the canyons, the pure air, the wonderful springs, are all held before the eyes of these men —not the work"—and hence men go out and fail. We know boys ten years old in Butte, who know better how to coast or spin a top than Dr. Godbey, who fills his place so ably in the editorial chair in the great Chicago of the West. Now Dr. spare us in our foolishness!

THE revival which abides is worth something. If when the meeting closes we lapse into the old ways and worse people get the wrong impression of a genuine revival. Keep the harness on, and the traces tight.

THE young person who was converted at the meeting, has been put to work. There is a steady growth. Those who have been let run at random, have cooled off and the temper of the steel is at a discount.

THE other day a good brother speaking of a certain class of people in this country said: They are very easily converted, but hard to keep converted. Our observation attests the truth of this. We can but have the impression that such conversions are of a very low order. Most genuine conversions stick.

THE picnic season has come: The places of resort are opening. The railroads leading out of all our cities have advertised low rates of travel for Sabbath, and the people of course flock to the springs and beer gardens and mountains making it exceedingly quiet for those left behind. The preachers say the thinning time has come, our congregations grow less and less, and we have a long dry time preaching to the faithful few. Let church members see to it that they do not "consult with the flesh" and do as the world does in this Sabbath desecration. Fresh air, fresh air is the cry. Indeed city people need airing, but let us not rob God for a little fresh air on Sunday. Why not go during the week? Some could who will not.

IF our good brethren in the East who believe so strongly in the superiority of man over the "weaker sex", wish a field to do some brawny work in, let them come West, for we have more men than women in our congregations, as a rule. At least this is our personal observation.

WHETHER the General Conference makes many changes in the laws of our church or not, the matter of most concern to the Western preachers, is that we turn some of our wealth and strong men into this field. Not that we have no such men, but that we need more of them, and all given better support.

BUTTE CITY, Montana, now prides herself in being the biggest business town in the State. She has the resources. Some of our sanguine calculators say we will put up five million dollars worth of houses this season. The Butte Mining district will produce twenty-five millions this year if she makes a reasonable advance over last year. A man has to own something to be called rich out here. Twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars will not distinguish a man in Butte. Real estate transfers now exceed anything in the history of the city. Oh that we could sanctify all the men and their mines. What a boom it would bring!

THE material return for every dollar our church puts in the Western field, if considered from a simple business standpoint would justify large investment. In this respect we feel safe in the assertion that our church as well as others can make very favorable exhibit with any other section where we operate. Why the hesitating, doubting policy? Let the church do a big thing like a railroad syndicate in building a million dollar tunnel through the Rocky Mountains. O, we haven't the money, it is said. We say again, we have the money. Much of it is corroding for the want of useful circulation. Awake ye greedy, stingy Methodists and honor your stewardship. Do the royal thing.

THE Church-member who habitually and willingly absents himself from the regular services of his Church makes the impression on his neighbors either that he has a poor opinion of its administration or that he puts a low estimate on the value of Christianity itself. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is." It is a bad manner. Stop it.—Nash. Ad.

We would add, such an one is in great danger of loosing his religion, if he has not already done it. He will have to call a halt in such course or it will come sooner or later. We think so.

THE editors may now look for a flood of fresh poetry—yes very fresh, that of the verdant type. We are no judge of poetry except to know when a poem suits us. The Scansion of Homer under Dr. Humphreys gave us as much as we wish for a life time in such lore. We are willing to barter with Bro. Dubose for good prose.

A PRIVATE note from Bro. Parnall had an item which almost persuades us to self-gratulation. We thank you for the kind words, good brother. And we thank you also for some plain talk, which as a rule is more wholesome than "enticing words of man's wisdom."

THE opportunity is now open for the preachers of the Montana Conference to enlarge our paper or make it a weekly at the next session of the Conference. By each man doing his best there would be no trouble in such advance. Consider this matter. It is worthy.

WITH our paper made a weekly, we might have the Bishop appoint some one to the tripple employment in our Conference, of editor, colportor and evangelist. Wouldn't that be work through? With proper co-operation we believe such a work by the proper man might be self-sustaining. Possibly.

BRO. STATELER will soon be "fetching a compass" in behalf of the Superanuated Preachers, Widows and Orphan's Fund. Success to him.

DIED.

Miss Ollie Hardgrave, the second daughter of John W. and Ellen K. Hardgrave, at the residence of her father, in Prickley Pear Valley, on the morning of April 14th, after an illness of four days. Scarlet fever, it is supposed, was the disease with which she died. Ollie was born at the mouth of Nelson Gulch the 14th day of Oct. 1872. She lived, it will be seen, 17 years and 6 months upon the theatre of God's grace in Christ Jesus before she entered upon an eternal and unchangable state. We can say, and that too, in a merited tribute to her memory, that she was a dutiful, sweet-spirited child and a favorite in the circles where she moved. She was a regular attendant at church and Sunday School, though she made no profession of religion. What her state is, we know not, as she was not approached upon this important subject. There is this, however, that may be said, from which inferences may be drawn relative thereto. A few hours after she was taken sick, she told her mother what she wanted done with her things, and when she had gotten through with their disposition among those who should survive her, her face was lit up with a smile of satisfaction, as if all necessary arrangements were now made for her passage into eternity. She seemed to be repentantly conscious of her approaching death from the beginning of her illness, which we are wont to regard as a favorable omen. But, in the fear of God and in the interest of souls, we must say in this connection, not however, as a decision in the case of this dear girl, that the more we study God's plan to save the soul through its rational and unreserved co-operation, and the broader our observation of the manner in which men of the world die, which we see is much like they have lived, the less confidence we have in a death-bed preparation for the great future into which we must go, and that too, with completed and unchangable characters. May Ollie's sudden and sad death be sanctified to the spiritual good of those who survive her. The funeral services were held at the family residence by the writer, after which a large procession followed her remains to their last resting place.

Spring Messages.

Looking out a few mornings since, one was greeted with a scene quite suggestive of mid-winter. During the night the ground was covered with snow, very different from the day preceding. Surely we are not able to judge correctly regarding the state of the weather either from prognostications of so-called prophets or from past experience.

Looking backward, I well remember some lovely Spring times, when even in March nature was robed in her rich garniture of emerald and joyous with the song of birds. Yet now in April, as yet no prolonged note of woodland warbler has given us a prelude to the wild burst of bird-land melody with which we shall be regaled as Spring advances. There has come to our ears just the faintest twittering, as if the birds were half afraid that old Winter would drive them back to Southern retreats in search of warmth.

Yet we are watching and waiting, not idly, certainly, in case of the farmers, whose vocation more than any other depends for success upon the state of the soil and the weather. The wise man declares in unequivocal terms the fate of the sluggard who "ploweth not by reason of the cold," and wisely the industrious farmer keeps diligently at work, knowing that His word is sure who has said, "that seed-time and harvest shall not fail."

How very inspiring is a bright, lovely Spring day succeeding the long and necessarily sad Winter days, when one must remain indoors. Even now a ray of vernal warmth breaks through a rift in the clouds, and illumines nature with its gladdening presence. How dependent some of us are upon external causes for our mental moods! I cannot speak for all, but for myself, I depend much upon sunshine for happiness. A bright and lovely day is so inspiring that one cannot fail to be better for its influence.

Surely our likes and dislikes, our predilections, our antagonisms and idiosyncracies in this life are but partial preparations for the enjoyment of the felicities of a life in the land where eternal Spring abides, and where the "Lamb is the light thereof."

Then carrying the similarity and sympathy between physical sunshine and temperament to our spiritual and social states, how like a benediction to one in distress is the presence of a cheerful person, who lives to bless others, their very smile bringing with it a panacea for heart-ache. We forget while under the blessed spell of cheering words, we forget while in their presence our troubles, our sickness and griefs. Oh! how great is the power of kind words or smiles of the sympathy of heart to heart! Like sunshine to the frozen earth, like dew to the thirsty flower, like balm to a wounded spirit, comes the bearer of tender messages, the dispenser of smiles, the kind words, the soft voice of a friend, healing by the balm of sympathy our griefs; smoothing by gentle ministrations of tender and unobtrusive kindness the rough places in our life, and weaving with gentle hand a garland fragrant with the aroma of kind actions, with which to beautify their own unselfish lives. Oh, for more smiles, for fewer frowns, for less of selfishness and more of selfabnegation, for more of the charity which is the essence of all genuine piety, then would earth wear a panoply of glory and Spring, both physical and spiritual, reign supernal in every heart.—Elizabeth M. Applebury.

"I CAN'T AFFORD IT."

"Indeed I can't afford it," was the frequent reply of a merchant when asked for a contribution to religious or missionary objects. He was doing an extensive and apparently lucrative business, and professed to be warm in his devotions to Christ. Yet his givings were very meager, when he gave at all; aud generally his ready excuse was at hand, "I cant afford it," as his apology for refusing even a trifle.

A well known gentleman, who lived in the same city, and sometimes acted as an unpaid collector for a very important missionary society called one day at the merchant's dwelling house to solicit a contribution. Often had he been denied at the office with the words, "I can't afford it," and in the grand residence as his eyes rested on the magnificence which several open doors unveiled, he began to discern that there was some truth in the apology after all.

The owner of the house shortly appeared. His visitor explained the reason of his call but immediately added: "I see, sir, that you really cannot afford it, and I can not think of presenting any claim upon you. Such a scale of expenditure as I see indicated by everything around me can indeed leave you little, if anything for the cause of Christ. I must look elsewhere for support to our operations. Good morning sir."

The well-meant reproof did its intended work. The merchant ere long sought an interview with his faithful monitor' and thanked him warmly for his straightforward but brotherly remarks. Handing him a check for $200, as a donation to the missionary society for which he was collecting, he said that henceforth he meant to act as a steward of God and that never again would his style of living prove a hinderance to the exercise of ardent piety and practical love.—*Ark. A GENUINE LOVE STORY.

This story was originally told by Spurgeon: A young clergyman and his bride were invited guests at a large party given by a wealthy parishioner. In all the freshness and elegance of the bridal wardrobe, the young wife shone among the throng, distinguished by her comliness and vivacity and rich attire; and when, during the evening, her young husband drew her aside and whispered to her that she was the most beautiful woman in all the company, and that his heart was bursting with pride and love for her, she thought herself the happiest wife in the whole world.

Ten years later the same husband and wife were guests at the same house, when there gathered a similar gay company. The wife of ten years ago wore the same dress she had worn on the previous occasion, and of course, it had been altered and remade, and was old-fashioned and almost shabby. Toil and care and motherhood, and pinched circumstances, had taken the roses out of her cheeks and the lithe spring out of her form. She sat apart from the crowd, careworn and preoccupied. Her small hands roughened with course toil, were ungloved, for the minister's salary was painfully small. A little apart the ten-year husband stood and looking at his wife, and as he observed her faded dress and weary attitude, a great sense of all her loving faithfulness came over his heart. Looking up she caught his earnest gaze, and noticed that his eyes were filled with tears. She rose and went to him; for an explanation of his emotion; and when he tenderly took her hand and placing it on his arm, led her away from the crowd, and told her how he had been thinking of her as she looked ten years before, when she was a bride, and how much more precious she was to him now, and how much more beautiful, for all her shabby dress and roughened hands, and how he appreciated all her sacrifices and patient toil for him and their children, a great wave of happiness filled her heart, and light shone in her face so that it gave more than youthful beauty, and in all the company there was not so happy a couple as this husband and wife, their hearts and faces aglow from the flaming up of pure sentiment that transfigured and ennobled and glorified all the toil and privations they have endured.—Christian Repository.

PUT ON ANOTHER HOOP.

Anonymous.)

If people always acted upon the suggestion of the cooper in the following incident, many disagreeable quarrels over trifling matters would certainly be avoided: Two neighbors, a cooper and a farmer, were spending the evening together. Both were professors of religion, but of different denominations. Their conversation was at first upon topics relating to practical religion; but after a time it diverged to the points of difference between the two Churches to which they belonged. It was first only a good-natured discussion; then it became a dispute. The cooper was the first to percieve its unprofitable and injurious tendency, and remarked: "We are springing apart from each other; let us put on another hoop —let us pray." They kneeled down and prayed together, after which they spent the remainder of the evening lovingly together, conversing on the things of the kingdom in which they both felt an equal interest.

Is Not this the Apostolic Church.

The growth of Methodism in numbers and wealth has been phenomenal.

But little more than a century ago it had no existence. Now, according to the latest statistics, in has in all its branches in the United States, 29,590 ministers and 4,723,881 communicants, of which 12,802 ministers and 2,154,349 members belong to the Methodist Episcopal church. We have 21,361 houses of worship in which services are supported at an aggregate annual cost of $17,295,-734. Our church property of all kinds has gone on increasing until it now reaches an aggregate of about $100,000,000. The total wealth of our membership is over $1,500,000.-000. Their total annual contributions to all evangelizing agencies amount to about $20,000,000. These enormous aggregates certainly show a marvelous growth. We know of nothing to equal it in modern ecclessiastical history.—Central Christian Advocate.

Verily I say unto you Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein. Luke 18:17.

The following remarkable incident is related by Dr. T. D. Carruthers, the founder of an inebriate asylum at Hartford, Conn. Calvin B———, a wealthy New York merchant, was walking up Broadway, New York, sadly under the influence of opium, to which he was greatly addicted. He strolled into a bookstore in a half-sleeping condition and said to the store-keeper, "Give me a book to drive away the blue devils." The man handed him a copy of Rev. E. Payson Hammond's "Conversion of Children," a book written more especially to assist Christian parents and workers in leading children to the Savior. The merchant paid for the book without knowing what it was, put it in his pocket, and found his way to his beautiful home. There he threw himself on a lounge and was soon buried in slumber.

Awaking by and by he said to his wife, "Where is that book I brought with me?" She handed him the book. As he looked at it, and being no longer under the influence of the drug, he exclaimed, smiling, "Why, that bookseller has played a joke upon me; the idea of his giving me that book to read!" On second thoughts he added, "How can that be? He could not have known me; I must be a perfect stranger to him." Still he took the book and read it. His wife was a Christian, and doubtless she lifted up her heart in prayer that God would give his blessing.

Calvin B——— soon became deeply interested in the little book. As he came to the middle of it, where he found one of Mr. Hammond's gospel addresses to the young, he was led to see himself as a lost, guilty sinner, and to see Christ as the only Savior. He fell down on his knees and cried for mercy. The prayer was heard and and answered; the peace of God filled his soul. He at once abandoned the use of intoxicants and of opium, which had been ruining him soul and body.

Dr. Carruthers states that from that time he has lived a consistent Christian life.

FIELD NOTES.

— STEVENSVILLE. —

The Quarterly Meeting for this charge was held in our church in the thrifty little town of Stevensville. The pastor clings to the old-fashioned custom of eleven o'clock preaching on Saturday; I like it. It puts the preachers and people who attend in better trim for the Sunday service. We had not a large attendance on Saturday, but a pleasant and profitable service both morning and night. But for the funeral of an old citizen, Mr. William Smith, which was at Victor at 11 o'clock on Sunday, which many of our people felt constrained to attend, as the deceased was an honored citizen of the valley, the house would hardly have held our congregation on Sunday. As it was, we had a fine turn-out and a refreshing service. Bro. Tower, of the M. E. Church, and a goodly number of his congregation, were present. Our communion service was delightful. I am so glad that we can invite all who "truly and earnestly repent of their sins, are in love and charity with their neighbors and intend to lead a new life," to come and participate in this solemn feast. How sorry I feel for those who doubtless inwardly desire to enjoy it with us, but are forbidden to do so.

Brother Parnall reported one addition by letter on Sunday night.

The charge had almost necessarily to incur a debt a year or two ago in building a parsonage, and in repairing the church, which is worrying the pastor and people not a little. The short crops last year interfered with plans for its liquidation, but I am glad to say that through the untiring efforts of the pastor and people, it is gradually growing "beautifully less," and in course of time will be a thing of the past, while the fruits of having a good parsonage and a neat and comfortable church to worship in will abide indefinitely. I do not believe in reckless expenditures nor in hopeless involvement of individuals or churches, but I do believe in trusting in the Lord and going forward, even if we should not see every dollar right before us.

While Bro. Parnall is not reaping the visible fruit of his labors by gathering the people into the church, as last year, yet he is abundant in labors, visiting, counseling, comforting and building the people up in the most holy faith of the Gospel. He speaks hopefully of the work. He is making quite an improvement by gathering out the stones, breaking up the fallow ground and setting out fruit trees (from neighbor Borough's excellent nursery) in the parsonage yard. May he live to eat the fruit from the trees of his planting. Let every preacher who has a parsonage, or even a church on his charge, endeavor to do something in this line.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas our sister, Miss Ollie Hardgrave, has departed this life, therefore be it

RESOLVED: That whilst bowing to the inexorable decree that it is appointed unto all men once to die, yet we cannot express the feeling of profound sorrow naturally aroused in our hearts at the removal from our lodge of our beloved and esteemed sister, and we offer to her bereaved parents, relatives and friends in their time of deep affliction and sadness our heartfelt sympathy.

RESOLVED: That the devotion to duty, the purity of purpose that associated her with our order elicit and command the respect and gratitude of every member of the lodge.

RESOLVED: That we deeply regret, on account of circumstances unavoidable, that we were prevented from attending the funeral of our deceased sister.

THE SOUDAN.

REV. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS.

Where is it? What is it? Ist people number eighty millions; more people than in all North America.

The Soudan is greater than the Congo region, in extent and population. It is a newer world in Central Africa, and an older. It is less known, less explored, than the Congo region, and was peopled earlier. It is far more civilized than the Congo. It is not wholly heathen. Half its people worship in their way the one living God; they are Monotheists, Mahomedans; the other half, the lower, subject, conquered half, are heathen. Arab monotheism and negro fetishism are mingled in the Soudan. Its people are of mixed blood and mixed religions.

The Soudan lies between the great desert of Sahara and the vast Congo basin. It is bounded on the east by the Indian Ocean, on the west by the Atlantic. America is 3,000 miles broad from New York to San Francisco; the Soudan is half as broad again – 4,500 miles.

The Soudan consists of three regions. Western Soudan is the region of the lordly Niger; Eastern Soudan is the region of the Upper Nile; Central Soudan is the region round Lake Tchad.

The Soudan is the true home of the Negro. The Arabs are innovators. They have come in and conquered, but are not natives of the soil. They have acclimatized, and are at home, among the sons of Ham; they proudly rule them, they semi-civilize them, they hold them in slavery.

In the Soudan the people speak a host of languages. More than a hundred such are known to exist.

The western rampart bounding the Soudan, running for two thousand miles parallel with the Atlantic coast line, is the range of the Kong Mountains. The eastern boundary of the Soudan proper may be said to be the mountains of Abyssinia. The breadth of this inner Soudan is about that of the United States. If San Francisco was on the Kong Mountains, New York would be in Abyssinia.

Travelers have crossed the Soudan in all directions. They have gone at the risk of their lives. Many of them, like Mungo Park, have died in exploring it. They have left their traces all over it.

The men of the world are the heroes of the Soudan. Travelers have been heroic. Distance has been no bar to them. Disease and death have proved unable to affright them. Neither love of friends, nor fear of foes, has been able to dissuade them from their fixed resolve to open it to the knowledge of the word, and bring its people into contact with the civilization of surrounding lands.

The Arab has gone there. He has conquered, and killed, and boasted of Allah and Mahomet, and multiplied houses and wives and slaves.

Merchants have gone there; gold seekers have gone; hundreds of each are gathering the riches of the land. There are half a score of steamers on the Niger; there is a royal Niger Company which has made two hundred treaties with the Niger chiefs and potentates; a company with chartered rights and governmental powers.

There is a mission on the Lower Niger, the delta region, but in Central Soudan, along the 1,900 miles of the Kwuorra and Joliba, along the 600 miles of the Binue, around the vast overflowing waters of Lake Tchad, in the mountains of Adamawa, in the rugged ranges of Darfur, in the forests of Kordofan, among the teeming millions of the Soudan proper, no missionaries are found.—CHRISTIAN STAND.

DEER LODGE NOTES.

MR. EDITOR:—I suppose every correspondent will begin this time by giving his opinion of the "Montana Methodist" in its new dress. I am well pleased with it and surprised that the first number should have so few faults. The faults and omissions that I have noticed, have doubtless also fallen under your eye, so that it is needless for me to mention them.

The beautiful yards and gardens of Deer Lodge are promptly rsponding to the voice of Spring and are putting on their prettiest looks. That, yon know, means rare beauty for Montana. The weather has been like Summer for two weeks and it seems we are to have no Spring at all. We rejoice in these mild days the more because of the good effect on Mrs. Britt's health. She seems to be improving rapidly and was able to ride out a little yesterday — the first time for four months. In all our affliction we have cause to acknowledge the abounding grace and mercy of God.

The work in the church here is encouraging, but not flattering; the congregations vary so. It is impossible for the preacher to prepare a sermon in view of the people's needs with any assurance that those for whom it is prepared will be present to hear it. Yet our average congregation is very fair. At our prayer-meeting last week we had ten young people, nearly all of whom took part in the meeting; but there was not an old or middleaged person present.

I had a ten minutes call from Bro. Barbee last week. He seemed to have in mind the injunction to "spend no more time in any place than is strictly necessary." We hope he will not be in such a hurry next time.

Last Sunday, while pleasuring on a lake in the vicinity, one of our townsmen was drowned by falling off a boat. Some say, liquor helped to the fatal result. We do not take it as a direct judgment for the violation of God's laws, but it should be none the less a warning to the living. No one would choose to be called away to judgment from such surroundings.

The "St. Louis Advocate" seems to grow in greatness under its new management and ownership. In my judgment it is very close on the heels of the great official organ in point of ability. But I have somewhat against it. Some one of its editors is continually belaboring the preachers for their degeneracy in point of zeal, piety, consecration, power and so forth. This complaint may lie against all our editors to some extent, but pre-eminently against one of the editors of the "St. Louis Advocate." I have often thought it a great pity that these editors could not be turned loose on the church as pastors or evangelists. From their editorial exhortations you would expect them to do as much as half a conference of their brethren. But alas, we remember that when they were pastors they had their successes and failures just as other preachers had. Let us forget the things that are behind and abound more and more in inward and outward holiness, but "say not thou that the former days were better than these." W. M. Britt.

—The phenomenal growth of the Methodist churches in the United States during the past century is her apology for being here. You will find a brief summary in another column of this paper. The facts stand serenely in the face of all doubters of her ways and means as adopted to the spread of the gospel in this land of the free and the home of the brave. To the battle, to the battle, ye soldiers of the cross! We shall triumph gloriously. Let victories won, inspire for battles ahead. In this host of valiant sons, the M. E. Church South is an important factor. See the report for the Quadrennium by the Mission Board.

—At this very hour while we write we can but think of the solemn assembly in St. Louis, the law-making body of the the M. E. Church South, beginning a session of as grave responsibilities as any for a half century. We think of the laborers in every part of the vast field in which we toil, opening the windows which look toward the Jerusalem Council. China, Mexico, Brazil, Japan and the great, great West. Look, pray and anxiously wait The Lord bless and guide our brethren in all their important work. Surely nothing narrow will be done. We will welcome the "Daily."

—To those readers of the "Montana Methodist," who do not see any other paper of our church, we promise a "brief" of the General Conference now in session, in the last issue for May, that you may learn something of our movements in the salvation of men at home and abroad. We get the General Conference Daily, which sends out the news fresh, as business proceeds.

—Our brethren in the Montana Conference are somewhat stingy with tidings from the field of late. Come, brethren, to the quill, if nothing else, you may be a little controversial.

—These golden days, these golden days! Ye brethren in the valleys of Montana, do you dream like Bunyan, that you are in the land of Beulah, "whose air was very sweet and pleasant," and do you "hear continually the singing of birds, the voice of the turtle in the land, and see every day flowers appear in the earth?" One good brother in a private note tantalizes us thus: "Oh, these lovely drives, how we shall miss them when we leave the Bitter Root! We never tire of gazing on these romantic mountains, and the scenery of this delightful valley."

From Missoula to Milk River.

The "Spring round up" for the third quarter being ended, this scribe started on his Eastern tour, leaving Cowallis at 6:30 o'clock a. m., April 28th 1890.

On arriving at Missoula it was found that the East-bound Northern Pacific train was ten hours late. This detained us at the Rodgers House for dinner and supper, and brought us to Helena at six o'clock next morning. Just had time for a brief visit and good breakfast at the home of Bro. Collet and a chat with Bro. Price at the parsonage and to arrange for my fare to St. Paul over the "Great Northern," when the hour arrived —11:30 a. m. — for the East-bound train to leave the depot. There was so much to talk about that I could not find time to make some needed purchases. Bro. Price reported his work to be in good condition, and he expressed his growing interest in the welfare of our cause in Montana.

I wish to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Messmer, also Mr. Langly, in the office of the Great Northern, for their courtesy and kindness. I also take pleasure in stating that I have ever found the officers of this company very obliging and prompt in those courtesies that contribute greatly to the pleasure and comfort of railroad travel.

The train pulled out promptly on time. Our route led through the far-famed Prickly Pear Canyon, and down the winding course of the "Big Muddy," which here runs North, and where the scenery is grand and picturesque. The passengers were charmed. At three o'clock we were at the young and prospering smelter city, Great Falls, where we longed to stop over and get another glimpse of the grand cataracts and the lovely "Big Spring" just below the city. But we hasten on, the road here leaving the river and traversing the high rolling prairie to the left. We are not long in reaching the depot on the high bench near Fort Benton, where we catch a glimpse of the historic city located on the West bank of the Missouri, at the head of navigation, a mile or two to our right.

I could not help thinking of a trip made to this place on horse-back from Helena in 1878. Then it took three or four days to make the journey which is now made in a few hours. Then — in the month of June — the country was almost inundated with water and the roads all but impassable. Now, it is too dry for the grass to grow, and the whole country appears brown and dreary.

Gradually, the main range of the "Shining Mountains" faded from view, until at last the sun went down behind what appeared to be a bank of clouds extending only a few feet above the main level of the vast prairie sea, and gradually the twilight came on, and soon the pall of night settled down upon us in the midst of the great prairie wilderness where there was scarce a house to be seen, except the buildings at the railroad stations every ten or fifteen miles, and not a land-mark to relieve the monotony, except the outlines of the Bear Paw cluster off to our right, which are noted as marking the place where Gen. Miles overtook the Neg Porces, had his fight with them, killed their principal war-chief "Looking Glass," and took most of the remainder prisoners, thus ending one of the most remarkable military movements —known as "Joseph's March"—in ancient or modern times. This was in 1877.

We passed near Fort Assinnaboine, leaving it to our right, which is said to be one of the finest military ports in the North-west. The buildings are of brick. Three or four hundred soldiers are quartered here, so I was told.

At the little town of Chinnook, which is right in the famed Milk River Valley so recently opened, and rapidly settling up, I stepped on the platform to inquire for some old Bitter Root friends, and asked a gentleman if they had preaching there.

He answered, "Yes, occasionally," when another man asked, "Are you that kind of a man?" "I am a minister of the Gospel," replied I. "Give us your hand on that," he responded, reaching out his hand, and continuing, "I wish you could stop over and help us a little." I just had time for a hearty handshake, when the train started and I jumped aboard, wishing, however, that I could stop over and help a little in planting the seed of the kingdom in this new soil, which is almost in sight of Her Majesty's dominions.

TALMAGE'S JUDGEMENT OF IT.

This Man Will Say Good Things. Hear Him.

O the tragedies of the faro-table! I knew persons who began with a slight stake in a lady's parlor, and ended with the suicide's pistol at Monte Carlo. They played with square pieces of bone with black marks on them, not knowing that Satan was playing for their bones at the same time, and was sure to sweep all the stakes off on his side of the table.

But in this connection some young converts say to me; "Is it wrong to play cards? Is there any harm in a game of whist or euchre?" I know good men who play whist and euchre, and other styles of games without any wagers. I had a friend who played cards with his wife and children, and then at the close said: "Come, now let us have prayers."

I will not judge other men's consciences, but I will tell you that cards are in my mind so associated with the temporal and eternal damnation of splendid young men, that I should no sooner say to my family, "Come, let us have a game of cards," than I would go into a menagerie, and say, "Come, let's have a game of rattlesnakes," or into a cemetery, and sitting down by a marble slab, say to the grave-digger, "Come, let us have a game of skulls."

EDITORIAL.

WE can't tell yet whether the General Conference will establish a big paper for the Western work or not. If so, these little family fledgings will chirp under motherly wings, where there will be no danger of hawks and crows.

REV. E. J. STANLEY and R. S. Clark have gone down to St. Louis with hearts beating strong and hopefully for the land they love so much. If all that we have said and written in behalf of Montana does not bring an advance policy for our work here there will be lamentation akin to that of Jeremiah.

BISHOP KEENER'S policy is, never to give up anything if it is right. Pluck is a great thing. If any where in all this broad land it is put into practice it is in these mountains, where every thing goes with a rush.

WHEN men get from two to three thousand dollars salary, a long summer vacation, a good house free of rent, and a small parish of one hundred to two hundred members we conclude that there is not a great deal of self-sacrifice to serve the people in this mountain land of unequaled climate. Some men might be induced to go into the ministry for a good time. It is somewhat different from this in the Methodist ranks. It requires men of God, for none other could endure as seeing him who is invisible. Thank God the reward is not perishable.

The Oxford League.

The Butte charge has had such an increase of young people as to justify the establishment of a special work for the young. It is now about one month old, and promises to be of great benefit to our work here as a church. The officers for the present quarter, consist of A. J. Underwood, President, Charles C. Murray, Vice President, Mrs. Morgan Davis, Secretary. The league has religious services every Sabbath evening from 7 to 8, or the hour just preceding the public services. It also has a monthly social gathering to cultivate acquaintance with one another and to entertain strangers. We rejoice greatly in the work. The membership consists, at present, of fifteen to twenty members. We pray that this may be the nucleus of a large and thriving band of Christians who will honor the name they wear.

Stevensville Notes.

After a long Winter and a cold late Spring, Summer has quite suddenly burst upon us full of warmth and brightness. It seems to me I never saw lovelier weather than we have been enjoying here for over a week—the days so warm, almost uncomfortably so—and the nights so cool and bright. The rise of the Bitter Root river, consequent on the melting of the snow in the mountains, is, at the present stage, a month earlier than the "old settlers" have known before, so one of them at least informed me to-day.

Indirectly, the unusually warm weather of last week has been the cause of a very sad sudden death in our community, thereby snatching from our midst and from the head of his growing family, a respected citizen, a brother in the church, an affectionate husband and father of two small children. I refer to the death of Brother A. J. McGee, on Friday last whilst alone hunting at the foot of the mountains. He had secured his game and hardly dressed it, when as is supposed, feeling very thirsty and hot he drank too freely of the icy cold water flowing down the Canyon hard by, which caused his speedy death alongside of the animal he had just before shot. His remains were not discovered until the following day; and on Sunday afternoon they were laid away, in the presence of a large and sympathetic crowd, to rest, until the resurrection morn. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. T. W. Flowers. Bro. McGee was about 37 years of age at the time of his death. He had been a member of our church since August 1884. To the bereaved widow, fatherless children, and sorrowing friends our deepest sympathies are extended. But how affectingly sad to be thus taken off, in the prime of life, the vigor of health, and away from friends and loved ones, all alone in the mountain fores! Yet we trust our departed brother was prepared for the sudden call!

Reader! there is a message for you and for me in this painful providence: "Be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

—Wonder if all the ministers and members of our church in Montana, are daily praying the Divine blessing on the General Conference of our church which will have assembled in St. Louis, Mo. several days before this will appear in print? This ought to be the case, but if dear brother or sister you have neglected this important duty thus far, it may not be too late to begin now!

The Reality of His Ideals.

Below we give the reader an extract from Dr. Lee's able address at the Florida Chautauqua, on Henry W. Grady, the brilliant Georgia orator and editor:—

He was an idealist, but his ideals were workable and transferable. Like the engine that moved out of Watt's brain to revolutionize the world, and like the telephone that moved out of Edison's brain to make us neighbors, the ideals which Mr. Grady had were useful. They could hammer and spin and weave. They could build railroads, clear forests and remove mountains. They were not dainty, nor pale, nor thin. They were robust and hearty. They were in line with the laws of gravity and the drift of events. The stars in their courses helped them forward. Whether they ripened in the strawberry's red, or hung in the wheat's yellow sheaf, or sweetened in the watermelon's heart, they were ever human and helpful. Whether they hung in vines over the poor man's door, or turned in the car wheels of commerce, or remained for cheer and hope in the school-boy's breast, they were infusing purpose and urging forward. Whether they lifted themselves up into a Young Men's Christian Association, or did their work in a veteran's home, or stirred a city to help the poor, they were the same lofty and generous ideals. They cheered and stimulated like music. They start the feelings in a higher flow, and the thoughts on wider circles, and the will to higher aims.

Concentration.

Although some of our good strong men have not believed in this policy concerning our work in Montana and elsewhere, we have ever advocated it as does the editor of the Southwestern in the following words:—

We have an impression that it would be well to concentrate effort upon principal points, and not attempt to cover so wide a field. Strong preachers, well sustained, at centres of influence and population, is the policy for our church in all that western region, for the present. We must first plant a few self-sustaining churches, to give the work organization and permanence. From such centres we may seek to reach the regions beyond.

He Would not Dance.

When he was at the University in Virginia we went with Mr, Charlie McKesson to the home of Thomas Jefferson. Having reached the home of the great Jefferson a party of gallant beaux and fair women who had preceded them, were engaged in a dance. His friend proposed that they get each a partner and join in the dance. "Charlie McKesson," said Mr. Grady, "do you know that this was the home of the greatest man whom this country has ever produced? He was not only the anthor of the Declaration of Independence, but he was Congressman, Governor, Foreign Minister, Secretary of State, vice-President and President of the United States, and it does seem to me a desecration to sing and dance in thoughtless revelry over the ashes of the "Sage of Monticello."—Dr. Lee on Grady.

PROHIBITION FOR NEBRASKA.

At the State-Convention of the Non-Partisan Prohibitory Amendment League of Nebraska, held at Lincoln, Adril 17, 1890, the following preamble and resolution was adopted:—

WHEREAS, The present contest in Nebraska is a life and death struggle between license and prohibition as methods of dealing with the liquor traffic, the result of which will be felt throughout the country; and

WHEREAS, The Non-partisan Prohibitory Amendment League is organizing for victory in this campaign regardless of party or religious affiliations; and

WHEREAS, The legitimate expenses of such a campaign require a large amount of money; therefore be it

Resolved, That all churches, W C. T. U., I. O. G. T., Y. M. C. A., organizations, red, blue and yellow ribbon clubs, temperance societies and prohibition clubs throughout the United States be earnestly requested to set apart Sunday, May 18th ,1890, as "Nebraska Prohibitory Amendment Day," and that the same be observed with appropriate services, and that collections be then taken and forwarded to J. M. Stewart, treasurer of the Nebraska Non-partisan Prohibitory Amendment League, Lincoln, Neb., to be used under the direction of the league in the pending campaign.

Mr. Stewart is Deputy Attorney General. All contributions will be promptly acknowledged and used solely for the purpose of securing the adoption of the pending prohibitory amendment to the constitution of Nebraska. All persons are invited to contribute to the fund.

The Power of Simple Confidence.

A young man, distressed about his soul, had confided his difficulties to a friend, who discerned very quickly that he was striving to obtain everlasting life by great efforts. He spoke of "sincere prayers" and "heart-felt desires" after salvation, but continually lamented that he did not "feel any different in spite of it all."

His friend did not answer him at first, but presently interrupted him with the inquiry:

"W., did you ever learn to float?"

"Yes, I did," was the surprised reply.

"And did you find it easy to learn?"

"Not at first," he answered.

"What was the difficulty?" his friend pursued.

"Well, the fact was, I could not lie still; I could not believe or realize that the water would hold me up without any effort of my own, so I always began to struggle, and, of course, down I went at once."

"And then?"

"Then I found out that I must give up all struggle and just rest on the strength of the water to bear me up. It was easy enough after that; I was able to lie back in the fullest confidence that I should never sink."

"And is not God's word more worthy of your trust than the changeable sea? He does not bid you wait for feelings; he commands you just to rest in him, to believe his word, and accept his gift. His message of life reaches down to you in your place of ruin and death, and his word to you now is, "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.' (Rom. 4:23.)—Occident.

PERSONAL AND SUNDRY.

—We have received "The Epworth Herald," Vol. I, No. I—published in Chicago by Cranston & Stowe and edited by Dr. Joseph F. Berry. The motto is from John Wesley: "I desire a leage, offensive and defensive, with every soldier of Jesus Christ."

—It is stated that Henry M. Stanley is to be knighted by the good Queen of England. He will be Viceroy of British Africa.

—And we have smacked of latinity, have we, Bro. DuBose? We were not conscious of having had this style afore.

—Just walk into D. J. Hennessy's mercantile establishment when you come to Butte and you will find as complete a stock of fresh goods as could be desired. See ad. on outside page.

—Ellingwood & Reznor, Grocers, do an immense business. The goods advertise for themselves when the people know about them. Renshaw Building, West Park Street, Butte.

—Mr. Wm. Beall, a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the White Hall and Fish Creek Circuit, called on us when in Butte several days ago. He says the ranchers are somewhat dispirited because of short grass and the loss of stock in the Winter.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Tuttle, of Jefferson Valley, were in Butte not long since. We found them buying goods of M. P. Sipple, the West Park Street Clothier.

—Rev. H. B. Cockrill returned to the Flat Head Lake Country the 1st of May. From now till the annual conference he will have good grazing.

—We have received communications from some of the brethren since stating that they were stingy. Let all redeem themselves. We do not wish to monopolize the good thing and do all the writing for the paper.

—We are rejoiced to learn from Brother Britt's contribution this week, that Mrs. Britt is at this time improving very rapidly.

We are pleased to have gotten so many warm invitations to spend a while with them and forget that Mrs. Couey and the little ones are far away. Some things are hard to do, indeed they are.

—To the valleys we feel strongly drawn, brethren.

—J. R. Boyce, Jr., & Co., of the Montana Popular Price House, corner Main and Broadway Streets, Butte, Montana, will accommodate you to splendid goods and low prices. Ad. in this paper, corner page 7.

—M. P. Sipple, the West Park St. Clothier, Butte, Mont., is a gentleman of his word, and here is his motto: "Honest Goods and Low Prices." Call on him; see ad. in this paper.

—If you wish a saddle, harness or buggy, go to Barret & Jacky, Butte, Mont. Barret & Jacky, Anaconda, Mont., and Barret & Jacky Bro's, Phillipsburg, Mont. They carry a fine stock of the best goods.

—We have received several young people into the church this Spring. How we do love to have the young come in. The Lord bless and keep all our young men and women in the West and everywhere.

—One of our daily papers gives us a new name—how do you like it? "Methodist Episcopalians of the South." Will this do, Bro. Raleigh?

—Rev. Blackiston has reconsidered his resignation as rector of St. John's Church, Butte, Mont., and has accepted the call of the people to continue his work in this city.

A Pertinent Question.

In the nineteenth ward, Chicago, the virtue of Roman Catholic parochial schools, has had a chance to be publicly tested. This was in the result of the city elections. It is a ward in which there is a very large majority of Roman Catholics, which has one of the largest churches in the city and six parochial schools, with nearly five thousand pupils. But the alderman who was elected last week by a majority of nearly two to one, was a keeper of a grog shop who boasted before the election that he was as good as elected for he "had seven hunudred and fifty saloons at his back." If there had been in those parochial schools a very 'healthy religious atmosphere" it is not unreasonable to have expected somewhat higher morality. Roman Catholic religionists must be themselves startled at finding in the saloon business such a huge disproportion of men claiming to be Catholics. Is it because Roman Catholics thrust the Bible from the home, as they do from the school?—The Advance.

Bishop Keener on Methodism in St. Louis.

Our Senior Bishop never says anything common or unclean. We insert an extract from his response to Dr. Matthews' Address of Welcome to the Gen. Conference in St. Louis Away back — as far as in 1806 — Bishop Asbury was here. He complained of this field as the hardest one he ever knew of, and gave as an item of it that he could not even find time to pray in the Western Conference, and as an evidence of the poverty of it, the good old man gave his coat and his watch, and, as the record says, gave his shirt, to the Western Conference. That was a beginning, but it was like the wonderful kingdom, a very small seed, but with an immeasureable power of life going along with it. In 1807 there was John Travis, and then there was Jesse Walker, a man it is said who never complained and never stopped, and every time you heard of him he was farther on. These two men as early as in 1808 held a camp-meeting twelve miles above this place. Along with them came a man by the name of Jesse Smith, or James Smith. But this city was not invested until about 1820, the year after I was born. Then this great man Jesse Walker — this great pioneer—invested in with a car load of meal, and crossed over the river. Someone asked him where he was going. Well, he said, I am going to take it to St. Louis. He came over here and rented a log house alongside an old abandoned court house, and there he intrenched himself with his meal. He opened a school, and in the course of one year he had a flourishing school, and in the course of another year he had a church and seventy members. And very properly this Methodism of St. Louis began with this man, Jesse Walker. Well, now, after him there came on a wonderful collection of great men: our great Wesley Browning, whom you all know by reputation. He joined the Conference about that time — not very long since gone to heaven. Then there was Bro. Johnson and Bro. Berryman, they came in. They moved out a little farther West, in order to be nearer the Indians. This city then was a very grand city; that is, in its prospects, it being really at the gate of all great lead mining interests of the West, and the great trade with the West. It had before it, and it was duly appreciated, too, unbounded mercantile and commercial future. As it went along, Methodism went along. There were such men as Caples; such men as Marvin, and the Headlees. No grander spirit ever lived than the Methodist preachers who upheld Southern Methodism during the fiery period of the war in Missouri. I might name a great many grand men that have worked, and labored, and died under this great Methodism. All that they gained in power, for God, and all that they gained in influence among men, they have left as our inheritance. And we have gone on growing and spreading, and in the meanwhile our men have enlarged. I do not know anywhere in Methodism, where there has been more done, materially as well as spiritually, than in St. Louis. It has not been very long when this city was vastly in debt. These churches, most of them, you would have supposed would never recover from the various burdens that were on them. Now they have passed over all that. We have had a few noble spirits here, that have, impelled by the Holy Spirit, put down their money without stint, and the consequence is, there is no place now, no station of Methodism, stronger actually and prospectively, than this very place at St. Louis. We have had our difficulties — there is no telling what we have had — but from the whole of this grand propelling force of the Holy Spirit in the renewed hearts of men this grand force has led Methodism right on, constantly on, powerfully on.

THE GROUND—THE SEED.

The wayside was a well-beaten path, unploughed — where the fowls of the air had free access to pick up the seed.

The stony ground was a bed of rock, with a thin covering of earth. The thorny ground was infested with thistles, opposing the growth of the good seed. The good soil had the obstructing, antagonistic elements removed.

The wayside hearers are idle minds. "An idle mind is said to be the devil's work shop," where, Dr. A. Clarke says, he "has a thorough-fare, ingress, egress, progress." The devil snatches away the good seed by diverting the attention to other, but less important themes. Satan watches, as with a bird's eye, the first deposits of the truth, and rejoices to have the mind give inattention, to be thoughtless, indifferent to its highest interest. This character of mind needs cultivation.

Those who receive the seed into stony ground are those whose minds have never had the plough share of deep religious thought. decision, purpose; they have not counted the cost, have not determined to hazzard everything to be a Christian. They are impulsive; they receive the word gladly. In time of temptation they fall away.

They who receive the seed into thorny ground are those who hear and understand the word—receive it into willing hearts, but suffer the cares of the world, the deceitfulness of riches to choke the word. Anxious, unnecessary thought and care for the things of this life will hinder religious thought and prayer. All necessary worldly care should be taken to Christ in prayer, "Cast Thy Care Upon Him." The pleasures of the world are short lived. Riches are deceitful, disappointing, dissatisfying, perishing. So many people take their merchandise, their ranching, their law or medicine to church, that many a good sermon is to them lost. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." He that hath heard and doeth the sayings of Christ "shall be likened unto a wise man who built his house upon a rock"—shall be blessed in his deeds.

Those who receive the seed into good ground are those who receive the word into honest and good hearts —understand it, see the wisdom of it, work it into the experience by prayer and faith, live it. It becomes so inwrought in the convictions that it affects the whole life.—J. H. Johnson.

A NEW CHURCH.

Some one can do a good deed, hand down to posterity a good name, and help to perpetuate the means of grace where greatly needed, by donating something just now to our Belgrade Church.

This church is centrally located for a great portion of the Gallatin Valley. The Church Extension Board has paid into this house, four hundred dollars; individuals have given three hundred dollars. We need three hundred dollars very much just now to ceil and seat the Church.

We hope to have it dedicated in Aug. Will not some benefactor arise to help, in this time of need? What is sown in Church Extension will bring a hundred fold in a few years in the conversion and upbuilding of the Church. Those who do not help will miss a blessing. This Church must be finished. It is on my heart.

Yours Truly,

Jno. H. Johnson.

ADVANCING.

The representatives from the Western field were given audience in the recent General Conference as never before. The church is awakening to the interests of the work west of the big river. Few seem to have realized till within a few years past that we almost had a young world of our own over here on either side of the great backbone of the United States. These brawny apostles of the sunset land, have made themselves heard at last, and their audience will grow larger as the quadrenniums pass. Those in the West have reason for amazement in looking upon the East and South. Many do not know whether we don Indiana or cowboy attire—whether we go with bowie knife and rifle or whether we have our weapons of warfare from the heavenly armory. In all gravity questions of the most ridiculous character are asked. That rude cabins rise mushroom like in the first findings of places and quarterly districts is a matter of course—but these soon give way to homes of substantial kind. Men do not wait till they are bent with age to enter into the rest of their labors. The masses, as a rule do not "get a gait on them" till they come west, and if they can't do it they "get left." This is so in church matters as well as in material interests. These were the wherefores of a positive stand for a more liberal policy by all our Western delegates. This is no country for fossilized ideas and poky preachers like the people endure in another section.

—The capital of the nation — Washington City has a population of 200,000—church sittings 60,000 and an average attendance of 40,000 people. She has 1500 liquor houses, and over 300 houses of ill-repute. The Central City Mission work was inaugurated there about six years ago, which is doing some good work to abate the terrible evil of the place.

OBITUARY.

Frank Worthington Noble, aged three years, died at Twin Bridges, Montana, April 1st, 1890.

Only a little child! and yet who can picture the sorrow and gloom that abides in that household since he has left it? The mother misses the little clinging hands and pattering feet, that were so busy "helping mamma" as she goes about her work.

The father's heart is sad when he comes home and misses the eager welcome from baby lips, and the brothers and sisters are lonely at their play since baby is gone.

Little Frankie was a bright loveable child, the youngest of four children, the light and joy of the home now desolate. He was sick but a few days and fell a victim to that fearful scourge, scarlet fever, which has desolated so many homes in the Jefferson valley this spring.

How precious are the promises of the gospel! By these we know that "it is well with the child." That he is safe from the cares and disappointments of this life and that we "can go to him."

"Out of the shadows of sadness
Into the sunshine of gladness
Into the light of the blest.
Out of the world of the wailing,
Thronged with the anguished and ailing,
Out of the world of the sad,
Into the world that rejoices—
World of bright visions and voices—
Into the world of the glad.
Into the joy-land above us,
Where there is a Father to love us,
Into our home — "Sweet Home," —His Aunt.

Connexional Officers.

Dr. Barbee was elected Book Agent on second ballot, L. D. Palmer running next behind him.

Three Missionary Secretaries were elected, to-wit: Drs. I. G. John, A. Coke Smith, and H. C. Morrison.

Editor of Nashville Advocate, Dr. E. E. Hoss; Assistant Editor, Dr. E. M. Bounds, Dr. J. W. Hinton following close upon their heels. On the final vote Dr. Hinton received 60, and Dr. Bounds 116 votes.

On the 22d, a vote was given approving Payne and Lane Institutes and asking the appointment of a commissioner to raise funds for said institutions.

The proposition to establish a paper for the youth was indefinitely postponed.

On the 23d the Conference refused to approve the proposed system of mutual insurance for churches.

The Conference ordered the Book Agent to establish a paper on the Pacific Coast and made a total appropriation of $10,000 for that purpose for the coming four years.

Young People's Leagues are to be organized in the Sunday-schools.

It also ordered all new books issued by the Publishing House sent to the colleges of the church free of charge.

Book Editor, W.P. Harrison. Committee on Sunday-schools: A. J, Magruder. J. H. Carlisle, J. D. Hamilton, George A. Dazy, J. R. Pepper.

Sunday-school Editor, W. G. E. Cunningham. The Book Committee was authorized to employ an Assistant Sunday-school Editor.

H. P. Walker, editor of the paper to be established on the Pacific Coast.

Twenty-seven thousand dollars are to be raised on the basis of the assessment of the Bishop's Fund for the expenses of the next General Conference.

North Carolina gets back the territory from Holston, and divides into two Conferences.

Episcopal Address—The West.

The church in the west, aided by both Boards, has made gratifying progress. In the face of difficulties hardly appreciable by our brethren in the older Conferences, and under pressure of sore poverty, the devoted and self-sacrificing men to whom our interests in that section have been committed have worked their way to compactness of organization which gives assurance of permanency and shows what an efficient and faithful ministry can accomplish even in the midst of unfriendly surroundings. Churches, parsonages and schools have been built and the institutions and character of our church have been maintained and vindicated These men deserve honorable mention for their achievements, and ought to be re-enforced and supplied with the means requisite for advancement in those rapidly developing regious.

As a very efficient aid in the prosecution of their work we think it advisable that the Book Agent be directed to provide for the publication of a weekly paper in the city of San Francisco, Cal., the editor thereof to be elected by the General Conference.

The Baptists in Missionary Work.

The missionary work of American Baptists covers seventy-five years. The first station commenced in 1814, and the first baptism was in 1819, so that the first six years was that of sowing seed only, and not of reaping. At the end of ten years there was one church, with eighteen members, in the Asiatic field. This first decade was one of sore trial—self-denial, discouragement, delay, even imprisonment and persecution, and little besides. But, these ten years included, there has from the very beginning been one church organized on the Baptist mission field, on the average, every three weeks, or about seventeen a year for this entire period. The baptisms have been about 225,000 in all—over 3,000 every year for the seventy-five years, or one every three hours for the whole period. In 1819 there was but one baptism; in 1886, 9,342; in 1824 there were but 18 living members; in 1886, 123,580. In 1884 the treasury contained $1,239,26, and in 1887, $351,889.69. In 1814 the whole mission force was Mr. and Mrs. Adoniram Judson; in 1887 it numbered 1,986. In 1817 the only mission field was Burmah; in 1886 there were sixteen fields: Burmah, India, Assam, China, Japan, Germany, France, Spain, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Turkey, Russia, Greece, and the Congo. — Missionary Review.

Do Editors Need Discipline Too?

DISCIPLINE NEEDED.

"Righteousness comes not by the law. We cannot work from without, inward. If it were so, man could save himself. It is only when the love of God is enthroned in the heart, that the law is enthroned, and yet He dwells in no unregenerate heart. He must come in the power of the Holy Ghost, renewing the normal nature. "The law is fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

It is then the great business of the shepherd to lead the sheep to Christ. This must purify the church, if it is ever purified. The first steps of departure from Christ should have the pastor's care. But as love wins the sinner, it must restore the lukewarm. The law is an agency to purify the church in the last resort by cutting off those for whom there is no hope.

We are told that the need of the church is discipline. Be it so, let the pastor begin by disciplining himself in all the duties of a pastor; in love and the spirit of meekness, restoring the straying. Let not that which is lame or bruised be turned out of the way, but "let it rather be healed." The need of the church is faithful pastors—courageous pastors. It requires more courage to admonish privately than to rebuke in public, and certainly it requires more love.

We have rules to cut off from the church those who are enemies of Christ and His cause. Let such be cut off. But those who truly desire to remain among the number of God's people are not beyond remedy."

Colportage.

Provision made for the Future by the late Gen Conference.

Question I. What directions shall be given for more widely disseminating the Word of God and for placing our literature in the hands and homes of our people?

Answer 1. Let each Annual Conference organize a Conference Board of Colportage, which shall have charge of the Colportage work within the bounds of said Conference.

Answer 2—Let each Anuual Conference elect on the nomination of its Colportage Board a competent and reliable agent who shall act as Colporter for said Conference under the direction and control of the Colportage Board, and to be responsible for all subjects or colporters under his charge.

Provided, however, that two or more Annual Conferences, whenever they may deem it advisable, may unite and have one General Colporter whenever said Conference or group of Conferences may deem it advisable.

Answer 4—Whenever an Annual Conference or one or more Conferences shall appoint a General Colporteur or establish a depository, the Publishing House shall sell to such depository or to such General Colporter at the minimum rate of discount (that can be allowed by it), and it shall in no case become a competitor for our book trade with such depository or general colporter within the bounds of the Conference or Conferences taking this action.

Provided, however, that this answer shall not be construed as abridging the privileges of any individual not a dealer who may prefer to order direct from the Publishing House at regular discounts.

—There is much of valuable suggestion in Dr. David J. Waller's address before the General Conference in the account given of the Manchester Mission, the London Mission and Village work. We shall have to do a like work in our centres of population.

—The National Temperance Congress met in New York City, June 11th, and 12th. Gen. Neal Dow opened the congress with an address on State and National Prohibition.

—Are you behind with your subscription to the Montana Methodist? It is the cheapest paper you can take. On with the shining stuff.

The Negro's Friend.

Below we give Bishop Keener's response to ex Governor Pattison, lay Fraternal Delegate from the M. E. Church.

"We believe you are a sincere man, and you have struck a true chord, sir. We want nothing but deep Christian sincerity to bring all our differences together, in so far as they need to be softened and neutralized. It can only be done through the blessed Saviour. It can only be done through that divine antagonism to sin which God gives to us. On that great battlefield we are one. We have the same harness, we have the same standard, we have the same hope of victory. Never mind the division, never mind whether one moves forward and marches under the standard of the lion, and another under the standard of the eagle. Even Israel had her banners and her clans. Never mind, we are following the same mark. we move along in parallel lines; we attack the same foe, and when victory is gained at one end of the column, it will be heard in its shout and pæan at the other. [Applause.]

We have had a very great pleasure sir, in hearing both you and your distinguished colleague; very great, indeed, and we are very hearty in expression. We mean all we say, and, sir, I believe, as I have said, that we can stand up and look at each other, and if we were melted together, we should have no audience. There are very mysterious forces at work in the South, the attraction of cohesion reducing all to solidity, so that they speak of the "Solid South." I declare to you I cannot analyze it. You sit off and wonder at it and look at us as we sit off and look at the Pension Bureau and can't get in. [Great applause and laughter] I have but a word to say, lest there might be some misunderstanding upon a great question of a great problem. I have my own way of solving it after very long acquaintance with the elements necessary to its solution. I may say, sir, in the first place, that, be well assured, we are spending more money in the South for common schools in proportion to our property than you are in the North, and I speak by the census and know what I say. And be assured that we are spending $4,000'000 a year for the education of this brother in black of whom you have heard. Now, we are very glad to see the help that is coming, but it is a mere nothing as compared with what we are doing. Who pays these four million dollars? Who constitutes the great body of the people of the South? Why the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. [Laughter and applause.] We are doing a great deal—in fact, I won't say we are doing too much; but our own children sir, are at school but a very small part of the year. We do for others —those who pay no taxes—what you good friends are praying, and wishing and wondering is not done. It is done. We have a good record there, a very fine record. We have a good conscience. [Laughter and applause.] I just mentioned this lest there might be some misunderstanding. As a church we have done a vast amount for the colored man. I preached for 20 years every Sunday afternoon to a colored congregation, and had in my care a great part of that time two thousand negroes I know what I am talking about. We did a magnificent work. We do not allow anybody to undervalue it. There it stands. There it is, speaking for itself. We have had the care of these wards, or whatever you might please to call them, for a great while; we raised them up from Dahomey to where they are. We have 250,000 of them under our care, and they came from Africa. I do not know what they were when they came, but when we got through with them they were Bishops and Senators. [Great applause and laughter.] And if you are educating a people, you cannot be expected to educate them forever and ever and ever. As with the missionaries in the Sandwich Islands, when their work is done let them retire. We have done our work grandly, conscientiously, and we have now a solidly white church, for which we thank God. [Applause.] We have four or five hundred colored people, sextons generally [laughter], who have joined out of compliment to us, but then we have alongside of us, as you heard to-day, a grand body of men united to us, who are running along upon parallel lines—our own colored people—and we have solved that problem as far as the church is concerned. Do not let anybody deceive you; there is nothing to be done. Do not send down to the wasted and neglected places, as if nothing had been done. It is all a mistake, sir There are 16,400 public schools for the colored people, and of this number 15,800 are taught by colored teachers. What tremendous work that is. No, sir, these people have graduated; they have gone off to themselves, and God is with them. I just mentioned this for your encouragement. You live a little beyond the border, and it is hard to get news exactly true, but I am in a position to convey the truth. [Great applause and laughter.]

I repeat, sir, that we are glad to have had you with us, and we hope when you go back home, you will carry a good report from this land. There are two of you and you carry the bunch of grapes between you, As of old, but two had faith.

FACTS NOT WELL-KNOWN.

Illiteracy in the South from 1850—1880 decreased in every State except Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina. In thirteen States the decrease was 37.39 per cent.

In the North only six of sixteen show an increase of illiteracy. In New England illiteracy increased as follows: Rhode Island 7.43, Connecticut 4.16, New Hampshire 3.31, Massachusetts 2,76, Vermont 2 8. The people of the South do not profess to be very learned, but are gratified to know from educational census, that they have more than kept pace with their more favored brethren toward the north pole. The above is concerning the white population.—P

What shall be our Policy.

Had we gotten the amount of money from the Mission Board asked, we had hoped to use about $4000 in new work, This was the judgement of the committee appointed to survey the field at our District Conference in the Spring. That we have received only $6000, we shall not, with justice to the works already under cultivation, be able to enlarge. We believe from what we learn from our delegates that the members of the Board did what they could for us in the amount granted. It is simply our misfortune, that we cannot enter the new fields which are white to the harvest. This we greatly regret.

Now that the Board has granted us twice the amount we have ever get received, it might be well to ask how can we best use it. If we have been holding on to the present charges with $3000,can we not make some advance with the $6000? To those on the outside, and possibly to some of the Board it would appear quite possible. To those of us who are here on field, and know all the circumstances matters appear in a different light. If we may be allowed to express an opinion, we would say, put the $6000 in the field now occupied and sustain the men who have pulled through to date on such short rations, and let them throw themselves vigorously and fully into their charges,not dividing their time, half for the church and half in providing their families the necessaries of life. We think this the only true policy. The authorities may think otherwise.

Editorial Notes and Comments.

WE acknowledge the receipt of the invitation to the Thirteenth Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association of Vanderbilt University, for June 16th 1890. We would like to be with the "boys" and hear the address of our old friend, J. E. Harrison, in the chapel at 8 p. m., and partake of the dinner though at the late hour of 10 p. m.

BISHOP KEENER on the Order of Deaconesses: "Our church is full of deaconesses. We found an easy route for making them; we simply marry a deaconess to a deacon and it is done." This is certainly the happiest solution to the great problem of the Methodist Episcopal church.

WE give in this issue items from the General Conference, knowing that the greater part of our readers have had the reports en masse, but for the readers of our paper in this State who have not seen anything but short telegraphic reports, many of which were incorrect and misleading, and for some who may not have digested so much good matter at once, we think it not amiss to give one number largely to retailing the best of the goods.

OUR church maintains her uncompromising attitude of hostility to the great enemy, intemperance. The Committee on Temperance for the first time in the General Conference was made a standing committee composed of one member from each annual conference.

PROSE-REQUIEM OF MORMONS. The status of the Mormons has at last been definitely fixed by a decision of the Supreme Court in the famous case of the Church of the Latter-Day Saints vs. the United States. The suit was an outgrowth of the Edmund's law, which dissolved the Mormon Church corporation, annulled its charter, directed the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs, and escheated to the United States all the real estate owned by the church in excess of $50,000 which was not on the date of the passage of the act held for purposes of worship or burial. When proceedings were instituted to take possession of the church property, the Mormons began suit to have the law declared unconstitutional. Argument at great length was presented on both sides, the Mormon counsel taking the ground that the doctrine of escheat was contrary to the spirit of our institutions. In its decision the Court says: "Congress had before it a contumacious organization wielding by its resources an immense power in the Territory of Utah, and employing those resources in constantly attempting to oppose, subvert and thwart the legislation of Congress and the will of the government of the United States. Under the circumstances we have no doubt of the right of Congress to do as it did."—St. Louis Ad.

IF the dancing, card-playing, theatre-going, euchre party element in the M. E. Church, South, evades discipline the next four years, it will not be for the want of explicit deliverance on the part of the late General Conference of our church. The preachers and laymen, laywomen, layboys and laygirls will all have to move up higher or go backward on the matter of worldly amusements. As some one has well said, we must guard the front door.

IT is evident that our compositor was not as familiar with the tribes of brethren in Red, as those who know of Joseph's valiant march through Montana, when he made Bro. Stanley say: Neg Porces instead of Nez Perces in the last issue of May.

A private note from Rev. H. B. Cockrill indicates that he is happy in his labor of love among the kind frontiersmen of the Flathead Indian Valley, which is our extreme North-Western work of the Montana Conference.

ABOUT six weeks more will bring us to the end of the present Conference year. We convene in Deer Lodge, August 6th, under the presidency of our highly esteemed Western Episcopos, Bishop E. R. Hendrix. Our people remember his visit to Montana three years ago.

THE Jubilee Singers, recently in Butte, stirred the Southern chord in our heart, and forced our sighs Dixieward.

WE met our young friend, Walter Jordan, of Fish Creek, Montana, on the streets of Butte a few days ago. His face wore a smile, exponential of the cheerful farmers, who rejoice because of the copious showers which have watered the thirsty land. We like to see the farmers happy.

ONE of our co-laborers in the city pastorate, of a sister denomination gave us quite a cheerful word as to his appreciation of the editorials and contributions of the Montana Methodist. He was a liberal "Christian" minister, and therefore must have meant it.

REV. GALEN WOOD delivered the address on Memorial Day in Butte City. We regret not being able to hear it.

PERSONAL AND ELSE.

—Rev. R. S. Clark spent several hours with us on his return from General conference. He is enthusiastic over the enlarged views of the South-easterners respecting the Western work.

—Mrs. Wm. M. Britt's health grows worse and she has gone East to be with her people, hoping to make some improvement. This affliction begets our sympathy.

—Rev. H. B. Cockrill writes us, that he was very kindly received by his people on his return to the Flathead Country, from his tour of Statevangelizing among his brethren. The Lord bless him in his arduous work in the frontier Circuit.

—We had a pleasant time spending a few days in Helena attending the State Sunday School Convention. It was a profitable gathering for sincere, earnest workers among the children and youth of our land.

—Rev. Joel Vique, of the M. E. church and pastor of a Butte Suburban charge, extended us the privilege of an address to to the young in the afternoon of his day of dedicating the new church in Centreville.

—The weather was unusually cool for the season the last two weeks of May and first week in June.

—Our valleys have become a "thing of beauty" since the showers fell.

—Rev. E J. Stanley spent a few days in Kansas with his father, Rev. Henry Stanley, on his return from General Conference. He will have only a few weeks to close up the year's work on the District.

—Our Montana preachers will need now to set their houses in order, for the day is fast approaching for the final accounts for the present conference year.

—Cheerful news reaches us twice a week from the Lady and Children of the Manse, who luxuriate in the fragrant air of Middle Tennesee. The Rocky Mountains have not altogether lost their charm, however.

—We hope our good brethren in Montana are very busy in their work respective works, reaping the golden sheaves,and will give us some account in the next issue. We will welcome your field notes, brethren.

—How we will have to work for the next six weeks, if we have not been careful all the year, looking to the end.

—There is much which we have to omit this issue.

The Fraternal Speech of D. B. Price before the Congregational Association of Montana.

Mr. Moderator and members of the seventh annual convention of the Congregational churches of Montana:

DEAR BRETHREN and fellow-laborers in our Lord's vineyard:—I come before you as the representative of the M. E. Church, South, bearing to you her love. We love you as brethren and want to be co-workers with you in the permanent establishment of the Church of Christ in this country.

The memory of your representative's speech before our conference a few weeks ago in this city still lingers. It was fraught with the spirit of love. He assured us that the ecclesiastical fencing about the Congregational churches was low enough to shake hands across. Now, the Methodists are adepts at handshaking and I believe,may truthfully say,our fence is sufficiently low to shake hands with any evangelical church. Suffice it to say our fence is just as low as yours. I have noticed with sincere gratification the growth of this denomination in this state and our wish is that you may attain a larger measure of success. And with profound gratitude to God, I tell of our success. Thus far, this year we have had more than one hundred conversions and as many additions to the church. This measure of success is unprecedented in the history of our work in this section. —Certainly, the dawn of a better day is visible, "Hope thou in God." We have one common Lord, one common Father and the same prize to obtain, therefore let us not esteem lightly one another or one another's work. Wisdom from above which the Apostle James describes so minutely and graphically, among the illustrious qualities it possesses, is that of non-sectarianism. Sectarianism is the pride of the sectary, but the humiliation of the true Christian. My love for my own denomination is not lessened because I love others, but is refined and enlarged.

I don't believe all the good of this world is confined to one thing. I see good in all evangelical churches and I claim a membership in them all.

Again, I came to bear to you the fraternal greetings of my brethren and in the language of the father of the faithful would say: "We be brethren." I feel as the spiritual children of God that we are tending toward a higher land than any of these mountain plateaus. Let us few shepherds of the small flocks here, who have, I trust, the high and holy bishopric over these souls by divine appointment, and the special annointing of the Holy Ghost, draw nigh to God and one another and sound the knell of departing and dying sectarianism.

The Montana Delegates.

Our delegates, Rev. E. J. Stanley clerical and Rev. R. S. Clark, lay, as we believed they would, represented our interests as a church in Montana, in the most satisfactory manner. We followed them carefully in all the proceedings, and while they did not "get the floor" as often as some, they were more fortunate than many, they were never downed. We had written and prayed and worked and resolved before hand, that we must have $10,000 for the Montana Conference another year. We were not forgetful of the pressing claims from other fields, and believe that in securing $6000, which is double any former appropriation, that our delegates did all in their power. We were pleased to note the fact that our brethren were honored by the committee on public worship, in having them preach so often. In honoring our brethren, our Conference was honored. We trust the brethren honored God in their sermons, and did their hearers good. We are glad to find that Bro. Stanley was placed on the Board of Missions for the ensuing quadrennium. This may prove a key to the Missionary treasury till Montana 'comes to years'.

We wish the facts presented the Board, could have gotten the $10.000, but will receive what was appropriated with the best possible grace, and hope that every dollar thereof will be well spent, in the King's business.

The Helena Station.

EDITOR, MONTANA METHODIST:

Seeing no report from the Helena charge, since our present pastor's arrival, I thought it proper to make one. Helena stands as the banner charge in this Conference. During Bro. Prices' pastorate the tide has been rising—congregations have increased at least one hundred per cent. Twenty-five accessions to the church during his pastorate, which is the largest increase of any charge in the Conference. The Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition, larger and more attractive and interesting than it has ever been since I have been connected with the church.

The choir has developed into a splendid one. Mr. R. W. Neill, the leader, takes pride in giving the people good music. Professor Nunvar, the organist, is very efficient and popular. Sister Price has a splendid voice. Bro. West, who has recently joined our ranks has a place in the choir, comes from Chatham, Ontario, and as a singer and Christian gentleman stands high, and will make himself felt in this community.

The prayer meeting, through the earnest effort of our pastor has become quite interesting, spiritual in the highest sense of the word, and profitable to all who attend. Mr. Editor, if I can read correctly the signs of the times, another decade will put our church in this city at the head of churches, and place her among the leading churches of the State. One of the encouraging features of our church is the growing interest manifested in the attendance. Another sign of encouragement is manifested in the singing, still another is seen in the interest our people take in paying the pastor. Bro. Beasley received seven hundred dollars. Bro. Britt received eight hundred dollars. Bro. Price receives twelve hundred dollars. One-third more than any preacher has received since I have been connected with and as a steward of the church. We are all jubilant over the outlook, and ask the prayers of all in our behalf. Pray for us. W. J. HUNTER.

[We rejoice with them that do rejoice. ED].

KANSAS LETTER.

THE MONTANA METHODIST.

DEAR BRO. COUEY:—

I have had the pleasure of a visit by my son, Rev. E. J. Stanley, once more. He came by on his way home from the General Conference. He will visit a few days with his friends and relatives, and then be off for Montana. Amidst all the beauty and foliage of our forest trees, our blue grass parks, flower-gardens, and lovely orchards, there seems to be no temptation to hold him. He says "Kansas is a lovely country, but Montana is my home." He reminds me somewhat of [illegible] down in Southern Missouri, when he would get into a good revival meeting, he would exclaim at the top of his voice, "If heaven was no better than this place, I would send for Betty and the children and we would live here forever." So, as Edwin has Loula and the children up in Montana, I guess they will live there for all time.

I am glad they had such a pleasant General Conference, and that your Missionary appropriation was increased from $3000 to $6000. I am sorry, that a great many of our Eastern and Southern men do not see your necessity. Some of our best men in the Western Conference once said, we had better withdraw our men from Montana, for it would never amount to anything. I tell them, if they would go up there and stay a few years they would see things in a different light. I have been fully satisfied in my mind, if half a dozen of our strongest men could have gone up there several years ago, and had been well provided for, things would have been very different, but a lot of boys were sent up who had not been very far from their mothers, with just enough Missionary money to starve them out. Had not some of them had courage like a lion and the gift of continuance, not knowing how to let go, the whole thing would have proven a failure before this. It seems that they just held on and thank the good Lord a better day has come.

You have the best little paper that comes to Kansas. It will let the people know who you are, where you are, and what you are doing. [Thank you, Sir, Ed.] You also now have a man on the Board of Missions, who will look after your Conference interests, thus giving you better opportunity to let your wants be known.

We in Kansas are getting along, so far as I can learn, about as usual. We go slowly but surely, looking forward for better days. The weather has been very dry this Spring, more so than usual but we have had a few good rains of late which have revived our crops and given us new life.

HENRY STANLEY.

—Our clerical delegate to the Gen. Conference at St. Louis informs us that "Kind and earnest inquiry was made concerning every preacher and many laymen of our church in Montana." [We are quite thankful to be so cordially remembered by our friends and former associates. Ed.]

—A Louisiana paper has this motto: "Educate your children and the country is safe." The same paper gives two-thirds of a column to the advertisement of the La. State Lottery. Shame on all such papers.

—It is said there were two hundred men in the late Gen. Conference of the M. E. Church, South, who were never members of the body before. From this fact it was feared radical measures would be passed. The conference maintained her past record of non-concurrence. The changes made, seem very necessary to meet the development of the people to whom the church is called to serve and save.

—Recent railroad cuts were highly favorable to the immense passenger traffic among the General Assemblies, Conventions and Conferences held by the different denominations traveling East, West, North and South.

Our Spiritual State.

BY THE BISHOPS.

We rejoice to record our conviction that the spiritual life of the church has suffered no decline in the past four years. The faithful preaching of the truths characteristic of Methodism has been productive of gracious results; extensive revivals have been reported each year; large numbers have been added to the church; and very many of our members have made increase in faith and holiness. It has been demonstrated that our people are true to the principles of vital godliness, of experimental religion, by whomsoever they may be attacked, however subtle and enticing her appeal may be against them, and however strong the adverse current of public sentiment. In an age when the functions of the pulpit and pastorate are largely usurped by the secular press and platform, and doctrines are widely disseminated (sometimes from the pulpit itself) subversive of the authority of the Word of God and of the foundations of spiritual life, and when the attempt is made to substitute the amenities, culture and entertainments of educated society for the graces, virtues and fellowship of the church of God, it is gratifying to note the steadfastness with which our members adhere to the conviction that the church is a separate and divinely ordained association, taking its life and its law from its own living Head, and, by the terms of its existence, incapable of subjection or of conformity to this world.

As it is well known, the individual exceptions to this statement are many. Many walk, of whom we have told you before that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ,who mind earthly things. The instructions and exhortations of the pulpit, and the impressive and emphatic vows of the baptismal covenant, solemnly ratified and confirmed at the moment of their reception into our communion, are insufficient to restrain these from indulgences in dispositions and practices quite incompatible with Christian holiness and the purpose of the Christian Church. To them the exercises of godliness are tame and distasteful, the meaning of Christian fellowship is unknown, and the church is attractive only when it can strongly enough appeal to their sensuous tastes through an eccentric pulpit, an æsthetic service, and the sensational appliances so often employed as substitutes for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. They would have the church enter the arena of this world, and compete with it upon its own ground and according to its own methods; and, failing in this, they refuse submission to the order and discipline of the church, bring confusion into our ranks, and by example and evil counsel pervert unwary and inexperienced souls.

Some of this evil is due to ignorance; some to the weakness and instability which offer no point of resistance to the enticements of the world; some to the arrogant claim, set up by wealth, culture and station, exemption from the hard requirements of self-denial and unworldliness imposed by the gospel. Much of it, undoubtedly, might he abated by uniform, impartial, judicious and firm administration of discipline. The attitude of the church upon the question of conformity to the world is so pronounced, and has been so often authoritatively declared, that no one charged with the responsibilities of the pastoral office among us can show of any sufficient excuse for failure in its treatment. It is unnecessary to repeat deliverances that have gone forth in more than one pastoral address by authority of the General Conference, declaratory of the law and binding upon all our preachers and people. It will be well, if practicable, to indicate and provide for some satisfactory method of training, especially for our young converts, in "the doctrine which is according to godliness."

THE NEW BISHOPS.

From an exchange we clip:

A GREAT HONOR TO HAYGOOD.

Concerning the successful candidates, the following brief statement is furnished by a prominent member of the Conference. It will be remembered that Dr. Haygood was elected to that office in 1882, but declined because he could not then lay down the educational work he had in hand, being at the time President of Emory College, Oxford, Ga. He has been a conspicuous advocate of the education and evangelization of the Negroes of the South, being the author of a book called "Our Brother in Black," and since 1883,the agent of the "John F. Slater Fund" for the education of the freedmen of the South. He received to-day the largest majority ever given in the election of a Methodist Bishop. He is the second man in the history of American Methodism who has been elected to the bishopric twice, Joshua Soule being the first. Dr. Haygood is not a member of the General Conference, and his elevation to the Episcopacy, under all the circumstances, by one of the most representative religious bodies in the United States, is very significant.

SKETCH OF FITZGERALD.

Dr. Fitzgerald has for twelve years past been editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, the organ of his church. He has seen service in the West, having been for years the leader among the Methodists of California. He is a native of North Carolina, of Irish extraction, and is a genial gentleman and popular writer. His books have attained a wide circulation, and under his administration the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has advanced from a circulation of 7,000 in 1878 to 30,000 in 1890.

Address of Welcome.

Dr. Matthews maintains his well-earned reputation as a man for occasions, in welcoming the Gen. Conf. to St. Louis. Here is a sample:

A backward look at our Methodism is inspiring. She has won her way against tremendous odds. The Astor library has on its shelves 706 books and pamphlets against our Church. Some godly men see no good on earth. They are looking for perfection of action, and care for nothing in the comparative degree of goodness. True it is, men should aim at perfection, but no one should wait for that divine end before he allows himself to be happy. Such natures want no good music, no good literature, no flowers in the front or even in the back yard. Such are tinged with asceticism. Then stand by the side of St. Jerome, who said: 'The duty of a monk is not to teach but to weep.' Like Jacob we exclaim, 'Few and evil have the days of my life been;' but he lived long and was blessed beyond almost any man who ever lived.

A dime held close to the eye will shut out the light of the sun. Robert Cushman wrote of the music of the Puritans in America as a clear defeat, yet what he called defeat God organized into complete victory, In his letter he marked out this sentenc: 'All things promiscuously forerun our ruin.' Even then it was sunlight on the mountains. My own conviction is there is more fertility in righteous ness amongst us than in my boyhood. You have assembled not to survey from any hill-top of personal grievance our work or our progress. We have our ills, and they sometimes trouble us greatly, but after all they are like a hot wheel in a train, may cause a delay, but will not prevent the travelers from reaching home at last. We congratulate you, and through you our 1,200,000 members, on the harmony existing among us as a people. It is said we never closed a quadrennium in greater peace.

"Christians Don't Care About My Soul."

So said a young man recently, when pressed by a friend to attend to the subject of salvation. "I see them careless in the house of God, engrossed with honors and pleasures of the world during the week, and I mingle often with those who profess to love me, and never say a word to me about my soul. It cannot be a matter of so much inportance as you represent, or surely they would not be thus inconsistent."

A few days later that young man sent for the pastor of the church he attended, who found him with despair written in his pale, anguished countenance, and was about to offer prayer. But the young man prevented him. "Your prayers," said he, "can do me no good—it is too late. I have grieved away God's Holy Spirit, never, never to return. I feel already in my soul the agonies of the damned. I sent for you, not to pray, but to be the bearer of a message—a message from the borders of eternity. —American Messengers.

What a fearful responsibility the incident cited above, brings before us! Certainly we should be ever on the alert lest some poor soul should rise up in eternity and say, "You cared not for my soul."

ISN'T IT TIME?

The German Empress is forming a "League for the Preservation of Good Habits" among the Prussian ladies. The members bind themselves to discourage luxury in every form, both for themselves and their friends; to wear fewer, more simple, and cheaper dresses, and to practice rigid economy in their households. Some of our would-be "good society" and fashionable professors of religion may now think it would be "quite the thing" to follow up royalty herein. Even an absence of luxury, of fine dresses, of fine feathers, of absurd waste, may become "the rage" in the church. Well, if we can get it no other way, let it come this way.—CH. STAND.

From an Exchange.

It is stated that Oliver Cromwell visited York Minster, in England, he saw in one of the apartments, statues of the twelve apostles in silver. "Who are those fellows there?" he asked, as he approached them. On being informed, he replied, "Take them down and let them go about doing good." They were taken down, melted and put into his treasury. There are many who, like these silver apostles, are too stiff for service in much that the Lord's work requires. Some are too nice, some too formal, some disinclined. They sit or stand stiff and stately in their dignity, and sinners go unsaved and believers uncomforted, unhelped, for all the efforts they will make to lift a hand to serve them. They need to be melted down and sent about doing good. Statuary Christians, however burnished and elegant they may be, are of little real service in the cause of Jesus.

A SISTER'S INFLUENCE.

"If I only had a sister, Cousin Helen; but I am so lonely. You know since mamma died I have no one but papa and Hugh."

The speaker was a young girl only eighteen years of age, but her earnest face was expressive of a very strong character.

"Why not let Hugh take a sister's place?" suggested Cousin Helen.

"How?" And Margie's eyes really sparkled. "Talk with him about the many things, both great and small, which interest you? Brothers like to feel that their sisters can trust them."

"Margie," continued Cousin Helen with a troubled look in her eyes, "there has recently been opened down town an elegant saloon which is called 'The Gilded Palace,' and last evening I overheard a conversation between Hugh and his friend, Chester Winthorp, concerning it. Hugh evidently thought it an improper place for moral young men to frequent, but Chester tried to overcome his scruples by informing him that there are rooms connected with the main saloon where moral men can assemble without coming in contact with anything objectionable; and that many of the best young men in town spent their evenings there. Pardon me, dear, but have you made home attractive to Hugh of late?"

"I am afraid not, Cousin Helen, for I have fallen into the selfish habit of spending much of my time in my own room. Thank you for your timely suggestions."

That evening as Hugh Nelson was passing through the hall, hat in hand, he was surprised to hear his sister call out from the parlor:

"Are you going out, Hugh?"

"Ye-es," he answered with hesitancy, for a glance into the pretty parlor, with its glowing grate fire and open piano, made him almost wish he was going to spend the evening at home.

"Come in a little while, please, and help me select my new suit," pleaded Margie.

"Your new suit!" echoed Hugh with astonishment. "What do I know about girl's suits?"

"I believe you can help me," urged Margie, "for you display fine taste in the selection of your own clothes. You know, Hugh, that I have not been accustomed to choose for myself, and I miss mamma so much."

There was a quiver in the voice that Hugh could not resist, and after hanging his hat on the rack he walked into the parlor, and was soon deeply interested in the examination of dress samples and fashion-plates as his little sister could wish.

From this time Margie followed her cousin's suggestion to the verry letter. She laid her plans before Hugh as she would have done before an older sister, always asking his opinion concerning them, thereby making him feel that she needed his companionship and counsel. By this means there was gradually formed between this brother and sister a bond of love which was truly beautiful.

Years passed, and one evening, while Hugh and Margie Nelson were enjoying the quiet of their cozy parlor, Margie was startled by an exclamation of horror from her brother, and on turning toward him saw that he had dropped the evening paper, and had buried his face in his hands. Catching up the paper she anxiously looked down the columns of the daily news until she came to this item:

"A young man, named Chester Winthorp, was fatally wounded last night at the Gilded Palace saloon with a pistol shot fired by David Holmes. Doubtless both of the young men were under the influence of liquor."

"Was Chester Winthorp once your friend?" asked Margie.

"Yes," answered Hugh, as he raised a pale face from his hands; "and but for the influence of my precious little sister I might have been as he is to-night."

Margie looked incredulous, for Hugh had so many years been an earnest Christian that she could not imagine him as having sunk to such depths of degredation as Chester Winthory evidently had done.

"After mother died," resumed Hugh, with emotion, "I was sad and lonely. Father was absorbed in business, you spent much time by yourself, and I longed for some attractive place in which to spend my evenings. Chester asked me to go to the Gilded Palace saloon, which, he said, had every attraction heart could wish. After much urging I consented; but on the appointed evening you wished me to help you select your new suit. As I looked into the parlor, which you had made so bright and pretty, I thought some other night would do for my visit to the Gilded Palace, so I yielded to your persuasions, and spent the evening at home.

"But, after that, I found every evening the same, for you always had some pleasant entertainment in store for me; and I finally came to the conclusion that our parlor was Palace enough for me, and that it would be difficult to find more attractive company than that of my own sweet sister."

"And, Margie," he continued, while a soft light came into his eyes, "although I was not a Christian, you talked so freely with me about your religious experiences that I could not fail to see the deep satisfaction you found in the religion of Jesus Christ. I soon came to yearn for the peace and rest that you evidently enjoyed, and so I was led to yield my heart to the Saviour. Ah, little Margie, if all sisters were as good and wise as mine has been, the saloon-keepers would find few victims among our young men."

While Margie Nelson listened to this candid confession, her heart was raised to God in gratitude for the blessed assurance of having been the instrument through which he saved her noble brother.—H. M. G., in Christian Intelligencer.

THE MONTANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The thirteenth annual session of the Montana Conference convened in Deer Lodge, Thursday, 9 a. m., Aug-7th. All the preachers of the Conference were present the first day of the session. There was a small representation of the lay members. The number of visitors was unusually large, when we consider that it is the haying season for the ranchers. There were very few of the preachers' wives present. This means much. We would that it were always otherwise. Although the Conference opened a day later than the Bishop first intended, matters were well in hand by noon Saturday.

The Sabbath day dawned bright and clear. Promptly at 9.30 a. m , the Love Feast was opened. The hour seemed too short. Sunday-school was held from 10:30 a. m. to 11:30. The Bishop gave us a splendid sermon for the preachers at 11:20, after which the beautiful temple, nestling among fine shade trees was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. At the same hour Dr. Morris, Assistant Church Extension Sec., preached in the Presbyterian Church. The writer had the great pleasure of preaching in the Christian church. At the evening service, Dr. Morris gave us a soul-stirring sermon at our church, on 1 Cor. 3:9. We all enjoyed it.

In the evening, Rev. J. B. Parnall preached in the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. D. B. Price preached in the Christian church

Monday morning the committees had their reports all ready, and business was dispatched in rapid order. By twelve o'clock they were through. The Communion service, which was so fitting, preceded the reading of the appointments. The appointments were received by the preachers, in the spirit of true itinerants. Most of the preachers remained over after Conference adjourned till Tuesday morning. All of them by this time have moved to their respective fields and have begun the labors of the year. The Lord be with them till we all meet again.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Rev. E. C. Finley was transferred to the St. Louis Conference, Rev. John Moore to the Denver Conference, and Rev. Wm. M. Britt to the Kentucky Conference. On Monday evening, after a touching sermon by Dr. Morris, these three brethren were given words of farewell by the host of friends in the church. It is always a source of regret that we give up the brethren who have successfully met the difficulties of this field.

—The people of Deer Lodge, will not soon forget the pulpit ministrations of our dear brother, Dr. J. C. Morris, who so ably advocates the cause of Church Extension in this land white unto the harvest.

—It was a real joy to Christian hearts to see how generously the people gave of their means in all the causes presented during Conference. The chief display of liberality was on Sabbath in lifting the debt from the church before dedication. It proved an interesting part of the morning service.

—Bro. B. E. H. Warren led in the Love Feast service, Sabbath morning. He found it easy, because of the high spiritual tide.

—Who ever saw a Conference close with greater manifestations of God's presence than did that of the Montana at Deer Lodge?

—One of the very pleasant features of the Montana work during the visit of Bishop Hendrix, was the dedication of three new churches.

—Rev. S. W. Barbee was located at his own request, at the recent session of the Montana Conference.

—The Helena District now has twelve appointments.

—When Bishop Hendrix finished the work of our Conference, he moved on westward. We believe he stays no longer in one place than is strictly necessary.

—Will our exchanges please note the change of editor and have papers addressed to E. J. Stanley, Corvallis, Montana, instead of to A. C. Couey, Butte.

—The Fund for Widows, Orphans, and Superannuated Preachers, received a small increase at the Conference. We hope it will continue to grow.

—Rev. W. T. Goulder was received into full connection, having proven acceptable in the pulpit in his administration and having creditably passed his 2nd year's course of study. Great harmony prevailed during the entire session of Conference. All differences of opinion were settled without a discord. How pleasant for brethren to dwell together in peace.

—Deer Lodge maintained her well earned reputation for hospitality in the entertainment of the Conference. We shall be glad to go back there again.

—It is with great misgiving and reluctance that we change from the single station and editorial work, to that of a large District in this Mountain land. The Lord bless us in assuming the grave responsibilities.

—The Presiding Elder of the Helena District will be absent for a few weeks in the beginning of the Conference year. He goes to Murfreesboro, Tenn., to make a short visit and bring his family back to Montana. Any one who desires to write him, will direct to Rev. A. C. Couey, in care of Mr. C. R. Holmes, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

—The next session of the Conference will be held in Helena.

—We rejoice to announce that with the next issue of the paper, Rev. E. J. Stanley, a writer well-known throughout our connection, will have charge of the Montana Methodist. He will give us a good paper. The columns will doubtless be filled with a richness of matter and beauty of diction, which characterize his communications to our religious press in the church for quite a number of years past. We invoke the blessings of God upon him in this work.

—Montana keeps to her mark in Missions and Church Extension, She pays up in full for missions and runs over a little in Church Extension. Let our old Conferences do likewise.

—We hope to see the Woman's Department of Church Work come up this year in the Montana Conference.

—Oh what a sense of need have we in thinking of a District parsonage. The way may open for us in this matter before many months.

—We are glad to state that Rev. J. E. Squires, of the Denver Conference, is transferred to Montana, and is stationed at Butte. Also that Rev. Thomas W. Walton, of the South-west Missouri, is transferred to us, and is stationed at Deer Lodge. We extend a hearty welcome to these dear brethren. They are good men for these important fields of labor.

—Much of our Conference matter will have to wait over for another issue of the Montana Methodist.

—Rev. J. H, Johnson preached a sermon on the evening preceding the opening of the annual Conference, worthy his head and heart, and the hearing of any congregation in this country. It was unadulterated Gospel well served.

—We were greatly edified by Rev. R. S. Clark's sermon, Saturday afternoon on 'Buy the truth and sell it not.'

A SMALL BUSINESS.

In the last issue of the "Montana Christian Advocate," there are two statements made that are misleading. One of the statements is that Brother Mills had recently stopped at Willow Creek with some members of the M. E. Church South, "who had formerly belonged to the M. E. Church." The facts are that not a member of the Willow Creek church ever belonged to the M. E. church. The "Advocate" stated that "after twenty years the M. E. Church, South, at Willow creek, had only thirteen members." This statement is not true. The Methodists at Willow Creek have about thirty members. The 'Advocate' also stated that the M. E. Church had twelve members at South Boulder, which is incorrect. Mr. Riggin did succeed in proselyting four members at South Boulder, and four is all they have there. The "Advocate" ought to tell the truth at least.

Church and State Again.

In the divine instruction. "Be subject to the powers that be," the practical relation of the church to the state is defined. We do not see by what rule of construction this text can be made to sanction any effort of the church, in the use of resolutions or petitions to those who are in authrity, to direct the affairs of this world so as to accomplish their work therein This would be to repeat Baalam's error, who said in effect, "Thy will be done." and then sought by prayer to change that will, and we see that this policy proved fatal in his hands. "Pray for kings and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness, and honesty, is the divinely defined religious relation of the church to the state. To pray to those who are in anthority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness, temperance included, and honesty, and to pray to God, to so control and direct them in the administration of the affairs of State, that these ends may be obtained, is widely different. This relation of the church to the state is founded in the fact or moral principle, that the church, to effect her work of salvation, must deal directly with individuals, and not with communities as such, seeking to put the law, "by divine interposition," in the heart, and write it in the inward parts and not into the statute books, to be enforced by "officers and governors, but by God himself. When the church through her members asks, or prays individuals to "quit their meanness," she means "repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ," that they may be saved, and not reformed merely, which is all that the state can do. The church is spiritual both in her nature and work; while the state is carnal in both, and hence is necessarily antagonistic to the church in her soul saving mission.

The church seeks to subordinate the carnal principle, whether found in the individual or in the community, to the spiritual conditions of life in Christ Jesus, not by compromise, but by sacrifice. To ask the state to aid her in her work would be in effect, to ask a cause to remove its effect. "My kingdom is not of this world," is a truth that even the church herself is slow to learn. Her dark days have been the result of mistakes in connecting herself to the state, in her efforts to meet the social and practical demands required of her. And is it not true in this advanced age of the church, with all of her experience in the use of the divine panoply, and in this intelligent Christian land of ours, that there are churches which are involved in abnormal relations to the state? No one who is unprejudiced at this point, and who is favored with a moderate knowledge of the history of this country, will be at a loss to find the source whence this unholy relation had its origin. We ask, with emphasis, is it not to be feared that the M. E. Church South, which glories, and rightfully too, in her non-political character, is liable, in her efforts to secure our humanity against the ravages of intemperance by legal enactment, to switch off on this sidetrack of Christian endeavor, where spiritual ruin has always been the result? What means the resolutions before her general, and other conferences, if it is not to effect legislation upon the subject thereby sought to be made prominent? Is this to pray to the Lord for those who are in authority, that the ends of good government may be obtained, or is it to pray to the authorities themselves? Is the M. E. Church South, "a prohibition church," by a kind of politic ecclesiastical caucusering, and resolution-making? or is she such in her life, her discipline, and in her teachings? These are questions of grave importance, that time, in the onward march to the inevitable, will soon solve.

It seems that the idea is easily entertained by some, that the church, which "is the pillow and ground of the truth," the fitness of things, the embodiment of right relations to God, and hence to all things. can prosecute her mission successfully in the earth, by the desecration of the means that God has ordained for its consummation. The Jews, Paul informs. us, "had a zeal, but not according to knowledge." "What was written afore time, was written for our learning, upon whom the ends of the world are come." R. S. CLARK.

Street Scenes in Anaconda.

SCENE FIRST.—It was at a dinner in a restaurant in Anaconda. Three men were seated at one table, an Irishman, an American magistrate, and one whose genealogy I was unable to trace, and who appeared to be more interested in the art epicurean, than in either the love of Blackstone, or the absorbing question of moral reform on the subject of prohibition. The head of the magistrate was "turned," not however, by either favoritism or a bribe, but by the equally certain effect of too much "tanglefoot." He was the auditor, while our Irish friend, who was "full" of his subject, descanted upon the question of prohibition. His peroration was in these words: "I think (hic) I could make (hic) a good thing lecturing (hic) on prohibition. I despise these low-down drunkards. (hic.)"

SCENE SECOND.—It was a little boy and a preacher, on Park Avenue, near the "Montana" hotel. The little boy had under his arm a big bottle. The preacher accosting him said: "Good morning, little fellow, what's that you have under your arm?" The reply came promptly, back of which was an innocent smile playing all over the child's face, that showed he knew nothing of the danger to which his misguided parents were thus exposing him: "It's beer I've got a bottle of beer." "What are you going to do with it?" said the preacher. The child replied, "I'm going to take it home for me and mamma and papa to drink."

You may imagine what feelings disturbed the preacher's mind, as he looked upon the scene and contemplated the probable issue in the life of the innocent pratler. Let my own personal sins, if need be, react on myself in all their great force, but O, may I never fall under the condemnation of leading my own child to his ruin.

SCENE THIRD.—A middle aged man standing on the corner, in front of a saloon, in the same town, was seen by his companions suddenly to lose his balance and fall to the ground. They went at once to his assistance, but lo! he was dead. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of death from "heart-disease." But the facts were that domestic infelicity, more than two years ago had caused him to leave home, since which time he had been a hard drinker. Heart disease indeed! No doubt, poor fellow, the heart was sadly, fatally diseased, in that it had surrendered its anchorage to the skies, and drifted out into the hopeless maelstrom of despair; but whisky killed the man,

O when will the Christian men and women of this nation, rise to the sublime height of religious duty, and personal obligation, and remove forever the curse of drink from the land? SIM.

Four Years at Butte Station.

In August of 1886, I received a letter from Bishop J. C. Keener, written at the close of the Montana annual Conference, held in Bozeman, in which he says: "I have transferred you to Montana, and stationed you at Butte, a town of 30,000 inhabitants. If the work does not suit you at the end of the year, I will re-transfer you back. The Lord be with you, your wife and little ones."

At the annual conference just closed a few days since, I made my fourth annual report. Just what success is in any of our western work is difficult to say. The work before us in Butte, has necessarily been largely material. Paying off a debt on the church, just finished when I went to Butte, and building a good substantial six-room brick parsonage, has given us work of this character all the while.

We had some noble people to stand by us in every measure. We now have a very respectable membership of forty to fifty, a nice little Sunday school, a young people's organization, and Ladies' Aid Society. Our people are systematic in their work. Support the church very liberally for their strength, being now almost self-sustaining.

We were never so identified with a people, as with those of Butte charge. They have been responsive to every demand made upon them. We love them devoutedly, and shall never forget how we have labored together gether to build up the cause of Christ. To leave them makes our heart ache. I congratulate the pastor whose happy lot it shall be, to serve them in the future.

Although this is one of the very youngest charges in the Montana conference, there is but one stronger in the state. With proper service, and no change in the present prospects, Butte will, in a short while, be the leading station in the conference. I commend them to my successor as a people who will kindly receive him and his, and to the Great Shepherd who knoweth every one of them by name. A. C. COUEY, ex-Pastor.

The church extension Secretaries purpose a free use of printer's ink during the next quadrennium. The plan of visitation strikes us as a wise measure, on the part of the Board.

Dr. Henry Drummond's latest work, "The Greatest thing in the World," has been placed in our hands by a friend. We know, in advance of reading, that we shall find something good, better, best.

Companies with "pack horses," are going to the mountains. These "prospectors" may get rich in a season—they may die poor. It does seem like "luck."

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

HELENA STATION.

The church at this place is in a prosperous and hopeful condition. Brother Price is in great favor with the people. The membership is increasing, and the congregation is growing. The Sunday School, though not large, is doing great work under the superintendency of Rev. W. J. Hunter. Brother H., has also been very active and efficient as a local preacher. Finances are well up. The time is not far distant when we will have to build a new church in Helena. Both preacher and people have reason to rejoice at the progress that has been made the past year in this Charge. The Quarterly Conference was held on Wednesday night, in connection with the prayer meeting, and was a enjoyable occasion.

EAST HELENA.

The pastor, Brother Goulder, has had a pretty hard time of it here the past quarter, on account of the temporary shutting down of the smelting works, which are the principal dependence of the people for employment and support. Many of the people have gone away, which has had a depressing influence on everything. Even the saloons, most of them, had to close. But the preacher has remained at his post, won the confidence and respect of the people. He reports that congregations are increasing, and everything is more hopeful. Two Sunday Schools are in progress on the Charge. Finances are much behind, though an effort was being made in this direction for the benefit of the preacher, when I left. We had a pleasant service in the church on Thursday night.

WILLOW CREEK.

Saturday, July 12th, at 11 o'clock, found me at Stateler's Chapel, where the preacher in charge, Rev. E. C. Finley, with Rev. L. B. Stateler and Rev. A. J. Rundell, together with most of the official and some other lay members, had assembled, and we had one of the most refreshing religious services that I have attended for a long time. The Master was there, subduing every heart and melting every eye to tears. What delightful associations, what precious memories are connected with this place. It is a very Bethel to many of us in Montana. The Quarterly Conference in the afternoon was well attended. The practicability of enlarging the parsonage, by an addition of one room, was discussed. The congregations at the services on Saturday night and Sunday, were large and attentive. I was astonished at the number of young people here. What a mighty power for good, if they were converted and in the church. The Sunday School is prospering under the leadership of Brother G. L. Deeks, whose earnestness and efficiency in church work increases with advancing years. Not a few earnest Christians are praying for a revival here. May their prayers be answered soon, and in the fullest measure.

The preacher had to provide himself with a conveyance at the beginning of the year, and had the misfortune to get one vehicle entirely demolished by the untimely and excessive exercises of an obstreperous animal while giving vent to the predominating propensities peculiar to his species. The dry season, followed by the hard winter, and the hard times that prevail, makes money matters tight with the people, and, of course, with the preacher. But when one is provided with food and shelter without expense, the cost of living is greatly curtailed.

The policy of "disintegration and absorption" has affected the membership in this Charge this year to some extent. A minister of a sister church even informed our members that our church would soon go down here, and that they had better join in with him. I was told this upon good authority. If others can out-work us in a legitimate way, can preach the Gospel more earnestly and effectively than we, and if our members, under proper influences, should prefer to leave us and join other churches, this is their prerogative. But to use such motives as the above, I protest is unfraternal and unbecoming those professing godliness. Such work will not abide.

OTHER CHARGES.

As I will not get to hold the quarterly meeting for the other Charges in time to report for the last issue of this paper before Conference, I will make a few brief notes here. Rev. L. B. Stateler, at Whitehall, has been filling the Whitehall Charge the past few months, preaching at Whitehall and Fish Creek alternately, and acceptably. He told me that he was actually going to preach a sermon on Baptism at Fish Creek, for the edification of the people. We must have a man here next year.

increasing membership, an appreciative people, and things in a much better condition than ever before. His health was never better than now. Doubtless it will be a trial to both pastor and people, to sever the relation that they have sustained to each other so pleasantly, and so long. But while the itinerant system may cause personal inconvenience and suffering for the time, yet it dispenses blessings to the many. While in this case, it will take a worthy and efficient pastor to some other needy field, I earnestly trust that it will bring another just as competent and worthy to carry forward the work so auspiciously began. The city of Butte is growing very rapidly, and the prospect for our church is very bright.

What do these figures mean? They represent the ratio of increase in appropriations to the Montana Conference by the Mission Board. They are significant and suggestive. They argue in the first place, an increasing confidence in the work and relation of the Montana Conference. The Board is eminently conservative, made up as it is of preachers and Laymen of distinguished ability and practical foresight. The President of the Board, Col. E. W. Cole, a Layman, who by indomitable energy and the exercise of much common sense operating on the line of business rules, has amassed a private fortune of millions. He is liberal to the church he loves, but both as an individual and a trusted official, he uses the money at his disposition, in perfect harmony with the rules of business success. His associate members of the Board are in accord with him, and any appropriation they make to a mission field, is underwritten by a policy as wise as it is liberal. With this view, we gladly record that the increased ratio of appropriations to the Montana conference argues strongly, the Board's growing confidence in her importance as an evangelizing agency and integral part of Southern Methodism.

In the second place the figures teach or show the necessity of the field as it is now operated. It makes an inventory of the men in the field, the territory occupied, and likewise the actual supply needed to support the garrison, till the working and paying forces shall have been sufficiently reenforced from without, to make the several pastoral charges self-sustaining, or to reach the point when the minimum of appropriations by the Board will be necessary. After counting the men in the field, the Board said that three thousand dollars was not sufficient to support them. How much, if any, was appropriated above what they considered necessary to provide for the men now at work, we are not advised. Writing from behind the scenes—the factorage of selfishness of course considered—it appears to the men on the field, in rifle pits, and behind the breast works, that most, if not all, of the six thousand dollars will be needed to supply the force now here and at work. We would not be dogmatic, however, and feel that it would be the part of wisdom and the exercise of a loyal Christian spirit to abide cheerfully, by any decision the proper authorities may make with reference to the application of the six thousand dollars.

The men and local agencies at work have already accomplished enough to warrant the exercise of great liberality to this mountain conference. While we rejoice in the estimate thus placed upon us, we are at the same time humbled, and it shall be our pleasure to try harder than ever to do our duty to this people, and to retain the confidence of the mother whose child we are.

BUTTE.

We may be allowed to state that during our four years pastorate in Butte, all the other churches except the Protestant Episcopal, have had from two to four changes, and more or less friction. Whether in the people, the preachers or both, we risk no opinion. To say the least, we fear the consequences to religion in most instances.

—o—

When we came to Butte, nearly four years ago, there was only one main railroad line running into the city. Now there are three. Then, there was not an inch of street-car track. Now the city is net-worked with motor, cable and electric lines.

The churches have make progress, but not equal to the Business enterprises in Butte since we first saw the "camp."

Rev. J. J. McCallister, former pastor of the M. E. Church, Butte, Montana, who the past year received $1.500 and a parsonage, was recently appointed to Stevensville, where he says the people pay about $350, and the Mission Board gives him $400. The humiliation is a strain upon the good brother's stock of loyalty to the Bishop's authority in the appointment.

Should we not pray more just before going to the house of God to engage in public worship?

According to the census exhibit, Butte City is nearly as large again in population, as Helena. Quite an amount of rivalry exists between these two chief cities of the new state. It is altogether probable that Butte will continue to grow, in the near future, at a more rapid rate than Helena. We trust we are not partial to Butte in this statement because here is our base of operation.

Revs. L. B. Stateler and E. C. Findley stopped over in Butte a few days with old friends, en route to the annual conference.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix preached a sermon in Butte, Friday evening Aug. 1st, which will never be forgotten by some of his hearers. It was refreshing to the soul. The text was, "I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing."

Ecclesiasticism may be of men, Christianity must be of God.

Of the Missionary meeting in Shanghai, Bishop Haygood says:

In this great Shanghai meeting last May, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists and Methodists met together, not to debate how thew might surrender their differences, but how they might co-operate in pushing to its consummation the triumph of a common cause.

One Rev. Joseph Isaac, a former Jewish Rabbi, (possibly) it is said has recently practiced fraud on Christian people of Denver, Col., and Helena and Butte, Mont. He pretended to have been converted to the Christian faith.

Rev. D. Atkins says: The Corvallis College suit is progressing satisfactorily. Corvallis College has completed its evidence before the referee. The defendants, Ladd and others, are taking theirs. All will be in before Sept 15 h, when the case will be ready to go before the court. M. L. Pipes, who was one of the attorneys for the defense, having been appointed judge of this court, another judge will have to be called in to try the case.

General Clinton B. Fisk was tall enough to be seen all over this land of ours. He died lamented by the whole country.

The educators of the country are now "drumming" in behalf of their respective schools. Competition of the right kind will be beneficial to the people at large, otherwise both the institution and the patrons will suffer.

We have seen mules stop and snort and side around with all manner of maneuvers, and then be forced across a bridge, or by a black stump. In some instances men from whom we expect better things do the same way, and beget mistrust.

Bozeman Station.

DEAR BRO. COUEY:—

—Complying with your request for a note from every field, I send you a brief report of the work at Bozeman:

—I have had sixteen accessions to the church this year. Most of them by letter, some on profession of faith. We have a net gain of fifteen members.

—We have a good Sunday School with an average attendance of forty-six.

We have paid out forty dollars on indebtedness, and thirty-two dollars and seventy-five cents on improvements. All our collections except the salaries of the P. C. and P. E., will be paid in full. This is an improvement, as not a dollar of missionary or church extension money was ever raised here before. Not having any steward the finances have not been looked after.

—The people of Bozeman have treated us kindly, and I believe our church has a bright future before it even in Bozeman.

—It was said by a member of another church, when I came here that "I would not stay my year out." But even that weak sister now believes that some of us have both grit and perseverance. The fact once established, that we are permanent here, and that our work here is no experiment, we can succeed. Our church in Bozeman fills a want that no other church fills.

—We greatly need a parsonage in Bozeman, so that the preacher sent here will not have to pay house rent.

Permit me in a quiet way, to suggest that the "Montana Methodist" has greatly improved the past year.

——o——

FROM FISH CREEK.

DEAR EDITOR:—

I have not seen anything in our paper from this part of God's vineyard, in regard to our spiritual welfare, for some time.

We are always glad for the time to come when we will receive the "Montana Methodist, also the appointment of Father Stateler to preach.

We feel glad that this work has been supplied by Father Statler. His sermons have the right kind of spiritual food for our people, and are well received by all.

We have been favored with a number of protracted meetings during the ast three months. First by Evangelist Streater and Rev. Wood, for two weeks they preached the word of God and baptism unto the new way into salvation. They tried to impress or convince their audience of the error of following their fore-fathers in coming to God in the old way, but finally admitted they went to heaven in the old way. Amen. They admitted that Cornelius was regenerated before baptism, but claimed that he was the only one that we had evidence of being regenerated before baptism. In the Bible we believe in regeneration, which they do not nearly all of that faith. Look at Cornelius as great proof of what the word of God would do with it set in its proper power, as it was done by Peter to Cornelius. I see in Mr. Campbell's works he cites Cornelius as one re generated by the word, under Peter's preaching. True Cornelius was ignorant of the Bible, until Peter went to his house. The fact that he fell down to worship him is proof that he was ignorant of the Bible. He had no idea of the Savior, nor of the way of redemption. He seemed to have a spirit of worship, but needed instruction to guide his worship. But can it be said that he had no spiritual thought, feeling or emotion? Acts 10;2 says, "He feared God with all his house." What is the condition of one who fears God? Paul in speaking of the wicked. Rom. 3;18 says, "There is no fear of God before their eyes." Solomon says, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Mr. Campbell here cites a case in which a man that feared the Lord was regenerated by Peter's preaching, but if he still feared the Lord, then regeneration did not change him. He had a heart to fear God before he saw, or heard of Peter. He was ignorant of the Bible, but prayed always; gave alms; feared God, and his prayers and alms had come up before God. Now was he dead in sin? If so, I wish every one was dead in sin. Peter learned here that in every nation he that fears God and worketh righteousness, is accepted, but Mr. Campbell would tell us that seven tenths of the nations of earth, are wholly destitute of any regenerating influence of the spiritual thought, feeling or emotion, in any one. But Peter here embraced, and expressed the sentiment that in every nation such men as Cornelius were accepted of God. Besides there are many places which plainly teach that the spirit of God does immediately communicate with our spirits. In 1 Jno. 5;10. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." The written word of God is the testimony, but the spirit of God is the witness, and the believer has this witness in himself. So Paul says, Rom. 8;16 "The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

Next was Revs. W. W. Orsdale and Riggin, who had the old kind of religion in their preaching, and much spiritual good was done in reviving us. We know that God was with them in power. Hereby know we that we dwell in Him and He in us, because He hath given us of His spir-

District Church Extension Societies.

Several District Church Extension Societies have been formed and others are proposed. It is the design to confine their operations to the respective Presiding Elder's Districts in which they are located. The work of one of these has been extensively advertized, and favorable notices of the plan have appeared in more than one of our church papers. It will be well for our people to look closely into this subject before they go further.

One of the chief objects sought in the organization of the General Board of Church Extension and its auxiliaries was to concentrate the gifts of our people in a common treasury, and provide for their disbursement by a system that would accomplish the largest results with the smallest outlay. We believe that the work done will justify the assertion that in this we have been fairly successful.

Over $430,000 have in one way and another been collected and paid ont, and over 1,900 churches and parsonages have been helped in eight years. The amount and character of work done by our Board, compares favorably with that of any other Board of any other church in an equal length of time. Besides, it is steadily growing, and with right support bids fair to prove itself an arm of the service which will do much to help possess the land. The very favor into which it has grown has, however, helped to develop certain tendencies which we can but regard with concern, and to which we believe the attention of the church should be cited.

I believe these District societies are likely to do harm to the several causes in several ways.

1. By diverting attention from the work of the regular Boards. What they collect will inevitably affect the regular collections. People who give to these, will claim that their contributions have gone to the Church Extension work, and that they must be excused from giving more. And for the reason that persons always sympathize with that to which they have contributed, their interest in the regular work will be diminished in the exact ratio in which they regard this.

2. By fostering a local feeling as against a connectional. Their appeals are based almost wholly upon the idea: "We must help ourselves; our Districts first, and then if we have to spare, we may go abroad." This spirit followed to its logical sequences, would obliterate every connectional enterprise among us.

3. By encumbering the work with additional machinery. If we need a District society, why not one for each city—for each Annual Conference—for each State?

Is not the claim that it is necessary equivalent to a declaration that our present machinery is inadequate? And if this is so, how are the results already achieved to be accounted for?

4. By transferring the work of Church Extension to organizations not provided for, nor recognized by any law of the church, and placing large sums of money in the hands and under the control of parties who cannot be responsible to any legal organization for either the time or manner of its disbursement.

5. By administering their funds under regulations that are altogether different from those of any other Church Extension organization we have, and thus creating dissatisfaction with existing methods, which have been adopted and approved by the highest authority, after mature and prayerful consideration of the subject. Will it not be wise to "keep" rather than "mend" our rules first at this point?

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

While the local auxiliaries, from the first, have been called "Parsonage Societies," the general work bore no other title than a department of Church Extension. To keep in mind the connection between these two, was confusing to many more than those well acquainted with the work, may suppose. The last General Conference gave the name of "Parsonage Society" to the whole organization, adding the words "Home Mission," and broadening the constitution to enable the Society to meet the demands for fuller home mission work constantly facing it, and appealing to the church for consideration. The Board of Church Extension, with much important business to transact at its meetings, had not time to look into the minutia of the woman's work. This leaving too great a burden of responsibility upon the Secretary of that department, the General Conference associated others with the Secretary, forming a "Central Committee" of twelve women, to take charge of the affairs of the Woman's Department. This Committee will appropriate the funds for the general work. But appropriations to parsonages will pass through the Board of Church Extension, and be subject to its approval and to its safe and well-tested business rules. This "Central Committee" was appointed by the Board of Church Extension, at its July meeting.

The work in the Conferences is to be conducted by Conference Societies of women, who will henceforth elect their own officers and appropriate the funds remaining in the Conference—the appropriations to parsonages passing through the Conference Board of Church Extension subject to their rules. Until a Conference Society is organized, the Conference Board of Church Extension will, as heretofore, elect the officers for Woman's Department in that Conference Our constitution is now broad enough to unite all our woman's work for the home field. We desire, by uniting these in one strong organization, to increase our power to uphold the cause of Christ against the Evil One We hope, without great projects, with humble, loving service to the loveliest of God's lost children and ready aid to those called to preach the Gospel, to do our part in giving the Gospel to "every creature;" in establishing in this land, the kingdom of our Lord on the true basis—self forgetting Love. Lucinda B. Helm.

ONLY SETTLED.

—There are so many in the church who are only settled—who have not been cleansed. When I was on the banks of the Jordan I filled two vials with Jordan water. The water in one I filtered in charcoal, and there it is, as transparent as crystal. Shake the vial, and yet the water remains transparent and beautiful. Look at the water in the other vial. It is just as beautiful, just as transparent. But at the bottom of the vial there is the eight of an inch of sediment, and, by shaking it becomes roily. So it would not do to shake some men; it would not do to shake some ministers. And in this settled state there are too many who fancy they are cleansed and clarified, but who do not wish to be shaken up. There are, however, men and women on this earth whom the Devil may shake, but the waters will not be roiled, for they have been clarified—Bishop Neuman.

LIFT YOUR HAT.

This act of politeness becomes a boy equally well with a man. Nothing looks more graceful than for a lad, passing a lady or a girl on the street, to lift his hat to her. It is a habit that will pay you to form at any early age, for many a man in mature years regrets that he neglected this act of courtesy when young, and finds it hard to practice it now, when all his habits are formed. Don't neglect to lift your hat to the ladies, boys.—Selected.

"Place for the Children."

In an editorial with the above caption Dr. Buckley makes a strong plea for the attendance of children at the preaching services.

"It is not a hopeful sign, in our cities at least, as one is on his way to the morning service at church, to meet such crowds of children on the way home, going away from, not to, the sanctuary. And notwithstanding all the good work done in the Sunday school, it is a questionable blessing if it is to train the children not to go to church. The child brought up to attend church will, in the great majority of cases, become the church-going man. While the child who does not form the habit in youth, so that it is as natural and as much a matter of course as to go to his school or his meals, will seldom acquire the habit when he grows older, and his children will be still less likely to form the habit."

It has occurred to us that there is here a new duty and opportunity for young people,—the getting their younger brothers and sisters and friends to go with them to the preaching service. Children are easily led, and they enjoy attention from young men and young women. Let us try the plan, and, by sitting with them at the morning service, we may show them how to properly worship God.

KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM.

E. M. APPLEBERRY

The words knowledge and wisdom are sometimes, indeed, quite frequently, used as synonyms, when indeed, they are very different in significance, one meaning something possessed, the other relating to the manner of using or employing the same. One may be the possessor of a great amount of knowledge, be proficient in all the sciences, a great linguist, and scholarly in every department of human attainment and research, and yet may lack wisdom to apply the knowledge to a practical use, in promoting either his own good, or advancing the interests of others. The word power is more nearly allied to wisdom in signification, and yet differs very materially from wisdom in its effects. Many, alas, possess both knowledge and power, who are lacking the essential element of success flowing from the fountain of all wisdom, and thus in many cases the knowledge becomes a curse to its possessor and a detriment to the cause in which it seeks to be employed. Too many all over the known world have both knowledge and power, who are destitute of wisdom to guide them in formulating modes of procedure or plans of action which will be productive of the best results. How many in this broad land, even in the Clerical Ranks, who possess the power of intellectual giants, morally are only pigmies, discerning not the true intent of the power with which they are endowed, or disregarding the Divine injunction, "If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth liberally," refuse to importune the Divine source for wisdom, without which all learning, all knowledge, will be but a vain possession, a dead weight, a useless encumbrance.

We need no elaborate discussion to prove the truth of what we have stated concerning the use of knowledge and wisdom. History is lamentably full of examples of the subject in question, the misuse of knowledge, accompanied by power and influence. Infidelity, resplendent in its garb of rhetoric, weighed down by the scholarly weight of varied learning, flaunting its sophisms before an ignorant and clamoring multitude, will sometimes hide abashed in the presence of the superior wisdom of God's chosen instruments, unlettered and obscure though they sometimes are. Thus we see that the possession of worldly knowledge is no criterion of success, unless it be accompanied by a wise judgment to direct its use into proper and coherent methods of application. I seldom attempt to write, without a keen appreciation of the need of a higher wisdom than my own to guide me, if what I write would accomplish any good or subserve in any degree the purpose for which it is written, and realizing my insignificance, am tempted to desist, but immediately the thought will recur to my mind of the Saviour's parable of the talents, the Creature was made to glorify the Creator, and swiftly moves the pen in response to these thoughts, and invalid though I am, I seek to use the talent, lest when the Master come He take from me and bestow it more worthily. However much we may desire certain conditions of life and labor, it is safe to affirm that we should pursue that course, so far as practicable' which seems to promise the best results; and right here appears with the greatest force, our need of a superior wisdom. We are told to seek wisdom from the Great Fountain which flows instreams of perennial gladness, from lips annointed with the sacred fire of Divine knowledge and unfailing wisdom. We are invited to walk in the green and beautiful pastures, and partake of the refreshing coolness of the Stream of Eternal Life, which make glad the city of the Great King. We are invited by the Good Shepherd to enter the peaceful fold, where with tender solicitude He watches over the Lambs, that none stray off into the wilderness of sin and thus perish. Oh, source of infinite power! Oh, fount of never-failing wisdom! Oh, spirit of heavenly beauty! Oh, voices of ecstatic melody, how sweet the tender whisperings that call me from the contemplation of my own weakness, my own need of wisdom, to the conception of the grandeur and glory of Heaven, the beauty of Earth, and the final conquest of that Divine wisdom, which shall baptize the nations of Earth in floods of Glory until the song of a new Heaven and a new Earth shall proclaim the dominion of the King Eternal, All-wise, who sitteth in the Heavens and dispenseth wisdom to all who are in need.

Another Door.—Preachers sometimes say things which their hearers think are intended to be personal. Not so. It is the Spirit's work. Whitefield's preaching was full of such providentially directed remarks. One day in Scotland he was preaching from the words, "And the door was shut." Two dashing young men in the congregation were making light of the sermon. A lady near them overhead one say in a low tone to the other: "Well, what if the door be shut? Another will open." Thus they turned off the solemnity of the text. Mr. Whitefield had not proceeded far when he said: "It is possible there may be some careless trifling person here to-day who may ward off the force of this impressive subject by lightly thinking, what matter if the door be shut? Another will open." The two young men were paralyzed and looked at each other, Mr. Whitefield proceeded. "Yes, another will open—and I will tell you what door it will be—it will be the door of the bottomless pit; the door of hell; the door which conceals from the eye of angels the horrors of damnation."

The signs is bad when folks commence
A findin' fault with Providence,
And balkin' 'cause the earth don't shake
At ev'ry prancin' step they take.
No man is great till he can see
How less than little he would be
Ef stripped to self, and stark and bare,
He hung his sign out anywhere.

My doctern is to lay aside
Contentions, and be satisfied;
Jest do your best, and praise or blame
That follers, that counts just the same.
I've allus noticed great success
Is mixed with troubles more or less,
And it's the man who does the best
That gits more kicks than all the rest.

THE BOILER-ROOM BIBLE CLASS

"I never knowed one," said Shapleigh. "I've seen pious people of most perfessions, but I never did see a pious puddler, an' I've been in the Steel Works goin' on nigh twenty-nine year. '

"Well," said his comrade, "you're bound to be surprised then: this Jones is coming here as a foreman puddler, and Wheeler told me that he saw the same man teaching a Sunday-school class up to the North End."

"He must hev ben mistakened," was the positive answer.

But he was not. The overseer, Mr. Jones, took his place in the Steel Works the next morning and the brawny men who made up his gang waited in silence for the first orders. They came as soon as he had taken a deliberate survey of the premises.

He knows his business," said Shapleigh, as his friend stood beside him a few hours after the new foreman had come.

"Do you think he's pious?" inquired the other anxiously.

"Pious! no, no! he ain't no lamb; he's a regular lion. Did you see him pick up that crucible? There isn't another man in the Works that can do it as easily as he did."

A number of days passed, and the men came to like their new overseer extremely; but it began to be whispered about among them that he had'nt sworn since he had been there.

"That's all right," said Shapleigh; he isn't acquainted, an' don't like to branch out just yet. Wait awhile until young Connor breaks something, an' then, you mark my words, he'll just lift the roof."

Connor blundered, bent, and broke, with all his unfortunate might, but no oath came from the foreman. The matter was growing serious. Perhaps after all, "Brother Jones"—for so he was called by the younger men—was pious. Before they had opportunity to speculate further, the object of all this anxious inquiry settled the question for ever by a few simple words.

"Shapleigh," he began, "I heard a sermon last winter, in which the preacher said that there was no real devil—that what we thought was the devil was really only the bad that was in us from the beginning."

"Well, happen he knowed as much about it as any on 'em."

"I don't know about that," said the overseer, in his shrewd, matter-of-fact way. I thought as long as he took his text from the Bible, that I would see if the same Book wouldn't prove him wrong."

"An' did it?"

"Oh, I haven't tried it yet. Come out in the boiler-house after the next heat, and you shall keep tally while I hunt up the places."

Before the other could demur he was gone.

"The boiler-house," thought Shapleigh; "that's where all the puddlers loaf and smoke between heats."

True to the appointment, Shapleigh was on hand, and soon the two were discussing passages that the pocket Concordance pointed out. Before long every one present was deeply interested in the search, and when the whistle blew Jones said carelessly: —

"Some of you fellows hunt up another Bible for to-morrow, will you? and, Thompson, you bring a pencil and some paper along to keep note of the passages. Look alive now, boys, or our heat will be late!"

The next day three brought Bibles and finished the question to their hearts' content, agreeing solemnly that the Bible taught a personal devil.

Another question was raised by one of the men, and settled in the same way. The profane puddlers, so suddenly transformed into Bible students, began to be interested in their novel work. Their overseer was so popular, so much one of themselves, that they never imagined a trap, and when he proposed that they should go into a Bible class, held in the mission hall, for one Sunday, just to see what a "real professional" would say with regard to the questions they had settled, every one agreed.

The next Sabbath they were all in the class named, much to the surprise of the worthy teacher.

"You didn't tell him we was coming?" said Shapleigh to his overseer, with sudden suspicion.

"Not a word," was the reply.

They listened with respectful gravity throughout the lesson, and one or two made brief comments.

The next Sunday three of them went again and ere long all but one had joined the class.

"Mr. Jones," said Shapleigh one morning as they worked side by side, "I'm feeling pretty good to-day."

"Are you?" said the other.

"Yes, an' I'll tell you why. Thompson an' me was a-readin of that verse where it teils about a person's sins being blotted clean out, an' we made up our minds that it was just exactly what we wanted; so we prayed, an'—I can't tell you how I feel, but"—here the old man's voice broke, and his eyes filled— "I've been prayin' ever sin', and I'm so happy that I just have to hold myself from shoutin' out that tune that they sing up there, 'All hail the power of Jesus' name."

All but one of "Brother Jones'" class found the Master; and now to find in the Steel Works a puddler that swears, is as rare as it formerly was to find one who did not. —Sword and Shield.

A CHILD'S FAITH.

Bright, little Edna, was sent, one day, to carry a basket of berries to a place at some distance. On the way, Edna's dress was soiled by the juice of the berries. She was fearful of being punished, but was successful in pleading with grandma not to do so. After a few moments of reflection, Edna said: "Grandma, do you know why you did not whip me for soiling my dress?" Grandma did not answer, and Edna explained by saying: "I prayed all the way home that God would not let grandma whip me, and I knew that He would not let you do it." This is the faith that pleases our Heavenly Father.

THE

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 2. AUGUST 30th, 1890. No. 25.

SALUTATORY.

Thankful for the honor bestowed upon,and the trust reposed in us, and not unmindful of the difficulties and responsibilities that attend this new relation, with charity for all and malice toward none, with a sincere desire and a fixed purpose to do all in our power to "Spread Scriptural holiness over the lands," to help in "establishing the mountain of the Lord's house in the tops of these mountains," we make our bow and enter upon the discharge of our duties as editor of the "Montana Methodist." The high standard of excellence that the paper had reached, under the skillful management of our gifted and worthy predecessor,excites a fear, lest we should not be able to keep it whereunto it has already attained. But this shall serve as a stimulus to our best endeavor. That we shall not make mistakes is hardly to be expected. In these we ask the exercise of that charity and forbearance that we endeavor to cherish toward our fellows.

We want the paper to be representative in its character, to reflect the thought and life, the Christian life, and more particularly, that form of Christian life known as Methodism, or "Christianity in earnest," and hence we request the hearty co operation of our brethren and all who are interested in this work. Let us have this, and we shall not fail of the highest success.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the year 1884, when the writer was just starting for Baltimore, to attend the Centennial Conference, at a railroad junction, while changing cars, he was met by a Christian lady, a Methodist, who with tears in her eyes, besought him, saying, "Do try and send us a preacher. I have a husband and children who are out of the church,and whom I want to see converted, and I believe if we had a minister and a church of our own that they would be. Do try and help us, for I can't bear to live this way much longer." Those earnest words burned into our heart, rang into our ears, and prompted one or two as stirring appeals as we were capable of making through the press and otherwise, for help in this far away field.

Well, at a recent service, in which a beautiful structure was dedicated to the service and worship of God, that same Christian mother was present in the large audience. A smile was upon her face and tears were in her eyes. But they were tears of joy—joy at beholding the answer to earnest prayers in the establishing of the church of her choice there, the creation of a house of worship that commands the respect of all, and especially in witnessing the conversion of a number of her children, who are rejoicing in hope of eternal life. Brethren, let not our hearts fail us. "The fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much. In due season, we shall reap if we faint not."

It was a pleasure to see such a good attendance of our lay members at the recent session of our Conference. Though we regretted that there was but one lay delegate present until the last day of the session. There is nothing that helps more largely to broaden the views, strengthen the faith and intensify the enthusiasm of our people in the work of the church, than attendance at the sessions of our Conferences.

Bishop Marvin said that "he would go a hundred miles to Conference just to hear the preachers sing." A lady remarked, in our hearing at Deer Lodge, that it was worth all the trouble and expense of a trip to Conference—and she came more than a hundred miles—just to hear the Bishop read that lesson, the Parable of the Sower, and comment upon it, and offer that sublimely, beautiful and soul-inspiring prayer at the opening of the Conference. The spirit of the Lord was in it all.

That was a fitting conclusion of the Sunday services at Deer Lodge, when three young persons came forward and knelt at the altar, and applied for membership in the Church of God. It is a great pity when Conference business, or any other kind of business in this world, should so absorb our thoughts or claim our attention that at any moment we could not kneel down by the side of a penitent and point a trembling soul to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

We acknowledge the receipt of a cabinet size photograph of Miss Clara Chrisman, the young lady missionary who was on her way to a foreign field, to which she had been appointed by the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, when she was overtaken and perished in that terrible "Johnstown Flood." It is sent by Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, at the request of Miss Belle H. Bennett, of Richmond, Ky. We attended the memorial services held in her honor in St. John's Church, at St. Louis, in May, and since looking upon the pleasant face, we do not wonder at the many tears that were dropped,and the noble tributes that were paid to her memory. We prize this picture most highly, and join heartily in the sentiment contained in an accompanying note which says, "May her sweet face prove an inspiration to every one who looks upon it, and draw them nearer to our mission work." We believe it will, and that thus,through the wisdom and love of God, her death, strange and mysterious as was the Providence, will bring greater good to the cause of missions than her life would have done. He buries his workmen, but carries forward His work.

Two years ago when Brother Squires was read out at Gallatin, Mo., as transferred to Denver Conference, we almost coveted him for our Montana work, and even expressed regret that we had not known sooner of his willingness to come West, that we might have directed his mind to this needy field. But we quietly submitted, and were loyal to the powers that be. We rejoice that the way is open for his transfer to Montana. He has done good work in Colorado, and we trust that his labors may be equally blessed of God in the Montana Conference. Our brethren in Denver cannot complain, for we send them an active an efficient man in the person of Rev John Moore. Welcome, Brother and Sister Squires and family to the itinerancy of the Northwest.

There were but few dry eyes in the Conference room while Rev. L. B. Stateler was giving in his report at the recent Conference. He said he had been sixty years in the ministry of the Methodist Church, fifty-nine of which had been spent in the travelling connection, and on the Western frontier, extending from the Mississippi to the Columbia, and among white people, black people and Indians, among all classes of whom doubtless there have been many seals to his ministry. His lips quivered with emotion as he referred to the past, and especially as he spoke of his loneliness since the departure of the one who cheered and ministered to him so long. But his eye kindled with a heavenly light as he spoke of his nearness to the better world, and the bright hope that he had of an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom above. The response of Bishop Hendrix was very fitting and quite impressive. He referred to Stateler's appeals through the papers many years ago for preachers to be sent out, as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

At the conclusion of his remarks, the Bishop presented Brother Stateler with a beautiful memorial of Rev. Doctor Scanet, (containing a steel engraving and a sketch of the life of the deceased), who was long associated with Stateler in the Indian mission, and other frontier work in Kansas and Missouri, and who departed this life during the session of the last General Conference.

We are not the business manager, but think we would be safe in saying that every one who will send in ten new subscribers for the "Methodist," with the money, ten dollars, will get a picture of the Montana Conference, taken during the recent session. It includes Bishop Hendrix, Dr. Morris, L. B. Stateler, in fact all the preachers and several of the preacher's wives. It is worth the effort.

We are sorry, indeed, to learn that Dr. A. Cooke Smith has declined the Missionary Secretaryship of our church by accepting a professorship in the Vanderbilt University. We were making large calculations on the results of his labors in the field assigned him by the General Conference.

There was a ripple throughout the large congregation at Stevensville the other Sunday, when Bishop Hendrix in his sermon, referred to some incident that occurred in his "native State, Missouri." But it didn't cost him any friends in that audience, anyhow. Too many of them from the same country.

The Stevensville church has a new organ, which was paid for at the last quarterly meeting.

The preachers are doubtless settled in their new charges by this time, and ready for earnest work. Begin the campaign by a thorough canvass for the "Montana Methodist," and rest assured it will be a valuable assistant in your work this year, by the information it will bring to the people and the general incentives it will offer to activity in this grand work.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

BY REV. J. B. PARNALL.

The above caption does not refer to the past, either of the writer or of another, but to the present and the future — how to realize such a desirable result.

The commencement of a new conference year is to the diligent, faithful Methodist preacher always a time of careful investigation both of himself and his work, of renewed consecration, of firm resolves, as well as of numberless forecastings and plannings.

It may be assumed as a settled fact that no wise and true minister of the Gospel, or layman either, however faithful, ever can reach his ideal in this life — there is always something yet ahead to be attained unto. The success above referred to is therefore only approximate.

What are some, at least, of the chief conditions of a successful year's work, either in the ministry or in any other sphere of church service?

Writers and speakers on the present condition of the church all seem agreed that it is not more machinery that we so much want, as more power to run that which we already have.

Recognizing that the source of spiritual power is alone in God — that a richer baptism of the Holy Ghost is after all what we most need; as a preparative (or perhaps as a concomitant) of it, we would first emphasize the necessity of heart purity.

"The wisdom that is from above is first pure." "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." Purity is in itself power. Who can estimate the potency for good of a holy life? It is not given to every one to be great—God makes distribution of his talents according to his sovereign will; but grace is free — all may be good, pure and holy. A sanctified ministry and a holy membership — the one productive of the other — cannot fail in powerfully impressing the mind of any community. Oh, that "Holiness unto the Lord" might always be seen inscribed upon our banners! Why may not we, members at least, experience this year that perfect love which we each on entering the Conference solemnly professed to be "expecting," yea "groaning after?"

The second condition of success we would note is unity. "Union is strength," so the proverb reads. "All with one accord in one place" is the Scripture description of a closely united church.

One man alone can do but little in stemming the tide of iniquity. What is a single particle of sand opposed to the inflowing wave of the sea? Yet an aggregation of these forms an insuperable barrier to the mighty ocean! The particles of sand on the beach however, cannot be properly said to unite, although they accomplish so much — there is no cohesiveness between them. But take as an illustration of the power of unity the steel cable, composed of fine threads of wire, which, taken singly, could perhaps easily be broken by a boy, but when spun together bear up with ease and safety the massive railroad bridge, or securely hold at anchor the gigantic ocean steamship.

Now, no one really doubts the power and effectiveness of unity in spiritual affairs, but how to get a church individually and collectively to measure up to their full ability in religious work, is the great problem that so often puzzles the brain of the pious minister.

Without professing to have discovered a complete solution of this difficulty we would suggest, that the preacher must first possess in himself the qualities that, to say the least of it, will not hinder the church from uniting and co-operating with him, but rather will draw them to his side. Love and sympathy, begotten of a close communion with the Crucified ONE, alone will accomplish this.

Wisdom, however, is likewise necessary in allotting to each his special or particular sphere. To the earnest, wide-awake pastor this will come through experience, and in answer to prayer by the intuition of the Spirit of God.

The Christian must find employment in the service of Christ The church is not merely a kind of Insurance Society, but an organization for work. Without working, the Christian cannot do his duty, neither can he long maintain his spiritual existence.

Some church members seem to think that when they have paid their proportionate share of the preacher's salary (would that all were even as far advanced as that!) they have done about all that is required of them.

Preaching religion by proxy is equally as unsafe and unsatisfactory as the practice of medicine in the same way.

"A work for everyone and all at it," is the old Wesleyan motto. How nearly can we approximate this ideal during the present conference year? Three things at least even the weakest amongst us can do First, pray earnestly and continually for the prosperity of Zion. Next, assist according to the measure of ability in bearing the financial burdens of the church. And last, but not least, endeavor to lead some one to Christ.

Shall we not all aim at this?

STEVENSVILLE, MONT., AUG. 15, '90.

—o—

CONSCIENCE is a great ledger book, in which all our offenses are written and registered; and which time reveals in the sense and feeling of the offender.—[Burton.

SOME one has beautifully said that sincerity is speaking as we think, believing as we pretend, acting as we profess, performing as we promise, and being as we appear.

NOTHING is so fragile as thought in its infancy — an interruption breaks it; nothing is so powerful, even to the overturning of mighty empires, when it reaches maturity.

THE dews and rich showers of God's grace slide on the mountains of pride, and fall on low valleys of humble hearts and make them pleasant and fertile.—[Leighton.

THE best recipe for going through life in an exquisite way with beautiful manner, is to feel that everybody, no matter how rich or how poor, need all the kindness they can get from others in the world.

LORD NELSON once said: "I owe all my success in life to having been always a quarter of an hour before my time." "Every moment lost," said Napoleon, "gives an opportunity for misfortune."

EVERY soul is an unrecognized Cremona, and the master's part is to discover the possibilities of sweet harmonies which lie therein, to take the bow of truth and bid them awake.—[Sunday Afternoon.

BEFORE, we are subject to a trinity of trial—the world, the flesh, and the devil. Above, we have a trinity for trust, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Then let us look up and not look down.

WE can easily manage if we will only take, each day, the burden appointed for it. But the burden will be too heavy for us if we add to its weight the burden of to-morrow before we are called to bear it.

THINGS are saturated with the moral law. There is no escape from it. Violets and grass preach it; rain and snow, wind and tides, every change, every course in nature, is nothing but a disguised missionary.

TENDERNESS is the genius of simple minds. If passion knows no obstacles, tenderness knows no bounds. Passion is the attribute of a soul which no longer controls itself; tenderness, that of a heart which no longer belongs to itself.

IT is a great thing, when our Gethsemane hours come; when the cup of bitterness is pressed to our lips, and when we pray that it may pass away, to feel that it is not fate, that it is not necessity, but divine love for good ends working upon us.—[Chapin.

OCCUPATION.—Occupation! what a glorious thing it is for the human heart. Those who work hard seldom yield themselves entirely up to fancied or real sorrow. When grief sits down, folds its hands, and mournfully feeds upon its own tears, weaving the dim shadows, that a little exertion might sweep away, into a funeral pall, the strong spirit is shorn of its might, and sorrow becomes our master. When troubles flow upon you, dark and heavy, toil not with the waves—wrestle not with the torment; rather seek by occupation to divert the dark waters that threaten to overwhelm you, into the thousand channels which the duties of life always present. Before you dream of it, those waters will fertilize the present and give birth to fresh flowers that may brighten the future; flowers that will become pure and holy in the sunshine which penetrates to the path of duty, in spite of every obstacle. Grief, after all, is but selfish feeling; and most selfish is the man who yields himself to the indulgence of any passion which brings no joy to his fellow-man.—Y. M. MAGAZINE.

TEACHING BY EXAMPLE.

There is no teaching like this. Paul placed this first in his directions to Timothy, he was to be "an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity"—in a word, he was to be an example in everything. There is no teaching so easily understood as this; none so affecting. All can read the Bible when it is incarnated and feel its power. It is an ocular demonstration that the teaching is practicable. No arguments can be framed against it. Without this kind of teaching the "word of mouth" soon loses its power. The world and the Word demand it, we are to be living epistles known and read of all men.—St. Louis Adv.

CHRIST A NECESSITY.

F. L. PATTON, D. D.

Nor can one fail to see the obvious relation in which the incarnation stands to much of the irreligious thought of the present day. It can hardly have escaped the notice of most of us that there is a peculiar tone of serious disheartened skepticism in a great deal of the literature of the day. The witty lecturer who passes through the land, as a peddler of the small wares of infidelity, would not be admired by those who have a right to be considered as the thoughtful advocates of anti-religious opinion. The writers of this school seem, many of them, to live under a leaden sky; and with all their infidelity they show that they are not at rest. It is not easy for a man to make a complete surrender of his moral nature. You may tell the positivist that his creed would overthrow morality, and that it makes religion impossible. But he will not carry his principles to their logical conclusion. He tries to keep his religion after he has denied his God. He has cut the brightest flowers from the tree of life, and he waters them in the vain hope that they will continue to flourish upon the dead stick of Atheism, around which he has twined them. His heart is human still, though he represses its instincts. Like the Jews who crucified the Saviour and then cast lots for his garments, he has stolen from the wardrobe of Christianity the only drapery which saves his doctrine from indecency. What he teaches as a substitute for the gospel is taught by the gospel itself in the only form in which it can ever be worthy of a moment's consideration. If he would worship an ideal humanity he must take Christ as the object of worship; if he would find comfort in the idea of an immortality of perpetuated influence he must associate it with a personal immortality as well; if he would see a typical illustration of true "altruism" he must believe in the self-sacrificing act of our Lord's atonement. But infidelity must go forward or go back. It must go back to Christ or on to despair, and when a man has discarded the eternal hope in Christ it is not strange that he should ask if life is worth living. Paul said long ago, if in this life alone we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable. When a man has no hope of reward and no fear of penalty in a future life it is not strange that he should see in the limb of a tree or the water of a neighboring stream the way to speedy peace. It is the loud voice of Christianity alone that can say with effect, "Do thyself no harm." Christ or Pessimism; the gospel of hope or the gospel of despair; salvation or suicide—these are the alternatives placed before us in sharp antithesis by the course of current thought. Never was there more significance in the Saviour's searching question, "Will ye also go away?" Never more than to-day was there need of weighing well the meaning of the profound answer of his disciple: "Lord, to whom shall we go but unto thee? thou only hast the words of eternal life."

WHY NOT?

Why should you make your own conscience a law for other people? Why should you decide what is right or wrong for your neighbor to do? Who made you judge over him? It is true that conscience is your supreme guide, and must be implicitly obeyed. It is true that you must do what your moral judgment, with all the light it can obtain, decrees to be right for you to do. But who gave it authority over your neighbor? What reason have you to think that it is any better conscience than your neighbor's conscience? If a man plumes himself on being always right in his judgment on questions of expediency, and looks with contempt or indifference on the moral judgment of men as good as he? Why not compare moral judgments and reach conclusions by conference and consultation?

In the home life, among pious people, no more prolific cause of heart burnings and estrangments is there than a self-conceited conscience. The husband decides what is right, taking no illumination from the more sensitive conscience of his wife; the wife decides what is right, taking no wisdom from the larger view and broader experience of her husband. The decisions are different and the two consciences come in collision; and because, forsooth, it is a matter of conscience, neither will yield or even sympathetically listen to the other. Nay! not uncommonly this convenient word "conscience" is made to cover a proud self-will. My dear, you know I always wished to yield to you, but this is a matter of conscience!" and that settles all. Pray sir, why is your conscience any better than hers? Pray, madame, why is your conscience any better than his? Has your conscience been summoned up into the holy mount to receive the tables of law and your mate's conscience been left down on the plain?

Conscience is moral judgment. Moral judgment is no more infallible than any other judgment. It is to get light and wisdom by taking counsel of other moral judgments. There is no possibility of going happily, peacefully, rightfully through the world otherwise. What is right, as what is wise, is to be ascertained by judgment, but by judgment corrected by comparison with other judgments and instructed by the knowledge of others. Is not the Bible to determine it? Yes! But in reading the Bible you are to consider and weigh the interpretations of other readers as wise, as spiritual, as conscientious as yourself.

You cannot be too conscientious. But you can have a conscience too self-conceited, too tyrannous, too papal. Your conscience is not an infallible conscience. You are not a Moses nor a Pope. Take council of other consciences. Consider their judgment. Give them due weight. Then judge for yourself but not for your neighbor. Why not?—The Christian Union.

Write for the "Methodist."

The present editor enters upon his work before a single exchange reaches him, or a single contribution has come to hand, though he has the promise of at least two contributions for the present issue. But we have been chosen editor, and the paper must come out whether there are contributions or not. The tale of bricks must be burned out, straw or no straw. We hope the brethren will favor us by writing for the paper often. Send us postal card reports of your religious services and of the Sunday schools, the attendance, and anything that would give encouragement to others. Do not be afraid of becoming too conspicuous. That is partly what our paper is for—to report the work. Let our Sunday school superintendents and teachers give an account of their work. We want a live paper. It takes life to make it, and more than any one being possesses. If there is no life in your church or school, go to work and get up some, or put yourself in an attitude that the Lord will bestow it upon you, and then tell us about it. Again we say, write for the "Methodist." Address communications for the paper to "Montana Methodist," Corvallis, Montana, and be sure to have them here before the 2nd and 17th of each month.

While on our way from Deer Lodge, we met an elderly lady just returning from a visit to Texas, back to her home in Bitter Root Valley, Montana. She had been absent about a year, and is delighted to get back to Montana. She reports that everything is burnt up in the country that she visited, and where she formerly lived, and that potatoes are worth two dollars a bushel there.

—o—

The beautiful Bitter Root Valley has been blessed with refreshing rains the past summer, and there is good promise of adundant harvest. The people stood in great need of this good fortune, but nevertheless, will not fail to be thankful to the Giver of all our good for His great blessings.

That District Parsonage.

Now that we have a Presiding Elder on the Helena District, who has no home, it might be well for some of our laymen who are interested in the matter to talk up the enterprise of a District parsonage. Necessity is the mother of invention, it has often been remarked. Surely there is a necessity for that District parsonage now. It will require two hundred and fifty or three hundred dollars for house rent for one year. In five years this would amount to about fifteen hundred dollars, which is enough to build a pretty good house. Why cannot some plan be devised that will permit the church to get the good of this money, rather than have it paid out to speculators, and have nothing to show for it at the end of the five years? Let the brethren think over the matter, and see if something cannot be done. There are two or three pastoral charges, also, that are in great need of better homes for their preachers. Now is the time to canvass the matter, and see what can be done.

It was a treat to be relieved of the duties of Secretary of the Conference, and have nothing to do during the afternoons but confer with the Bishop in his cabinet, sit on two Boards and only on two or three committees. After doing this work for about twelve years—and we never thought of complaining, but did it heartily as unto the Lord—we do enjoy the rest, and never so much enjoyed a Conference before, so far as concerns the physical labor performed. Right glad are we to know that this work is in the hands of one so eminently qualified as Rev. J. B. Parnall. We shall look for a good report on the "Montana Conference Journal" at the next General Conference.

We think the appointment of Rev. A. C. Couey to the Helena District has given general satisfaction. Brother Couey has proven his fidelity to the interests of our cause by a four years' pastorate in the midst of many obstacles, at Butte City, and by two years of hard work as editor of the "Montana Methodist," in connection with his duties as pastor. His ability is demonstrated by the success achieved in each of these departments. He has a fine field for the exercise of his gifts. The district, as now organized, is compact and well manned. We trust that both preachers and lay men will rally to the help of their Presiding Elder, with their prayers, their purses, and in every laudable way. He will feel a little awkward, perhaps, at first in his new work, but will soon get accustomed to it. We shall expect good reports, and hope to have them often, from the Helena District this year.

Subscribe for the "Montana Methodist," and get your friend to subscribe.

Do not overlook Brother Parnall's article entitled "A Successful Year." It is right to the point, and will bear a careful perusal. The subject is a vital one, and is ably discussed.

Our readers will be interested in Brother Stateler's account of his missionary work among the Indians, which appears in this issue. We have the promise of several chapters of incidents, anecdotes and adventures, in connection with his long and eventful life on the border. Some of them are of a most thrilling character. They are more than worth the price of this paper for a year. Look out for them.

It is quite interesting, if not edifying, after you have taken several hours of precious time in preparing an article for a newspaper on a given subject, for instance, describing a certain region of country and telling all about it that you think the average man would care to know, then to get letters from half a dozen men, stating that said article had been read by them, and requesting that you write and tell them something about the country. Perhaps a few of our Montana readers have had some experience along this line. My !

If you could see the nice lot of fine, large blackberries that were brought in from the garden and placed on our table where this is written, you would say that fruit can be grown in Montana, and that Corvallis is an excellent place for a home.

—Let each friend of this paper send us another subscriber inside of a week. How that would swell our list and help us on. The price is only one dollar a year.

The New Church Extension Secretary.

We greatly rejoiced at the presence of Dr. J. C. Morris, our new Church Extension Secretary, at the session of our late Conference. By his amiable and cheerful spirit in the social circle, his practical and telling speech at the Church Extension Anniversary, and his spiritual and powerful sermons in the pulpit, he won all hearts, and demonstrated to the minds of our preachers and people that he is the right man in the right place. Brother Clark, who voted against him in the General Conference, had to confess his error, and acknowledged that the General Conference knew better than he.

The Doctor expressed surprise to find that we had a Church Extension movement in operation, had collected nearly one thousand dollars in donations from all parts of the country, and secured church property, which is to-day valued at about thirteen thousand dollars, before the Board of Church Extension was organized by the General Conference. He was somewhat surprised to know that he was commencing his work as Secretary right where the great movement began. But the suggestion pleased and stirred him, and he gave us a charming speech. His presence and counsels in the Conference and in the Board were valuable, and did much to awaken enthusiasm on the subject of Church Extension. He has been in the West enough to know its needs and to feel an interest in its development. We predict for the Doctor a successful career in his new field, and greatly increased interest and efficiency in the work of Church Extension generally. The sending of earnest, consecrated and efficient men throughout the church to represent and urge its great interests, and to preach the gospel of the kingdom is bound to bring good results. It could not be otherwise. We will always be glad to see Dr. Morris in Montana.

The Last Was the Best.

Many years ago when we were in charge of a circuit in the east side of the mountains, on going home with a family from church one day for dinner, after receiving a member into full fellowship, the lady of the house, who was a Christian, remarked: "Well, Brother S., did'nt we have a a splendid meeting to-day? Somehow I always feel like the last one is the best." What a happy frame of mind to be in thought I, and what a healthful state of life it indicated.

So with our annual Conferences; we are generally inclined to think that "last one is the best."

The Conference recently held at Deer Lodge, was, without doubt in many respects, the most profitable one that we have ever held in Montana. There was not much speech making, not much ado, and less time than heretofore was given to making reports from the charges, partly because the Bishop had visited most of them, and already had the information desired. But the reports showed that there is more system than heretofore, that more and better work had been done by both preachers and lay members, and that there has been substantial progress in almost every department.

Owing to some irregularity in giving in the statistics, causing the appearance of a considerable falling off in one charge, the increase in membership was not so great as the revivals and additions reported at our District Conference in April, gave us reason to hope for. We greatly fear that the labors of the winter campaign were not followed up after the opening of spring. But evidently there had been a careful pruning of church rolls, and a closer scrutiny of the character of those who remain on the rolls, and yet after all this there is an an increase on last year.

The financial report is by far the best that has ever been made. A much greater amount had been assessed upon the various charges, and notwithstanding the universal and unprecedented complaint of hard times, especially throughout the agricultural regions, more money was paid for ministerial support, and a much larger amount raised for the general collections than ever before. Evidently, the preachers had been more diligent, and the people are catching their spirit. It was very easy to raise the deficits at Conference. As usual, we "cleared the decks," and reported all our assessments, save for ministerial support, paid up in full.

One new church had been completed, while three new buildings had been relieved of debt and formally dedicated to God. There was an increase of $11,800 in the value of church property. One new parsonage had been secured, and the value of parsonage property increased by $1,600.

The Sunday schools were reported to be in a healthy condition. There had been about as many accessions to the church on profession of faith as by certificate. For this we are devoutly thankful. We are specially gratified when we know that God is making us instrumental in the conversion of souls.

There was great candor, mingled with sincerest love, in looking into the condition and needs of the work. If one member suffered, all shared his sorrow, or if one rejoiced all were ready to join with him in a song of gladness.

The Presiding Bishop had thoroughly canvassed the field. He knew the needs of the work, and knew the men, was in favor with all, and there seemed to be the utmost confidence in his ability to do the best possible for each, in the arrangement of the work for another year.

The devotional spirit of the Conference was excellent. The Bishop, is his opening lesson and prayer struck a chord that stirred all hearts and kept vibrating in sweetest harmony throughout the session. The morning prayer meetings were very profitable, the Sunday morning love-feast was an occasion that caused every Christian's heart to burn within him. The Bishop's sermon, which was largely to the preachers and the church, was unsurpassed in clearness, beauty of expression, unction and in its effect upon the large audience. The collection of four hundred and fifty dollars on the church debt, after the morning sermon, was a most masterly effort, and accomplished with very little apparent effo t. Another hundred dollars would have been raised if it had been asked for. The presence of Dr. Morris, our new Church Extension Secretary, and of our venerable Stateler, of whom any Conference might well be proud, contributed no little to the interest and life of the Conference, both in the business sessions and in the devotional exercises.

What a sweet, solemn, sacramental service that was, as the preachers just before the appointments were read out, gathered around the tables—some of them for the last time together--to commemorate the suffering and death of their Lord and Master. It was an occasion never to be forgotten. Then, the closing service on Monday night. Who that was there will ever fail to remember that? The leave taking, the handshaking, the singing, the praying, the weeping, the rejoicing—who can describe it? The Lord was there in mighty power, and a profound impression for good was made upon the large audience. After such an occasion who can doubt that the M. E. Church, South, has a mission in Montana? Thank God for the privilege of attending another annual Conference. Again we say, "The last one was the best." May it ever be thus until we shall all meet again in "the sweet bye and bye."

Marvin and Hendrix in Montana.

None of the chief pastors of the church have done so much perhaps in sowing the seed and planting Southern Methodism in Montana soil as Bishop Marvin. He was a western man, and after his election to the Episcopacy, spent a whole year in California and Oregon, laboring in the interest of the church there, and watched with eager eyes for the reports from Stateler and others as to the outlook for our cause here on the tops of the mountains. His ear was sensitive to every Macedonian cry; he longed to see this vast western empire brought under the sceptre of Immanuel. I remember how joyfully he spoke of meeting with Stateler at Council Grove, Kansas, in 1871, of the plans for enlargement of the work, and rejoiced that he was able to send more men to this field. The following year found him here on the ground surveying the field in person, and looking after and cheering the men that he had sent. He traveled four hundred and fifty miles by stage to get from the railroad, at Corinne, Utah, up here, and then traversed the country from Deer Lodge to Bozeman by buggy and stage, preaching usually once every day, which he used to say was just enough work to keep him in good trim when out on such a tour. He held an informal conference with the preachers of the territory, at Helena. in 1872, and two years later returned to preside over the first annual Conference—then called Denver—ever held in Montana. The stirring words of his opening address to the preachers ring in our ears yet. He impressed himself upon the public mind here as did no other minister of that day. He loved the work of his planting, and died with Montana on his heart. He was looked upon by the leaders of the church as the champion of our cause here, in so much that it was predicted the work here would not long survive him.

To those who are acquainted with these facts and know something of the relation of our Bishop Hendrix to Bishop Marvin before the decease of the latter, the coming of Bishop Hendrix to Montana has a striking significance, awakens many precious memories and kindles fresh hope in many hearts. It would be natural that, being a western man, and a Missourian, too, and having such a profound regard for the memory of the man of God whose footprints are found all over these mountains and through these valleys, he should desire to preserve the work of one who was so near his heart. But, however this may be, Bishop Hendrix is not the man to sacrifice the interests of the church at large for the sake of personal attachments. Three years ago he came with full authority from his colleagues and all concerned to act according to his own judgment with reference to the work in Montana. It was just after Stateler had been stricken down with paralysis, and when there was the poorest prospect imaginable for our future success. His very presence gave fresh inspiration and imparted new life and energy to the struggling cause. He saw at once that there was a work for us to do here, made the best arrangement possible of the forces at his command,(Stateler supplementing the appropriation by more than one-half the amount given by the Board) and represented the work to the Board at the next meeting, when we received an increased appropriation. The work has been advancing ever since. The Bishop comes with note-book and map in hand, visiting nearly every charge in person, observing the work that has been done and under what conditions, and with what prospects for permanency, and looking out the strategic points with a view to further enlargement, just as a general scans the field and arranges his line of battle. He feels that we are in duty bound to hold this field. The men should be provided for, yet the Lord's money must not be wasted, and effort should be made for a reasonable enlargement of the work. He discovers decided improvement within the past three years, and is elated at the prospect of our joining hands with the brethren of East Columbia Conference at no distant day.

While Bishop Hendrix possesses much of the aggressive spirit of his distinguished predecessor, Bish. Marvin, and is carrying the work begun by the former to a higher state of completeness, yet we can but observe some of the different conditions that attended them in their labors here. The one came to Montana in a rickety, jolting stage coach, requiring four days and nights of constant travel from the railroad (and such travel !), and that was fifteen hundred miles from his home, paying a dollar for the meals he got at wayside inns, while the other came in a splendid palace car, with dining apartments attached, and requiring but three or four days of travel from Kansas City.

In 1871 Bishop Marvin preached in Gallatin Valley in a low, small, homely-looking log school-house, covered with dirt, to a small company of settlers and a few preachers. His text was the voyage of the disciples across the sea, whither Jesus had sent them, and where they were "toiling in rowing, for the winds were contrary." The sermon was full of spiritual life and comfort to those present. Bishop Hendrix, on a recent visit, was called to dedicate a beautiful frame church in the center of that great valley and not far from the site of the old school-house, and preached with great acceptability to a large congregation.

Bishop Marvin dedicated a small log church in Prickly Pear Valley, near Helena, which had been built of logs cut, hauled from the mountains, and hewed by the preacher and his congregation, while Hendrix recently dedicated a substantial and cozy frame building, supplied with organ and furniture of modern style, in the same valley, a few miles from the old church, at the promising new town of East Helena, where we have a preacher stationed. The former preached every night for a week or more in a log building in Deer Lodge, and raised a large part of the money with which to purchase it for a church, and where he made an impression upon the public mind as a man mighty in the Scriptures and who had power with God. The latter dedicated an elegant new brick church, that stands on the same spot of ground and is valued at thirty-five hundred dollars. The recent conference, over which he presided with dignity and acceptability, was held in it, and he preached as he alone can preach to crowds of delighted hearers.

The older Bishop, on going from Montana to Oregon, had to return by stage to Corinne, thence by rail to California and from there by stage five hundred miles across the mountains, or by steamer along the coast and up the Columbia River. The younger one dashes through on the Northern Pacific train in about a day's time and continues his work of visiting the charges, dedicating churches, preaching, advising and being advised, and planning and working for the enlargement of Christ's Kingdom in this great West.

We bless God for both these men, so dissimilar in some respects, yet wonderfully alike in their faith, their consecration, and in their spiritual life and power, and in their zeal for the upbuilding of the church. One soweth and another reapeth that whereon he hath bestowed no labor. Other men labored and we have entered into their labors. But by and by the fruit shall be gathered unto life eternal and both he that soweth and he that reapeth shall rejoice together.

AMONG THE INDIANS.

BY L. B. STATELER.

In the fall of 1837, the Missouri Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, was held in St. Louis. It had been held there the previous year also, and went there the second time by special invitation. Bishop Soule presided, and the session was harmonious and peaceful.

I was sent from there to the Delaware Mission, among the Delaware Indians on the north bank of the Kansas or Kaw river, in what is now the State of Kansas, but was then included in the Indian Territory. It was about three hundred miles from the seat of the Conference. I had by trading around come in possession of a hack, which had springs, and in this vehicle, drawn by two faithful horses, my wife and I made the journey, carrying with us all that we had in the world.

The mission was about twenty miles in the interior from Westport, which was a pre-eminent Indian trading post near the Missouri line containing several stores. We got our supplies for the missions, principally at that point. Kansas City—the place where it now stands—was then a wilderness, a great big hill covered with timber and owned by half breeds, the children of old French traders who had been with the Indians a long time and had married Indian wives.

In entering upon our work we had to relinquish the society of white people and live alone with the Indians. At first it was very lonely dwelling with a people of a strange tongue, and whose habits of life were so different from ours. But we were sent to labor for their good, and endeavored to reconcile ourselves to the situation the best we could. The missionary was not only expected to teach religion and instruct the people in the way of life, but also to take their children, clothe and feed and teach them in the day schools. This devolved a great amount of manual labor both upon the missionary and his wife. We had to go quite a distance for supplies, and cross either the Missouri or Kaw river on the journey, and it was also very difficult to employ assistance, either male or female. Clothing had to be made, for the little Indian children came destitute. This the missionary's wife had to do with her own hands, for that was long before sewing machines were in existence. Then the cooking had to be done, the clothes washed, ironed and mended, and the only assistance rendered her was that given by the Indian girls. When spring time came, the missionary had to take the plow, go into the field, sow and plant and cultivate, that the institution might be made as nearly self-sustaining as possible. Thus it will be seen, that mission work among Indians in those days was laborious and constant.

The church at that time fixed no salary for her preachers except the amount allowed by the discipline, which was one hundred dollars for the preacher and another hundred for his wife, upon which sum they were expected to subsist and meet all necessary expenses. The missionaries ate at the public table, which was kept up by the general fund. The Missionary Board furnished a certain amount to each mission station, out of which the varied expenses, such as food and clothing for the children were met.

When our missions were first established among the Indians, funds were provided, houses were built for the missionary to live in and for schools, farms were fenced and stocked, and means furnished to carry on the work.

This mission had been established four or five years previous, and other brethren had labored earnestly and faithfully in the work. Their labors had been blessed of God: a religious society had been gathered, many of the members of which were earnest Christians. The school had also been organized and in operation, but quite a while had now been spent in vacation. We had not been long at the new station before we gathered the children and began the work. It was all entirely new to us. We went into it the more heartily because of the extreme poverty of the Indians and their great need of being taught letters and religion. Our labors were blessed of God, from time to time. Souls were converted. We had prayer meeting every Sunday at the school house, and prayer meetings at the private houses during the week day evenings. The people were scattered. They had right confortable log buildings which they had built themselves. The Delaware Indians had come from Ohio and Indiana. They had some degree of intelligence and refinement. Our intercourse was mainly through an interpreter, and especially the preaching. When the missionary preached, the interpreter stood at his side and gave the sense sentence by sentence, in his native tongue. The children were taught in school only in English and out of English books.

It must not be supposed, however, that all this instruction and religious worship and work went smoothly on. The Christian portion of the tribe was greatly opposed by what was known as the heathen party. These latter were not only led away by their own superstitious ways, but were also drunkards, were vicious, and would try to lead off all who were Christians. They would get liquor from the whites, much as they do nowadays.

At one time two drunken fellows came to the church near the mission house intending to break up the mission and drive the Christians away. But the people were too strong for them and they did nothing more than frighten a few persons. The two who came were desperate characters, however, and they now made a terrible scourge, each to the other. They fell out, and Indian-like, in their hearts purposed to have revenge. One of them went away, got whiskey, and induced the other to drink with him, himself pretending only to drink, the object being to get his victim gloriously drunk while he kept sober. When the other Indian became helplessly intoxicated, the sober man got a hickory and gave him a merciless beating. The one that received the thrashing said nothing, pretended friendship, though bent on revenge, when opportunity should present itself. Then he got a bottle, enticed the other to drink (it is hard for an Indian to resist such a temptation) and when he became beastly drunk the sober one drew out a huge knife and disemboweled the other, who fell dead at his feet like a dog. The murderer then fled the country. We were thus rid of the two drunken characters who tried to break up our meetings.

MODERN MARTYRDOM.

There are men who suppose they have all the annoyances. They say it is the store that ruffles the disposition; but if they could only stay at home, as do their wives and sisters and daughters, they would be, all the time, sweet and fair as a white pond lily. Let some of the masculine lecturers on placidity of temper try for one week the cares of the household and the family. Let the man sleep with a baby on one arm all night, and one ear open to the children with the whooping cough in the adjoining apartment. Let him see the tray of crockery and the cook fall down stairs, and nothing saved but the pieces. Let the pump give out on wash-day, and the stove pipe, when too hot for handling, get dislocated. Let the pudding come out of the stove stiff as a poker. Let the gossiping gabbler of next door come in and tell the disagreeable things that neighbors have been saying. Let the lungs be worn out by staying indoors without fresh air, and the needle be threaded with nerves exhausted. After one week's household annoyances, he would conclude that Wall street is heaven, and the clatter of the stock exchange rich as Beethoven's symphony. If the women sympathize with men in the troubles of store and field, let the men also sympathize with the women in the troubles of housekeeping.

Many a house wife has died of her annoyances. A bar of soap may become a murderous weapon. The poor cooking-stove has sometimes been the slow fire on which the wife has been roasted. In the day when Latimer and Ridley are honored before the universe as the martyrs of the fire, we do not think the Lord will forget the long line of wives, mothers, daughters, and sisters who have been martyrs of the kitchen.—New England Homestead.

THE CHRISTIAN BOY.

The Christian boy should eschew tobacco in every form, and have a horror of intoxicating drinks. He ought to be peaceful, gentle, merciful, generous. He ought to take the part of small boys against large boys. He ought to discourage fighting. He ought to refuse to be a party to mischief, to persecution, to deceit. And above all things, he ought upon all occasions to be willing to show his colors. He ought not to be ashamed to say that he refuses to do something because it is wrong and wicked, or because he fears God, or is a Christian. He ought to take no part in the ridicule of sacred things, but meet the ridicule of others with a bold statement that for the things of God he feels the deepest reverence. Such a boy's religion will be marked by growth a [illegible] usefulness.—

Just Do Your Best.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

The signs is bad when folks commence
A-findin' fault with Providence,
And balkin' 'cause the earth don't shake
At ev'ry prancin' step they take.
No man is great till he can see
How less than little he would be
Ef stripped to self, and stark and bare,
He hung his sign out anywhere.

My doctern is to lay aside
Contentions, and be satisfied;
Jest do your best, and praise or blame
That follers, that counts just the same.
I've allus noticed great success
Is mixed with troubles, more or less,
And it's the man who does the best
That gits more kicks than all the rest.

Surely, God is Ever Present.

The elder Pliny, one of the profoundest of pagan philosophers, studied nature to gain at least some knowledge of the creative spirit which he believed behind it. As a result of his researches he declared: "What God is, if he is anything distinct from the world, is beyond the compass of man's understanding to know. But it is a foolish delusion, sprung either from human weakness or from pride, to imagine that such an infinite spirit would concern Himself with the petty affairs of men." Compare with this some of the many passages of the Bible, which urge you to call upon God in all your troubles and trials, and which say that He is willing and able to deliver, and then say: Which do you prefer?

Surely these last alone are freighted with heart-cheering comfort, but are they true and reliable?—Let me tell you one of my most remarkable experiences.

I had driven on pastoral business about two miles west from my home; my horse was young and quite speedy. I had taken with me my only child, a boy nearly three years of age. On my way home, I had to drive through a gate a short distance from the farmer's house, to reach the public highway. Having passed through the gate, I stepped back a few steps to close it, leaving my boy upon the open seated buggy. While closing the gate, my horse, for the first time, started to run off. For a mile ahead no one was seen on the road and no one in the fields near by on either side. The road due north was level for half a mile, then, a very short turn to the east, the road I had to take homeward, and a stump right at the corner, to protect my farmer friend's fence, threatened danger. What could I do? Over take the horse? Impossible! Be unconcerned about the poor little fellow who cried pitifully: O, papa, help me off? I could not. For one moment I stood looking at the situation and then cried as only man in his extremity cries: "O, Lord, thou a'one can'st save my boy, save him then, O Lord!" This was all. But I had scarcely uttered the word when I saw the little fellow crawl from his seat, take the reins from off the dash, throw them against the left forewheel, (a light breeze was felt from the east) and the next moment my horse was brought to an halt. How? The reins had passed through between two spokes, passed back between two others, formed almost a knot, and were then in an instant tightly wound upon the hub. Thus I found my horse stopped.—Now, please say: Who told the boy: Throw the reins against the flying wheel? And who has guided the reins to thus wrap around the spokes, and by winding upon the hub held the animal firmer than any man could have held it? Surely blind luck did not do it and neither did cold, heartless nature. Oh, there is a God, who sees our need, hears our cries, who is ever present and mighty to save. Never, as long as I am in possession of the same mind, will I forget this.

How to get the Victory.

A South American traveller tells of a curious conflict which he once witnessed between a little quadruped and a terrific and poisonous snake of great size. The little creature seemed no match for its antagonist that threatened to destroy it by a blow, and also its helpless brood, but it fearlessly faced its mighty enemy, and rushing in its face, struck it a succession of fierce and telling blows, but received at the onset a deep and apparently fatal wound from its poisonous fangs, which flashed for a moment with an angry fire, and then fastened themselves deep into the flesh of the daring little assailant. For a moment it seemed as if all was over, but the wise little creature immediately retired into the forest and hastening to the plantain tree eagerly devoured a portion of its leaves, and immediately came back, apparently fresh and restored, to renew the fray with fresh vigor and determination. Again and again this strange spectacle was repeated; the serpent ferociously attacked and greatly exhausted, yet again and again wounded its antagonist to death as it seemed, but the little creature successively repairing to the simple prescription and returning to renewed victory; until in the course of an hour or two, the battle was over, the mammoth reptile lay still and dead, and the little victor was unharmed in the midst of the nest, and the helpless little ones, who had thus been saved from destruction.

Oh, how often we are wounded by the dragon's sting, wounded it would seem to death, and if we had to go through some long ceremony to reach the source of life, we must faint and die. But, blessed be His name, there is ever, for us, a plant of healing as near at hand as that which the forest holds in its shade. There is a leaf of healing, such as no plantain tree ever grew, and to which we may continually repair, and come back refreshed, invigorated, transfigured, like Him who, as he prayed on the mount, shone with the brightness of celestial light. After He prayed in the garden, He arose triumphant over the fear of death, and strengthened from on high to accomplish the mighty battle for our redemption, and become the guarantee of victory for us, and in us, in every time of need.

—There are so many in the church who are only settled—who have not been cleansed. When I was on the banks of the Jordan I filled two vials with Jordan water. The water in one I filtered in charcoal, and there it is, as transparent as crystal. Shake the vial, and yet the water remains transparent and beautiful. Look at the water in the other vial. It is just as beautiful, just as transparent. But at the bottom of the vial there is the eight of an inch of sediment, and, by shaking it becomes roily. So it would not do to shake some men; it would not do to shake some ministers. And in this settled state there are too many who fancy they are cleansed and clarified, but who do not wish to be shaken up. There are, however, men and women on this earth whom the Devil may shake, but the waters will not be roiled, for they have been clarified—Bishop Newman.

EDITORIAL.

—The American Sabbath Union has prepared an earnest appeal to the commissioners of the World's Columbian Exposition, to be held in Chicago, asking them to decide that the exposition shall be closed on Sundays. It is understood that the commissioners will meet in Chicago on Oct. 7th. The officers of the union, in making this appeal, are seeking the co-operation of all the friends of the Sabbath throughout the land. Individuals, local churches, institutions of learning and all organized societies of whatever kind, are invited to send their communications to the secretaries of the American Sabbath Union, No. 23 Park Row, New York, who will see that they are forwarded to the commissioners before the above date. A matter affecting so vitally the welfare of the nation ought to claim the immediate attention of all patriotic citizens.

Very Truly,

IS IT TIME TO REGISTER.

A young man from the country came into one of our chief Montana cities and was seeing the sights and "doing" the town in a general way, when upon observing the promptness with which the police officers hurried certain "floating" characters away to the lock-up, he suddenly came to himself and remarked to his comrade, "Guess I'd better hunt up a hotel and register myself, or these here officers who have been eyein' me so close will seize on to me, and I'll have a hard time gettin' away from 'em if I'm not located somewhere."

How forcibly this illustrates the situation of those church members who have changed their residence, and have not put in their letters nor even made themselves known in their new place of abode. Such persons are special targets for the fiery darts of the wicked one, and alas, they often become an easy prey. When Peter "followed afar off," it was not long till he denied his Lord and began to curse and swear. Brother, it is time you were hunting a church home and registering yourself along with God's people in the community wherever you live. If not, you are liable to get locked up in doubting castle if not completely destroyed under the fell blows of Giant Despair.

The portion of Idaho that we have seen thus far is exceedingly mountainous. It is mountains by the side of mountains, and beyond mountains, and mountains piled up on top of mountains—in fact there is little else than mountains. Long, high, rugged, steep, grand mountains that contain precious ores and are covered with trees that make you wonder if they are like the tall cedars of Lebanon that Solomon used in building the house of the Lord.

The beautiful garden of choice and variegated flowers in front of the window at the hospitable Methodist home of Brother and Sister Helm, where the writer of these lines is being entertained, presents a striking contrast with the mountains around that are covered with dead and blackened trees, showing the mark of terrible forest fires in past years, and with portions of the little town that was so recently swept by the fire fiend. Hardy prospectors, miners and rough looking men from the mountains, as well as refined and elegantly dressed ladies in passing are seen to stop and feast their eyes upon the lovely scene. Truly "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." May this beautiful prophetic passage be fulfilled in its true spiritual significance and in the fullest measure here in this enterprising mountain town.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The next issue of the "Methodist" will contain an account of our visit to Wallace, the principal town in the Cour d'Alene county, that was recently burned down, but is rising out of the ashes with wonderful energy and rapidity, and also a sketch of the trip to Spokane Falls, including a voyage over the charming and famous Cour d'Alene lake.

The pastor preached at Corvallis the first Sunday after Conference, and on the following Sunday night was greeted by an appreciative audience at Grantsdale. An appointment was left at both of these places for Brother Flowers, who enters upon his work with much earnestness and hope. We earnestly pray that a good revival will attend the labors of the two preachers appointed to Corvallis and Grantsdale this year.

A note from Rev. J. B. Parnall, of Steubenville, says, "I am starting off in the year's work hopefully."

Rev. R. S. Clark, writing from Townsend, sends this encouraging note: "We have succeeded in buying a lot owned by the Baptist Church, that joins the one our church building stands on, and in getting a title to the entire property. So that there is now nothing in the way of dedicating our church building at Townsend at an early day."

Rev. D. B. Price, of Helena, writes of a most cordial greeting extended him on his return from Conference, at which we are not surprised, that his congregations on the first Sunday were large and services spiritual, and that the outlook is very encouraging. We pray that his brightest anticipations may be fully realized.

The Presiding Elder of Missoula District arrived in Wallace, Idaho, on Friday, the 29th of August. He found the town of Wallace and the country around, including several smaller towns—in fact the entire county, consisting of several thousand people — unsupplied with Methodist preaching. There is an Episcopal clergyman located at Wallace, the only minister. A number of Methodists were found, and a large number who are anxious for a Methodist preacher to be located here. The preacher was greeted on Sunday morning and night by large and attentive audiences. We had a refreshing time. A church building is greatly needed, and is talked of, though the effects of the recent fire are such as to render it difficult to build just now. We hope to have a live preacher in this inviting field in a short time. It is refreshing to receive such a greeting as was extended by the good people of Wallace to the new preacher. It more than compensated for the inconvenience of the lonely journey through the mountains to get there.

The Helena District is much larger than the Missoula District in the number of pastoral charges, preachers, and members that it contains, but it is not much larger in the territory that it covers, nor in the faith and zeal of its ministry and membership, neither the possibilities of proportionate growth. The brethren of the east side had better look out for their laurels. May the Lord inspire us all with a holy rivalry, with a mania for soul-saving, and the upbuilding of His kingdom in this mountain land.

For years we have been anxiously looking forward to the day when we should meet and shake hands with our brethren of the Columbia Conference. This writing finds us one hundred and thirty or forty miles westward from Missoula, in the midst of the Coeur d'Alene mountains, at Wallace, more than half way from Missoula to Spokane Falls, the seat of the East Columbia Conference, that will convene within a few days, and we confidently expected to be able to announce in this issue of the "Methodist" that the long cherished hope was fulfilled. But not a foot print of one of our brethren has been discovered, we must mail the matter for our paper to day, and our readers will have to wait two weeks more before learning of further developments in this direction.

We hope our brethren will not overlook our request to let us hear from them concerning their work every two weeks. They will be sure to tell something that the public would be glad to know. One brother sat down to answer a private request that we had sent him, to let us know that he had nothing to report, and before he got through he gave a very interesting and important item. Thus it goes. Send them in just as you have. Don't wait for something especially interesting.

Please do not overlook the instruction to write with a pen and ink. It is much easier for the editor, printer, proof-reader, more satisfactory to the writer himself, and to all the readers.

Some Thoughts on Self-culture, So - called.

Incentives, Dangers and Advantages.

Extract of an address delivered by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald at Mont Eagle, on Chautauqua Day, Aug. 1st 1890, published in the Christian Advocate.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: — The present age furnishes peculiar advantages for self-culture, so-called, which is the Chautauqua idea. This is the age of cheap printing, cheap postage, and rapid intercommunication. All the ideas that are afloat in the world are becoming common property. The daily newspaper is the thought-exchange for whole continents. Every book worth translation, and many that are not, are quickly put upon the markets of Christendom. Cheap printing has its perils as well as its advantages. If not carefully guarded, the blessing becomes a curse, and cheap printing and indiscriminate reading tends to make cheap men and women. The time was when book-making was so expensive that, as a rule, only men who had brains or deep purses could afford to print. The books on the library shelves of our forefathers were fewer, but better. The men and women of that day read less, but their reading was of a better quality than much that is now eagerly read by this much-favored, much-tempted generation.

This is the season for mosquitoes and mosquito-nets. I could wish that we could invent some kind of literary mosquito-net in the shape of a censorship that would exclude the swarms of buzzing, stinging, poisonous literary ephemera. Or, better still, we might wish that in our homes could be created a literary taste and a moral atmosphere so pure and exalted that it would be as impossible for a bad or trashy book to find readers in them as it is for a low-bred, low-lived swamp mosquito to feel at home on these breezy Mont Eagle heights And then, best of all, it might be that the old Book, which is the Book of books, the Book in which God's thoughts are given to us in the form that pleases him, and that will therefore be most helpful to us, would find more readers to whose minds it will be a stimulus and to whose hearts it will bring a blessedness that will never end. I take it that herein is the threefold benefit of the Chautauqua courses of reading. It pre-occupies the ground, and excludes the trash that is ready to pour in at every unguarded place; it leaves room for the Bible; it fosters a relish for the Bible. Not for its originality, but for its unspeakable importance, let the last point be emphasized. The touchstone of all your reading is to be found right here. Any book, magazine, or newspaper that lessens your reverence or relish for the Bible, is a bad book for you. Be it ever so brilliant or plausible or fascinating, it is a bad book; throw it from you as you would a shining serpent. Better not read at all than to read away from the word of God.

The pleasure of mental acquisition is a legitimate incentive to self-culture. The goodness of God hath in this matter, as in many others, conjoined duty with delight. As in physical alimentation and growth there is keen enjoyment on that lower plane of our being, so in intellectual acquisition and expansion there is a higher and more enduring pleasure. Every true student knows what this pleasure is. But it is not every reader of books and memorizer of words who is a true student. Every year there are scores and hundreds of young men and women who receive diplomas duly signed and sealed who have never been born into the world of intellectual consciousness. They are goose eggs that have never been hatched, or even pipped their shells. You see what I mean when I speak of the pleasures of mental acquisition: it is the acquisition of ideas, facts, principles—not of mere words and forms of speech. This is the one delight of an intellectual being that God cannot enjoy, the delight of mental acquisition. He knows all things and has nothing to learn. So, by a gracious paradox, this very mark of our inferiority becomes our title-deed to one of the richest endowments that will gladden and glorify our immortality.

But here again is a danger to be avoided, the danger of making self-culture an end in itself, and resting satisfied with the mere pleasure of mental acquisition. To act on this inferior motive is to pervert one of the best gifts of God. It is to hoard gold until it rusts It is to arrest the flow of a living stream until it stagnates. There is no blessing for you in your self-culture unless you take in God as a partner and humanity as a beneficiary.

Another incentive and help to mental culture is found in the fact that so many persons are pursuing the same course of reading at the same time. Your reading circle is a vast fraternity without secret oaths or passwords, and with no grips except the good, old-fashioned, hearty, right-hand grip of Christian fellowship. That is the only grip I know, and I am ready to give it to every human being on the face of the earth. The tendency visible in so many places toward the segregation of society into innumerable warring factions and antagonizing interests is anti-christian, satanic.

While in our country the politicians are talking about Force Bills and boycotts, and filling the air with their criminations and recriminations, these quiet Christian workers are putting into the young life of the nation the leaven that is leavening the whole mass with the truth that shall make them free indeed, the love that shall make them truly blest, and the solid peace that is the fruit of righteousness. Another mistake and danger with regard to self-culture is implied in the expression itself. Strictly speaking, there can be no such thing as self-culture. As well talk of self-creation. The man who boasts that he is self-made usually exhibits a poor piece of work. God has something to do with the making of every man. His parents and his ancestry on both sides have something to do with it. Environment has something to do with it. We must not claim too much for self-culture. The best that is in us we owe to the grace of God who gave us ability to choose wisely, and to resist temptation, who gave us the assimilating power that has enabled us to incorporate within ourselves so much of what has touched us that is true and high and holy. This is message to you to-day: Take God into all your culture. This and this alone will sweeten it, hallow it, exalt it, and make it worth what it costs to get it.

With diffidence I mention one more incentive to mental acquisition. The thought is too large for me or for you. It is the fact that our mental acquisitions are imperishable. The mind retains forever all it acquires. The apostle Paul speaks of an eternal weight of glory, and here it is in this conception of an immortal existence in which the disencumbered spirit shall go on forever increasing its acquisitions, and shall forever retain all that it acquires.

This is the one thing that makes life worth living. When a great scholar and thinker dies it jars on us to know that his library is sold to the highest bidder. It is like selling the man himself, his thought, his feeling, his very soul. The pathos of this common transaction never ceases to move my heart. But it is relieved by the reflection that the true student and scholar takes his library with him. Memory holds forever all that it has really grasped. Every good thing that God hath given to his child in this life he shall carry with him up to the eternal hills, and on through the bright, eternal years. Nothing good is lost. Good is rooted in God, and is, like him, imperishable. We are children of God, and before us opens a destiny worthy of our high relationship. That destiny may be summed up in the statement that I have made, that the glorified spirit shall enter upon a career of unending acquisition, and that it shall hold forever all its acquisitions. Every truth grasped, every fact mastered, every aspiration that has found expression in prayer, every gracious impulse that has crystallized itself in word or deed, everything that has made us wiser, better, and happier here on earth is an imperishable acquisition to the riches of the soul when it shall have entered upon its eternal inheritance. Every thing that is hallowed by God's approving touch has the right of way through the widening, brightening cycles of immortality.

The Size of Conferences.

In a recent issue, the "Nashville Christian Advocate" discusses the relative value of large and small annual conferences. We have long been of the opinion that in the older fields where the work is compact, so that the preachers do not have to travel too far to attend the sessions, the larger conferences are far better. But in most of our new fields, especially those in the West, the case is quite different. At the recent General Conference we were in favor of the formation of the new one proposed, not for the sake of having more conferences, or smaller ones, but because conferences are intended as occasions for the preachers (and laymen, too) to confer with each other, and this they cannot well do when compelled to travel a thousand miles by an expensive method of transportation to get together.

In 1871, at a session of the Western Conference, held at Council Grove, Kansas, the presiding Bishop appointed preachers throughout the states of Kansas and Nebraska, and in Colorado and Montana Territories. The writer had to travel seventeen hundred miles to get to his circuit, and did not go as far as some of his brethren, either. We were still within the bounds of the Western Conference, which at that time extended "west-ward indefinitely," though for long and weary years a number of our men were deprived of the luxury of meeting in the regular annual gathering with their brethren. In the meantime, in answer to our earnest pleadings, the Montana Conference was organized, but the vote was reconsidered, and we were "stricken out" just at the last of the session. As a result of this cautious (?) move, we had to travel more than a thousand miles, and five hundred of that in a stage coach over a mountain road, and return, to receive ordination as Elder. When we reached the fields of labor assigned us for the ensuing year, we were exhausted both physically and financially. It was like taking a new start in the world, with nothing to start on except the experience that we had gained on the long journey, and that did not avail much in paying board bills or in buying a horse and saddle, with which to travel over an extensive field of labor. While the matter was being discussed at St. Louis, a brother stated that some of the preachers in New Mexico had to travel seven hundred miles to reach the seat of the Conference. They had our sympathy and got our vote. It is far better for one man—a Bishop—whose expenses are paid by the church at large, to take these long, expensive journeys, than for a dozen or two frontier preachers who have been doing double duty and living on perhaps less than two hundred dollar salaries, to go at their own charges and come back penniless, or remain at home and be deprived for another year or two of the enthusiasm and inspiration such as an annual conference alone affords to a Methodist preacher.

Then, in some places along the border, where there is doubt as to permanent occupancy of the field by the church—as was the case in Montana for a long time—the convening of an annual conference, together with the visit and labors of one of the chief pastors and other distinguished servants of the church, does much to inspire confidence in the public mind, awaken enthusiasm and make way for the development of large and strong annual conferences in the years to come.

The territory included in the Montana Conference, according to the boundaries given in the Discipline, covers an area about two hundred and seventy-five miles wide, by six hundred and seventy-five long. It is nearly as wide as the state of Missouri and would reach from Chicago across Indiana and Ohio and half way across Pennsylvania; or from Pittsburg to Cairo; or from St. Louis, where the General Conference was held, almost, if not quite, to New Orleans. The great West is a country of magnificent distances. Whatever may be the tendency in the older conferences, our brethren need not be afraid of any "ten acre patch" conferences out here in the West for several decades to come.

Denver Conference.

The seventeenth session of the Conference convened at Trinidad, Aug 6th, Bishop Key presiding. There was abundant time for the business of the Conference. The Bishop, recognizing the situation, called for the reports of the preachers leisurely, questioned them about all phases of their work, and talked a great deal of religion in his suggestions and advice. His words came like rain on the mown grass to the hearts of some of the preachers, for they had been in perils and in want.

Brother Howard had been sent to the wilds, where there was not a church member. He had established three or four preaching places—at one place a Sunday School. The work had been opposed. A man had ridden into the house during the Sunday School and beaten the superintendent over the head with a six-shooter. During the year Brother Howard had found five church members. He saw little fruit of his labor. He would go back if the Bishop chose to send him.

Brother Roper served seven appointments in the East part of the Conference. The people were out of employment; there was scarcely anything raised in the fields. The little fuel used was hauled sixty miles. His circuit was sixty miles in length. He was paid fifty dollars by the people he served, counting in his house rent. His heart was bound to the people. He would not speak of hardships; he had fared better than the poor people he served, for he had received three hundred dollars missionary money.

There were many stories of towns and settlements quickly formed and quickly fading away, a country beautiful to view and bringing forth a quick vegetation in the spring, but utterly drying up in the Summer. Irrigation is its only hope, and whether this is possible is not even determined.

While we listen to the reports of the preachers, we feel that this little Conference is a brave band, and that it is a privilege to sit at the feet of some of these soldiers of the cross and learn the higher lessons of faith, and consecration to the service of the Master. The foundations of a good work are laid, and the future years will show fruit to the glory of God.—Southampton Methodist.

A Saving Message through an Open Window.

Mr. William Burns was once carrying on meetings in a certain district, and the Lord had been moving people mightily. One young man resolved to go and hear him. His companions advised him not to go, unless he wished to be converted, like so many others had been. But the young man said there was no fear of him. He would go and hear Burns, and to prove that he was not converted he would return home, and that night he would play the bagpipes and dance on the village green. He started for the church, but on the way he began to be afraid that after all he would be converted, and lagged behind, watching the others enter. He did not go in, but leaning against the door of the church he watched through an open window, the gesticulations of the speaker, as he proceeded with his address. It always appeals to the sense of the ludicrous to see a person wildly gesticulating without hearing any sound, and the young man was fast qualifying himself for his dance on the village green when Mr. Burns appealing to his hearers, raised his voice and a few words were wafted through the open window to the ears of the young man. They were, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ will give thee life." Then the voice sank to its normal pitch, but the message had been delivered, the arrow had found its mark in the heart of this young man. He went home, not to dance on the village green, but to spend that night on his knees in his home, imploring forgiveness and finally yielding himself to Christ.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The editor was compelled to leave the office before a single exchange or communication for this issue had come to hand, and the paper is made up "on the wing," at wayside stations, and partly under a canvass roof, surrounded by the noise of hammer and saw, where a city is rising as if by magic from its ashes to which every business house and hotel in the place has been reduced. Our readers, and also our correspondents, will make due allowance. F.

Address all communications for the paper to Corvallis, Montana. If the editor happens to be away from home at the time, they will be forwarded to him by mail, so that there will be but little delay.

The days were extremely hot in Western Montana and through the Coeur d'Alene country, though the nights were quite cool and refreshing, during the latter part of August. A lady from Spokane Falls in the cars reported that the thermometer registered as high as ninety degrees

We hear that crops are very good in what is known as the Palouse country in Washington, and also in eastern Oregon.

The first two or three months after Conference is often the hardest time for the preacher, financially, during the entire year. He has spent his surplus cash going to and from Conference and making up the deficits of those charges that did not raise their assessments for the general collections last year; and then the people are just taking a little rest after the effort to make the final payments the previous year. Brethren, remember that the preacher has to live and pay his bills the first as well as the last month in the year. Let the stewards commence with the year, and all persons who are likely to help support the preacher, get them to subscribe, and then make monthly, or at least quarterly collections, and this will make it better for the steward, easier for those who pay, and far better for the preacher and for the work at large. Commence right now, if you have not already done so.

Let us work for a revival in every charge this year. We must have revivals if we expect to hold this country for Christ. But do not wait until the protracted meeting to begin personal and special efforts for the salvation of souls. Begin to-day by prayer and by private admonition and entreaty to persuade men to be reconciled to God. An eminent and successful pastor once stated that a large proportion of those converted under his ministry, were "hand-picked,"—saved by personal, private appeals. This is the way for the revival to begin. It will begin to-day if you will do your duty. Now is the time.

IN THE COEUR D'ALENES.

For many years as we have looked upon the lofty mountain range that towers up west of Missoula and the Bitter Root Valley, that constitutes the dividing line between Montana and Idaho, we have cherished an inward desire to cross over it and see the country, and visit the people who were in the midst of and beyond it. In time of the great excitement in 1883–4, we felt like packing our blankets and provisions on a toboggan and going with the hundreds who were rushing to the Coeur d'Alene country. Not that we wanted to speculate in mines, for, strange to tell, this has never been any temptation to the present writer. But we desired to assist in organizing the Church of God, and furnishing the means of grace to the thousands who were going into the wilds where they would be subjected to so many hardships and surrounded by temptations that destroy so many. The way never opened until the late Conference. The town of Wallace was included in Missoula District, at the Bishop's own instance, and we were instructed to go at once and survey the situation and report at Spokane Falls, the seat of the East Columbia Conference.

With this purpose in view we left home on the 26th of August, and at 2 o'clock next morning landed at Thompson Falls. A day was spent visiting the people there. We preached to an appreciative audience at night.

Next morning at 8 o'clock we took the stage—a "dead ex" wagon—drawn by two horses, crossed the river on a good ferry, and started for the town of Murray, about thirty miles distant. The fare is five dollars. The stage runs or is supposed to run, every day. The road follows up Prospect creek, through a densely timbered region. In places the foliage of the fir and cedars and hemlock, and other kinds of trees, is so dense, made more so by the moss that hangs suspended from the boughs—that the sun shine gets wonderfully tangled, and but little of it reaches the ground, The forest abounds with deer and mountain grouse, and the sparkling waters are full of trout, though we had no time to fish or hunt, but rushed along at break-neck speed over the roughest road that we have traveled for many a day. Stumps, rocks, ruts, streams corduroy, timber and steep mountains were the order of the day. You have to be constantly in the watch lest you be thrown out of the seat. The driver said the road was much better than he had ever seen it. I was extremely grateful that it was no worse. It cost thirty-three thousand dollars to build the road twenty-one miles.

We got a splendid dinner at the Mountain House, sixteen miles out. The house is built of logs. with clapboard roof and puncheon floor, though the man who called my attention to it called them "shakes." Not far from here are some rich silver lodes, also some that yield antimony, the early development of which bids fair to produce large results, and give employment to many men.

Here we were met with a four-horse stage, though without a top, that carried us the rest of the way. The grade is very steep to the top of the mountain. The fire last year made havoc of the timber in these wonderful forests. It was raging in one place off to our left as we passed along. The crackling of the flames, the popping of the timber and the noise of falling trees sounded like the discharge of fire arms as it echoed through the mountains. The driver carries his axe and saw, and often finds the way blocked with fallen trees, which have to be cut into and rolled away before a team can pass. We were stopped only once in this way. There seems to be no limit to the forests. We saw cedar trees five feet in diameter, and were told of some that are ten feet through at the base. It is only a question of time when these vast solitudes will be enlivened by the scream of the locomotive and the buzzing of sawmills, and perhaps by the ponderous tread of stamp mills crushing the precious ores that are being found here. Who can compare the boundless stores of wealth that abound here, or picture the scenes of activity and life as men in the coming years will gather here to develop and utilize them? The snow gets very deep on the divide in the winter. You can see where the trees have been scalped twelve or fifteen feet from the ground by axe-men as they blazed the road. To cap the climax, and remove the last vestige of doubt from our mind, the driver pointed out the marks where the single trees and bobsleds had scalped and marked the trees high above our heads as we sat on the top seat of the stage. We could scarcely believe our eyes. Sometimes, however, the snow falls so rapidly that the passing teams cannot keep it packed, and the mail has to be carried on hand-sleds by footmen. We saw where the snow had broken down the eaves, where the boards projected only a few inches over the walls of the log house, and more than one house had been crushed in and demolished. The driver assured me that he had seen the snow stand on the roof from ten to fifteen feet deep, and another that he had seen it pile up on an ordinary log in the timber to the same depth. And yet so wonderful is the skill of man and the faculty of adapting himself to his environment that he actually lives, moves, has his being, and prospers and grows rich in a country like this. We stopped by the roadside in the forest to take on a lady and two nice little children, who, with husband, had been rusticating for a few days. We found her to be a Christian lady from Salem, Oregon, living here in these mountains and longing for the pleasure of Christian fellowship and association. To our surprise, we found the driver, Mr. Charley Ferguson, to be an old acquaintance, whose mother was a member of our church years ago in Gallatin Valley. We were glad to find him so popular and prosperous and favorable to religion, and are indebted to him for courtesies extended.

A rapid drive down the steep mountain side and along the gulch, crossing numerous flumes and mining ditches, and passing one or two quartz mills, brought us to Murray, which is the principal center of the place's mining district. The town numbers some four or five hundred inhabitants, and is not so lively as it was years ago. It is a few miles from the old town of Eagle, (up the gulch), which was the center of operation during the first excitement. We found the people that we met very pleasant and obliging, and were sorry that we could not stay over a day and preach for them on Friday night. But we were compelled to leave next morning at six o'clock on the stage for Wallace, which is eighteen miles away southward.

Originated Life Not in Germs.

Life upon our planet must have been originated in organic completeness and maturity. Since its "seed is in itself," and not its self in its seed, life, therefore, whatever might have been its stages of developement through geological periods, antedated its seed as cause does its effect. The seed, both nature and the scripture declare, so far from being the source of life, is but the effort of mature organic life to reproduce itself in kind, a divinely appointed medium for its perpetuity or numerical growth. The common method then, of teaching the origin of life is misleading. We are told that life comes from germs, when the reverse is true. The inquiry of science then, is not about the origin of germs, but where life itself, complete in its functions came from. Nature, throughout her complete system of reproduction is but the practical demonstration of the truth contained in the Scriptures that says of life: "Whose seed is in itself." In this process of perpetuating life, she shows that the spontaneous generation of it is impossible since mature life preceeds all germinal stages thereof. And, also, that its developement by evolution from its original and crude mold, through successive grades of improvement up to its higher and essentially different type, cannot be seriously entertained, unless, however, the great law in her system of life, "that like begets like." is a modern, or rather, is itself, an evolved institution. And who is prepared to entertain the idea, that this law that holds every operation in nature, and all of its forms of life in its unchangeable type, has itself been evolved out of a series of changes in which life begot its unlike? Under this law there is no improvement possible in any form of being that can lift it out of its original type, or remove it in the slightest degree from its kind. And, therefore, could not itself have been evolved out of erratic changes from lower to higher, and essentially different forms of being. Nature does not only teach that life seed is the product of mature life, but she declares under the most searching tests to which science has yet been able to subject her, that life throughout her domain in all of its forms, however minute, is from life. Biogenesis is her unequivocal testimony of the origin and perpetuity of life. Thus she shows incontestibly that the law "that like begets like," that presides over her reproductive energies had its institution in her economy in the production of life therein from a life source. That is, if life in her system can alone reproduce life it follows intuitively that life alone could have originated life in her economy, hence the law or fact that life is the only possible source of life known to her. Now take the fact that life is from life, and add to this the fact that life existed in maturity in her system before seeds were possible, and the Bible account of her creation. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and all things that therein are," is the only rational one, indeed the only possible one.

The Scripture teaches that God created life, and endowed it with the power of self reproduction in kind only, through its seed, and nature shows, if she shows anything, that this is true. Life, then, is from life, not through germs, but by a direct creative or reproductive effort of life. So declared by divine revelation, and so proven by nature, "Whose seed is in itself," and not whose self is in its seed, is the expression of God's word upon this subject, which nature fully sustains. "STUMPY WICKS."

How the Cœur d'Alene Boys Started Him Upon His Last, Long Stampede "Over the Range,"

Stumpy Wicks was dead. The mountain fever had killed him. A few days before he had started off into the hills, telling the boys that he would find something rich, or never go out again. He did not find anything rich, and he never went out again. The fever laid its grip upon him, and in three days he was dead. He had "gone over the range." the boys said.

It became necessary to bury Stumpy Wicks. And how was he buried? By his relatives? He had no relatives. By the town? There was no town. By his pard? He had no pard. Forty years ago Stumpy Wicks had left his home—no one knew where—and his people — no one knew whom —to wander alone in the West. He died alone. His wife, his mother, his sister, if he had one, will never know where he died, or what hands laid him in his grave.

It was the boys. They got together and made a coffin out of a box or two, and covered it with black cloth. They put Stumpy into it, with a clean flour sack over his poor, dead face. They chipped in and hired an ex-parson, who for years had abandoned his profession, to "give Stumpy a send-off." They dug a grave to a good and honest depth in the tough red earth. They went out and found a flat rock for a headstone, and on it, with an engineer's graver, they scratched the brief epitaph, "Stumpy Wicks." Then they followed the coffin-wagon to the grave, walking through the mud and rain.

There were forty men in that funeral procession, and not one woman. Very few were drunk, and nearly all had taken off their six-shooters. There were forty men who stood around that open grave, and not one woman to drop a tear, as the ex-parson read a brief portion of the Episcopal burial service and offered a short prayer for the safe journey of Stumpy's soul across the range. There was no history of Stumpy's life. No one knew that history. It was doubtless a sad enough one, full of slips and stumbles; full of hope, perhaps before he "lost his grip." They found a woman's picture, very old, and quite worn out indeed, in Stumpy's pocket, and this was buried with him. This was probably his history.

There was not a tear shed at Stumpy's grave. Not a sob was heard. But neither was there any oath or any laughter.

When the time came to fill up the grave, ready hearts assisted ready hands, and the experienced miners quickly did the work. They rounded up the mound and fitted up the headstone. When the ex-parson stepped back from the grave he stumbled over the head-stone of Billy Robbins, the gambler, whom Autoine Sanchez knifed. There were a good many of the boys resting there. The bullet, the knife, and the mountain fever had finished them, except those whom the committee assisted. It was the committee who put Antoine Sanchez at the foot of Billy Robbins' grave.

There was no green thing in the graveyard, no living plants, no little flowers. It lay red and bare, upon a red and bare hillside. There were no white stones to mark the homes of the sleepers; those used were of the rough, red granite.

The boys were quiet. They were thinking, perhaps. They looked up at the sky, which, strangely enough, had in it no tint of blue, and the sky, in pity that no tear was shed, wept some upon them.

As the procession broke up and moved back to the saloons, one was heard to say that it was the "d—dest mournfulest plantin' he ever had a hand in." In fact the camp did not get back to its normal condition until the next day. There was something too sad even for these rough souls in the lonely, broken life, the lonely, unwept death of Stumpy Wicks. It made them think—and I wonder if some of them did not reach out their arms from their blankets that night and hold them up and call out softly, "Oh, Stumpy, Stumpy! What is it you see over the range? After a broken, wretched life, what is there for a man, over the range?" —Cœur D'Alene Eagle.

HABITS OF COURTESY.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, the impression which we make in society, not coveting the good opinion of those who are in a sense part of ourselves, and who continue to sustain, to be interested in us notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and girl, cultivate habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting-room and kitchen as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner.—Selected.

How many of the services do you attend each week? How many persone do you cordially speak to at each meeting? Oh, but you say I am a comparative stranger. Well, you will remain so if you don't attend more of the services, and remain long enough to let the people speak to and get acquainted with you.

ODDS AND ENDS.

D. B. PRICE,

Editor of the "Methodist":—At your request I furnish a few fragments of thought and news for the readers of our paper.

Many of us are saying when asked to do extra work, "I have no time." We have all the time there is. More would be unnecessary, else God would have given it. "Time." What is time? A measure and portion of duration. A certain portion is measured to each of us. In the use of that time, all we do in this life is to be accomplished. If future attainments are to be determined by past, what will you have accomplished by the end of time? You answer very little. Let these lines be an incentive to a wiser, more profitable and humane employment of your time, and use of your opportunities.

During the heated season we are inclined to excuse ourselves for not attending church and prayer meeting because of the extreme heat. Are the same excuses offered when we are urged to visit the famous well, falls, spring, park! Be careful. We may attend these latter with impunity, save on the Sabbath, but we can not leave the other undone without sustaining a loss.

Straws show which way the wind blows, and the little kindness of every day life are the exponents of our real life. Don't neglect the sick at this season of the year. This is an opportune time to give a glass of water in a disciple's name.

You can never know how much your presence at church, or your kind words encourage the pastor. Such exhibitions of your interest and appreciation are indescribably cheering and helpful. Remember this when you are about to criticise your pastor. or when you are thinking of staying at home from services.

Helena Station—This scribe was appointed, August 11th by Bishop Hendrix, to serve this charge another year. He came to Helena October 26th, '89, in obedience to the wish and authority of Bishop Granberry. The transfer was not asked for, in fact Montana was the last place we had ever thought of going to. But we went up to the session of the Southwest, Mo., Conference at Marshall, Mo., last October, to go from there wherever the authorities of the church said go. When the Bishop said, I want you to go to Helena, Mont., I said, Lord is that for the best? I counseled my wife about it, and then we prayed for the direction of the Holy Spirit. Thus we were mysteriously brought thither, yet we believe it is God's doings. God has been with us and his blessings have been showered upon our home and upon the church here. We have been confronted by new and intricate problems respecting church work, deprived largely of the fellowship of co-laborers, but not deprived of the fellowship of God. Far away and high up on this mountain land we have had seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We never dwelt so high upon the mountains of nature before, nor of Zion. The most glorious prospects of our lives spiritually have come to view this year. The preaching of the Gospel has been food to our own soul. With great emphasis, we say, we are not ashamed of the Gospel. Dr. Godbey says, "Welcome the new preacher. Much depends upon it." The success or failure of the year's work depends much upon the reception you give the new preacher." He is right. The genuinely hearty reception accorded us upon our arrival here has been an abiding inspiration of hope and courage. The little society of Helena know how to love their pastor and his family. He can not refrain from mentioning Brother A. G. Clarke. He is one of God's noblemen. He is pure gold, charitable toward all, and the true friend of every one of our preachers in Montana. His devotion to the church is beautiful and inspiring. He has aided liberally in the building of every church and parsonage in the State. Every other member of the charge deserve to be mentioned, but a lack of space forbids it. Upon our return to this charge again our reception, if possible, was more cordial than before, and we entered the work under the most favorable auspices. The very first Sabbath our congregations were large and the services spiritual. Bro. L. B. Stateler was with us and while he was not able to preach, he was in the service and prayed for us, with a holy unction. Montana Methodists are devoted to Brother Stateler. He has been here twenty-six years. Part of the time he was alone, but faithful to God and the church. His presence is a benediction to any company. He is about eighty years old, suffering from a stroke of paralysis, and says, "I haven't long to remain with you, brethren, but then I am not much concerned about that, for I have been ready to go a long time." Victory. Blessed be God for the triumphs of grace! Still he takes work and says. "I must die on the field of battle." But we are digressing.

We are burdened with a sense of the responsibilities of this work. We know what is to be done, and we are conscious of our own incompetency. A bad case demands intelligent, vigorous and thorough treatment. This charge is similar to every other one in Montana, and what is needed here is elsewhere in the conference. The conditions here are so nearly indentical with those in every part of the West, that, whatever is applicable to one section, applies with equal force to it all. Read these wise words from Dr. Godbey, in an editorial in the "Southwestern Methodist," of August 23rd, respecting our work in Colorado:

"The work of the churches is to occupy the towns. There is little else to do. But to occupy the principal towns demands an able ministry, educated and consecrated. The people are not surpassed in intelligence or culture. Successful business men have made permanent residence here. Many who possess a competence have come from the east, attracted by the climate and scenery. During the summer, tourists come in great numbers. The pulpit, which has power to command the respect and sway, the the mind of this people must not be inferior in gifts or grace. Indeed, we have not become acquainted with a people who demand more in these respects. Religion has not yet leavened these communities, and consequently public sentiment and example bear more strongly against Christian faith and life. Agnosticism and infidelity organize in clubs and associations and pervade strongly the educated classes. For these reasons, the best efforts of the ablest ministry will not show so much result as in the older States. This does not suggest that such effort will be less fruitless in the end. The Spirit of God led Philip away from a great revival in Samaria to convert a single man. The reason is suggested: he was a man "having great authority." All souls are alike precious in God's sight, but all are not alike as agencies for extending the kingdom of heaven among men. The Christian world did well to rejoice over the first converts to Christianity in Burmah and China. It may take as long to lay the foundation as to rear the edifice. The men needed here are the men who know the importance of laying foundations—men who are prepared to labor and to wait."

The above is certainly true. Now we need a Holy Ghost revival upon pulpit and pew. The gospel will never be preached with authority without the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and the preaching of it will never be attended with any remarkable results without it. Pentecost presents the type of true revival. Let us all turn to it, and study it You all now think this is an odd letter, and wonder where the end is Here it is.

Helena, September 1, 1890.

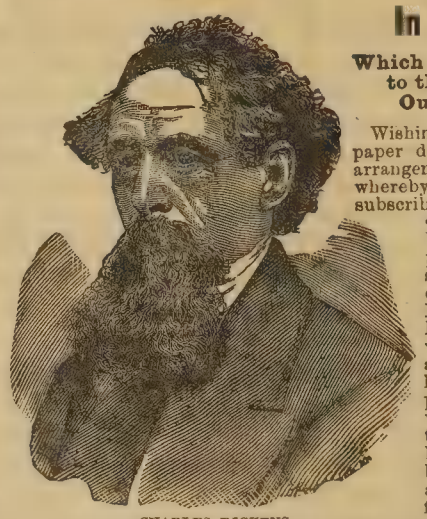
GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

Which we Offer with a Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than Our Regular Subscription Price.



CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

The Great Offer to Subscribers to the "Methodist."

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS' WORKS, in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THE MONTANA METHODIST for ONE YEAR, upon receipt of $1.60, which is only 60 cents more than the regular subscription price of this paper. Our readers, therefore, practically get a set of Dickens' works in twelve volumes for only 60 cents. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist for only $1.60. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of 6 yearly subscribers. Address:

Among the Indians.

There was a different species of persecution from that mentioned in the last chapter, which took place against a Christian chief by the heathen party. He had made a profession of religion and become a thorough Christian man. The heathen chiefs summoned him to appear in their midst at a given time, and he promptly attended. They demanded of him why he had forsaken the religion of his fathers and gone with those "singers" — as the Christians were called — at the same time charging upon him that he had committed deeds worthy of death, and that unless he renounced the new faith, he must die.

With great self-possession he replied to them that he had done nothing amiss; that he had simply renounced that which brought him no permanent peace, and that by trusting in the "great Saviour," he had found great and lasting peace, and that he was willing to die. Without moving away from them he said, he was in their hands and that they could do with him as they pleased. It is natural to suppose that his firm purpose in regard to his religion and the faith in his Saviour, expressed before those heathen men away in the lone solitude under the stars of the sky, whither they had led him, astonished and awed them. They paused and said: "We will give you time — so many moons—to consider it, and if you do not recant, you may expect a visit from us." They never came and he was never molested again. He lived and died trusting in God—died very happy and, I doubt not, went home to heaven.

Thus we see the wonderful power of the Gospel of divine grace in saving a sinner. There was a fine illustration of it in the character of this man. He had lived in all the wildness and wickedness of heathenism until he was perhaps fifty years of age, when, through the instrumentality of the ministers of divine truth, his attention was arrested, his sins arrayed before him, he repented and found the salvation of God. And so thorough was the work of divine grace that, though he had formerly been given to drunkenness and all the vices of a heathen life, yet he was never known to falter so long as he lived on the earth Such was his trust in God that when summoned to a martyr's fate he stood firm as a rock and said, "I am ready; I do not fear to die."

There is another incident in connection with our work in the Delaware mission that is worth relating. It is as follows: In the early settlement of Kentucky, when people lived in forts, there was a family located near where the city of Louisville now stands. The people lived in what was called a "block house"—a log building so constructed as to render it a place of defense against an armed force. While the men were away, Indians came, captured the fort and killed all the inmates, except the mother and a little girl, whom they led away as captives. The mother not being strong enough to travel as fast as they wished to go, the savages tomahawked her, but carried the little girl along with them, away to their distant home in the North.

She was raised up amongst the Indians, having no opportunity to get back to the white people She never forgot her home, though for the time she did forget her language. She determined never to marry. She knew she was white—different from the Indians—and wanted to go back to her own people, but knew not how to carry out the hazardous undertaking She was adopted by an aged Indian woman. The woman died, leaving her ponies, blankets and all her household effects to the adopted daughter, the white girl She then lived for a considerable while alone in her cabin. Finally, seeing no prospect of ever returning to her home, she consented to marry an Indian. By this marriage she had one daughter. The husband died and she was left with her little daughter. Subsequently she married a Frenchman, a trader. By him she had no children. Not many years after this marriage the husband died, leaving all his goods and possessions to the wife, who was left a widow again, but left in very easy and comfortable circumstances.

In course of time her daughter grew up and married in the Delaware nation—married an Indian man. She raised up quite a family of sons, who were almost like white men — their complexion was so fair. They were men of intelligence and spoke English very readily.

The grandmother was a woman of considerable intellect, and never came down to the level of the common heathen Indians, but maintained that degree of dignity and self-respect due to one of her ability. Her father was a German.

The Delaware Indians, in time, moved to White River, Indiana. From thence they went to James Fork of White River, in South-west Missouri, twenty-five miles from where Springfield now stands. From this place they were removed to the Kansas River country, where the missionaries found them.

When the missions were established in 1831 the Delawares were settled in that country, where our mission was located. There was also one established among the Shawnees, not far away, about the same time.

Subsequently there were a number of other mission stations established in that part of the Indian country — among other tribes.

Well, when the missionaries came among the Delawares they found this white woman, of whom I have been speaking. We called her "Aunt Barbara" (Barbara was her name when a little girl at home). Then she was a venerable woman of seventy years and lived in a comfortable hewed log house, like any other civilized woman. She was the first to welcome the missionary when he came. She could converse in Indian, French and English, and made a good interpreter. She and her daughter and grandchildren were the very first to come and unite with the church, and formed a little nucleus. The grandsons subsequently became very ready interpreters and two of them afterward became preachers of the Gospel. The family name of the grandsons was Ketchum—the two preachers were Charles and James Ketchum.

Thus the Providence of God appears, though dark and mysterious at first, to open the way for the spread of the Gospel. This poor little girl, snatched away from her home and from her murdered mother, like the little captive Hebrew maid in the house of Naamen, the Syrian captain, becomes the messenger through whom the light of God's truth and salvation is carried to a nation of people.

For many long, long hours those two noble Christian men, Charles and James Ketchum, have stood at my side, interpreting the words of life to the people.

NOTES.

—T. B. Holt, the worthy treasurer of our Board of Missions, through whose hands passes the $320,000 that our church pays for missions this year, in a private letter, after speaking of pleasant recollections of the days spent at St. Louis, says, "The "Montana Methodist" is kept on file in the office, so if you should wander this way and want to catch up on 'Montana,' just give us a call. We like the paper. May it be all you desire for it." These kind words are highly appreciated. We are glad to know that our paper has such friends. If we ever pass that way we shall be sure to call at that office. We always desire not only to "catch up on Montana," but to keep up, and shall do all we can to keep Montana—especially the "Montana Methodist"—up to the front, on missions and every other good cause.

—We are glad to receive cheering notes from the Western Conference, and thankful for a list of the appointments, though our lack of space forbids its publication. We have a warm place in our heart for every one of those dear brethren, for we know something of the difficulties that they encounter in their work. But few of the old guard remain, though their places are filled by worthy successors. We are glad that J. W. Faubion is back at Holton, where he did such a grand work years ago, and where he has so many friends. Our old classmate, T. C. Downs, is at Council Grove Station, and J. M. Gross, with whom we took sweet counsel for days together at St. Louis, is on Council Grove District; J. W. Payne is on the Atchison District. May they have abundant success this year.

—A private letter from Brother Stateler contains this note, "My health is not vigorous since my return from Conference. I hope when the weather gets cool that I shall be more vigorous." May the hopes of our brother be realized to their fullest extent. We shall hope to hear often from him, for the church wants to know if it is well with him.

—Rev. W. H. Potter, D. D., editor of the "Wesleyan Christian Advocate," Macon, Ga., has been elected Missionary Secretary, in place of Rev. A. Coke Smith, resigned. He has accepted and entered upon his new duties. Doctor Potter is one of our strongest men. He is well fitted for the place. His heart is in the work, and as some one has expressed it, he will do much to subsoil the church on the subject of missions. We wish him great success, and shall rejoice to see him, or either of his worthy colleagues, in Montana. Rev. P. A. Peterson fills the place of Vice President of the Board, and Rev. E. E. Hoss is now one of the managers. The next annual meeting of the Board of Missions will be held at Wilmington, N. C.

—Dr. John, the principal Secretary of the Board of Missions, is preparing a bureau for the purpose of furnishing information on the subject of Missions, and is determined that the church shall be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work. Let every preacher send at once for leaflets to distribute among the people. Also send fifty cents and get the "Missionary Reporter." It ought to have a wide circulation.

—The Woman's Missionary Society of our church has, in twelve years, collected half a million dollars, now holds property in connection with its work worth $180,000, employs 31 missionaries, 57 teachers and assistants, has 41 schools, 1,248 pupils and one hospital. Its receipts for the current year are nearly $76,000. Say this is not success, will you?

—Our readers will be interested in Doctor Morton's communication. He got his first experience in Western life in Montana, where he has hosts of warm friends, and where we are inclined to think he got some of the inspiration—at seeing the great need of the work—that has aided him no little in achieving such grand success in Church Extension work. May his shadow never grow less.

—Dr. Godbey has some things to say about the difficulties encountered by our preachers in the Denver Conference, which apply with equal force to Montana and all the West. Sorry that we have not space in this issue for his article. The men of the world complain because there are so many churches, and if there were but one they would talk about monopoly, and greed for wealth, etc., and would say there ought to be more churches. The heathen rage, the people imagine vain things, and the kings of the earth set themselves in array. But let us keep he charge committed unto us and we need fear no evil.

—The Sunday School Board, elected by the late General Conference, has gone to work with a vim. It means business, and we are glad to see it, for there is no department of our church work of more importance than this just now. Arrangements have already been made to greatly improve our current Sunday School literature. A new publication to be called "Our Sunday School Workers Series," has been arranged for at very cheap rates. Let all who are interested in Sunday School work, who want to assist or be assisted in this line, address J. R. Pepper, Corresponding Secretary, General Conference Sunday School Board, Memphis, Tenn.

—A subscription has been started, and steps are being taken to secure the erection of a church building at Wallace this fall or early next spring. One man proffered to furnish it with a bell worth $150, when completed. He will give liberally towards its erection. The people are greatly prostrated on account of the recent fire, but we expect to hear the echoes of a Methodist church bell ringing through the Coeur d'Alenes long before our next Conference convenes.

—Well, one church has been dedicated since Conference, making four within the past two months here in the Montana Conference, and two more "on the tapis," to be built this year. That is not a bad showing.

—Who will send us the first revival notice? We long for the times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, in which men and women are converted to God. Let every preacher direct his most earnest prayers and bend his greatest energies in this direction. Oh, for the spirit to be kindled among us of John Knox when he cried, "Give me Scotland or I die."

—We are pleased to know that the lines have fallen unto Brother Finley in such pleasant places. He has been assisting in a meeting at which there were a number of conversions.

—The last issue of the "Texas Christian Advocate" contains nearly a page and a half of revival notices, aggregating 1563 conversions, and 1183 accessions to the church.

—The editor reports forty new subscribers, save one, to "The Methodist." Let every preacher make a thorough canvass for the paper at once.

—The brethren are responding nobly to our call for correspondence and reports, and the result is quite visible in this issue. One brother just writes a private note, and promises something for the paper when he has time, and yet in that note he gave several important and interesting items. Write, brethren, at least twice a month. It will not take five minutes of your time, and the editor will judge as to whether it is worthy of publication or not. Now, don't forget it. Address communications to Corvallis, Montana, and have them there by the 2nd and 17th of each month.

—An early frost, amounting to a good hard freeze, visited Western Montana in the early part of this month, and brought great destruction to late and tender vegetables—tomatoes, melons, and such like. It will work quite a hardship on some of our gardeners.

—We have devoted several columns of this issue to East Columbia Conference proceedings and notes, believing that our readers would enjoy a better acquaintance with "our work and workers" just over the mountains to the west of us.

—Send ten subscribers with the money and get that picture of the Montana Conference.

—Please excuse typographical errors. We do all we can to avoid them, but they will creep in. The editor cannot read the proof, and sympathizes most deeply with the compositor.

HIDDEN SPRINGS.

Away out on the Western frontier some eccentric herdsman has arranged an ingenious device for watering cattle. An inclined plane leads up to a platform, along which a trough extends. Nowhere in sight is there any hint of water: well, or spring, or running brook. But beneath the platform is a living spring connected with the trough by hidden pipes, so arranged that that the water will flow only when a heavy weight presses upon the platform.

A thirsty cow comes along and looks wistfully at the suggestive trough. Alas! it is dry. She goes far enough up the inclined plane to be convinced of the unwelcome fact, and turns reluctantly away. Another comes, a gentle creature, tired and thirsty. She is not turned back by the sight of the empty trough. Perhaps in the bovine mind something akin to reasoning goes on: "Why a trough if there be no water?" She presses boldly forward, and lo! as she steps upon the platform there is a welcome sound of overflowing water, and the trough is filled with the life-giving stream, all because the persevering cow did not stop at impossibilities, but walked by faith and not by sight!

East Columbia Notes.

—Rev. J. W. Compton stands as a tower of strength in the East Columbia Conference. A fifteen year's residence has identified him with the people, familiarized him with their needs and eminently fitted him for the work of the true pioneer that he is. But for his forethought, promptness, and zeal, we would perhaps have but little in the Spokane country. He is universally popular, and is already reaping the fruits of precious seed sown in the dark years of the past.

—Rev. E. G. Michael is a man of weight, intellectually and morally, as well as physically. He is a good preacher, a true man, and faithful to the interests of the church. He has but little to say on the floor, but that little is to the point, and generally carries the point.

—Rev. W. T. Haggard is not at all haggard in his appearance. Robust, wide-awake, full of life, cultivated, congenial, consecrated; no wonder his brethren are deeply pained at the thought of giving him up. We greatly regret to lose such an efficient worker from the north-west.

—Rev. G. H. Gibbs preached an interesting sermon on Christian work, based on the words, "Let us rise up and build." He is young, strong, level headed, humble, approachable, and will be heard from. That church enterprise at Dayton is in good hands. We wish it success.

—Rev. A. Y. Skee is the man to whom the Bishop referred when, after a close investigation of his character, he remarked, "Pure gold shines only the brighter by long rubbing." He deserves the compliment.

—Rev. F. F. St. Clair leads the singing of the Conference. He is young, full of zeal, and gives promise of usefulness in the Master's work.

—Rev. R. B. Crego is just brimfull of religion all the time. He takes a round of hand shaking in the old-fashioned way at nearly every service, which his brethren seem to enjoy as much as he. It comes from the heart.

—Rev. W. S. Hornbuckle has had a fine revival in the Potlatch Circuit, and is doing much to plant our Methodism in that fruitful soil. He is a Georgian of sturdy build, religiously, of undaunted courage and faith, and a successful preacher.

—Rev. Henry Barnhart is the first preacher raised up as fruit of ministerial labor in the new Conference. He was a railroad engineer, converted but recently, has a rich experience, went right to work, and already has not a few seals to his ministry. With his heart fired with divine love and his hand on the new throttle, may he be successful in conducting many passengers on the Gospel train safely to the celestial city.

—Rev. M. V. Howard is a wise counsellor, a successful minister, and one of the strongest men in the Conference.

—Our old friend, Rev. H. L. Burger, who visited the Montana Conference at Willow Creek many years ago, preached a sermon full of thought and not without fire. He comes again into the regular work, which he ought never to have left. What a pity that we should let anything make a gap in our ministerial life. It is invariably the source of painful regret in after years.

—It was a pleasure to meet Brother M. R. Hanger, a lay delegate, by whose side we sat for days last May. We learned to esteem and love him more and more as we saw him nearer home and witnessed his devotion to the Master's service. If the world had more Hangers of his kind there would be fewer men hung—fewer who would need it.

—Rev. P. M. Bell was very active in his effort to contribute to the comfort of the members of the Conference. He is young and very zealous, has had much experience in temperance work, and fills an important charge — Walla Walla — this year.

—As the writer was on his way to Spokane Falls, he wondered if he would meet any one that he had ever seen before. Imagine our surprise and joy on meeting at the depot Brother E. P. Dyer, at whose house we used to make our home, and where we used to preach on the first circuit we ever traveled, away in the western wilds of Kansas, more than twenty years ago. We had never forgotten him nor his kind family. What a pleasure to find them among the pillars of the growing church in this great city, to share again the hospitality of that truly Christian home. How our hearts burned within us as we recalled the scenes and events of other years, took counsel, wept and prayed together, and comtemplated the happy meeting after awhile on the celestial mountains beyond the river. Thank God for Christian fellowship—for "the tie that binds."

—Upon hearing the reports of the preachers, witnessing the earnestness with which the brethren pressed their pleas for help in building churches, and observing the painful solicitude that they manifested, Dr. Morris said it reminded him of the "growing pains" of a boy. They were very unpleasant to the subject, and yet they gave evidence of life and development. So with the church in East Columbia. It was growing. The Doctor said he liked for the preacher who needed help to come right at him and press his claim with all the might he had. The greater his earnestness, the more he was pleased.

—The writer was received and treated right royally by our brethren of East Columbia. We could ask no higher honor than they bestowed upon us. They are a noble, self-denying band of Christian workers. We love every one of them with a pure heart, fervently, and shall always cherish fond recollections of that visit to Spokane Falls. They manifested a kindly interest in our work in Montana, and all subscribed for the "Montana Methodist." How could we help being pleased?

—Rev. J. W. Shreve requests us to say :—

Bishop Hendrix dedicated a new church in the country near Palouse, Washington, just before the session of the East Columbia Conference. He preached in Palouse and also at Oaksdale, and dedicated several other churches during his visit to the Pacific coast. The brethren worked him about as hard as we did in Montana.

—There was a terrible explosion of 200 pounds of giant powder at Spokane Falls on Saturday evening, during the Conference session there. Fifteen persons were killed and many more were wounded. It was caused by the premature explosion of a blast, which set off another blast just as the men had quit work, but before they had gone away.

STEVENSVILLE.

The work of the new Conference year opens auspiciously.

A cordial "glad to see you back again with us," from numerous friends in and out of the church serves as an enjoyable stimulus to a preacher.

On my way to Victor last week I visited the Cenlew Mine, where I expect to have a regular preaching appointment soon. About sixty or seventy hands are already being employed, and the camp will, no doubt, considerably develop in the near future. What a pity and a shame that no Sunday rest is observed.

Had a good service at Victor on Sunday morning. The new organ for the church has arrived and proves itself to be a little gem. It is paid for.

Joseph Lomprey, one of the oldest and earliest settlers in the Bitter Root Valley and in Montana, died at his residence, near Stevensville, last week. "Thus one generation passeth away and another cometh."

During the absence of Mrs. P. at the W. C. T. U. Convention, at Livingston, the preacher is enjoying the bliss (?) of temporary bachelorhood in true Montana style. "O solitude! where are thy charms," etc. But what with repainting his buggy, trying his hand at horse trading and the like, he has not much chance to feel solitary or unhappy.

The town of Murray is located on Pritchard Creek, a few miles above Eagle, which was the center of operations during the first excitement when this district was settled. It is now the county seat of Shoshone county, though a vote is to be taken soon, and an effort made to remove it to Wallace. The county numbers six thousand inhabitants. Mining is the principal industry. The county is very mountainous. The mountains are high and steep, though not so rocky and jagged, nor so well timbered as on the Montana side of the range. Things have a more sombre appearance. Devastating fires sweep the country every few years and keep the timber killed out.

We start on the stage for Wallace at 6 a. m. The ride is a lively one. The driver is a regular Hank Monk of a fellow, muscular, intelligent, jovial, skilled in his profession, and is determined to get you there on time. Sometimes the horses are in a full gallop, and the stage goes rumbling and bumping and bouncing along, spinning around sharp angles, along the verge of dizzy precipices, where a slight divergence from the track would precipitate us down, down, down, hundreds of feet into the yawning abyss below. The mountain is so steep that we have to go zig-zag,—"tack" like a vessel sailing against the wind, to get up and down at all. We met a loaded wagon on one of these high grades. Our horses were unhooked, the stage set out to one side till it fairly hung over, and one man hung on to it while another held the team, as the freighter drove past. We learned that a young man had just lost his life by the brake giving away, precipitating the loaded wagon on to the team, and over the grade, breaking the man's neck, and otherwise mangling his body. We saw part of the wreck, which was stained with the poor fellow's blood. There was a large attendance at his funeral, and he was given a Christian burial. We saw another wagon, which the owner said had tumbled over and over, down the mountain side for a hundred and fifty yards, with the horses hitched to it. Strange to say, the horses were unhurt, and there was nothing broke about the wagon but an axle. The driver had jumped off and escaped uninjured. Such are some of the perils of pioneering in this country. The snow gets very deep in the winter.

We passed near a high, bald peak, called Sunset Peak, which can be seen for a long distance. The mountain seems to be full of very fine ore. Among the leads are the Sunset, Sitting Bull, Tuscumbia. Father, and others. The owners of these several mines are prospective millionaires.

We arrived at Wallace at 11 o'clock, a. m., having stopped for breakfast at a way station, where a fine meal was served, for which our morning ride had given us a good appetite. This is a thriving and promising town of about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is wedged in between the mountains, in a patch of level ground about a fourth by a half mile in extent. This is coursed by the South fork of the Coeur d'Alene river, and was formerly covered by a swamp and a dense growth of giant cedars. But the immense stumps are being removed, the swamp filled, the streets graded, and already the mountainsides are decked with cozy cottages. The town is located on the old Mullan road from Montana to Oregon, and is in the center of a rich mining district. Two different lines of railroad already pass through it—the Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific. The first named expects to have its line completed through to Missoula before Christmas. Short lines are also being built to the various mining camps that cluster around Wallace. It is about one hundred and ten miles from here to Spokane Falls, and one hundred and twenty-five to Missoula by the new road. The town of Wardner is twelve miles west of Wallace, and contains about six hundred people. Mullan is about nine miles eastward, and has about the same population. Burke is located about seven miles to the north-east. Murray is eighteen miles to the north, and Osborne five miles to the west, toward Wardner, with other smaller camps scattered here and there. There are a few ranches located along the narrow valley, where vegetables and hay are produced. One man located a hay ranch of several hundred acres several miles down the river many years ago, has sold his hay to the miners for from twenty to forty dollars per ton. That ranche is a better bonanza than the average quartz mine.

Wallace was a beautiful and prosperous little town until about a month before our visit it had been almost completely wiped out by fire. Scarcely ever was destruction more complete. Not a single business house was saved. Many persons escaped with nothing but what they had on their persons. It started at five o'clock on Sunday afternoon, and by half-past six there was nothing left in its track but a mass of smouldering ruins. Hotels, restaurants, grocery and drug stores, livery stables—all, all were literally wiped from the face of the earth, and hundreds of people left supperless and without a place to lay their heads. But never was greater energy shown in supplying immediate necessities than was manifested by the people of neighboring towns, and by the business men in rebuilding. Houses began to go up next day, and sixty were in course of construction before a week. Tents were stretched, sheet iron stoves set up, rudely constructed tables were made, and furnished with tinware, and hotels and restaurants were opened and business was in full blast before the smoke had fairly cleared away. We asked for the best hotel and were lodged under a canvas roof, with a piece of muslin hung up for a door, though we had a good bed and were furnished with good meals at the rate of two dollars a day. A friend started in search of a better "layout," but returned with the conclusion that Penny Hotel was as good as any in town. The town has risen, Phœnix-like, from its ashes, and is assuming city-like proportions. The sound of hammer, and saw; and trowel fills the air, while the streets are thronged with busy multitudes hurrying to and fro in every direction and in every kind of business.

There is an Episcopal church and a clergyman located here. Bishop Talbot, who is a favorite with the masses, had recently visited the place and preached.

We went to the place an entire stranger, but soon found a number who were gratified that a Methodist minister had visited their town, and that there was a prospect of having a Methodist preacher located there, though it was quite a while before we got on track of a member of the church. However, we had a strong faith and the way opened at last. We asked a man on the street if he knew of any Methodist people in the town, at the same time telling him our business. His face lit up with a smile, he grasped our hand, and said that he and his wife had been members, and would be glad to be again. He pointed out several Methodist homes, introduced us into one, and expressed great joy at our coming. The ice was broken, the suspense and part of the expense was removed. We were taken from the hotel and quartered in an elegant Christian home, and made welcome to many other homes. The house was filled on Sunday with attentive hearers, and at night we had a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

Leaving an appointment for the following Sunday, on Tuesday we took the Northern Pacific train by way of the Old Mission, and over the Coeur d'Alene lake, of which we shall speak hereafter, for Spokane Falls, where the East Columbia Conference was to convene on the following day, and where we arrived at a quarter after nine o'clock, p. m., and were met at the depot by our old friend and brother, E. P. Dyer, whom we had not seen for twenty years before.

LETTER FROM DOCTOR MORTON.

And so in future we must address you as Mr. Editor Stanley. Well, I have heard you called Mr. Stanley, and Brother Stanley, and Ed. Stanley, and Preacher Stanley, and Presiding Elder Stanley, and Rocky Mountain Stanley, and Montana Stanley, and have generally in calling you myself omitted all prefixes and suffixes, and simply said Mr. Stanley, and I reckon I can adapt myself to the situation, and in future say, Mr. Editor Stanley.

Judging from your paper of August 30th, just received, I believe you will make an editor if you will work hard and be faithful, as faithful as you used to be in practicing on the accordeon.

I very much regretted my inability to attend your Conference this year, felt certain that you would have a good time, and sure enough you did. Dr. Morris, it seems, acquitted himself well and you did a good part by him. To me this is especially gratifying. I have known him long and well, and believe the General Conference made a wise selection when he was chosen Assistant Secretary of the Board of Church Extension. If he is not thoroughly successful in his work I shall be mistaken. While at the Denver Conference at Trinidad, in August, I recalled the size and appearance of that body when I saw it first in 1876, and I could but rejoice that though the Montana and New Mexico Conferences have both been let off from it since, each of the three is fully as efficient and about as large as the original conference.

How I would like to travel at large through your conference and see the people and witness the enlargement of your field and look upon the houses helped by our board, and above all worship with the brethren and sisters. Many of the latter have gone to join the silent majority since I was among you, but others linger, and I should like once more to grasp their hands and look into their faces, and while we recite the incidents of the past, revel in the hopes of the future.

Our Church Extension work is constantly enlarging, and Dr. Morris and myself need not eat any idle bread. Instead of doing less work, I have done more since his election than before, and he has done as much or more than I have. And thus we propose to extend—each man to do as much as one did before, and the two to do some things which only two can do, and which could not be done by either singly.

Many of our people do not realize the magnitude nor importance of our work, and these must been seen and talked to both publicly and privately, or reached by writing or printing. By the grace of God it shall be done

Success to your paper, success to your conference and to the church in your new state. May the Star of Montana continue in the ascendant, and the nascent church within her borders be established in the tops of the mountains.

DAVID MORTON.

East Columbia Conference.

The East Columbia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in its first annual session in the Hargrove Church, in Spokane Falls, Washington, on Wednesday, September 3rd 1890, at 9 o'clock a. m. Bishop Hendrix opened the Conference by reading a part of the sixth chapter of 2nd Corinthians, which he called the preacher's chapter, singing the hymn commencing, "Draw near, Oh Son of God, draw near," after which he led in prayer. The opening exercises were very impressive and spiritual.

The following members were present: Washington District, E. G. Michael, P. E., M. V. Howard, W. T. Haggard, G. H. Gibbs, M. Larkin, H. F. Dennis, D. W. Yoakum, R. B. Crego, F. C. Adkins, H. Barnhart.

Spokane District, J. W. Compton, P. E, R. B. Swift, J. W. Shreve, A. Y. Skee, F. F. St. Clair, T. C. Kirkpatrick, W. S. Hornbuckle, A. Anderson, P. M. Bell, H. T. Burger Besides these, M. R. Hangor, W. B. Gray, W. A. Paine, and other lay delegates were present. J. W. Compton was secretary; with R. B. Swift and G. H. Gibbs, assistants.

The church in which the conference was held, is an elegant and commodious brick structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire at one corner, which has been built during the pastorate of R. B. Swift, at a cost of about four or five thousand dollars. It is located on one of the principal streets in the western part of the city. The Church Extention and Mission Boards assisted liberally in securing this property. It was a good investment. Three years ago a handful of people worshipped in a hall, and hardly had a name to live, now they number nearly one hundred, worship in this lovely structure which the Lord has already honored by manifesting himself there in converting power, and where the nucleus of a new district was formed, a new annual conference organized and a most delightful session of the same has been held.

H. T. Burger was re-admitted into the travelling connection. M. Larkin and F. A. Adkins remain on trial, and B. F King was discontinued at his own request. W. T. Haggard, G. H. Gibbs, F. F. St. Clair, P. H. Bell and W. S. Hornbuckle had been transferred since the last session of the Conference, The reports of the presiding elders and preachers in charge were almost the same as ours, with only the names of men and places changed. Henry Barnhart and W. S. Hornbuckle were admitted on trial.

D. W. Yoakum and A. Y. Skee were elected and ordained elders, and M. Larkin, H. F. Dennis and T. E Kirkpatrick were elected and ordained deacons.

Dr. Morris, the Church Extension Secretary, was there, and counseled, and talked Church Extension, and prayed, and preached with even greater pathos and power than he did at Deer Lodge. He took the preachers and people by storm. That great big heart and fervent nature filled with the Holy Spirit and thrilled with an intense love for souls and rejoicing in Christ Jesus, constitutes a magnet of wonderful drawing power. The assessments for Church Extension were raised in full. We told them that we made it a rule in Montana to see that this collection was always raised entire. It just had to come. They fell into line, and thus start out with a clear record on Church Extension. May it ever be thus, and without so much having to be paid by the preachers. I verily believe that if this subject was explained to the people and urged by the preachers, they would gladly pay up every dollar assessed to them for this cause.

A proposition was submitted to the Conference asking that if the new paper was not established on the Pacific coast, as ordered by the General Conference, the East Columbia unite with the Montana in publishing a paper which shall be the organ of the two Conferences. The proposition met with a favorable and hearty response. A committee, consisting of J. W. Compton, M. V. Howard and R. B. Swift, was appointed to confer with the Board of Publication of the "Montana Methodist," with full authority to act in the premises. Inasmuch as the Columbia Conference had urged the establishment of the General Conference paper on the coast, the brethren would not consent to any action until the result of that movement is fully known.

The statistics showed 18 local preachers, 1,027 members, 17 Sunday Schools, 91 teachers, 1,447 scholars, 13 church buildings, valued at $47,300, and 7 parsonages, valued at $6,850.

There had been a number of revivals, and substantial progress had been made. The session was noted for its harmony and its spirituality. The preachers are capable, earnest, unpretentious, God-fearing, soul-loving men. There was not a word or a look that indicated any lack of the most perfect harmony. The men love each other, they love their work and the Master who has sent them into this vast and needy field. They have not fared even as well, financially, as most of the men in the Montana Conference, and there is but little prospect of any better support this year. Yet there was no word of complaint heard from any source.

More men are needed, and there is a prospect for several new churches to be built this year. There was universal regret at the transfer of W. T. Haggard back to the Tennessee Conference. He goes on account of his wife's health. He has made a fine record, and will succeed anywhere. There were some most touching and thrilling events transpired during the Conference sessions as the preachers gave in their reports, during the Board meetings, as the brethren were pleading for assistance in building churches, each one pleading as though his heart would break if he failed in his effort, and in the religious services as they sang, and prayed, and embraced each other, and gathered into the church the fruit of their earnest labor.

A committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee from the Montana Conference, with reference to establishing an institution of learning of high order, to be under the control of the two Conferences conjointly.

The next Conference will be held at Dayton.

It is needless to say that Bishop Hendrix more than sustained himself in the chair, the cabinet, the social circle, and especially in the pulpit, where he carried everything before him He showed himself to the brethren to be wide-awake, aggressive, abreast of the times, in full sympathy with the work, and in deep sympathy with any brother who might be in distress, and ready to do all in his power for his relief.

We were unable to remain over Sunday, having to return to Wallace, but learned that the large audience room was crowded on Sunday morning and night, and that the Conference made a profound impression upon the people of the enterprising young city.

A farewell prayer-meeting was held on Monday morning, at which there was a wonderful outpouring of the spirit and several additions to the church, making eight in all during the Conference. Under the influence and power of this Pentecost, with tear-wet eyes, with glowing hearts, with the true Pauline spirit they went forth every man to his field of labor to possess the land. We shall hear from them again. The following are the appointments:

PENDLETON DISTRICT, E. G. Michael, P. E; Pendleton, M V. Howard; Somerville, H. T. Burger; Lagrande and Moss Chapel, Henry Barnhart; Baker City and Wingville, D. Yoakum; Eagle Valley, D. B. Crego; Boise, supplied by C. C. Eagle; Heppner City, C. Adkins; Weston, J. W. Shreve; Walla Walla, P. M. Bell; Dayton, G. H. Gibbs; Pomeroy, Michael Larkin.

SPOKANE DISTRICT, R. B. Swift, P.E.; Spokane, to be supplied; Oakesdales, A. Y. Skee; Palouse and Moscow, J. W. Compton; Potlach, W. S. Hornbuckle; Colfax, supplied by A. Anderson; Big Bend, F. F. St. Clair; Ruby Creek, supplied by T. E. Kirkpatrick; Colville, to be supplied; Lewiston, to be supplied.

From Elkhorn.

We always get a full house at Elkhorn, splendid singing, profound attention to preaching. The English are hard to excel for giving a respectful hearing to a preacher. There is hope of a people who seem to say, "We will hear thee again concerning this matter." I was up as the White Pine Mine the night of Sept. 5th, for the purpose of preaching the first sermon at that new and vigorous camp. The congregation, though small, was very attentive; the collection good. The snow fell to the depth of four inches, the icicles were six inches long. With wet feet and summer clothing, having taken cold and some fever, I was thankful to reach the "vale below." I am now in better trim. Yours,

J. H. JOHNSON.

A private note from Brother E. L. Lee contains the following "cheering notes:"—The work is moving along. It is not without signs of encouragement, I have had very good congregations at every point. I am doing all I can in regard to the church building at Demersville. We have given the plans to the carpenters to figure on. We intend to let it by contract. They are to report this evening. I have received a few more subscriptions I would like for you to come up as soon as you can. I am kept pretty busy preaching three times a week, superintending two Sunday Schools, teaching day school and building a church. I will hold a protracted meeting as soon as my school is out. I will write for the "Methodist" when I have something to write, and when I have a little more leisure.

In addition to the above we learned from Mr. Clifford, one of the enterprising business men of Demersville, whom we met in Missoula, that Bro. Lee is moving along finely, the church building will be a grand success, they are about to get a daily mail at Demersville, the town is growing, and things are in a hopeful condition generally.

Rev. W. T. Goulder writes: My work is progressing nicely. I am meeting with some encouragements. Hope to do a good year's work. Congregations are small, but increasing.

We are called to chronicle the decease of Little Willie, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Garver, at Bozeman, Montana. The remains were interred at the city cemetery, Sunday afternoon, August 31st, Rev. W. T. Goulder officiating.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST:

Your Conference has come and gone. I was glad you had such a grand time. It would have been a great pleasure to me to have visited your session. I have just returned from our Western Conference. Bishop Key is the right man in the right place. His sermon on Sunday was grand beyond description, and his talk just before reading the appointments, was the most sympathetic and affecting that I ever heard. I thought there was not a preacher present who could be dissatisfied with his appointment. How I thought of my far away boy, and of the time when I watched him till he was out of sight, as he was starting to his first circuit. How sad and lonely I felt, and yet how glad and thankful I was that the good Lord had called him into the ministry.

Our Western Conference does not increase nor decrease, and is just about holding its own. The long continued drought cutting our crops so short makes it very hard for the people, and the preachers are about the first ones to feel it. I send you the appointments of our Conference, just as Rev. William Hubbard took them down as the Bishop read them off.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST:

Loving as I do, the grand little "Methodist," I do not want to stop it, hence will send my renewal and the $2.00 I individually owe as soon as I get to my new field of labor. Well, I will not take up your valuable time by going into a detailed description of my trip, as the route has become familiar to many of your readers. But there are frequently happenings to break the monotony, relieve the tedium of these long wearisome journeys through life that are calculated to excite our risibilities, like flashes of the gladsome sunshine dispelling frequently the shadows. Hence I will speak of one incident that will show the tie of kindred spirits. Meeting with Brother and Sister Moore at Butte, I entered the roll of chaperone, general nurse, and "traveler du voyage" with some misgiving lest I prove a failure in the nurse business, but thanks to the sweet little ones, 'twas in a measure unalloyed pleasure—but alas. "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang a glee." My dear Brother M. lost two hats and some little time by his numerous belongings. Moral: Never travel with more than two large lunch baskets, valise, Unabridged dictionary, etc, etc., etc., as hand baggage. Left Brother Moore a happy and contented man in Denver, arrived in St. Louis in good time, called upon "The St. Louis Advocate." Hence, en route to Hematite and preached three times the first Sunday in Missouri. On Monday night following went into a revival meeting with Rev. J. A. Sronce, at Hillsboro, and have just returned after two weeks most pleasantly and profitably spent. And now dear Brethren of the Montana Conference, pray for me that the Lord of the Harvest may give me success.

Childish Wit—Coyotes.

Children are often witty and piously inclined. The writer recently had just taken his seat in a rural home, when the children retiring to the kitchen, one of them was heard to remark, "That man has a long nose." The visitor could only console himself with the thought, that sometimes a large nose is the sign of natural, if not acquired ability. Again, trying to explain prayer to the children in Sunday School, this scribe stated that it was "to get what you go after, notwithstanding the difficulties," when a little fellow, who had dropped a plaything, exclaimed to another who was about to take it, "don't get it." Some said he said, "get it then."

That twenty-mile walk down the North Boulder, Monday, August 25th, wading the streams with blistered feet, trying to sleep on a board, waiting four hours for a belated train, while the Coyotes made the welkin ring with their sharp barks, was an experience not soon to be forgotten. There may be sermons in rocks and trees, but I did not make even a skeleton on that trip. J. H. J.

THOMPSON FALLS.

The little town called by this name, is one hundred and two miles from Missoula, westward, on the Northern Pacific railroad, and located on a timbered slope of the mountain that extends southward down to the bank of the Clark's fork of the Columbia river. It was started about seven years ago, in the great excitement that followed the discovery of the mines in the Coeur d'Alene mountains, about thirty miles west of here. The travel at first was on foot from Trout Creek and Belknap, points below here, over a mountain trail, the men generally carrying their blankets and provisions on toboggans or hand-sleds that they would drag behind them over the snow, which was from ten to twenty feet in depth. A wagon road was finally made over the mountains from Thompson Falls, and this place became and continued to be the principal shipping point until communication was established by rail and steamboat between the mines and a point in the road near Spokane Falls. In the time of its prosperity nearly a thousand people jostled against each other on the streets, many of whom were "tenderfeet," excited and buoyant at the expectation of a great fortune that awaited them over the range, of which they had read in the flaming circulars sent out by interested parties, and others whose countenances indicated disappointment and disgust as they were returning from the new Eldorado without money or credit, and were trying to get home again. At present the population is only about three hundred. There is one hotel, two restaurants, several stores and a substantial school house, which is used also for holding religious services when a minister happens along. The saloons are prominent. We found quite a number who are greatly desirous of having regular preaching, if they could only provide for the support of a minister. There is a prosperous Sunday School in operation under the superintendency of an excellent young man, a Mr. Harriet, from Missouri.

The principal industry of this section of the country is lumbering, though there are some mines in the adjacent mountains. There are some rich mines being developed about fifteen miles west of here, which it is thought will add much to the life of the town. A fine site for a sawmill and planer has been secured at the falls just below town. A Mr. Willis, another Missourian, is doing well in the butcher business. Beef cattle are brought from the Flathead reservation. There are ten or a dozen ranches within about five miles of the town. The climate is said to be mild and pleasant. The mountains are high and rugged, in close proximity and mostly covered with pine, cedar, fir, tamarack and hemlock timber.

The principal attraction in the way of scenery, however, are the falls, or rapids, just below and in sight of the town. Here the river suddenly narrows from six hundred feet to three hundred in width, and this is separated by intervening ledges of rock into numerous channels. At one place it plunges over a ledge of six feet, and the rest of the way for one hundred and fifty yards it goes leaping, and bounding, and rumbling, and tumbling, and surging, and seething, and raging, and roaring down a succession of rocky terraces, into a pool where it becomes quite placid, then describes an acute angle to the right around a great rocky point which towers up a hundred feet and repeats the same caper about a mile below. It reminds me of "how the water comes down at Ladore." As the solid emerald tint is suddenly changed into the silver tapestry dancing and shimmering in the bright sunlight under a cloudless sky, the effect is most bewitching. A perpendicular wall of rock towers up on the north side from fifty to one hundred feet, culminating in a sharp, bold, projecting point, which offers an inspiring view, both up and down the mighty surging river. I crawled carefully to the edge and then held on to a bush while I peered from the dizzy heights into the seething mass of waters far below. It makes one's head swim to perform such a feat. This great wall is carved into deep yawning caverns in which the sunlight never dares to venture. A few yards from here there are shady bowers and beautiful caves, which offer a lovely retreat where one can meditate and commune with nature to his heart's content. It is a delightful retreat. When the river is flush the surging volumes dash furiously against the adjacent ledges and the water and spray go up in clouds, while the roar of the mighty cataract is heard afar off. The fall at the first rapids is from sixteen to twenty feet.

While we sit where some of these lines are penned and look up and see the trees, and shrubs, and mosses, and beautiful flowers moistened by the spray, and quickened into life by the bright sunlight as they cling to and take root in the clefts of the frowning precipice, so we remember that our God, amid all the wonderful displays of His power, and often seemingly so rigid in His dealings with men, is full of life, and tenderness, and love, and clothes with beauty and crowns with loving kindness the lives of those who cling to the Rock of Ages that is cleft for us, and who abide by faith in the light of the bright Sun of righteousness that lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

Closing up the Lines.

The writer has been present at the organization of four new Conferences west of the Missouri river, the Western, Denver, Montana, and last, but not least, in interest and importance, East Columbia. It is impossible to express the joy we felt in meeting with these brethren at the first session of their Conference. They appeared equally glad at meeting with a member of the Montana Conference. We had often shaken hands in our hearts across the great mountains and longed to speak face to face. Suddenly the barrier was removed and our cherished hopes fulfilled. Heart answered to heart as we met and talked, sang, prayed, preached, counseled, wept, rejoiced, and worshipped the God of our fathers together. All felt the kindling of a stronger faith, a greater courage, a brighter hope, and the thrill of a deeper and purer spiritual life was experienced in every heart. Their difficulties, their toils and trials have been ours, and so also their triumphs and their joys. They have felt the pinchings of poverty, have experienced a sense of loneliness in their isolation, and their patience has been sorely tried because the church at home was so long awakening to a sense of the importance of their work, and so backward in sending out more laborers to these whitening and ever extending fields. At times they hoped even against hope, for it was said that their work was like ours, would come to naught. But they still held on, and followed the settlers eastward and northward along the valleys, through the gulches and up the mountain slopes, while we in Montana have been gradually working westward in the same manner. Still, the great Coeur d'Alene range of mountains rose between us and seemed to forbid a nearer approach or closer intercourse. But God works in a mysterious way. All at once this mighty bulwark of mountains is being honey-combed by mining shafts and tunnels, made in extracting the immense treasures of precious ores found there, and penetrated by several lines of railroad, and its canyons, plateaus, and forests, thronged with busy multitudes, who are cutting its timber, digging its silver, gold and antimony, and building towns and cities that teem with life and energy. Suddenly our lines are drawn close together and our outposts begin to interlap each other as the little streamlets on the tops of the mountains from whence they flow down through the great rivers to the sea. No wonder there was rejoicing as we met at Spokane Falls. We had reason to thank God and take courage.

We now have a line of posts all the way from Montana through Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Kansas, around to Texas and Louisiana—from the head waters of the

GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS' WORKS, in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THE MONTANA METHODIST for ONE YEAR, upon receipt of $1.60, which is only 60 cents more than the regular subscription price of this paper. Our readers, therefore, practically get a set of Dickens' works in twelve volumes for only 60 cents. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist for only $1.60. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of 6 yearly subscribers. Address:

great Missouri, to the mouth of the mighty Mississippi, extending through one of the grandest countries in the world, where the nations are already pouring in their millions who are coming to acquire wealth, establish homes, and in the providence of God, to learn from us of Him of whom Moses and the prophets did write. What a cordon of posts, what a line of battle, what a front to present to the heathen world on the west—and to all the nations. By strengthening our forces and enlarging along the lines into which the great Captain of the armies of Israel has so wonderfully led us, and by continuing faithful under His leadership, what may we not expect in the not distant future? "Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage. Be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee, whither so ever thou goest." These words spoken to Joshua come with double force to every minister of the Lord Jesus Christ along our Western frontier to-day. Let us go forward.

A FOUNTAIN OPENED.

"For about three years of my life I was going forth tunnelling; we had to bore, you know, sometimes for water. Well, we used to go on boring down until we touched the spring, and when we touched the spring, we did not want to say, "Is there any water?" It showed itself directly, bubbling right up to the top of the hole, as soon as ever we broke through the crust and touched the spring. And bless the Lord, this spring has been bored too. Come along with me, and I will show you how. Let us go to yonder passover. See—He dips the bit in the plate, and He says, "One of you will betray me and you will all forsake me!" Follow Him into the garden of Gethsemane; see Him there, the Man of sorrows, exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." There He is wrestling in prayer; and now an angel comes and strengthens Him. Then He gets up and wakes his disciples; but they fall asleep again. And then he wakes them for the last time. "Stand there," He says, "Hush! methinks I can hear the rustling in the thicket of some wicked men." And then up comes a band of ruffians with swords and staves to take Him. Look at them, the traitor is there; his name is Judas Iscariot. He approaches and kisses Him, saying, "Hail, Master! I sold thee for the money they gave me; and now I come to betray thee after eating the bit out of the dish with thee!" Oh! Judas, what hast thou done? It would have been better for thee that a mill-stone had been hanged about thy neck, and thou cast into the sea, than that thou hadst done this thing!

They drive Him from the judgement-hall up the steep of Calvary. Yonder, they extend Him upon the cross. They strive like devils who can abuse Him most. "Let me strike at that nail once," says one, as he jags it down into the hand which wrought so many mighty works of love; which lay in blessing upon the little children's heads, and lifted the ruler's daughter into life. Now the tree is planted and the Lord of glory hangs in agony upon it.

And as he gives up the ghost, the earth quakes; the rocks are torn; the veil of the temple is rent in twain; the graves are opened, and out come the dead, for "It is finished," and the death of Christ is life to them. Now look at this Roman soldier! He thirsts for blood; he strikes in his spear; he pierces that sacred heart. Glory be to God! Now the spring is reached. The living water gushes forth. Tremble, devils! "The fountain is open for sin and uncleanness!" Sinner, wash and be clean! Thank God for the soldier's spear! The Lord directed it. He knew where to bore. The devil thought he would drain the life-blood of the Son of God, but "through death He destroyed him that had the power of death," and sinners, you may drink and live, wash, and be clean every whit. "Oh, Love divine!" what hast thou done?

"Behold the Saviour of mankind
Nailed to the shameful tree!"

Men will go miles to see some great transaction—the opening of a Great Exhibition, or the laying of a fountain-stone. Look up and see your Saviour die. Behold the opening of the fountain for sin and for uncleanness! See God laying the fountain-stone of the Heavenly Jerusalem.

A Warning Against Counterfeit Half-Dollars has been issued. The warning was necessary because the usual tests of coin fail in the case of these counterfeits, as they are of the same size and weight as the genuine coins. Counterfeiting of this sort is exceedingly profitable when done on a large scale, as detection is practically impossible. It is believed that most of the metal used is from remelted trade dollars. By the purchase of these in large quantities the counterfeiters obtain the metal already mixed at just the standard alloy. The market price of one hundred trade dollars, before they were called in, was $84, and the metal in them is sufficient to make two hundred and seventeen standard half dollars, which gives a profit of $24.50. The coins pass readily in the course of trade, neither the public nor the merchant detects them, and it is only when they go to the Treasury or the mint, where the genuine coins are made, that they are surely found out. It is so with human imposture. Ministers and churches in the world are apt to think that the man who has picked up the cant phrases of religion and is living a moral life is a genuine Christian, but when he appears before God, who alone can give the new birth, the imposture is revealed (Matt. 7: 32, 23.)

"Mamma, Isn't God Here."

Many years ago, while staying with a party at the Isle of Shoals, east of New Hampshire, we were out in a sail boat, and suddenly a wind cloud threw our boat about roughly. We were ordered by the Captain to keep still on our seats, but many from fear and lack of self-control disobeyed, and the boat was in great danger.

Sitting next me was a little girl with her mother on the other side. She was but six years old, but as the storm swept over us, she made no demonstration of fear.

Her mother and myself were passive and obeyed the Captain's orders. After watching the party who were restless and panic-stricken for a few minutes, the little girl looked up at hee mother and said, "Mamma, Isn't God Here?"

Storms sweep over us, wherever we are. Difficulties which seem like waves, mountain high, rise up before us. It seems almost impossible to sit with folded hands and feel undismayed at the prospect of danger. But as the fixed stars go on with their shining and feel undisturbed by the silence around them or even a burning comet whizzing by them, so we can walk through all experiences, and under all circumstances feel that "God is here." Vol. 2. OCTOBER, 15th, 1890. No. 28.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—A young man by the name of Redding, who formerly lived near Clancy, was recently killed by falling about sixty feet down a mining shaft The family and friends have our deepest sympathy in their sore bereavement.

—Mr. Fred. Clark, a son of our Bro. R. S. Clark, recently met with the sad misfortune of having one of his legs broken, crushed, by the premature dumping of a car of ore which caught him under it. He came near losing his life. It was a painful wound. We are glad to learn that he is doing well, and that both life and limb will be saved.

—The completion of the new church at Townsend has inspired our friends with stronger confidence in the work. They are disposed to take hold and help more than ever before, and the pastor, Rev. R. S. Clark, is encouraged at the outlook.

—As we passed up the Deer Lodge Valley on the cars last week, the sky was cloudless except a smoky mantle that overhung the mountains about Butte City, twenty miles or more away to our left. Above this murky base and surmounting it there rose a great dome-shaped cloudy, pillar, massive in appearance and gigantic in its proportions, as it towered far above the highest mountains and stood out in bold relief against the blue canopy overhead. Its surface was beautifully corrugated, and glistening in the bright sunlight it looked like a mighty mass of silver. It resembled the dome of some immense capitol building, and stood directly over the Silver City. It could be seen for more than fifty miles, and it was with difficulty that we were persuaded it was nothing but smoke. What an illustration, we thought, of many things in this world—beautiful, interesting, imposing to all outward appearance, but they end in smoke.

—We hear good reports of the new presiding elder's labors in Helena. He starts off well, will soon come to feel at home in the new harness, and we predict for him a successful year's work. We are glad that Sister Couey and the children stood the trip so well, are back again and so comfortably situated in such a delightful little city as Deer Lodge. If Brother Couey ever gets through "fixing" things about home he will be ahead of this scribe.

—We acknowledge the receipt, with the compliments of Mrs. T. E. Weaver, of St. Joseph, Mo., of a copy of the Twelfth Annual Report of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, also a copy of the Minutes of the Twelfth Annual Meeting of the W. M. S. of the Missouri Conference, which was held at Moberly, June 14–18, 1890.

—Mrs. Weaver is the District Secretary of the W. M. S. of the St. Joseph District, and takes an active part in the work, and is quite successful. She is the lady who 19 years ago at the time of this writing, filled a large pair of saddle bags (while the owner was away getting his other outfit) with lunch consisting of spiced ham, chicken, chow-chow, pickles, jelly, jelly-cake, etc., etc., enough to feed several hearty preachers all the way across the plains, and pretty near to Montana. It was from her hospitable Christian home that we took our final leave, and launched forth into what seemed to be a wilderness, and we never forgot the kindness shown us. In looking over the minutes we see many names that are familiar. We read with much interest the address of the President, Mrs. Adam Hendrix, who is the mother of our Bishop Hendrix. We hope to see the day when we can have a similar organization in the Montana Conference. Hitherto our ladies have thought best to work in connection with the Woman's Department of Church Extension, which was about all they could manage.

—A few mornings ago we were aroused from our slumbers just after daybreak by Mr. Reuben Weatherford, our hired man, who came rushing in from the barn, where he had gone to do the feeding, and commenced pounding unmercifully on the room door, and shouting, "There's a big bear out here in the orchard; hand me the needle gun and some cartridges quick, so that I can kill it." The necessary munitions of war were supplied on short notice, and before we could get dressed and rush to the scene of action with the only weapon left—a shot-gun loaded with chicken shot—a well directed bullet at a range of only fifty yards, penetrated bruin's skull and laid him low in the dust. He was a full grown black bear, weighing about 400 pounds. We are thinking of what a fine rug we shall have this winter to adorn the floor of the editorial sanctum of the "Montana Methodist." It will be fine, don't you think so?

—We are indebted to Rev. C. I. Nau Deventer for a splendidly executed picture of the Missouri Conference. There are one hundred and twenty-six faces, each one occupying a space about the size of a silver half dollar, and arranged in an oblong circle. The space occupied is about 18x24 inches. Bishop Hendrix is the central face, double size. We have it in a neat frame, and it is to have a place in our Montana home. We take no little satisfaction in looking over the faces that appear there and thinking over the scenes and associations that they recall. We also think not a little of some who do not appear there, who have joined the triumphant hosts above, but who are in our heart to live forever. It is a singular fact that but one member of our class—that of '69—appears there—Bishop Hendrix, and he is not a member of the body. Gone, all scattered and gone! What changes have taken place since that session at Chillicothe! What crosses, conflicts, and conquests. What sorrows and what joys, and how many more to be experienced ere we shall meet in heaven.

—It was a pleasure to be present at the annual meeting of the First Bible Society of Montana, at which officers were elected for the ensuing year. We took notes, but unfortunately have lost them, and can write only from memory. Brother D. B. Price is Chairman of the Executive Committee. The meeting was held in the Broadway M. E. Church, and the next will be in the Congregationalist Church. Rev. P. C. Heitzler, the District Superintendent, was there and made an interesting talk. He said that a Methodist Bishop once introduced him to a Conference as "agent for the biggest book in the world," "and the best one," added the agent. Yes, it is the biggest and the best—big enough in its provisions to include us all, and good enough to save us all if we comply with its conditions, which are free to all—in reach of all—without money and without price. The agent spoke of the great destitution that prevails in some portions of the North-west, between this and the Pacific coast. A young lady was found at one place, sixteen years old, who had never seen a Bible (and perhaps never heard of it), and a great many Sunday School children are found who do not own one. We suggest that this latter is partly owing to the modern methods of teaching in Sunday Schools—lesson papers instead of the Scriptures. The object of the society is to furnish everybody with the Scriptures at the lowest possible rates, making donations to those who are unable to pay. The agent said that he had never found people more ready to respond liberally to calls for help in this work than they are here in Montana. In Anaconda, on the street in company with one of our members, in a few hours he raised $75, which was cheerfully given. I fear that as ministers and laymen we neglect our duty in this important work of circulating the Bible. It is the basis of our churches, and of all our institutions. "If the foundations be destroyed what can the righteous do?" The first Conference of the M. E. Church, South, that was ever held in Montana (and the first organization of a similar kind, of any denomination ever held in the Territory), adopted measures for the organization of a Bible Society and the inauguration of this kind of work. Let us not come behind the chiefest in circulating the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make men wise unto salvation.

—The "Sunday School Budget"—"Magazine," "Weekly Visitor," "Little People" and "Lesson Quarterlies" is on our table, fresh and sparkling with rare gems of thought for Sunday School teachers and pupils. Our Sunday School literature is hard to excel already, and is getting better. Let our families who are so isolated that they cannot have a regular Sunday School, send and get the "Magazine" (for 50 cents), and the "Weekly Visitor," which is the same price, and devote an hour on each Sunday morning or in the afternoon, to the study of the Sunday School lesson. I have known these little home Sunday Schools, where the mother or father would act as teacher, to be made very interesting and profitable. It helps to the proper observance of the Sabbath, cultivates both mind and heart by assisting in a systematic study of the Scriptures, and keeps you abreast of, and in sympathy with, the grand army that is marching on in its effort to bring the kingdoms of this world in subjection to the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ.

—Our columns are crowded this week. Several papers will have to lie over. The paper only holds so much. We wish it were as large again.

IN OUR GREAT NORTH-WEST.

BY E. R. HENDRIX.

Nearly two months have been spent in an official visit to Montana, Washington and Oregon, and the Church has the right to expect a report of the impressions made. As it was my second visit to Montana I was not altogether without a basis of comparison, both as to the work there and as to similar work in the adjoining fields. The work in Montana has solidified perceptibly since my former visit, three years ago. We have made progress in Helena, Butte and Deer Lodge, and are growing in the Gallatin and Bitter Root valleys. New churches and parsonages have been built, the membership has been increased and greater confidence awakened as to the permanent success of our work. More is being done in the way of self-support and the work is looked upon as less the work of a few noble pioneer spirits and more the expression of the sympathy and confidence of the great church which has sent her representatives to this important field. There was a time when the presence of Stateler and Stanley seemed necessary to success. But while these noble men still live and labor, yet the feeble health of Brother Stateler circumscribes his field and Stanley was appointed at the last session of his conference to pioneer a new district which forms the connecting link between the Montana and East Columbia Conferences, leaving to others the development of the region which he helped pioneer years ago. The Montana Conference not only always meets the assessments made upon it by the boards, but has her own domestic mission in the Flat Head Lake country. With preachers and laymen, such as any conference in the connection would be glad to claim, we look to yet greater progress in the next quadrennium. Oh, for $10,000 Church Extension money and a like amount from the Board of Missions to occupy strategic points already in our plan of work!

Washington is one of our younger sisters, but she has already outstripped in population her near-by rivals, and developed resources most surprising. Alike on her eastern, western and southern borders, the greatest activity prevails. Spokane Falls affords the immense water power to crush the ores of the mountains, saw the lumber of the foothills and grind the grain of her wonderful valleys, and is destined to become a great inland city. She will need to divide the great harvests of the Palouse and Big Bend countries and the twin cities of the tide water, with Tacoma and Seattle, whose commercial importance even San Francisco cannot ignore.

Seattle promises to be the largest city on the Pacific Coast, San Francisco alone excepted. Her business thrift, her numerous cables, and her great stores and banks are already strong reminders of Kansas City and St. Louis. But the splendid harbors of Puget Sound and the mild climate caused by the Gulf Stream of the Pacific will make possible numerous cities along this Mediterranean of the Pacific. Dr. Atkins, of the Corvallis College, accompained me on my visit to these cities, as well as to Portland. We found many friends and former members of our church at Seattle and Portland, where I preached in the leading Methodist Episcopal Churches. Some of them express a strong desire for our ministry provided we can send them a representative man. Property is held at Kansas City prices in both cities. The great advance in real estate in such places as Seattle and Spokane Falls more than covered the loss of the buildings destroyed by the fires which threatened the destruction of these cities. I could but wish we had as good property in each of the others as we have in Spokane Falls, where $600 invested some four years ago by the Board of Missions, followed afterwards by liberal aid from the Board of Church Extension has secured for us property worth some $20,000. This part of Western Washington is the natural outlet for the Columbia Conference, since the division. The more rapid development of the Pacific Coast is here. The wisest use of missionary money would be to appoint a sagacious man presiding elder of Puget Sound District and supply him with money and men as openings appear. Nor in this rapidly developing country can any delay be permitted. What is done by us must be done within the next two years; better in the present year, if we hope to be a positive factor in the religious development of our great North-west.

Fifteen years ago the more rapid development of the North-west promised to be in Eastern Oregon and Washington. Bishop Kavanaugh, presiding at the session of the Columbia Conference that year, appointed three men to enterprise a district in that trans-mountain region. From that work undertaken then has come the East Columbia Conference, formed by the action of the late General Conference, and now as large as the original Columbia Conference when the new work was enterprised. In fact, the growth of the Columbia Conference has been largely in this outlet, as has been the growth of the State of Oregon. Beautiful as is the Williamette Valley the conference must grow beyond it even, to hold it.

Here is our future pathway to China and Japan, shortening the voyage by many days. Here is to be a great population, cosmopolitan in its character, embracing no small number of our more thrifty people. With iron and coal, with lumber and grain, with fruits and fisheries, without number, that population can be easily sustained. Shall our great church have no part in their religious development? In these new and open fields shall we not eagerly labor to extend the kingdom of our Lord?—South-western Methodist.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Rev. B. E. H. Warren made a trip to Wonderland right after Conference. From private sources we learn that he has returned, and is moving around on the Bozeman Circuit with his accustomed zeal and energy, getting things ready for a fall and winter campaign. He is arranging to seat the new church at Belgrade. We look for things to move in Gallatin Valley this year.

The campaign has begun in earnest, as will be seen from Brother Couey's Notes. Brother Squires has a protracted meeting under headway in Butte, with a fine prospect for success. He is well received by the people.

DEER LODGE.

Rev. S. B. Tabor has been transferred from the Missouri Conference and stationed at Deer Lodge. He is represented as "having staying and establishing qualities," is a worthy and efficient man and a valuable acquisition to our Conference. Welcome, thrice welcome, Brother Tabor and wife to our great North-west. May you be blessed abundantly in your labors this year—We learn that Misses Maggie and Dolly Evans, two of our efficient workers in the Sunday School and Church at Deer Lodge, are attending college at Fayette, Mo., and also that their mother, Mrs. Evans, expects to spend the winter east. This will deplete the ranks of the workers very materially, but the pastor will find other devoted friends who will rally to his assistance, and we anticipate a good year at Deer Lodge.

STEVENSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall, that wide-awake pastor, writes: Just a line or two of news, which you may use for the "Methodist" if you need the same.

I preached Friday night last at a new appointment—Fair Play S. H., near Woodside. Had a full house. No preaching there before for 3 years. Found the people hungry for the Word of Life. Had the pleasure of receiving into the church by letter two live Southern Methodists from Missouri. They have a good Union Sunday School at the place. I expect to commence a Protracted Meeting there in about three weeks, after having spent some time in a meeting with the Ambrose Creek friends.

Had good services at Victor on Sunday.

Obtained a new subscriber for the "Methodist," and collected a renewed subscription.

We are praying and working for a revival all over the circuit.

Following are the services for Stevensville Circuit—J. B. Parnall, pastor:

1st Sunday—Burnt Fork, morning; Ambrose, evening.
2nd " —Lo Lo, morning and night.
3rd " —Stevensville, morning and night.
4th " —Victor, morning and night.

[We always need such news as the above. Thank the Lord, the fire is burning. We are gaining ground. Let us go forward.—ED.]

EAST COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

From Moscow, Idaho.

Dear Brother Stanley:—I did not think that I could write so soon when I saw you at Conference, but I will give you what news I have now. We held our first service last Sabbath, and the Spirit was present. The brethren received me with open arms, and you know that helps a poor itinerant wonderfully, and they promised to do more for the Master this year than ever before. I shall look wistfully for the "Methodist" when I think it is about time for it to arrive.

Our Conference at Spokane Falls was a success, was it not? I am so glad that our Conferences can shake hands. We are getting closer together. Oh, there is so much work to do and so few men to do it. I believe I am the only member of the Conference that lives in all Idaho. My circuit is large enough for a presiding elder's district. I close, wishing you abundant success in your new field of labor. W. S. HORNBUCKLE.

[We are glad to hear from our Brother, and appreciate his kind wishes, for we believe they come from the heart. His letter has the right ring. Yes, it helps wonderfully to receive such a welcome back again, though we are not surprised at that welcome. Then, that promise to do more for the Master than ever before. How encouraging. May they have strength to carry it out. We know what it is to be isolated, but rejoice that the gaps are being filled and we can shake hands occasionally. We hope that big circuit will develop into a presiding elder's district, and that it will be presided over by some one with as much faith, and courage, and earnestness as our Brother shows in his work.—ED.]

WALLA WALLA.

Dear Brother Stanley:—Of course you know of my appointment to this place. Our prospect is very encouraging, and I believe we will have an awakening all along the line. Our Conference session was a great blessing to us all. I will write soon at length. P. M. BELL.

EAST HELENA.

I arrived in this work September 12th. Have been very kindly received by the people both at East Helena and Alhambra. I have preached three sermons at each place, and have had fair congregations and good attention. The attendance is increasing at each place. The Sunday School at Alhambra was re-organized yesterday; there was a good attendance, and the prospect for the school is encouraging. I have not had the privilege of being present with the Sabbath School in East Helena, but the school, as I understand, is doing moderately well. I have visited about twenty families, and have been favorably impressed with all whom I have met. My wife, with our household goods, is expected about the 1st of November, and when we get settled we will be better prepared for the work. I have met with Bro. Rush McDonal, a member of the South-west Missouri Conference, at Alhambra, who is here for the benefit of his health. He expresses a willingness, if restored to health, to labor in this field, and I am favorably impressed with the Brother, and believe he would be useful in the work. I am well pleased with this country, and am hopeful for a successful year. I hope to have the sympathy and prayers of all the brethren in the Conference.

FROM FLATHEAD VALLEY.

Rev. E. L. Lee writes that his school will soon be out and he expects to go right into the work of holding protracted meetings. He thinks this is the only successful way of building up societies. They have $500 subscribed on the new church at Demersville, have the rock about all on the ground for the foundation, and expect the plans and specifications to arrive and the work to begin soon. Brother Lee says, "The day seems to dawn. The work is not without signs of encouragement. I have fair congregations and exceptionally good interest. I feel that God is in the work. He certainly has given me more liberty than ever before. To His name be all the glory." To all of which we say amen.

FROM BUTTE.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—Will you say through the "Methodist" that we are entering hopefully upon the work of the year, at Butte charge?

We came at some sacrifice, of course, but we are vastly more than repaid for it all by the warm reception given us here, and the promise of good we read in the signs around us.

Our first quarterly meeting was a most delightsome time. Not only our sweet spirited P. E. with the "new" on him, but Father Stateler, the Patriarch of the Conference, was with us, conducting the "Love Feast," and otherwise lending largely to the spirituality of the occasion.

The name of Brother Stateler had been a household word in our home for thirty years, and when, after preaching on Saturday evening (for we began the quarterly meeting after the old style on Friday before the Sunday), I learned that he was in the audience, I felt like going down and putting my arms about his neck and weeping like a boy. I felt honored that my life should thus touch one of such usefulness and such sacrifice.

Well, the congregations are good and the worship very devout. The brethren planned largely for their preacher, amd we have planned likewise for the church, and will begin a "revival" meeting on Thursday evening next, the 25th, (D. V.)

Will all of my brethren pray that a great victory may now come to the church here? "Ask largely that our joys may be full," are the encouraging words of our Master. Let our motto for this year be "a revival of religion in every charge in the Montana Conference." I am sure such a mark is not too high for us, and my faith claims thus much and I am ready to expend my energies to this end. May God direct us in all of our plans, and give us strength for their execution.

STOP AND CONSIDER.

Young man, what would you think of any engineer with a train or passengers in his keeping, and seeing the Danger Signal, a red light moving before him rushing madly on, would you not say he was mad? But he, like a brave true man, stops his engine to see what is the matter, and will take no risks in running by the Danger Signal. How many men there are who do not stop at these Danger Signals waving even in their faces in everyday life, but who rush madly on past them to certain death and destruction. A friend says, "Don't go into that saloon, see that red light,—Danger ahead!" But he only laughs. The experience of thousands of men who were just as confident, whose prospects in life were just as bright, are no warning to him. He must "sow his wild oats," he says.

Ah, but if you do, remember you must reap the same, and more than you sow! "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." You are sowing a crop which will yield you a harvest of iniquity. Look into the faces of those who are now reaping the harvest of their years of sowing, and see disappointment and unhappiness written on every feature. Will you not listen to God's Spirit as he comes to you just now as you are reading these lines as he says to you, "My Son give me your heart." Won't you let Jesus come into your heart and life? He will make such a change. Will you not change Masters to-day? "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is Eternal Life, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

NEWS AND NOTES.

– On the day after the great fire in Wallace, Idaho, which laid every business house in ashes, and every saloon but one, that happened to be across the creek from the main portion of the town, Rev. Mr. Gunn, the Episcopal clergyman, who is located there, was heard to remark, "For once we are even with the saloons. We have just one church and one saloon left." The church was in the resident portion of the town, and was saved. It was a happy hit. It required a mighty conflagration to level them down. And then the equality in numbers did not long continue, for before two days a number of saloons were in full blast, and there are twenty or more there now, while the little church still stands alone.

—Rev. Rush McDonald, a member of the Southwest Mo. Conference, has had to desist from preaching for awhile, and is health seeking in Montana. He is a valuable man. We hope he will find friends, feel at home among us, and find speedy restoration to his usual strength.

—We are glad to get a cheery note from Brother Bramble—have had good reports from other sources of his favorable reception by the good people at East Helena. We trust that he may do much good in Montana.

—The October S. S Magazine contains an ably written article from the pen of Rev. W. A. Shannon, of the M. E. Church, who is well known in Montana, about his visit to Gethsemane. We had selected a portion of it for the columns of the "Methodist," but it is crowded out of this issue.

—And so the Rev. George Needham, preacher in charge, presiding elder, college agent, business manager, corresponding editor, and the dear knows what else, (they seem to need him for everything) is now editor and proprietor of the "Rocky Mountain Methodist." Well, "misery loves company," they say. We both started in the new role about the same time, are both "green" in the duties of the new situation, but will have to learn, as in nearly everything else out in the great West, by practical experience, and "shall see what we shall see." We have been an interested reader of, first the Colorado and later the Rocky Mountain, "Methodist" ever since its first issue, whenever we could get it, and surely our interest shall not abate since the wide-awake, energetic, versatile and irrepressible Needham is in charge of it. Already he has made it a weekly, and is publishing it at Denver. We shake hands across the thousand mile stretch of mountains and valleys, and bid our dear Brother God-speed.

—The "St. Louis Christian Advocate" and the "South-western Methodist" have consolidated, the latter paper having been bought out by the proprietors of the "Advocate." We never were more surprised in our life. The name of the venerable D. R. McAnally still stands at the head of the editorial staff, and we trust it will remain there as long as the grand old man lives on the earth. This is a wonderful achievement for our Methodism in Missouri and the South-west, and insures unity and greater efficiency in carrying forward the work. We praise the Lord. We can but regret the loss of Dr. Godbey from the tripod. The South-western was one of our most familiar friends and welcome visitors, and we had come to look to its able and common sense editorials and spicy paragraphs as part of our regular mental pabulum. We shall miss its cheerful and sunny face from our mountain home. May great grace abide with our brother, and great success attend his labors in his new field.

—Try and send us a new subscriber to the "Montana Methodist" this week. We mean YOU.

—The Bitter Root Valley has been blessed with a refreshing rain, while the mountains are enveloped with a mantle of white which extends down close to the foot hills. It reminds us that winter will soon be on hand.

—Brother Price has raised all his collections. Let others follow suit. Do you know that by taking the missionary collections early in the year all over the church, enough would be saved, which now goes to pay interest on the drafts issued, to support two missionaries abroad? Think of this and take your missionary collection at once.

MR. EDITOR:

Since the annual Conference I have done the most traveling for the length of time in all my life. The first thing after getting from Deer Lodge was to go to Murfreesboro, Tennessee, for Mrs. Couey and the children. I cannot now take time or space to give you details. I am thankful to report, however, that I had a very pleasant trip, and safe return, landing in Butte, Friday, September 12th, with my little family.

BUTTE QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

I found Brother J. E. Squires, our new transfer, with his family, consisting of his wife and two sweet little girls, with Sister Squires' sister, domiciled in the parsonage. Already had this wide-awake brother gotten the work under good headway, though he had only been in about ten days. He had arranged for an old-fashioned quarterly meeting. Commencing with the prayer-meetings on Thursday evening, announcements had been made as follows: Preaching Friday night, after a day of fasting; preaching Saturday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., love feast Sabbath 10 a. m.; preaching at 11 a.m., followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Sunday School at 12:30 p. m , Young People's Meeting at 7 p. m., and preaching at 7:30 p m.

All these services were held, and God was with us in all. One young man was received by letter at the morning service, Sabbath.

We found it most convenient to hold the business session of the Quarterly Conference Wednesday eve We had a full attendance of the official members. The salary of the preacher was fixed by the stewards, making a very liberal allowance for the pastor. Bro. Squires has introduced a fine system of finance, which, if followed, will work well.

For a few days Brother Squires suffered some inconvenience by the delay of his goods. All was right, however, by Thursday following the Quarterly Conference, and now the Butte preacher and family are happily and comfortably prepared for good work.

THE REVIVAL BLAST has already sounded and the campaign opened. A good way to introduce the year's work. We hope for very gracious results. The collection for Church Extension, according to the request of the Board, will be taken and forwarded to Dr. Morton the first quarter.

THE PRESIDING ELDER'S FAMILY.

We have rented a comfortable house, and have Mrs. Couey and the little ones in Deer Lodge, one of the best resident towns in the district.

Duties away from home forbid our "fixing" except by piece meal.

HELENA CHARGE.

I found Brother Price and family quite well, and hard at work. I could not reach here before Saturday evening, after supper—I did not miss my supper, however.

The services at 11 o'clock a. m., consisting of preaching and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, were well attended, and I believe enjoyed by us all. The Sabbath School was good. The officers and teachers all promptly present with interesting children. In the evening we had another (to the writer) very pleasant service. The Quarterly Conference was held Monday evening. We invited the membership to be present, as well as the official members of the Conference. The allowance for the preacher had already been made. We had a good business session. Bro. Price, and his wife as well, are in great favor. I consider the charge doing finely. The pastor and people are anxious for greater results A revival effort is contemplated in the near future. For this we pray. Bro. Price has taken all the collections ordered by the annual Conference. This is good, and we hope others will follow the example.

EAST HELENA.

Tuesday morning I ran down to East Helena to meet our new transfer from West Virginia. A card had gone ahead, and Bro. Bramble met me at the depot. I found he had been on the field two weeks, having preached both at East Helena and Alhambra. He had visited among the people, and seemed perfectly at home; expressed himself quite cheerful and hopeful. I noticed one thing, and a very important one—that Brother Bramble knew nearly every person we met while in the town. I think he has a fine instinct for "rustling." I went down to arrange to take care of the preacher, but he had the thing reversed and I became a guest. I got a splendid dinner, too. Brother Bramble's wife will join him this fall, when all is arranged for housekeeping. The works, which have been closed since spring, will open up quite soon, which means much to church work at this point. I was glad to meet Sister Burns and Sister Riggs, in company with our pastor. I write these lines at the parsonage in Helena Will take the train via. Northern Pacific to Deer Lodge to-morrow (Wednesday) to help Mrs. Couey make further arrangements for her and the children s comfort while I am away. In the absence of a preacher for Deer Lodge, as yet, I will give them a week night's sermon when there. I feel new and raw in the new order of things, but hope to become adjusted before a great while. I may not fill your old tracks, Mr Editor, but I will try to make some of my own.

[We have no doubt you will, and such as will abide, too. ED]

THIS AND THAT.

A. C. COUEY.

Thomas W. Alton was announced for Deer Lodge Station at the last annual Conference. He failed to come. Rev. S. B. Tabor, from the Missouri Conference, has been transferred and appointed to Deer Lodge. We expect him the first Sabbath in October. Although our people in this promising charge have regretted the necessity of an interim, we trust that Brother Tabor is the right man to do the important work here. Before this is in the reader's hands, he and his good wife are expected.

In the first issue for September, Mr. Editor, you give us the name of the "East Side" district, and make a little challenge of "holy rivalry" by the "West Side" districts. The young are very daring sometimes, but the mother understands the gambolling of the "kids." [We would like to know on which side of the mountains are the "kids."—ED.]

The Helena District is now manned, except at Great Falls, where we may get a preacher in time for some developments this year.

Our brethren are beginning their year's work with a courage and hope beyond anything we have known since our connection with the Montana Conference.

They are talking revival during our first quarter. The presiding elder is booked for several day's special effort with the Bozeman pastor, Brother Goulder.

Price is laying his plans for such work at Helena. Squires is already in the midst of labors abundant in a protracted meeting.

BOULDER.

Since writing a few days ago, I have seen to the Boulder and Elkhorn work. Bro. Johnson met me at the depot and conducted me to the home of Sister Wade, who recently came to Boulder for the purpose of school advantages. The hospitality was generous and greatly enjoyed. Announcement had been made for preaching Saturday evening, followed by the Quarterly Conference. We had a pleasant service and Quarterly Conference session, which looked into all the business, making ample provision for the pastor's support, and plans devised for enlarging the parsonage. Bro. Johnson rents a house in the meanwhile. Five members had been received by letter, and nine children baptized. Sabbath was one of the most enjoyable days I have spent in Montana. Love feast 10 to 11 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m., followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The largest number of communicants we have seen at this place. Sunday School was held at 3 p. m. Brother Currin and his corps of teachers are doing the most satisfactory Sunday School work I have found on the whole district. This work is the charm of the charge. I was perfectly delighted. I found intelligent enthusiasm. Oh, for a revival of Sunday School work in all the districts! Let us work for the dear children.

At 7:45 p. m. we had a full house of intelligent hearers. God was with us. It will please me to visit Boulder again. Brother Johnson ran up to Elkhorn after Sunday School to fill the regular appointment there. I spent Sunday night at Brother and Sister Wm. Butler's, after early breakfast called at the parsonage to see Sister Johnson. I was glad to find her cheerful and hopeful. Cheerful wives have much to do in a preacher's labors.

SUNDRIES.

D. B. PRICE.

Sunday, September 7th, 1890, will not be forgotten by our people in Helena soon. Dr. J. C. Morris preached in the Grand Street Methodist Church at 11 a. m. His text was Luke 15:10, and the sermon was grand, edifying and full of the sweets of the Gospel. This writer never heard a more unctious discourse. God was in our very midst. When the church honored Dr. Morris it made no mistake. His stay in Helena was too short. He came late Saturday evening and left Sunday afternoon. We said, when we say the action of the General Conference creating the office of a new secretary of Church Extension, that Dr. Morris would be the man. All Montana endorses heartily the action of the Conference in electing him to the office, and the prayers of the church in Helena will follow him in all his travels and labors.

The Helena charge prospers. All the collections ordered by the annual Conference have been raised, and an excess of fifteen dollars. In this particular Helena stands head. We are moving upon other lines, too. There have been four additions since our last report, and there are as many more to join soon. We are going to hold a series of meetings soon, and are devoutly praying for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon this entire city. We earnestly request every Christian who reads these lines to go to God in prayer daily in our behalf.

Our first Quarterly meeting was held the third Sabbath in last month. Rev. A. C. Couey, the presiding elder, was present. Although he is a new man in this relation, yet he is efficient. He fully understands the duties of his office and is wide-awake.

Reform: This question has been seriously agitated of late in Helena. The prime movers in the work were the ministers of Helena. The readers all know that gambling in this State is a licensed business, and is prosecuted as openly as that of selling dry goods or groceries. Our Sunday law is merely nominal. It forbids the opening and operating of gambling houses, hurdy-gurdy houses, theaters, lotteries, or any game of chance on the Lord's Day. But this law has never been enforced in Helena, and it is violated in every particular every Sunday. The clergy of the city secured the co-operation of a few staunch laymen, gained evidence, and went before the grand jury, which had been in session more or less for the past fifteen days. The grand jury investigated the complaint made and found bills of indictment against fifteen persons. We are awaiting the action of the court with patient solicitude. The sentiment of good people of Montana needs arousing on this matter. We have some alarming facts for the readers of this paper at another time.

The worthy editor of this paper was in the city last week. He had an eye to business and found some items for the paper. He was hopeful and full of plans for the success of the "Methodist." Come again. "The latch string to our door always hangs on the outside."

Helena, October 1st, 1890.

KINDNESS.

When Madame Sontag began her musical career she was hissed off the stage at Vienna by the friends of her rival, Amelia Steininger, who had already begun to decline through her dissipation. Years passed on, and one day Madame Sontag, in her glory, was riding through the streets of Berlin, when she saw a little child leading a blind woman, and she said, "Come here, my little child, come here. Who is that you are leading by the hand?" And the little girl replied, "That's my mother; that's Amelia Steininger. She used to be a great singer, but she lost her voice, and she cried so much about it that she lost her eyesight." "Give my love to her," said Madame Sontag, "and tell her an old acquaintance will call on her this afternoon." The next week in Berlin a vast assemblage gathered at a benefit for that poor blind woman, and it was said that Madame Sontag sang that night as she had never sang before. And she took a skilled occulist, who in vain tried to give eyesight to the poor blind woman. Until the day of Amelia Steininger's death, Madame Sontag took care of her, and her daughter after her. That was what the queen of song did for her enemy. But, oh, hear a more thrilling story still. Blind immortal, poor and lost, thou who, when the world and Christ were rivals for thy heart, didst hiss thy Lord away—Christ comes now to give thee sight, to give thee a home, to give thee a heaven. With more than a Sontag's generosity he comes now to meet your need. With more than a Sontag's music he comes to plead for thy deliverance.

—I trust we will not wait for the week of prayer before we begin aggressive work in spiritual things. "The field is white to the harvest." This should be the best year we have ever known because it is our latest year. Thrust in the sickle now. Do some gleaning early. Don't wait for the revival harvester to start.

DANGEROUS TRIFLING.

One day when I was at Glendale, Va., a couple of Negro boys drove up with a mule and cart, and began to dump out at the blacksmith-shop a lot of stuff picked up on the battle-field of Malvern Hill, writes a Detroit Free Press correspondent. There were bullets, buckles, stirrups, belt-plates, musket-barrels, rusty swords and bayonets, and in the lot was a loaded shell, which had been fired from a heavy field-piece. The blacksmith was an old darkey and the boys were his sons. When he saw the shell he said:

"You git out wid dat yere foolishness! Didn't I dun tole you not to bring any mo' of 'em yere?"

One of the boys threw the shell aside, and then the old man went with me down the road to point out the public hitching-post. We were gone about half an hour, and were within one hundred feet of the shop when there was a loud explosion. A great hole was blown out of one side, and a part of the roof was bulged up' and the two boys came tumbling out through the smoke and ran against us. The old man grabbed one by the arm and whirled him around and demanded:

"Didn't I dun tole ye to let dat foolishness alone?"

"She's 'sploded!" gasped the boy.

"In co'se she's 'sploded, an' now I'ze gwine to 'splode you!"

And he drew him to a shade tree, broke off a limb, and tanned his jacket till the boy yelled murder. Then he entered the shop and found it almost a wreck. The boys had placed the shell on an anvil, and struck it with a sledge, and the anvil had been blown ten feet away. Miraculous as it may seem, neither boy was injured in the slightest.

"Sich triflin' can't be abeared," growled the old man, as he hunted around for his scattered tools. "Didn't I dun tole 'em to let dat nonsense be? Didn't I know dat dem Yankees didn't go an' fill their shells wid co'nmeal and breeches-buttons? Of co'se she 'splode. It was her bizness to 'splode. Now you sot down till I find Moses an' wollop him, an' den I'll tell you what part of dat fight I seed wid my own eyes."

ANOTHER STORY.

We read the above, which was copied into the Nashville CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for the entertainment of some young friends who live just across the way. At the conclusion the father of the children spoke up as follows: That was a wonderfully hard-fought battle. I had a cousin who was in the Union army who was wounded at Malvern Hill. His name was Aldridge. I have his picture here in my album now. He used to tell us of an interesting incident that occurred near the close of the battle. He and his comrade had been foraging, and had succeeded in getting a haver-sack full of nice fresh bread at a farm house, which was a great luxury to the boys, after living on "hard tack" so long. They were exultant over their good fortune and congratulated each other over the feast that awaited them when the day's battle was over. Just about this time a grape shot came along, struck the haver-sack, carrying contents and all to regions unknown, and knocking the comrade out of the ranks, heels over head, and leaving him in a sad plight. As soon as he came to himself, unmindful of his personal injuries and of his peril, thinking only of the demands of a long neglected stomach, with tears in his eyes, and with a pitiful expression, he cried out, "Lou, Lou, our bread's gone, our bread's gone, what will we do for supper?" As it turned out "Lou" wasn't in a plight to have enjoyed the supper very much. While crossing a corduroy bridge, a cannon-ball from a Confederate battery struck the cannon that he was guarding right in the muzzle, knocking it end over end, when my cousin was struck by a piece of the bridge timber, knocked into the stream, from which he was taken and placed on the bank, where he laid all night, and afterward was carried to Philadelphia and placed in a hospital for treatment.

STILL ANOTHER.

This same cousin, before enlisting in the army, had been a sailor, and on a certain occasion had given ten dollars to an unfortunate sailor in New York, who had just come from a voyage, was broke, and homesick, and trying to get back to his home in Philadelphia. Years passed by. The event was about forgotten by the giver of the ten dollars, but not by the receiver. On looking over the list of the wounded, who were brought to the hospital in Philadelphia from the battle of Malvern Hill, the ex-sailor, who resided there, saw the name of the man who had helped him at New York, in a time of need, hastened to the hospital, accompanied by his wife and mother, all of whom now visited the wounded man daily, extending to him the fullest sympathy and providing him with every luxury and comfort possible until he was restored.

We thought the above incidents would be interesting to our young folks. The first illustrates the truth of the old saying that "boys will be boys," the world over, regardless of race, color or previous condition. The second reminds us that "The best laid schemes of mice and men Gang a' agley."

The last one teaches us never to lose an opportunity of lending a helping hand to one really in need. The Master says, "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me."

Life Among the Indians.

BY L. B. STATELER.

The location of the Delaware mission was made at a point adjacent to a fountain of water and where the soil was good, with a view to making the school as nearly self-sustaining as possible. But it was not as central to the main community as would be desirable for a place of worship.

In the course of time the missionary set about the work of building a house for public worship in a more central locality. After consulting with the leading Christian men, work was commenced.

We went into the woods, felled trees, "scored" and hewed them, hauled them to the place and with our own hands built a comfortable house. It was all accomplished with our own means and labor, except a few dollars contributed by friends outside, with which to purchase windows and other needful commodities, such as lumber for the floor, etc. It was covered with clap-boards, which were made—riven out—on the ground

After getting a house of worship in a central place, it was an ardent wish to hold a campmeeting. By a further effort a large shed was constructed adjacent to the house, where campmeetings were held for many years. Those campmeetings resulted in great good to the Indians, who took a wonderful interest in them and would attend from far and near. Many of the wild Indians came to look on, out of curiosity, and were powerfully converted.

At our first school there were about twenty children. The duties of the missionary and his wife were quite varied. Many of the children would come to us in their native costume, and with the habits common to nomadic tribes of people. They had to be taught habits of cleanliness in person and in dress, how to work; the girls had to be taught to cook, wash, cut and make their clothing; the boys to plow and work with tools, and all of them how to read and write. It required no little tact and quite a goo deal of patience sometimes to deal successfully with such a motley group of urchins.

The Delaware tribe numbered about fourteen hundred. They received about $10,000 or $12,000 annuities. A wagon-load of silver coin—they cared for no other kind of money—was brought to the place. They would come and camp together for days to get their annuities. Every person's name was called, man, woman and child, for a complete census was carefully kept, and each one would touch the pen to make his or her mark to show that the money was received. These were gala days, great occasions with the Indians. The money was paid in payment for lands that they had sold to the government before coming to this country.

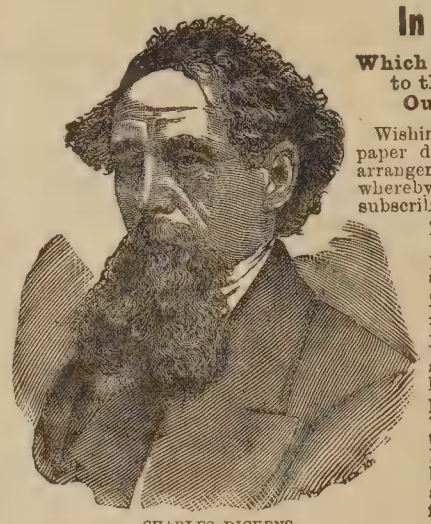
GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

Which we Offer with a Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than Our Regular Subscription Price.



CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

The Great Offer to Subscribers to the "Methodist."

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS' WORKS, in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THE MONTANA METHODIST for ONE YEAR, upon receipt of $1.60, which is only 60 cents more than the regular subscription price of this paper. Our readers, therefore, practically get a set of Dickens' works in twelve volumes for only 60 cents. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist for only $1.60. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of 6 yearly subscribers. Address:

D. B. PRICE, BUSINESS MANAGER,
HELENA, MONTANA.

I should have stated at the outset of this narrative that at the Conference of 1831 it was decided to establish missions among the Indians west of the state of Missouri. Two preachers, Thomas and William Johnson, were sent to what was called Kansas Mission.

At the ensuing Conference, the Shawnee mission and the Delaware mission were placed on the list, and Thomas Johnson was made Superintendent of the missions, besides having direct charge of Shawnee mission Edward Peery was appointed to the Delaware mission and William Johnson to the Kansas, or Kaw, mission (out near Council Grove.)

At the next Conference, which was held at Mountain Springs, Arkansas, in September 1833, Bishop Soule presiding, two additional stations were established, Peoria mission, to which N. M.Talbot was sent, and Kickapoos mission, to which Jerome C. Berryman was appointed, making the whole number of our mission stations five in number.

These brethren continued in their several charges until 1837, when Edward Peery located and I was sent in his place to the Delawares.

In 1838 the Conference was held at Boonville. Bishop Soule presided again. I was returned to Delaware mission. Thomas Johnson was continued on the District. The other preachers were also returned.

In the winter of 1838 the missionaries were called together to consult about the erection of one great central school for all the Indian children in the district. Arrangements were perfected and the work was commenced in the spring of 1839. The first building erected was a two-story brick structure, 40x20 feet, with an ell 100 feet long. The lower part was for a dining room, kitchen, etc; the upper part was for dormitories, and was used for school purposes for awhile. The next building was for schoolroom and chapel, with dormitories and teacher's rooms overhead. It was 40x100 feet, and two story high.

The children were taught in the chapel. One-half of it was for the boys, one-half for the girls—one end for each, as they were about equally divided. As soon as practicable a female department,about one hundred feet long, was erected. It was two stories high and contained a large dining room and kitchen, with dormitories and other rooms overhead. The buildings were all near together. though the male and female departments were entirely separate.

It being a manual labor school,there was attached a large farm of three hundred acres, a mill was erected and milch cows were provided.

The boys were taught to work on the farm and the girls assisted in the household work, sewing, knitting, cooking, washing, ironing, etc., as well as attending to their regular studies.

The school was located one mile west of the Missouri line and two miles south-west from Westport, Mo. There was an arrangement made with the government and the different tribes represented, whereby the school funds belonging to each tribe should be concentrated and put into this school. The Board of Missions furnished the balance of the money for the building, the probable cost of which, with all attachments, was $50,000. and also appropriated about $10,000 annually, to support the school, to which was added the income of $8,000 or $9,000, annually, from the Indian school fund. The larger part of this fund came from the Delaware nation.

BY GRACE ARE YE SAVED.

No truth is more precious to the Christian than this, and none more distinctly recognized in his growing experience. However plain it may be when the bands of sin are first broken and the aspirations of the soul are first turned toward God, every advance in the divine life increases its plainness and strengthens its certainty.

The origin of salvation was in Grace. in the free and eternal love and favor of God. Redemption was not an after-thought, as the sinful fall of man was not an unforseen and unprovided-for accident. If there are marks of unity and design in the universe of matter, the Christian sees even stronger evidences of these in the moral universe. In fact, the latter includes the former, and gives oneness of significance and aim to all God's works. There is a "plan" of salvation, which dates from eternity. It is that which furnishes the motive and pattern of creation. In the divine purpose, Christ was slain as the Lamb of sacrificial atonement from the foundation of the world. And this plan sprang from sovereign grace. The reason for it was in the will of God He so loved the world, even then, that he gave his only begotten Son for its recovery from the ruin which he saw to be certain. This is the everlasting and adamantine foundation of the Gospel. Our hopes are built upon the sovereign will of God, which has no reason but itself for its decrees and acts, and which needs no resources but its own omnipotent goodness. It is impossible for God to lie, and it is impossible that his grace should fail. He "hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."

The execution of this plan was of Grace. The incarnation and atonement of Christ were as free and loving as was the original thought of redemption. There was no compulsion anywhere except the self-compulsion of divine love. The gracious purpose was graciously fulfilled. All the explanation the Apostle could give, or needed to give, was, "Christ loved me and gave himself for me." Christ again and again shows the greatness of his longing to complete the sacrificial work whereby those who believe in him shall be saved. The penitent believer, coming first to consciousness of his sin, and seeing first the saving mercy proclaimed in the Gospel, recognizes in it all, as planned and perfected, a free and sovereign Grace.

The Bible.

After a person has read the most thrilling books of fiction; the biographies of great and noble men; the writings of the most profound Divines; the most touching verse of inspired Bards; or heard the grandest strains of melody; the most eloquent flight of oratory; aye, even after his own mind has touched the realm of the ideal by imagination, let him take that grand, sublime Compendium of Universal Knowledge, whose Author reigns upon the eternal throne, let him take this book and when he has solved its problems, analyzed its sentences, perused its biographies, delved to the profundity of its writings, sat entranced by its poetry, caught the echoes of its melody, heard and felt the soul-inspiring eloquence of its oratory, then shall he exclaim: Eureka! Eureka! All truth, all wisdom, all true education take their source from this. (Contributed.)

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 2. OCTOBER, 30th, 1890. No. 29.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Stanley, the African explorer, has been advised by his physicians, on account of ill health, to desist from lecturing this fall.

—It is reported that there are sixteen of our United States senators, whose combined wealth amounts to $92,000,000. The money power is already a mighty power in our country.

—A centenarian, commonly known as "Uncle Dave"—one of Andrew Jackson's soldiers—recently died near Sheffield, Alabama. His wife died in 1842, and it is said that he has prayed at her grave every day since that time until his death. Such devotion is rare in these days.

—The death of Canon Liddon removes one of the ablest and most distinguished divines from the English church. While he was decidedly High-Church in his views, yet he was considered strong in the defense of the great essential principles of the Christian religion. He was the author of the celebrated "Bampton Lectures" and other able productions.

—Rev. R. N. Sledd, D. D., the fraternal delegate of the M. E. church, South, to the Canadian Methodist church, made a fine impression upon the General Conference of that church at its recent session.

—The Montana Presbytery held its fall session recently at Deer Lodge. There was a general attendance and a good time. The brethren report that the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian church is considerably in debt, which operates somewhat as a hindrance to aggressive work in this field just now.

—Of the 6,894 churches among the Presbyterians, 1,170 are without pastors, and of their 6,128 ordained ministers, 1,129 are without churches. This great church is wrestling earnestly with the serious problem of supplying these idle ministers with fields of labor and these vacant churches with pastors. The Methodists, by their itenerant system, have solved the problem long ago. There is not an unemployed pastor in all Methodism, nor an unoccupied church so far as there is a pastor to supply it.

—The editor made another trip to Wallace, Idaho, and preached there on Sunday the 12th inst. The house was full at night, and the service the most interesting of any that we have held there. We succeeded in purchasing a good site in the principal street near the center of the town, on which a neat church building will be are elated at the idea of having a Methodist church there.

—We deeply regret the departure from Wallace of Dr. Plummer and wife and sister-in-law, Miss Colburn. Besides being an excellent physician, the Doctor is greatly interested in our church work and has promised liberal assistance toward the building. His wife is a daughter of Rev. N. W. Colburn, of the Pittsburgh Conference. She was formerly a teacher in Clarke University, Atlanta, where she became well acquainted with, and an ardent admirer of Dr., now Bishop, Haygood. We shall not soon forget their words of cheer nor their generous hospitality while in Wallace. May success attend them.

—We are also not a little disappointed and pained at the removal of Brother O. H. Olver and wife and family from Wallace. They go to Fairfax, Iowa. They are devout Christian people, deeply in earnest in building up the church in Wallace, and we were greatly refreshed in body and spirit as we ate at their table and worshipped with them in their mountain home.

— During our recent visit to Wallace, by invitation, we shared the hospitality of the Penny Hotel, which has a good share of the patronage of the town. The large new building will soon be completed when our popular host will open out on a much larger scale than is possible in a tent which he has occupied ever since the fire. The new hotel will be known as the Idaho House, where our friends will do well to put up when they visit the enterprising young city, the metropolis of the Coeur d' Alenes.

— While in the Coeur d' Alenes, we called at the home of Hon. J. H. Claggett, who represented Montana in Congress, in the years 1870—71, and who is generally talked of as one of the probable Republican Senators from the new state of Idaho. He was commonly known at one time as the "silver tongued orator of Montana." We found him to be an intelligent, affable and interesting gentleman, though not unlike many others, a little at fault in regard to some of the causes, historical data, etc., relating to the division of the great Methodist church, and the differences that exist between them at erected in the early spring. The season is too far advanced, besides, we found that the citizens of the place were suffering too much from the recent fire to be pressed for help in building this fall. Many of them the present time. He is eloquent in describing the resources of the State of Idaho, and particularly the vast possibilities of the Coeur d' Alenes and the Palouse country, just west of the mountains, the former a mining, the latter an agricultural region. He has an elegant home at Osborne, which is four miles below Wallace, and which he thinks, in time, will become the chief city of all this region. He regards the climate superior to that of Montana, and far better than that of Western Washington and Oregon.

—Harry, the little baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ellers, departed this life at Wallace, Idaho, Sept. 11th 1890. Age, 5 months and 23 days. His stay on earth was short. His work was early done. The Master has said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

—We found Mr. J. M. Harris, the real estate agent of Wallace, very obliging in his efforts to assist us in selecting and purchasing a lot for a church at Wallace. We were not surprised at this, however, when we found that he was raised in a Methodist home near Manasses in old Virginia.

—We greatly desired to visit the Exposition at Spokane Falls, that we might meet more of the people and get a better idea of the productions of the country lying west of Montana. But we had only an hour to stop off on our return from Wallace and that—from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m.—was spent at the home of Brother E. P. Dyer. The exposition is well attended and is considered a success. No preacher has been sent, as yet, to occupy our church there; the pulpit, in the meantime, is supplied by visiting brethren. The Sunday-school goes forward under the leadership of Brother Crider. Brother Swift is improving in health. District work seems to agree with him, at which we rejoice, for he is a first-class man. Brother St. Clair is holding a protracted meeting, and writes that his country appointments are largely attended, and the prospect is good. The effect of the Conference lingers with our people at Spokane Falls as precious ointment poured forth.

— Brethren, this fall and during the early part of the winter while money is more plentiful than it is likely to be in mid-summer, is the best time to take up the general collections. Let us make a clean sweep and clear the decks ready for more special evangelical work the balance of the year. It will be better for preachers, stewards, members, saints, sinners, missionaries at home and abroad, church builders—everybody.

PRAYER FOR LABORERS.

An article in the October number of the Missionary Review on "The Prayer for Laborers" contains these timely words:

"There is a tendency in all intellectual culture, as in the gathering of earthly riches, to make us practically Godless. Men become purse-proud by accumulating wealth, and brain-proud by accumulating learning. If God does not hear prayer and give learning and culture a divine direction, a heavenly anointing, our colleges will soon raise up a generation of sceptics. Our appeals and arguments will not give the church missionaries; unless the demonstration of the Spirit is added to the demonstration of logic, no conviction will result that leads to consecration —that high logic of life.

Modern missions had their birth in prayer; all their progress is due to prayer. A few souls that have close access to the Mercy Seat, like Moses, Samuel, Elijah, Daniel, have kept up the apostolic succession of prayer. And because of this, and of this alone, doors have been opened, workmen thrust forth into the open fields and money has been provided.

Better twice as much devout preparation as work, than a hurried and brief communion with God, than unprepared and hasty dash and rush into activity. Let us linger before God until we get power and then life becomes grand. It shines with the glory of His face, and it moves with the might of His omnipotence."

What is true in the above with reference to missionaries to foreign fields is equally true as applied to laborers in the home field. Prayer is the pulsation of the Church's great heart in unity with that greater Heart from which it came, out of which it was born amid the agony and death-throes of Gethsemane and Calvary. It is the movement of the life forces within, the travail and pain without which there is no reproduction, no potent and saving energy, no growth, no extension into the regions beyond. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth more laborers into the harvest."

From Butte.

DEAR MONTANA METHODIST:—

You have come regularly to me since I transferred, and I do not know whether former letters written have appeared or not; but I write again in the midst of much business.

Our bustling city is not less busy than at the best period of its history perhaps, and that means wonderful stir and bustle and energy. Good residences are building rapidly and business keeps apace. We found a small band of loyal Methodists of our persuasion, who received the preacher heartily and provided for him well, and now are ready for any work that seems to come next.

We are drilling and arming our people and threatening an onward move—"charging" we sometimes call it.

The moral and religious forces of the city are rallying under the leadership of Bro. "Ben Hogan," and a fellow worker, Bro. Lavery, of Chicago, who for a week have been holding "Gospel Temperance" meetings in the Opera House nightly, and prayer meetings in the churches in the afternoons. Some interest is manifest, and we pray for "greater things than these." We contemplate continuing the meetings at our church when the Union services close, and thus dress and polish such stones as the present drilling and blasting process may throw out.

We hope to continue the fight for the next month or two, if we are encouraged, not neglecting any part of the regular work of the pastor. We "ask largely that our joy may be full." Will all my brethren join us in this?

Our dear Bro. Tabor, who comes to us from Missouri Conference, is to pass on to his work at Deer Lodge today. I tried to "lodge" him here awhile, but Bishop Hendrix told him to go via "Silver Bow," and he preferred to mind the Bishop.

Let us "deal gently with the young man," and make him forget that he has come to a strange field at all. I got kindly greetings from my brethren on the field, which helps me to feel at home.

My P. E. gives me fresh news from them as he passes through the "hub" to his work roundabout. He comes here to start out—takes the benefit of the altitude, as a "Sliden Elder" ought to do.

I am trying to do the best work of my life this year,—organizing the forces, young and middle aged and older, to secure and conserve all the good possible. Yours for Victory,

Oct. 9th. J. E. SQUIRES.

—o—

From Willow Creek.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—

You ask through the "Montana Methodist" for reports. I cannot tell much, but I am hopeful. Congregations as a rule good, and some interest manifested. I purpose holding protracted services at several points at an early date. Our parsonage is unoccupied. What a pity! Brother Stateler preached a sound and sensible sermon for me at Willow Creek last Sunday. He grows old gracefully. H. B. COCKRILL.

Notes From Bozeman.

Rev. W. T. Goulder began a protracted meeting the last Sunday in September, which still continues at this writing. The meeting has been a good one from the start, the purpose and prayer of the pastor being to have a genuine revival. He evidently strives to lay a sure foundation on which to build, working from bed-rock up. The necessity of the new birth, and conscious pardon are duly stressed.

Bro. A. C. Couey, our presiding elder, came on Thursday, Oct. 2nd, and remained until the Wednesday following, and did valuable service in the meeting, preaching, praying and visiting, and looking after the interests of the pastor. What our P. E. lacks in size he makes up in activity. He has the interests of his preachers at heart.

Since Bro. Goulder's arrival here the church has been painted inside and has been generally renovated and a lambrequin adorned with beautiful flowers, painted by the artistic hand of Miss Cora King, now covers the altar table, giving the interior a bright and cheerful appearance.

The presence of the ex-pastor, Bro. B. W. H. Warren, adds much to the interest of the meeting. This writer has also been present a part of the time assisting the pastor as he could. After the second Sunday in October Bro. D. B. Price is expected. The meeting will continue indefinitely. We pray for glorious results, though we have a strong enemy to oppose us. From the beginning of the meeting it has been snowing and raining nearly every day, making the roads and sidewalks disagreeably muddy. The nights also have been dark, our town not being lighted at present. These things have hindered the attendance no little, yet for the most part our congregations have been good.

On the whole we can but say that the Bozeman charge is in a hopeful condition. The faithfulness of Brother B. E. H. Warren makes it all the easier for the present pastor, Brother Goulder. The location of our church is good. Our presence here seems really to be needed and the pastor is encouraged to go forward.

There is one feature about Brother Goulder's services which adds much interest to them. Bro. G. himself a fine singer, is gradually drawing around him a number of good singers, and we doubt not but what our singing here equals if it does not surpass that of any of the churches in the city. H. B. COCKRILL.

EAST COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

Walla Walla.

EDITOR METHODIST:—

Perhaps a word about this charge will interest the readers of the "Methodist." The town has about 7,000 inhabitants, and is well and beautifully located in one of the richest grain and fruit sections in the West; but like many others, is cursed with rum shops.

Brother Haggard did a grand work here last year. He laid a solid foundation, upon which we hope, by the help of the Holy Spirit, to build a strong structure, strong, not in numbers perhaps, but strong in the Spirit and love of God, for it is "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." I am trying to get the work thoroughly organized, so we can work by some system. Brother Haggard did not have time to attend to these minor details, as he built a parsonage and a new church. We have a few who are true and tried, these have entered into hearty co-operation with me, and I think we have a very fair prospect for the year, though it will take several years to get the work thoroughly organized. Our congregations are small, yet encouraging. I hope to be able to hold a protracted meeting soon, but I am praying for a revival in the church first, then we can reach sinners. I desire a deeper work of grace in my own heart, and a greater love for souls. I was indeed glad to welcome the "Methodist" to my home, it is like reading a letter "from home," and I am almost constrained to call it "Our" paper. [We have no objection to that.—ED.] May the blessing of God rest upon the labors of the brethren of the Montana Conference. Let us have for our watch-word, "Jesus saves," and "press forward."

Oct. 6th. P. M. BELL.

[We hope that our brother will write often, and also all the other brethren of the East Columbia Conference. We didn't invite them through mere formality. We mean it, and hope they will let us hear from them.—ED.]

Moscow, Idaho.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—

The little "Methodist" came all O. K., and I think it is a spicy little "Methodist." My work is looking up. Well, I enclose one dollar for a new subscriber whose name and address accompanies this. I think I can get several subscribers on my work. Shall not forget to mention it as I go along.

W. S. HORNBUCKLE.

—o—

From Slater, Mo.

BROTHER STANLEY:—

I received the papers you sent, and with pleasure will try to get some subscribers. I am always glad to hear of the work progressing so nicely in Montana. Hope the paper will have a large circulation. I believe it will be a success. Would like so much to have the photograph of your Conference, and will try to get it. Enclosed find one dollar for the renewal of my paper. It came all right until March, and I have not received a number since. Don't know where the trouble is. We want to take the paper all the time, if we can get it. We are so glad that Brother Squires has gone to Montana, for he is a good workman.

MATTIE E. KEITH.

If the "Methodist" had more friends like the writer of the above it would be bound to succeed, and we believe it will, anyhow. Mistakes will occur sometimes. If you do not get your paper regularly, let us know. We surely intend for everybody to have it that wants it. We wish thousand persons would write for it right away. We shall not stop anybody's paper until ordered to do so, and then shall hesitate about it unless good reasons are given.

Address, "Montana Methodist,"

Corvallis, Montana.

—o—

FROM WARSAW, KENTUCKY.

DEAR MONTANA METHODIST:—

When I left your home I promised to write you an occasional letter, and whether you care for it or not I know you expect it. I think, however, that if your new editor keeps up the good licks with which he starts out, your readers will not care much whether your correspondents write or not. Still they should keep their promises even if now and then they only help out the waste basket.

I take it for granted you want to hear something about myself and my wanderings since I left you. Bro. Couey has probably told you all that was of interest concerning our trip together to Chicago. I only wish to add that he is a first-class traveling companion, and I recall our three-days journey together with unalloyed pleasure.

I reached Tallmadge, Ohio, in due time, and found Mrs. Britt in good spirits and much improved in health. She was able to attend church every Sunday and to ride out more or less every day. We acknowledge a gracious providence in God's dealing with us and are sincerely grateful. We spent several weeks visiting among relatives and friends, which I enjoyed very much. It was a true vacation to me, for, though I was attending meetings frequently and preaching nearly every Sunday, I had no pastoral charge on my hands, making me feel that I ought to be at home. I was among our Northern Methodist brethren, and I wish here and now to testify that when they know there is no danger of your "crowding" them they can be as hospitable and as fraternal to a Southern Methodist as anyone could desire.

I attended a number of their public and social meetings and, in one place, a quarterly Conference, and was pleased with their spirit and the plans of their work in nearly everything. Their congregational tendency in choosing their preachers, however, and the evil effects of it, are quite noticeable. It is a growing evil and one cannot see how it can be kept from growing when once it is started. It looks as if Episcopal superintendency with them would soon be only in name.

Our Kentucky Conference was held in Lexington—fine old classic, aristocratic Lexington, the queen and the pride of the blue-grass country. I would like to write a whole letter or several of them about Lexington, but not about the blue-grass. This product was a great disappointment to me. The samples that fell under my observation was of the sickliest variety that I ever saw in any State. I certainly saw it under unfavorable circumstances. But the whole country—meadows, pastures, fields and commons—was over-run with weeds, a striking contrast with the thrift noticeable in the north and west.

But Lexington was not a disappointment. It seems to possess much enterprise and is growing rather rapidly for a city here in the east. It is well supplied with churches—well built churches of all the leading denominations. The Christians, Disciples, Campbellites, or Reformers (they seem to prefer the latter name here), are the strongest. They have two fine colleges and much valuable property. Our church has hardly done her duty in Lexington. We have but one congregation. It is large and strong, and with proper enterprise would have divided itself into two or three before now.

Of the session of the Conference I can only say a word. I enjoyed it much. The cordiality of the preachers made me feel at home. Their spirituality and evident devotion assured me that the work of the Lord prospered in their hands. Many of them have hard fields—harder than any in Montana. Don't come this way, brethren, if you are looking for a sinecure.

The preaching during the Conference was of a high order all the way through. Dr. Messick's centenary address on Monday was clear, strong and eloquent beyond what you would be apt to hear in a long time. But his clearness could not save him from being misunderstood. A Presbyterian lady stopping at the same place I did, insisted that the Dr. was sadly deficient in a knowledge of history because he said the Methodist church was the first in the United States.

I must close at once, else I will be charged with gossiping.

I am at Warsaw, the place where I began my Itinerant ministry. Am well pleased with the appointment and with the outlook on the charge, but must defer till another time to tell you more of it. Fraternally,

W. M. BRITT.

SELF.

There is no fact that so clearly and unmistakably reveals the nearness of the individual soul to God, as the eclipse of the ego. John, the beloved disciple, most happily illustrates this truth. In writing his Gospel, when describing scenes in which he had most active and honorable part, he cannot mention his own name, much less parade his personality. There is nothing more significant and beautiful in the New Testament than the eclipse of the ego by the tested servants of the Lord Jesus Christ. The real Christ-man cannot be an egotist. Such an exhibition is impossible in the soul where Christ lives and reigns. He, therefore, who would press himself into prominence in the church, is wholly unlike those who have lived nearest their divine Lord. So says Zion's Herald.

Come, Just as You Are.

The Gospel is an invitation. The table is spread with the rarest bounties; the fountain of life and healing is open; all things are ready. The sinner has nothing to do in making the provision; Christ has provided and met the bill. All He asks of the sinner is acceptance; the surrender of himself and the taking of what Christ has to bestow. To you, fellow-sinner, is this offer made—the offer of free and full salvation. The final utterance of the New Testament is the proffer of this invitation, in which Christ and His people join, "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." No one need despair; no one need hesitate. You may be poor, halt, blind; your services may be of the poorest; no matter. You will never succeed on merit; but you may come freely, without money or price. Come just as you are to One who is mighty and able to save—to one inviting you to come. If you neglect such an offer, what excuse can you bear to the throne of judgment? What plea can you make?—Christian Guardian.

GOD elects men not to privilege, but to duty. Their privilege is incidental to their performance of duty. No man was ever foreordained to greatness who could not have destroyed his prospects. —A. E. Dunning.

Editorial Notes.

—The letter from Brother Britt will be read with much interest. There are hundreds in Montana, who will rejoice with him and his wife in her recovery. It seems like a miracle.

—We met with Brother J. M. Eastland on the cars the other day coming from Flathead Valley, where he now resides. He is enthusiastic over the prospects for that part of the country, and reports that crops were good the past season and were raised without irrigation. The prospect of the Great Northern passing through there is making times lively. He says that Brother Lee is in favor with the people, is working in great earnestness, and with good hope of success. Brother Eastland is the superintendent of the Sunday-school that was organized by Bro. Cockrill at Fairview last Summer. The school has been very successful.

—The Sunday-school Convention for Missoula County will be held at Victor, in Bitter Root Valley, commencing Oct. 30th. A good time is expected.

—It is possible that some communications intended for this issue of the paper will not get in, as the editor had to leave the office on the 16th inst.—just one day in advance of the set time for "closing the forms." But he had to go in order to make connection with stage and steamer for the Flathead country.

—We are appalled more and more as we come to know the wickedness—Sabbath desecration, gambling, drinking, revelling, robbing, stealing, swearing, all sorts, that is practised among the people. We could fill several papers with what has come largely under our own observation during the past few weeks. We appreciate the sentiments that stirred the heart of Nehemiah, and his surroundings, when looking over the desolation of his chief city said, "Ye see the distress we are in, how that Jerusalem lyeth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire." Surely there is enough to cause every true Christian "to sigh and cry" unto God for help. "Let us rise up and build, and let us hasten, for the work is great and large."

—We brought back about twenty new names for the subscription list of the "Montana Methodist." We hope the preachers and all our friends will make a special effort to extend the circulation of the paper. There is no telling what can be accomplished by an effort mixed with a reasonable amount of faith and courage.

—We are pleased to note that Rev. J. J. Tigert, of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. G. C. Rankin, of Holston Conference, has been transferred to Missouri. We were favorably impressed with both of these brethren, whom we met at St. Louis last May, and hope to see them still further toward the land of the setting sun.

—Our friend, Mr. William Kennedy, the popular hotel-keeper, proprietor of the Rodgers House, Missoula, is erecting an immense brick hotel building, with stone basement, 80 by 150 feet, three stories, which will contain more than 80 rooms and accommodate 150 or 200 guests at once. Mr. Kennedy is one of the old timers, a true gentleman, a popular landlord and deserves the success that he has achieved. Don't forget to stop at the Rodgers House when you visit Missoula.

—A late issue of the "Northwestern Christian Advocate" contains a copy of the famous poem, "The Church and the World," written by Mrs. Matilda Edwards, of Grapehill, Va. It has gone the rounds of the religious press time and again during the last fifteen years or more. The authoress was a member of the M. E. church, South, and has been dead for many years She was a sister of that elect lady, Mrs. Thompson Kemper, now of Butte City, Montana. The writer has in his possession the manuscript copy of a poem, "My Mother," presented to him by the gifted poetess. We have been looking for years for a volume of her posthumous poems to be published.

—If the contents of this issue of the "Methodist" should appear to be of a "rambling" character, just remember that the paper was made up while the editor was traveling on the cars, waiting at the depot and in the bar-room of the hotel—just anywhere that he could catch an opportunity to write a few sentences. We write this closing paragraph at the hotel at Ravalli, in the Indian reservation, forty miles north of Missoula. It is past the midnight hour, and we wait to take the stage which is to convey us northward to Flathead Lake, thirty-five miles distant.

THE WOMAN QUESTION.

The M. E. Church (North) is being agitated from center to circumference just now upon the question as to whether women shall be admitted into the General Conference or not. The "New York Christian Advocate", edited by Dr. Buckley, is making a vigorous fight against it, though the odds seem to be in favor of the movement. Several Conferences have voted in favor of it. It is shocking to learn of the methods used by some of our sisters to carry their point. A number of names of distinguished women were forged and signed to a certain petition. But this is not all.

A leading paper of that church contained the following: "The Confession and the Discipline and Paul must all step aside before this tide of popular feeling. Paul may have made a mistake. He had no wife, and never listened to a woman's sermon, was closely allied to heathen customs, and sometimes spake on his own authority. However this may be, if living, he would certainly revise the record for this age."

This sounds very much like jest, but it is the logic of the movement in question.

Dr. Buckley, says an exchange, heard a woman in San Francisco, with "loud voice and ponderous gesticulations," use this language: "We shall never get our rights so long as that old book, the Bible, is the rule in this land. Talk about freedom! There is more slavery here than there was on the plantations of the South—slavery to an old book:"—then hissing through her teeth—"old Paul! Millions of people believe in him and grovel in the dust at his feet, and at the feet of the men that believe in him. We've got to break the shackles of the mind and set people free from that old book—the Bible."

Christian people, of course, are shocked at such shameful expressions, yet such is the legitimate result of the effort to belittle St. Paul, weaken the force of Scripture teaching, and the use of other means that are being used to secure the triumph of this movement.

If this measure carries in the church North, and if there were no other differences between the two great bodies of Methodism, it alone were enough to forbid the hope of organic union for the sentiment of great masses of the M. E. church, South, is against anything of the kind at the present time. The women of our church have abundant facilities for the exercise of the gifts with which nature and grace have endowed them, are doing a grand work and they are contented and happy in it. Let us be aggressive, but aggressive along the lines that are clearly indicated by "the book of the law," upon which we are to "meditate day and night," and from which we are not to turn aside neither to the right hand nor to the left. So shall we "have good success."

DOUBTING THOMAS.

In the course of a very impressive sermon on this subject by Dr. Morris, on Friday night during the session of the East Columbia Conference at Spokane Falls, the speaker said:

Thomas was a morose, melancholy man. He was not a credulous Christian. He challenged every thing. Did'nt even believe the things that were revealed to him. I am sorry that there was such a man among the disciples, that such an event as the one recorded ever transpired, but since there was such a man, and such a scene, I am glad that an account of it is given. With all his doubts, Thomas was a believer—he said, "My Lord and my God."

Notice the sceptic doubting, and the doubter believing. Observe the character of the doubt. It was most unreasonable. It was contrary to the testimony of Christ himself. He had frequently affirmed the doctrine of the resurrection and that he would rise from the dead.

It was contrary to the testimony of the disciples. They were God's best people, his chosen ones. They were true and tried, and Thomas knew it. They were his brethren, united by tenderest ties. Their testimony was plain, candid, consistent, unanimous. Yet Thomas said, "I cannot, I will not believe. I must have tangible, direct proof."

"But must Thomas believe in miracles?" I answer, it was not a question of philosophy, but of fact. Thomas had seen the Lord as he stood at the sepulcher at Lazarus' grave and raise him from the dead and witnessed the son of the widow of Nain raised to life. Let the world argue and philosophize if it wants to, but to him it was a matter of observation—of experience. Thomas had been endued with power from on high, had cast out devils, had been instrumental in performing wonderful works, yet in the face of all this he now stands and says, "I won't believe until I thrust my hand into his side." There was no excuse for Thomas.

It was the most painful experience in all his life. He was in darkness, and such darkness! The Master came at last and in mercy removed every doubt. But what a rebuke were his words, his very presence, to Thomas, as he said, "blessed are they who have not seen, yet have believed." Thomas brought it all on himself.

Learn, first, there ought to be nothing to challenge a Christian's faith. When God has converted a man from the darkness and vileness of sin, made him a child, an heir, brings him up to his side and fills him with perfect peace, how can he doubt? This is greater than all the miracles, than raising the dead, than stilling the tempest, than causing the sun to stand still. There oughtn't to be any room for doubt. It is natural that the unconverted man, the worldly man, should doubt. Religion to him is only a theory. But not so with the Christian. He has the witness in himself. He has tasted and found that the Lord is good.

2. We ought to cultivate the spirit of faith. Faith is not a mere gift direct from God, but a principle to be cultivated, exercised, strengthened. Why our littleness of faith? Because we neglect to exercise it. We should walk by faith—by the things that are not seen—in all the affairs of every day life. If Christian men used their hands as they do their faith they wouldn't be able to lift five pounds. The man who walks by faith—lives as "seeing Him who is invisible"—in every day life, when everything is working smoothly, has the faith to save amid the trials and crisis through which we are called to pass.

3. When a thing is demonstrated to a man it ceases to be faith. We want to bring our religion within the domain of sight—down to a level with the base and material world around us. This destroys faith. Faith delights to stand on the verge of the dark and frowning cliff and look outward and upward. It laughs at impossibilities and shouts "it shall be done."

Alas, we are too much like poor Thomas; we insist on having tangible, visible demonstrations. Gideon asks for a sign—chaffers with God—wants the fleece to be made wet. Then, when it is so wet that he can wring water out of it, still unsatisfied, he asks that the fleece be dry and everything else wet. Like Elijah, we retreat and get back under the juniper tree. My brethren, God is in the stillness of the mountain and valley, where he ministers to us, as well as in the great tumult when the fire comes down and consumes the sacrifice.

God's promises are yea and amen. Jesus Christ on the cross is the seal that they shall all be fulfilled. The angels would blush, the stars would fall, the throne of God would be overturned, the whole course of nature would cease if one of these promises should fail.

We have the testimony of God's people of all ages that these promises are true. Our fathers, our mothers, the men of God through whose instrumentality we were led into the light—a great cloud of witnesses have testified that the word of God liveth and abideth forever.

I refer to my own experience. When I sought God in the pardon of my sins he made haste to answer me. He took me from the mire and pit and placed me upon a solid rock. He established my goings. He has been with me all along the journey. He fills me with his peace and love and joy every day and hour of my life.

Brethren, Christ is coming again. How we will be filled with shame to meet him with doubt and scepticism, as did poor Thomas. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

AMONG THE INDIANS, 1841-45.

BY L. B. STATELER.

In the autumn of '41 I was changed from Delaware to Shawnee Mission. The old mission station here was merged into "The Indian Manual Labor School," and my residence was at the school, my wife being employed as matron of the girl's department.

William Johnson was presiding elder of the district. His brother having fallen into bad health had left the Territory. J. C. Berryman was changed from Kickapoo Mission to superintend the Manual Labor School. Edward T. and J. T. Peery were sent to the Delawares. N. M. Talbot was sent to the Kickapoos, Nathan T. Shaler to the Peoria Mission and William Johnson was also in charge of Kaw Mission.

In 1842 we lost Brother William Johnson by death. Edward T. Peery was appointed presiding elder in his stead. Thus things went on until 1844, when the General Conference erected the work in the Indian country into a separate Conference, called the Indian Mission Conference.

The work was partitioned off into three Districts, viz: Cherokee, Choctaw and Kansas River. The first session of the Conference was held at Riley's Chapel, Cherokee Nation, in September, 1844, Bishop Thomas A. Morris presiding. The following persons were appointed to the Districts: David B. Cumming, Cherokee; L. B. Stateler, Choctaw; N. M. Talbot, Kansas River.

The seat of the Conference was 250 miles south of Shawnee Mission. The trip was made in carriages and wagons overland on the military road. The preachers traveled in companies, camping out on the way. The Bishop accompanied the preachers from the Kansas District. We had a tent in which we slept. We held religious services every night and morning. The Bishop greatly enjoyed it. He was a very pleasant man and full of anecdotes, which he would relate for our entertainment as we sat around our log heap camp fire at night before going to bed. There was little game along the route.

My appointment this year took me 400 or 500 miles from my former field of labor. I had to return North and get my family, then back again, which required me to travel over most of the road three times before I was settled in my new field of labor, Choctaw District. My wife was in very delicate health. As soon as I could, after making one round, I built a cabin at Cherokee Oil Springs and placed my wife there, that she might have the benefit of the healing waters. Having situated her, I would leave for my work, 80 or 100 miles distant, and be away for a month or more at a time.

I wish to bear testimony here to the great virtue of these most life-giving waters. They seemed to eradicate all disease, and cure the individual using them of whatever ailment he might be possessed. My wife's health was fully restored by their use. The springs are situated about twenty-five miles west of the Arkansas line and thirty-four miles from Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The District included the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations. It included almost all the country west of the State of Arkansas and south of the Arkansas River to the Red River on the west. It was about 500 miles around. The following stations were included in said District: Fort Coffee Male Academy, W. H. Goode and Henry C. Benson in charge; Meshula Tubbie Circuit, Isaac Collins, John Page; Choctaw Circuit, John M. Steele; Chickasaw Circuit, Erastus B. Duncan; Little River, James Essex.

The year passed away without any remarkable incidents. W. H. Goode and Henry Benson left the Circuit during the year, adhering north in the vote as provided for in the plan of separation adopted by the General Conference. They went back to Indiana. Wilson L. McCallister was transferred from the Tennessee Conference and took their place. I had to move my wife to Fort Coffee and take charge of the school, my wife taking control of the boys and making their clothes with her own hands.

Negotiations had been entered into with the Choctaw Nation for the establishment of the school at Fort Coffee, a military post on a high bluff on the south side of the Arkansas River, the Indians agreeing to furnish $5,000 annually, on condition that the Board of Missions would furnish $1,000 annually, and provide the school with teachers. The next Conference was held in the month of September, 1845, at the Indian Manual Labor School, 300 miles north of Fort Coffee. Bishop Soule presided.

Why the Sinner will be Eternally Lost.

Character is destiny, because it is life's harvest garnered, life lived, its possibilities developed, its needs assimilated, interwoven with the dexterous fingers of desire, by the sovereignty of the will, into the very texture of moral being. "The soul that sinneth it shall die," will be God's final verdict upon every unpardoned sinner, because it will have been the inevitable worked out by him during their probation, under the law of progression and retrogression, which registers every moral effect, of thought, of word, of affection or of deed, whether positive or negative, or whether good or bad, in the character, into the very nature of the soul. Socrates directed the attention of the Athenians to this great law of assimilation when he advised them not to present "their hero-gods in obscene attitudes," as such a presentation of their characters would corrupt the youths of their aspiring state. God does not damn a soul because it is His pleasure to do so. He says that He "has no pleasure in the death of him that dieth." Then the soul in sin is damned, and only damned because it has reached an irretracible end in these relations, where it is like a fish out of water when help to replace it therein is impossible, it can but remain, in eternal deprivation, in these abnormal relations, where, in the very nature of things, "its redemption ceases forever," when it can but "have its reward, be filled with its own devices." Dear sinner, if you should read this, don't be deceived, by the enemy of your soul, into the impression that your sins are too slight to be visited with eternal results, for small sins, as well as great ones, place the soul in destructive relations to its environments. It was "the little foxes that spoiled the vines," and they were as effectually, and as irretrievably, ruined, as if done by the larger ones. The mode or manner of doing cannot effect the nature of the thing done. Life destroyed with the point of a pin, whether with one or oft repeated punctures, or whether effected in a moment, or during a lifetime, would be as effectually done, as if by a ball shot from a cannon. So "sin when it is finished," in a completed character, under the probationary or formative period, "it bringeth forth death" to the soul, whether it be small or great, or whether it is the accumulation of a life ime, or whether it is the result of one act. "All of his righteousness shall not be remembered, but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it." No relief could possibly come to the fish that is out of water by the slightness of the means that placed it there, it might have gone out with the tide, and been left when it returned, or it might have, by a single effort to obtain a morsel of meat, placed itself into land and air relations, but neither the one nor the other could afford it any relief in this unnatural state. Nor, indeed, could assistance come from any source whatever while these relations remain unchanged, as that would require such a change in its nature as to adapt it thereto, which would be destruction in its worst form. "Prepare to meet thy God" then is, indeed, the wisdom that crieth from without through the inexorable laws with which He has benevolently connected your destiny, that the highest results of being may be reached by their use, while the lowest depth of ruin is visited by their transgression, or by their neglect. There is no height, in the system of fallen human life, at least, for which there is no corresponding depth. Better then, by far, is that wisdom that meets life's conditions under its laws, "than rubies;" and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it. "For whoso findeth me (her) findeth life, and shall obtain favor of God. But he that sinneth against me, wrongeth his own soul. All they that hate me love death."

A REMARKABLE BOOK.

BY REV. T. DEWITT TALMAGE, D. D.

This is said to be a year of remarkable books, but doubtless the most remarkable that will appear for some time to come is Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's new work on the "Life of Christ" and "Palestine and its People." Some idea of what the book contains and how it was prepared may be obtained by reading the following extract from the Doctor's preface:

"In my American home, on the Atlantic, on Mediterranean, on camel's back, on mule's back, on horseback, under chandelier, by dim candle in tent, on Lake Galilee, in convent, at Bethel where Jacob's pillow was stuffed with dreams, and the angels of the ladder landed; at the brook Elah, from which little David picked up the ammunition of five smooth stones, four more than were needed for crushing like an egg-shell the skull of Goliath; in the Valley of Ajalon, over which, at Joshua's command, Astronomy halted; on the plain of Esdraelon, the battle-field of ages, its long red flowers suggestive of the blood dashed to the bits of the horses' bridles; amid the shattered masonry of Jericho, in Jerusalem, that overshadows all other cities in reminiscence, at Cana where plain water became festal beverage, on Calvary, whose aslant and ruptured rocks still show the effects of the earthquake at the awful hemorrhage of the five wounds that purchased the world's rescue, and with my hand mittened from the storm, or wet from the Jordan, or bared to the sun, or gliding over smooth table, this book has been written."

This book will certainly be worth reading and preserving. It is not only a life of Christ from an entirely new standpoint, but it is also a very interesting history of a country and people who occupy a prominent place in the thoughts and feelings of all Christian nations. The large number of excellent pictures of places and scenery in the Holy Land with which the volume is illustrated, give it a special interest and value. We cannot all go to Palestine, but this elegant book, through the aid of its pictures and Dr. Talmage's wonderful descriptions accompanying them, brings Palestine to our very doors. The book is indeed a positive necessity to a proper understanding of the Bible accounts of places and events. We can understand and appreciate Bible history all the better when we see photographic representations of the places where this history was made. "FROM MANGER TO THRONE" marks a new era in the literature of Bible lands, and we are not surprised to learn that the demand for the book is phenomenal. If is sold on the exclusive territory basis, and persons desiring to secure agencies will find the Publisher's announcement in another column.

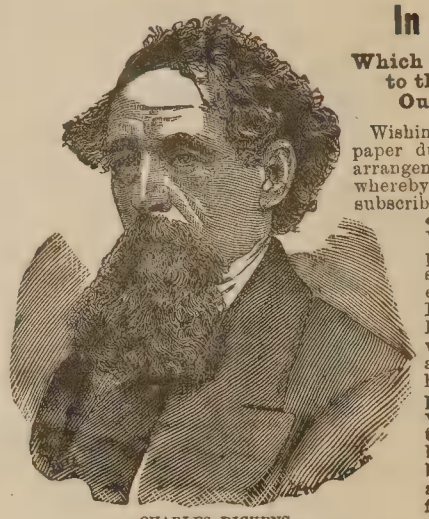
GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

Which we Offer with a Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than Our Regular Subscription Price.



CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

The Great Offer to Subscribers to the "Methodist."

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS' WORKS, in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THE MONTANA METHODIST for ONE YEAR, upon receipt of $1.60, which is only 60 cents more than the regular subscription price of this paper. Our readers, therefore, practically get a set of Dickens' works in twelve volumes for only 60 cents. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist for only $1.60. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of 6 yearly subscribers. Address:

The Sailor Lad.

There lived in a Scotch village a little boy, Jamie by name, who set his heart on being a sailor. His mother loved him very dearly, and the thought of giving him up grieved her exceedingly, but she finally consented. As the boy left home, she said to him: "Wherever you are, Jamie, whether on sea or land, never forget to acknowledge your God. Promise me that you will kneel down, every night and morning, and say your prayers, no matter whether the sailors laugh at you or not."

"Mother, I promise you I will," said Jamie; and soon he was on a ship bound for India.

They had a good captain, and as some of the sailors were religious men, no one laughed at the boy when he kneeled down to pray.

But on the return voyage, some of the sailors having run away, their places were supplied by others, one of whom proved to be a very bad fellow. When he saw little Jamie kneeling down to say his prayers, he went up to him and, giving him a sound box on the ear, said in a very decided tone, "None of that here, sir."

Another seaman who saw this, although he swore sometimes, was indignant that the child should be so cruelly treated, and told the bully to come up on deck and he would give him a thrashing. The challenge was accepted, and the well-deserved beating was duly bestowed. Both then returned to the cabin, and the swearing man said, "Now, Jamie, say your prayers, and if he dares to touch you, I will give him another dressing."

The next night the devil put it into the little boy's mind that it was quite unnecessary for him to create such a disturbance in the ship, when it could easily be avoided if he would only say his prayers quietly in his hammock, so that nobody would observe it. But the moment that the friendly sailor saw Jamie get into the hammock without first kneeling down to pray, he hurried to the spot, and, dragging him out by the neck, he said:

"Kneel down at once, sir! Do you think I am going to fight for you, and you not say your prayers, you young rascal?"

During the whole voyage back to London this profane sailor watched over the boy as if he had been his father, and every night saw that he knelt down and said his prayers. Jamie soon began to be industrious, and during his spare time studied his books. He learned all about ropes and rigging, and when he became old enough, about taking latitude and longitude.

Several years ago the largest steamer ever built, called the Great Eastern, was launched on the ocean, and carried the famous cable across the Atlantic. A very reliable, experienced captain was chosen for this important undertaking, and who should it be but little Jamie? When the Great Eastern returned to England after this successful voyage, Queen Victoria bestowed upon him the honor of knighthood, and the world now knows him as Sir James Anderson.—EXCHANGE.

What Christ Asks.

DR. JOSEPH PARKER.

A negative relation to Christ has always ended in his crucifixion. Pilate said: "I find no fault in him;" Herod said: "I find no fault in him;" but they gave him up to the murderers! From the spiritual necessity of the case that was inevitable. This is the irresistable sequence. Beware of it. There is no security in negativeness. If you merely find "no fault in him", you will assuredly give up Christ under external pressure. Christ asks us for no good-conduct certificate. He asks us for the loyalty of the heart's whole trust. He claims the throne of our undivided love.

—He who waits for something to turn up, will be distanced, in life's race, by time, while he will be overtaken by want and ruin. Remember, brother mortal, you who are, of necessity, working out an eternal destiny, that opportunities, like the moments that bear them back into eternities recorded work, never return. Better start, and keep up something, if it is not just the thing that you desire, for in such a case the "good wins," is sure to "come last."

PRAY FOR MISSIONS!

The saintly mother of a missionary used to pray with a map of the world before her closet, every day. She would plead with God in behalf of one country for successive days, and then for another and another. When her daughter wrote home of the great awakening at Harpoot and of the many conversions in that city and in the villages of the plain, the mother replied: "I am not surprised. I have been expecting this for months to pass. I have spent the hours before the dawn of every day in praying to God for an outpouring of his Spirit upon Harpoot."

Judson's testimony as to prayer was 'I never was deeply interested in any object—I never prayed sincerely and earnestly for anything, but it came at some time; no matter at how distant a day, somehow, in some shape — probably the last I should have devised, it came.

Queen Mary trembled at the prayers of John Knox. What a quaking in the kingdom of darkness would ensue if our great sisterhood of churches would band together to fathom the meaning of that glorious promise, "All things whatsœver ye shall ask, in prayer believing, ye shall receive."— World Wide Mission.

A Model Sexton.

Josiah H. Haywood, sexton of the Church of the Unity, Boston, has recently celebrated his silver wedding. Among the incidents of the festive occasion was the reading of a letter from Rev. M. J. Savage, his pastor, in which he said:

"I propose, therefore—entirely for your own good—to suggest a few faults. If you can only manage to cure these you will have become the deal sexton, and you can command a salary of $10,000 a year, or perhaps more than that, by traveling with Barnum as the greatest curiosity of the age. The faults I allude to are these:

"First—You have not learned how to make the church hot and cold at the same time. You must learn how to have one pew mark seventy-five degrees Fahrenheit, and the next one to it is down where it would be comfortable for an Eskimo.

"Second—You do not seem to know how to have a free circulation, a plenty of fresh air, and yet not have any draught anywhere. You must invent some way to make all the draught skip the pews where rheumatic and bald-headed people sit.

"Third—You have not yet acquired the art of having the church flooded with light while all the blinds are shut at the same time. This should be attended to at once, and you should not offer any such poor excuse as that it is impossible. To a sexton nothing should be impossible.

"Fourth—You must find out some way of giving everybody the best seat right in the center of the church, no matter whether the pews are full or not.

"Fifth—You must learn how to fill all the pews with strangers without making anybody 'mad' about it, and, at the same time, have plenty of room left for the regular pew-holders.

"Sixth—And, finally, you will spend your leisure time in inventing a patent church that shall be just warm enough, and not too warm; not too light, but just light enough, where all the people, whatever their mental, moral or physical condition, will be perfectly comfortable, and—crowning achievement of all—that you shall have all the seats in the middle.

"What is a sexton for, anyhow, if he can't please everybody at the same time?"—Selected.

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 2. NOVEMBER, 15, 1890. No. 30.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The readers of the MONTANA METHODIST, and in fact the people throughout our entire Church, should consider themselves fortunate in being permitted to read the personal reminiscences of Rev. L. B. Stateler, as they will be published from month to month in our columns. Just think of sixty years of active life in the Methodist Itinerancy on the frontier, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia and through the exciting scenes enacted between the years 1831 and 1891. There is no man living, perhaps, who has had such a long and varied experience in the Methodist ministry as Rev. L. B. Stateler. He helped to lay the foundation of Methodism in Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Indian Territory, Colorado and Oregon. He has labored side by side with such men as Roberts, Morris, Soule, Bascom, Capers, Early, Pearce, Marvin, Scarret, and a host of others to whom reference will be made in these charming letters, which alone are worth several times the price of the METHODIST for a year.

We have always opposed the policy of dedicating church buildings before they were free from debt, but in one or two instances have yielded to the pressure of circumstances and consented to such a course. But we have done so for the last time. We have no right to give anything to the Lord that does not belong to us. It matters little whether the money is coming to the Church Extension Board or any other party. The Board needs the money it loans to individual churches and expects to get it, and has as much right to expect it as any one else. Let us finish our houses and pay for them before we give them to the Lord and expecting him to accept and bless them.

In a private note from Rev. L.B. Stateler he says: "Health not vigorous, but as I have nothing to do in the vale below I go on still crying: 'Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.'"

As will be seen in another column, Rev. D. B. Price has resigned the office of business manager of the METHODIST, and the duties of this position for the present will devolve upon the editor. Bro. Price has been faithful in his duties and has by his forethought and management contributed no little to the inauguration of plans by which our paper is sustained. His labors are appreciated by his brethren. May he enjoy the fullest measure of success as he gives himself up wholly to the one great work of preaching the Word.

These timely words are found in the CONGREGATIONALIST from the pen of Dr. H. A. Stimson:

"The church differs radically from all other institutions, and its chief officer, the minister, differs radically from all other workmen. The church is set in charge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the minister is His ambassador. He has a message, not a message and something else, but a message solely. He testifies to a power, not to one among several, but to one alone. His duty is to proclaim a Master, not Him and others, but to cast up a highway for Him as supreme. This is true enough and plain enough, but is this the uppermost thought to-day?"

We commend this view of preaching, from the New York Observer: "It is ever to be borne in mind that the preaching of the Cross of Christ will always seem to men of high caste a stumbling-block, and to men of high culture, in heathen as well as Christian lands, foolishness. Men are seldom, if ever, argued into a personal saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The story of the mighty love of God, as manifested on Calvary, has a divinely quickening power. It breaks and melts and wins the hearts of millions. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation. It has been simply, earnestly, intelligently and constantly proclaimed by the great body of Christian foreign missionaries. It has won many thousands of hearts to the Redeemer. It has captured many an enlightened mind in foreign lands. The triumphs of this glorious Gospel bid us thank God and take courage. With a wide increase of the prevailing methods and a richer outpouring of men and means, in order to make known the same Gospel in every nook and corner of the world the ingathering of souls will be more in accord with the hopes of those who believe in the promises of the Divine Word."

The editor regrets the delay of several excellent communications that have been on hand for some time. It could not be avoided. The paper holds just so much and no more. We are glad to have our correspondents write, and shall endeavor to publish their contributions in the order of their reception and importance. Some articles can wait while others cannot.

—o—

At times we have felt a little worried over the typographical errors that creep into our paper; but upon comparing it with others we find the METHODIST so much better than they that we feel like complimenting our printers and proof-reader, rather than complaining.

—o—

—The revival fires are burning, More than thirty conversions and accessions are reported in this issue of the METHODIST, and the work goes on. Praise the Lord.

—After more than a year's close confinement at home, the editor's wife and family recently enjoyed a vacation of about six weeks, which was spent at the old mansion at Whitehall and vicinity. They are at home again safe and sound, "abiding by the staff," "holding the fort" while this scribe goes forth to the battle. There's not a preacher's, particularly a presiding elder's, wife in the church but will appreciate the words of sympathy expressed by Bishop Key, at the late session of the Missouri Conference. But the keepers at home shall share equally in the reward, only they will have, as they deserve, by far the largest share, when the harvest is gathered home.

—Rev. D. C. Kelley, a prominent minister of the M. E. church, south, recently accepted the nomination for Governor in the state of Tennessee. At the recent session of the Conference he was arraigned, tried and suspended from the ministry for six months for having left his work without the consent of his Conference.

—Mr. — King, of Bozeman, and Miss Emma Duke, of Willow Creek, were married about the 17th of last month by Rev. L. B. Stateler, at the residence of the bride's parents, George L. Duke and wife, near Willow Creek, Montana. The happy couple have our hearty congratulations.

Letter From a Little Boy.

There was a camp-meeting four miles North of here, at Moodyville, which lasted two weeks. There were sixty conversions. Thirty joined the M. E. Church and the rest went to other denominations. We got to attend only two days because ma got sick. There were thirty-eight tents on the ground. There were about three thousand people there the last Sunday.

We enjoy reading the "MONTANA METHODIST" very much ever since we know the editor so well. We wish you success in your new field.

Frank Hort.

Westmoreland, Kansas.

We are glad that our young friends enjoy reading the "Methodist," for we desire to make it interesting to the young people as well as to the older ones, and will be glad to give them a corner in the paper when they write such modest, interesting letters as the above.

More than twenty years ago, the editor assisted in a revival meeting held in the country school-house on the spot of ground where the town of Westmoreland now stands, at which there were many conversions.

The country was then sparsely settled, the settlements being confined principally to the water courses. Since that time the vast prairies have been covered with fields and groves and the homes of industrious people, and the place where our meeting was held is now the county-seat of a large county—a beautiful town where there are several good churches. At a large gathering of the citizens in the court-house there last May, we recognized very few of those with whom we were associated in the years that are gone. We are glad to know that God's cause is prospering there.—Ed.

OBITUARY.

Maud, daughter of J. H., and Mary Lippard, departed this life near Demersville, Montana, September 8th 1890, aged 8 years, 11 months, 2 days. Little Maud was an intelligent and remarkably amiable child. She was greatly interested in the Sunday-school and took great interest in memorizing verses, in the selection of which she manifested an aptness for spiritual things, surpassing many persons of riper years. The last that she repeated at Sunday-school was, "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good." Her pastor compared her life to that of a rose opening its petals to the sun and shedding its fragrance on all around. The lovely flower has been transplanted to a more congenial clime. The Master has said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto Me." May the hearts of her parents follow her thither.

A. C. COUEY.

A note just received from Brother Goulder, dated October 14th, says: "My meeting in Bozeman continues, with increasing interest. Brother Price, of Helena, is with me this week. I am encouraged, and will continue indefinitely." A good revival at this point will be of incalculable value to the establishment of our cause in this beautiful, growing valley city.

Church Extension and Sunday School work have been given special emphasis at the points visited in the District. At some places where the preachers have just come by transfer, their immediate necessities demand our first consideration so far as finance is concerned, so that the collections for Church Extension will necessarily be held in abeyance for awhile.

I believe we have better Sunday School prospects than ever before. We should double the attendance during the year at every place where we now have schools.

FINANCE.

The matter of the preacher's support, I believe, is in advance of what it has ever been so far as I am able to learn, and yet not up to what is desirable. The first quarter, I think, will be the most difficult of the year, just after many of the preachers have moved, thereby incurring more than ordinary expense. It is impossible to change appointments without the loss of some necessary article which costs money to replace.

The preachers seem to have the revival fires burning in their bones. Several already are making special efforts. We hope we can soon make report of souls converted. This is our mission in Montana, and we must not lose sight of it for a moment.

The Presbyterians were in Deer Lodge October 10th–13th, in their semi-annual meeting for the year. Brother Tabor and myself were privileged to look in on them for a short while Monday. We were voted corresponding members of the body. At the time we were in, the number present was not so large as the attendance at our Annual Conference. Quite a young man was moderator, and was timid in the putting of questions. We regretted not being able to see more of these orderly ministers.

BEN. HOGAN IN BUTTE.

I had the opportunity, October 8th, in Butte City, to hear Ben. Hogan, the Reformed Gambler and Evangelist. He had the nominal co-operation of most of the Protestant Christians in the city, and was holding meetings in the Opera House. The evening I was in, Revs. Howel, of the Congregational Church; Wood, of the Christian Church, and J. E. Squires, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, were present and taking part. A gambler occupying a front seat, undertook to gainsay Hogan and put him off his base by saying that he failed in gambling and had gone to preaching for a living. Hogan was equal to the emergency and made a most effectual finish of this knight of the card table. I am sure he will never try Ben. again, under similar circumstances.

The money subscribed to the annual Conference to cancel the debt on the Deer Lodge Church building has been collected except $5.00, in all $450, I believe. This speaks well for Bro. Nat Evans, who was made a steward at the fourth quarterly Conference in August, to whom was committed this work by Bro. Britt before his departure to Kentucky.

We yet owe $300 to the Church Extension Loan Fund to be paid in $100 installments annually, with interest.

One hundred and nine dollars on this loan fell due October 1st. We hope to raise this at the earliest date, for Brother Morton is now after us. Brother Tabor and the stewards have it in hand.

MR. EDITOR:

When I wrote last I believe I had just returned from Bro. J. H. Johnson's Quarterly Conference, held at Boulder, of which I gave some account in the last issue.

—o—

Bozeman.

After spending a few days at home, very busily engaged in making further adjustments in our new home, I joined Bro. Goulder in his meeting at Bozeman. I reached there Thursday evening via. the Northern Pacific, or rather the Butte & Bozeman Branch of the Northern Pacific. In going over the mountain through the Home Stake Pass, we had the misfortune to break a coupling, which caused more than an hour's delay for repairs. One very interesting point which we passed on this trip was the famed 34th precinct of Silver Bow County. This is near the very summit of the main range of the Rocky Mountains.

Our train drew up to the Bozeman station about 9:30 p. m. Twenty minutes later found me at the door of Castle House, where I found the young pastor of Bozeman Station very comfortable indeed. Rev. H. B. Cockrill, of the Willow Creek Circuit, was with Bro. Goulder, assisting in the meeting.

The equinoctial gale was in full blast in this part of the state, so that the brethren were having the difficulty of snow, rain, mud and rather cold weather. In addition, the city was in darkness, owing to a change of gas company. Notwithstanding all this, on Friday night I preached to a very respectable week-night congregation. Of the number present there were four preachers—Revs. Cockrill, Warren, Goulder and myself.

Bros. Cockrill and Warren left Saturday for their respective appointments. Saturday evening we held a short, but very pleasant service, followed by the business session of the Quarterly Conference.

This was a noteworthy Conference, in the fact that the faithful few present were women. The male population of this charge is somewhat thin. We did not have an official member present—and if there could ever come a time for women to vote and hold office in the church, it seems to me here was the occasion for Bozeman Station.

They were present by courtesy, and were strong in vouches for the financial needs of the pastor. God bless those faithful six or seven women. Sabbath we had very pleasant services—love feast, preaching at 11 a. m., followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

In the afternoon I looked upon one of the most interesting Sunday Schools in the District.

I would say for the benefit of Bro. Currin in the Boulder Sunday School, he will have a strong competitor for the District banner. Bro. Goulder has great reason for cheerfulness in such fine Sunday School prospects.

In the evening we had a very pleasant, and I am sure a very profitable service. One young lady joined the church by letter, from Missouri. I remained with Bro. Goulder until Wednesday morning, leaving him with Bros. Warren and Cockrill, who had returned to assist him. May great victory crown the efforts here.

—o—

Deer Lodge.

On Thursday, October 9th, Brother Tabor and wife, with a cousin, Miss Sarver, arrived in Deer Lodge.

By Saturday noon the pastor and wife were fairly comfortable in the parsonage. A little time given the members here will secure them more conveniences, I trust. Sabbath was an enjoyable day. Sunday School, all told, had thirty-nine; 11:30 a. m. service good—though the attendance was small, not over thirty-five or forty being present. There were three accessions by letter. Bro. Tabor would have the P. E. preach. In the evening we had Bro. Tabor's first sermon to this flock. It was plain and very spiritual. We feel sure it impressed all seriously, and we hope some made resolves never to be broken. Monday evening we held the Quarterly Conference, which, we believe, was satisfactory to preacher and people.

Bro. Tabor begins his work earnestly with proper methods. The Lord bless him, his dear wife and all the Deer Lodge Charge.

Mr. Editor, I begin to appreciate what a nice thing it is to get to stay at home a whole week. Mrs. Couey has kept me as busy as I most ever was in my life to get things to-rights before I go again. If all keep well I shall be in the field three weeks before returning. Next Saturday and Sunday I propose being with Brother L. Bramble on the East Helena and Alhambra Charge. Yours,

A. C. COUEY.

From Idaho.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST:

I returned home from Conference full of faith and joy. Faith to believe that the good Lord would answer all of the prayers that had been registered in Heaven, the prayers that he would give us this country for Him. That faith was based on his promise. O, that we would base our prayers on a desire strong and firm, and come with unflinching confidence in God.

The joy was from having met the editor of such a nice paper, and that we could shake hands together in our work. It gives me joy when I see our work prospering in the East Columbia and the Montana Conferences.

God is already beginning to answer our prayers. The revival fire is beginning to burn on our work. It does the itinerant good when he is returned to his work to have the people show their appreciation in such a substantial way as was shown to this unworthy scribe—in presenting him with a cayuse—a horse [We hope he is not of the "bucking" kind.—ED], and a cart with which to travel this extensive circuit. Our heart was made glad to think that we would have no more tired limbs and blistered feet from walking over these hills and mountains.

The revival season is upon us. How much will we expect of God this year? Should we ask for a hundred souls? I think that as preachers we ought to ask God to forgive us for asking so little of Him. I close this letter lest I weary you.

MR. EDITOR:

Although I have said but little in the "Methodist" about myself or my work, don't think that I have lost interest in our brave little paper. I am swinging around the Bozeman work at a lively rate. I have five preaching places in the great Gallatin Valley, and I occasionally preach at other points. As you well know, this is the garden spot of Montana, and truly the "Egypt" of the great North West. Our valley is said to have yielded this year over four millions of bushels of grain, besides thousands of tons of hay and thousands of bushels of potatoes, to say nothing of the big cabbage heads, turnips, etc. When you grow hungry, think of us! Well, we have almost any and everything that is good over here, and yet the people are not religious, as they ought to be. Infidelity is common all over our fair circuit. Sabbath desecration is common, and but few are as just and as religious as they ought to be. I am telling them the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. I believe God will honor His word in the conviction of sinners, and in the conversion of the people. We have bought seats for our church at Belgrade. We hope to get stoves and lights for it soon. Imagine my surprise when soon after Conference I went down to preach in our newly dedicated church at Belgrade, to find it without a single seat in it! No seats, no stove flue, no stove, no pulpit, no lights, nothing but an empty house. I found some boxes and nail kegs and made some temporary seats. Why are our houses dedicated to God before they are finished?

Personally, I am proud to say that I am flourishing and growing fat. I tip the beam at 192½ pounds, and still have a good appetite. My faith in Montana and Southern Methodism grows brighter, as wisdom and knowledge increases. Even our enemies think that our church has much vitality left, and one confessed to me recently that they could not do without us in Montana. Recently I preached at a school house to a fair congregation, and feeling that God was moving hearts, I called for all who desired to be saved to come to the altar for prayers, and five came weeping and bowed down and prayed to God. I hope to protract there soon.

Yours in Christian love,

B. E. H. WARREN.

—o—

NOT TIRED YET.

A good sister writes from Gallatin, Mo., as follows: "I send you a dollar to continue my paper. I gave my first dollar to Brother Stanley, when he was here in Gallatin attending Conference and I am not tired of the paper, but enjoy it so much that I wish to continue to take it. With all good wishes

MRS. J. D. COULSON."

A brother, a preacher in Kansas, writes, sends his dollar and says: "I love the Methodist. It has grown stronger and brighter since I began to take it." These cheering words provoke us to love and good works. We hope no one will get tired of the paper and that it will continue to grow stronger and better as the months and years roll on. We shall endeavor to make every number better than the preceding one.

The editor is not indifferent to any words of appreciation that come from the hearts of brethren beloved. He was not aware of having met any special emergency in doing the work to which he was called hy his brethren and appointed by the Bishop. Instead of considering the work on the Methodist a burden, we regard it as a pleasure, a labor of love, and shall ask no higher honor than to know that our efforts give satisfaction, generally, to our readers that they awaken a greater interest in Christianity and serve as a stimulus to a higher and purer type of religion and a closer walk with God among the people of this great Northwest. Kind words are coming in from all around. The tide is rising and the subscription list is increasing. Let each one act his part, get a number of subscribers for the Methodist, send in notes of the work being done, and before we are aware of it we shall have one of the best papers for its size in the whole church.

"HON." OR "REV." — WHICH?

"GRAND REPUBLICAN RALLY! JUDGE F. ATKINS and HON. S. E. SNIDER will address the voters of Egan, on Friday, Oct. 31st 1890, 8 P. M. Everybody invited! Free Dance."

The above notice was pasted in a conspicuous place in Flathead Valley, and a similar one published in the weekly paper there, announcing a "Rally" at Demersville on the night following. The "Hon." S. E. Snider is Presiding Elder of Helena District, Montana Conference, M. E. Church (North). We could but wonder why the title "Hon." should be used before one audience and "Rev." before another. It is calculated to mislead. We had hard work to convince a brother, a member of that church, that it was really "Brother Snider," although he had seen the notice, and we affirmed that we had seen the man with our own eyes. Although he was in a wagon with several other politicians, at first we supposed this to be merely accidental, and that he was visiting the valley solely in the interests of his church until convinced otherwise by the announcements.

Is there not betrayed in this incident a sense of unfitness of things in a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ entering the arena in the interest of any political party? It is contrary to the example and teachings of Him who said, "My kingdom is not of this world."

WITH THE PEOPLE.

A. C. COUEY.

MR. EDITOR:—Like yourself, I am of the opinion that the Presiding Elders on big districts in the West never get matters "fixed" just as one could wish during the short time that can be spent at home. In fact, can there be such thing to one as home?

I left Mrs. Couey and the little ones Friday Oct. 17th, with the purpose of being out on the Helena District long enough to visit three charges before returning, unless dispatched for in the case of dangerous illness of two of the children, who were sick when I started.

East Helena and Alhambra.

After an hour's delay on Montana Central from Butte I reached Alhambra Friday evening at 7 o'clock, just as Bro. Bramble was coming out from supper at the Hotel, where the preachers eat when stopping here. From him I learned that services would begin within a few minutes, and that Bro. R. S. Clark was on hand and had been engaged to preach. Nothing could suit me better, for I was hungry and tired, and felt that to have some one to take my place was a God-send.

Supper over, Mr. Redding, with several members of his family, and I went over to the school-house, where an unusual congregation for a week-night had assembled. Bro. Clark discoursed from Mark XII:34, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God." This our first service of the quarterly Conference was good, because very spiritual. The business of the Conference was transacted Saturday afternoon. The reports were gratifying — the preachers greatly cheered, and those present in the Conference happy because duty had been performed.

This writer was put to work Saturday evening, preaching to a reasonably good congregation, and kept busy through the Sabbath and during the week following, up to Saturday morning, when he was compelled to leave to meet another appointment.

The preacher and members of the church at Alhambra had prepared for having a good meeting, and true to the Gospel promise, "according to your faith," the blessing came. The love-feast, the 11 o'clock service and Sabbath evening were all occasions of great joy to faithful Christians. We surely had the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Our souls rejoiced and sinners wept and came to the altar praying for mercy. Our congregations were good all the week, and the interest fine. In all there were seven persons who sought the Savior. Two professed conversion. The last night of the meeting, several who had not yet found the Savior, begged the prayers of God's people. The work goes on here, and we believe others will be saved. I believe this is one of the livest memberships in the State. It is small, but heroic. We have several of the most efficient women in revival work here, that I have seen. Bro. Bramble and myself had a very happy week.

Here I met Bro. Rush McDonald from Missouri, who came to Montana about two months ago to recuperate his strength. He has a severe trouble with his throat. Can speak above a whisper with great difficulty. He is improving slowly, and hopes, by proper care, to report for duty in a few months. He has a warm place in all our hearts. He has arranged to spend the winter in the neighborhood of Alhambra, with Sister Harvey, who will be able to give him good nursing. I gained flesh every day while enjoying the sanitary benefits of these springs. Drinking the mineral water, and bathing in the hot water is good for the physical man. Don't imagine that I can get fat, for that seems impossible.

Townsend Charge.

I met Bro. R. S. Clark in Helena Saturday evening, and we came to Townsend on the 4:40 p. m. train, a distance of 33 miles from the Capital. We went to the home of Bro. McFadden and enjoyed Kentucky hospitality till preaching time Sabbath.

At 11 a. m. we had a very pleasant service, with good congregation, in our new church, just dedicated by Bro. J. C. Morris, on his return from

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests, and shall labor in every laudable way to promote them.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list by the first of January 1891.

Premiums.

To encourage the circulation of the MONTANA METHODIST we make the following offer: —

"To every person sending us five new subscribers, with the cash, five dollars, we will send an extra copy of the paper free to any address ordered, or a copy of "RAMBLES IN WONDERLAND," a clothbound book, by Edwin J. Stanley, descriptive of the Geysers and other Wonders of the great Yellowstone National Park (Price $1.00)."

"To any one sending us two new subscribers, with the cash, two dollars, we will send a copy of a pamphlet, "PATRIOTISM and RELIGION," by the same author. This offer holds good until the first of January 1891."

Begin at once; send money by money-order, postal note, registered letter, express or draft. All communications, business or otherwise, should be addressed to his western visitation in the church extension work. This is one of the best church buildings for its price we have in the District. Bro. Clark has not yet received the money promised by the Board—but will, possibly by the time this is in the hands of the readers. After dismissing the congregation at Townsend, I was made happy by the cordial manner in which the people remained and welcomed the young elder. I was happy among strangers. Oh, how much good it does a man to be thus received! We did not "lack". Among those met was a Sister Watt from Tennessee, who knows nearly all our preachers there. I know she and Mrs. Couey would love on sight.

Duck Creek.

I had often heard Bro. Stateler and some of my parishioners in Butte speak of this community. In the congregation Sabbath, at Townsend, were Bro. Frank Keene, his two little boys, three nieces, daughters of Bro. Flane Keene, and Sister Amanda Le Fever. With this company, we came from church to dine and meet an appointment at Duck Creek. Sister Frank Keene had a good ranche dinner awaiting us, which we greatly enjoyed. In the evening we had a pleasant service, preaching and the communion. We spent most of this week preaching at night and visiting the people. We held the quarterly Conference Monday morning and made the best provision we could for the year's work. A revival of spiritual religion is greatly needed. We labor and hope. Bro. Clark is greatly encouraged with the outlook on his work.

I write this, Mr. Editor, at the home of Bro. Flane Keene, where you have some strong friends, and where I hear some good jokes on you when you were yet a boy preacher. I have neglected to say, that here I find one of the finest farming sections I have seen in Montana. It is what is known as the Missouri Valley—and yet unfortunately for us the population is largely Roman Catholic. Nearly all the Protestants go to church, however.

From Spokane Falls.

Rev. R. G. Isbell has been transferred from the Alabama Conference. He is expected here about Nov. 8th. He is a worthy and efficient man and a valuable acquisition to our Conference, or Bishop Hendrix would not have transferred him.

Welcome, thrice welcome, Bro. Isbell and wife, to our great North-West. May God bless you abundantly in your labors this year.

We have a good church here. The membership is not large, but they are the true and the tried. The Conference did the church much good; it will be long remembered by the writer. It was indeed a feast.

We have a good Sunday-school. We are looking forward for better days when our new minister comes.

We have our weekly prayer meeting. There souls are fed and nourished and grow. There many find a perpetual feast of good things, and they are made "strong in the Lord" and "mount up on wings as eagles." There, in communion with God, souls are lifted above the earth and its cares, and the smile of the Lord refreshes their worn spirits, and we "thank God and take courage." There, in communion with saints, sympathy and tenderness and love for one another are cultivated and all feel that they are children of one Father, on their way to the family residence to join in celebrating the praises of that Savior, who sought them in their wanderings and saved them from their sins.

A METHODIST.

—o—

Butte Bits.

BY J. E. SQUIRES.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—Your departure was sudden, but the card explains. I will do what I can to secure "ads." and new subscriptions for our paper. Please give marked attention to its coming regularly here and elsewhere. I send you list of names herewith.

The revival continues with good interest and good congregations. Six were received into the church on last Sunday, making ten in all that have applied for membership, and "still there is more to follow." Sunday was a "field-day" for us in Butte, in several ways. Our own church service was good. Father Kemper, "an old soldier," 85 years old and his companion, were out by special arrangement, and after receiving members into the church—and baptizing their grand-child—we partook of the "Lord's Supper" with these ripe old saints of God. It was a touching scene to see the S. S. children and all the young people come up and take the hands of these old veterans.

At 3½ p. m. a most enthusiastic mass meeting was held in the Opera House, where laborers and clerks declared their rights to shorter evening hours and rest on Sunday. Later in the afternoon our sheriff, a man of some moral courage, went out to the race-track, and arrested a number of violaters of the Sunday law, and now "we will see what we shall see." "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump."—Jesus said this long ago, and we see it manifest to-day.

Stevensville Notes.

We have some revival news that we wish joyfully to furnish you with. For two weeks past we have been holding meetings at the Ambrose S. H., a sparsely settled community, as you know. The people have turned out well, although the average attendance has amounted only to about 35, I should judge. There have been 5 conversions and accessions to date, 3 others were at the altar last night and the interest seems deepening. We expect to continue the meeting for some days yet, and earnestly pray that this may prove but the starting of a series of revival fires all over the circuit and beyond.

The marriage of Mr. James M. Buck and Miss Mellie Rowe took place at Stevensville on the 15th inst., your correspondent officiating. The interesting ceremony was performed, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Williams, uncle and aunt of the bride. The company then adjourned to the home of the bridegroom's parents where a sumptuous supper was provided, and a pleasant evening enjoyed by all present. The happy couple, who are both members of our church, and were the recipients of many valuable wedding presents, have the good wishes of a large circle of friends, for a long and prosperous career.

Stevensville has recently had its fire-scare, in common with other Western towns. On the 17th, the large hotel of Catlin & Harris, with the adjoining buildings, burned to the ground. Fortunately, the fire occurred in the day time, the wind was blowing in a favorable direction, and many willing hands with a plenty of buckets and water were quickly on the spot, otherwise a large portion of the town would inevitably have been destroyed. Another evidence of God's mercy and goodness to us! The hotel will, we learn, soon be rebuilt.

What Makes Fanatics and Bigots?

Half-truths, formulated into creeds, or incorporated into sentiments, at the expense of principle, is the stuff out of which fanatics and bigots are made. Show us a fanatic, a bigot, and we will show you a man that has a half or part truth hobby, that ignores principle. This is why he is proof positive against any argument that may be brought against his position, and also why he supplements his lack of knowledge with an exclusiveness and a positiveness in his devotion to his beliefs, that is akin to certainty. "If the light that is in you be darkness, how great is that darkness?" Said the adorable Master.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY: —

Since our Conference at Spokane, the Lord has been sweetly blessing His servant.

We have had two revivals, which resulted in the conversion of quite a number, and eighteen (18) additions to the M E. Church, South. To God be all the glory, praise and honor.

We are expecting great things of our Saviour and He never disappoints us if we hold on to his precious promises.

The prospect brightens for two new churches, and a general awakening on all subjects, such as church Extension, Missions, etc.

Pray for us, that we may be used of God in bringing hundreds of souls to Jesus. Amen!

May God bless you, and all the Montana Conference. With Christian greeting to all the brethren, we are yours, saved through and through. Hallelujah!

Fred St. Clair.

FLATHEAD ITEMS.

Rev. E. L. Lee is pressing the battle in Flathead Valley. There was quite a religious interest awakened during a recent protracted effort at Fairview school-house. One was reclaimed, and professed faith in Christ, two signified their intention to unite with the church, and the faith of many was quickened. The contract has been let for the building of the new church at Demersville, which is to be completed in 60 days. The building is 26x40 feet, with 14 feet walls, ceiling 19 feet, a tower at corner 7½ ft. square and 45ft high. The work has been commenced. The house will be an ornament to the town, and, we trust, a means of great good. The enterprising firm of Clifford & Stonnard cheerfully donated the ground, 100x150 feet, and are taking quite an interest in the work of construction.

—Bro. Lee has many friends and is making more every day. He is arranging to preach at every available point in the valley.

—The town of Demersville is growing very rapidly. We would hardly have known the place, it has improved so since we were there last Summer. A number of buildings are in course of erection. Real estate is reported lively, while the Mercantile Company alone report a business in general merchandise of $20.000 per month.

—Our friends laughed at us for some statements made a year or two ago concerning the probable future of Flathead Valley, but the rapid developments now being made there prove that we were not deceived. Its rich soil, with so many extensive forests, and with such rich coal deposits adjacent, will give employment to a vast population. The Great Northern will likely be built through the valley next year, and it is thought that the Northern Pacific will also build a branch in there, which we think is quite likely. There are forty teams carrying freight from Ravalli across Flathead reservation, while the three boats are busy conveying it across the lake and up the river to Demersville, at the rate of 300,000,000 pounds a week.

The Missoula County S. S. Convention held its third annual session in the M. E. Church, South, at Victor, commencing with the evening of Oct. 31st 1890 and continuing over the two following days.

Not a large number of delegates were present; some, who intended coming from the North were hindered on account of the very irregular train service we have been getting lately, whereby the train is often delayed 5 or 6 hours to the great annoyance of travelers, and all to accommodate one wealthy man—even "Uncle Sam's" business on the Bitter Root Valley has to await the bidding of this autocrat! Such being the case on Friday night.

It was our privilege to be present only on one day of the Convention, Saturday, and a very pleasant and profitable time we foundit.

Dr. A. D. Raleigh, of Missoula, was elected President and filled the chair in a most affable, wise and pleasant manner. Rev. E. M. Ellis, of Stevensville, was re-elected Secretary, an office which is no sinecure, and admirably has it been occupied by him in the past; the untiring energy and zeal which he has evinced having largely contributed to the success which the Convention has already achieved. Miss Jessie Bond, of Victor, was elected Treasurer.

Reports were received from 18 S. Schools, showing that considerable work is being done in the county in that direction. A few other schools failed to report.

The ministers present and participating in the work of the Convention, beside the above mentioned, were Revs. J. J. McAllister, Mr. L. Rickman and J. B. Parnall.

The subjects that elicited the most discussion were: "The Influence of the Sunday School on the Family," shown to be promotive of family religion instead of the reverse as some have feared; "Use of Lesson Papers in the Class" which was largely condemned; "Methods of training Teachers"—they must chiefly be self-trained by practical work and earnest reading, thinking, and praying over each lesson; "A Chautauqua Sunday-school Course" was recommended; "Relation of Pastor to S. School"— many good things were said under this head; "Various Methods of Teaching"— Mrs. L. L. Wood handled this subject most admirably.

The hospitality of the Victor friends, who are comparatively few in number, was most generous.

Stevensville is to have the honor of the next meeting of the Convention.

Dr. Morris at Townsend—Another Church Dedicated.

Dr. I. C. Morris, our lately elected Church Extension Secretary, according to previous arrangement, arrived at Townsend at 6 o'clock P. M., the 7th inst., after preaching at Helena, 36 miles away, at 11 o'clock A. M. He was just off an extended tour through the Columbia and East Columbia Conferences, but he reached us in good health, fine spirits and in excellent preaching plight. He preached for us at night in our newly finished church to a large congregation for our village. His sermon was remarkable for its clear, forcible and charming presentation of Gospel truths. It remains with us, doing us good, not only the upright, but many there are who dwell upon it with pleasure, that we trust will come to "taste the good word of God and the powers of the world to come." After the sermon a collection was raised, and our church house, which we named Mittie Stateler Chapel, in memory of her who has done much to keep one missionary in the field in the West, during the last quarter of a century, was dedicated. Townsend is situated on the Northern Pacific R R. in an extended valley lying along the Missouri river, and is the point where the White Sulphur Springs, and the country on the headwaters of Smith river, reach the railroad, and hence has claims to a progressive future. And we think it is well that our church is here to aid in shaping the social and moral life. It was indeed refreshing to hear the Dr. tell of the future prospects of our work in Oregon and Washington. Our Western work generally, has grown in importance upon the Dr. since he has entered it in the interests of his new work. It has in him a warm friend, and that will help it forward as far as he is able, we believe. This confidence in his devotion to our cause in the West is subsequent, however, to his election to the Secretaryship of the Church Extension Society. He made a speech before the Episcopal Committee at the late General Conference, when we were pleading for more Bishops that we might have more of their valuable service, that we thought was prejudiced to the West and therefore, when we were approached upon the subject of his election, as Secretary of the Church Extension Society, we said: "No, he is not in sympathy with us in the West, and we can't afford to raise any man to connectional relations in our church, who is not in decided sympathy with us in the Great West." But when we heard the Doctor, at our Conference

GRAND PREMIUM OFFER!

A SET OF THE

WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS,

In Twelve Large Volumes,

Which we Offer with a Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than Our Regular Subscription Price.

CHARLES DICKENS.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular subscription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS' WORKS, in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THE MONTANA METHODIST for ONE YEAR, upon receipt of $1.60, which is only 60 cents more than the regular subscription price of this paper. Our readers, therefore, practically get a set of Dickens' works in twelve volumes for only 60 cents. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist for only $1.60. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of 6 yearly subscribers. Address:

in Deer Lodge, in his first effort in the interests of the Church Extension cause, his spirit grew upon us in such catholic proportions, that we saw that our Western field was safe in his hands, as a connectional officer of the church. And we were pleased to approach him, which we did, with extended hand, and tell him that we were glad that he was elected to the position among us, that he had filled so well in this his first effort; that we did not vote for him, and why we did not, which he understood. The Doctor will better understand our joy at his success, and his love for us, and our cause in this advanced field then any one else, we dare say. May he live long to bless the church he loves so much, with his valuable service.

Kind Words.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:

I don't know that you feel the need of any words of appreciation, but when I consider that you have met an emergency in taking hold of the paper under circumstances requiring a courage beyond the strength of any other man on the field, and in connection with District work too, and above all this giving us a good, live paper, almost without any help, so far, in the way of contributions from the brethren, I beg leave to assure you that I am not forgetful of your burdens, and shall endeavor to bear my part in the finance burden as well as help you in whatever way I can in contributions to the columns of the paper.

A. C. COUEY.

Life's Losses.

The losses of life are frequently its greatest gains. Rightly improved, our losses and trials help us to be, which is even better than being helped to do. It used to be thought that the coral insect was a patient worker, and that the islands upreared by him from the ocean depths into the sunlight were the result of his untiring toil; but modern science has shown that it is the endurance rather than the industry of the coral insect which uplifts these islands. It is the gradual hardening of the insect in its place that makes the coral; and it is his life built in on the lives of those who were before him that goes to form the basis of gardens of tropical bloom and fruitage, when the upper air shall have been reached by the successive generations of those who live and endure and die at their sea-swept posts. So it may be with us in our slow hardening of character and our slow dying unto self; at some post of duty, away under the surface, far out of the world's sight, our endurance may do more than our best work could do, and our progress may be greater while we wait than it could be if we moved forward.—Ex.

"MEIN POOR CATTLES."

A German Woman's Lament for Her Domestic Pets, Killed by the Cars, Near Helena.

Mr. Editor of the Independent Newspaper.—

HELENA, May 13.—I cannot hardly tell you how my heart breaks, when the great big locomotive and the line of cars come along by my ranch and runs over my cows and calves and cuts them into pieces and they die.

I am a poor, hard working, Deutsch woman, what raised all these little cows and calves by mein own hand from their own mothers; and when I went out into the barn yard every morning and every evening, they would come around me and lick mein hand, when I called them by name, "Here Dickie, here Susie, here Tommy, her Febus, here Venus," until they all stood around me, like mein own little children when I wakes them up in the morning.

I loved them little cattles, for I knew they would bring me some money when they grew into big cows and big steers, and then I thought I could send my little boys and girls to the school in Helena and they would get a good education and make fine men and women, like the American boys and girls do, who are so strong and noble like our great Kaiser Wilhelm and Prince Bismarck in our Faderland.

To-day I have applied to Mr. Shaw, who settles all things, for the value of the cattle I have lost by the great cars which run over them, and I think he will give me what they are worth in money, or what mein neighbors would have given me before they was killed.

Mr. INDEPENDENT, I don't care so much about the moneys as I do about how my poor little cattles felt when they was killed. When the cars run by my place, I heard all my poor, little cattles bellowing and screaming and making a great noise, and my little boys and girls says: "Mamma! the great iron cars has killed our cows and calves!" So we all run out to the track to see them; and when we got there we found some dead and some with their legs broken, and they made me feel so bad and all my boys and girls feel so bad we all cried. Poor Dickie, and Susie, and Venus had their legs broken, and when I came and spoke to them they turned their heads to me and licked my hands. I called them by name and they seemed to know me. I smoothed their faces, and they were dying and they made no more noise. Then I and my children we all cried again.

And pretty soon came along the men on mein ranch and said my poor little cattle would make good beef, and so they cut their throats and dressed them for the market, so we would not lose all they were worth. But we could not eat one little piece of them, although they were good beef; they seemed almost like part of our own little family to us, for we had raised them by hand in our home.

Mr. INDEPENDENT, if Mr. Villard was here, he would pay me for all my little cattles, because he is so good. He lived in my little village in Germany, and he was a great big, fine young man when I was a little, small girl going to school in our village, and he would never let the big boys hurt the little boys or girls in our school. So I hope the great Northern Pacific Railroad company will do by me as mein friend Henry Villard would. MRS. E. K.

Vol. 2. NOVEMBER, 29th, 1890. No. 31.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The Quarterly Review of the M. E. Church, South, is supposed to be the exponent of the best and maturest thought of the church. Every preacher and laymen who feels an interest in the great questions that are being discussed by the leading minds of the church, should have it. Price $2.50 per annum; to ministers $2.00. Published by Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

— The Marion-Sims College of Medicine, corner Grand Ave. and Caroline Sts., St. Louis, Mo., is recommended by some of our best men as one of the best institutions of its kind in St. Louis. Tuition for only half price to sons of ministers and physicians.

—The announcement made by the editor of the "Montana Christian Advocate" that his church is going to "occupy every field in Montana," savors very much of the spirit that prompted the annulling of the solemn agreement entered into in 1844, and the avowal of the policy of "disintegration and absorption"—the reckless rushing into every region regardless of rights, promises, or proprieties. It is just this spirit and this course that are responsible for the strife and bitterness that have cursed Methodism from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. Unhallowed ambition has ruined angels, men and nations, and it will in time destroy the influence of churches as well, when they are controlled too much by it.

—The "Montana Christian Advocate" notices the return of Rev. S. E. Snider from the East, but says nothing of his recent trip to Flathead Valley, nor of the mission upon which he went. We wonder that our wide-awake brother should overlook such an important item. However, it might not be edifying to some of his democratic readers.

—Just as we are mailing the matter for this issue of the paper, word comes of a good meeting and a refreshing time at South Boulder. Souls were converted and the work revived.

—Rev. J. B. Parnall is pressing the battle at Fairplay. We trust that our brother will have fair play, and that the word of the Lord shall have free course, save and be glorified.

— The population of Montana, according to the census report for 1890, is 131,769. In 1870 the population was 20,595, so you see there has been an increase of 111,174 inhabitants in ten years, and she ranks as the 44th state in the union in population.

—"I believe that anything which attempts or affects to alter the fundamental relation which the Almighty Himself has established and the designs which He has marked out in our constitutions and capacities to draw woman out of her own sphere, and to expect her either to exchange it for the sphere of man or to act in both with efficiency—that scheme that involves changes of that kind, for my own part, I contemplate neither with approval nor with sanguine expectation of happy results." This is one of the latest utterances of this Grand Old Man, who may well be styled the friend of universal humanity. N. Y. ADVOCATE.

—The "Baptist Mountaineer" has changed its name to "Baptist Vanguard," and is greatly improved in its general makeup. It is now published at Seattle. We wish it success in its new location.

—Brother Price discusses a question of great moment. We are glad to know that the people are beginning to realize the situation. Just the other day the leading physician of our town came to the writer with the question, "what can we do to save the young people of this community?" Let us rise up and build the walls of Jerusalem—the Church of God—rulers, priests, apothecaries, silversmiths, nobles, merchants, sons, daughters, old and young—just as they did when Nehemiah was in charge and every man by his own house. Get the people converted to God——this is the only effectual way.

—Rev. J. W. Shreve, of the East Columbia Conference, who was appointed to Weston, has gone to Deer Loring, Va., where he will spend a few months. His charge has been supplied for the time.

—The case of D. C. Kelley, who was suspended by the Tennessee Conference for six months for having left his work to canvass the state for Governor, is exciting not a little comment pro and con. Our opinion, of course, will have but little weight, but we are decidedly in favor of the action of the committee. If one man may leave his charge for that or a similar purpose, then may every other preacher, and at this rate we would soon have no itinerancy and no church. The office of a minister of the Gospel is higher than that of governor of a state, even though he be elected on the prohibition ticket, just as much as the Gospel of the Son of God in its entirety is greater than temperance. The former includes the latter; the latter is only a part of the former.

—We have enrolled more than one hundred new names on the subscription list of the "Methodist" since Conference, and still they come. We want a hundred more before January. Reader, how many will you send us? Please try and get one or more. Won't you?

—The letter from Rev. T. C. Downs was not intended for publication; but it is from one whom we have known so long to be a true friend of our church, and such a true minister of the Lord Jesus Christ, and is so full of interest to us that we thought our readers would enjoy it. Brother Downs is one of the leading men of the Western Conference and has represented his Conference in the General Conference one or two sessions. He is a "down Easter", and in coming West united with the M. E. church, South, from choice, because of its non-political character, and where he has been greatly blessed in winning souls to Christ.

Notes

—Stanley, the African explorer, was tendered a grand reception in New York the 11th inst. Serious charges are being published against him in the English papers in regard to his management of the last great expedition. No man has ever accomplished anything or attained eminence without enemies and opposition. The matter will be tried by the courts when the great traveler returns to England.

—"Sowers and Reapers," is the title of a bright-faced little sheet sent out in the interest of missions, and is intended largely for juvenile readers. It is edited by Dr. I. G. John, the office secretary of the Board of Missions, and contains some mighty interesting reading for grown people. It is only 25 cents a year. Send for it.

—There never was a time when the subject of missions was agitating the Christian world as it is to-day. And so it ought. What has not Christianity done for us as individuals? as families? as communities? as nations? What it has done for us, will it not do for others in proportion to their capacities, if they receive it? The doors of the world are open, and the nations of the earth are calling loudly "Come over and help us." We cannot be idle or indifferent and remain guiltless. Christ so loved that he gave himself for us, and we must give our prayers, our efforts, our substance, our life, to rescue those for whom Christ died. Brother, sister, are you doing your duty in this matter? We hope the Montana Conference will raise $500 for missions this year. This was the amount first assessed by the Board, but it was cut down to $400. Let every one give as the Lord has prospered him; make it a matter of conscience and a subject of prayer, and God will make it a means of grace to your soul.

—What about the Woman's Department of Church Extension? What are the preachers doing in this line in Montana? They will see by reference to the Discipline that important and valuable changes were made in the regulations of this department of our work. The Parsonage Society is now known as the "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, the object of which shall be to unite the efforts of Christian women and children in the collection of funds, by private effort, personal solicitation, membership fees, donations, devises and bequests, for procuring homes for itinerant preachers, and otherwise aiding the cause of Christ."

You will see that this last clause gives the society an almost unlimited field. It may do all the work of a pastor's aid society, collect funds for parsonages, church debt, visit and minister to prisoners, the sick or poor, or in fact anything that is to do in connection with church work. Send to the Conference Secretary, Mrs. E. J. Stanley, Corvallis, Montana, for circulars, and organize at once. We need several new parsonages very badly, and this society, if properly organized, might easily secure the building of one parsonage in our Conference each year without hindering any other enterprise. Enough fragments could be gathered up for this purpose that otherwise are lost.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

HELENA DISTRICT NOTES.

A. C. COUEY.

Since my last communication to the "Methodist" I have been with Bro. H. B. Cockrill on the Willow Creek Circuit. The quarterly Conference was held at South Boulder, commencing Friday night, Oct. 31. The meeting was protrabted a little over two weeks. I was with the pastor seven days and nights of the time. God was with us graciously, in soul stirring, convicting and converting power. The people came and heard the Word gladly. We were greatly refreshed. Bro. Cockrill will give the final results as to conversions and accessions.

—On Saturday, Nov. 8th, I joined Father L. B. Stateler at White Hall Station and rode through drifting snow up to Fish Creek, the point where we held the quarterly Conference—preaching Saturday night, Sabbath 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. and Monday night. By reason of the stormy weather, and preaching by a brother of the M. E. church some five miles away, on Sabbath, we had small congregations.

On this circuit there are very questionable steps being taken, looking to the building "altar against altar." Sin lieth at the door of some one. This could, and should be avoided.

Bro. Stateler astonishes us all with his almost marvelous strength and unabating liberty in the pulpit and life about the fireside, in the homes of his people. I confess to a degree of embarrassment, to act upon the role of presiding elder with this patriarch of Montana Methodism. There was no reason for this, however, on the part of Bro. Stateler. Those who know how to rule, have known how to be subject. This man's life is a benediction to me, every time we meet.

I close my first round among the brethren on the Helena District with Brother Warren on the Bozeman Circuit the fourth Sabbath in November. The young elder has been most courteously received by the fathers and young men at every place. The way seems to me open for a very prosperous year.

The Spiritual.

The spiritual of the District surely is on the up grade.

Goulder at Bozeman, Bramble at Alhambra, Clark at Duck Creek, Cockrill at South Boulder, Squires at Butte, have all protracted, some several weeks, others less time. The church has been blessed at every point. At several places souls have been converted, for which we praise God. I hear that other brethren of the District purpose revival efforts soon.

—o—

The Material.

Bro. Tabor at Deer Lodge, for the length of time on his work, and strength of his charge, makes a most gratifying report in finance. He also emphasizes the spiritual and is doing well.

Bro. Warren is talking parsonage and furnishing church at Belgrade. Bro. R. S. Clarke is "gathering up the fragments" at Townsend on the new church building. Johnson repairs and enlarges at Boulder.

The salaries of the preachers as I went round, were not commensurate with their zeal and labors. We hope for the revival in the heart, to go downward till another vital point is reached. Let the brethren educate the people to their duty on the grace of giving liberally and systematically.

We have emphasized the Sunday School and Church Extension work on the first round. Other matters will be given prominence the second round.

—o—

Missoula District Notes.

Rev. T. W. Flowers is preaching earnestly and acceptably to good congregations on the Corvallis and Grantsdal charge.

—o—

Stevensville Charge.

Rev. J. B. Parnall has closed his meeting at Ambrose school-house—six accessions in all, with hope of several others coming. He writes, "Closed up there finely on Sunday night. Praise God for victory."

—o—

Wallace.

Rev. E. J. Stanley held interesting services at this place the 9th of Nov. The house was crowded with attentive hearers at night.

—o—

From Deer Lodge.

I have been on the ground a month to-day, considering our small membership we are getting well organized for work. The outlook is promising, the attendance at prayer-meeting is almost equal in number to our church roll. Our Sunday-school is one-third larger than our membership, and our congregation is double, new scholars are coming in every Sunday. Our congregation is gradually increasing. The ladies have organized an aid society and are moving on nicely. They have liquidated over one hundred dollars of our church debt, and have partly furnished the parsonage. One good sister remarked that it was her first opportunity for twenty years to work for her own church.

Bro. Couey was home a few days last week. He brings good tidings from the field. We deeply sympathize with Bro. Staton and wife, our neighbors, who lost their little babe to-day. We are praying for and expecting a revival.

S. B. TABOR.

From East Helena.

Our first quarterly meeting for this charge was held at Alhambra, Oct. 18th, and protracted one week. The meeting resulted in two accessions and two conversions, and also in quite an awakening among the people. The church members were very much revived and built up in the faith of the Gospel. The presiding elder, Rev. A. C. Couey, was present from the beginning to the close and did most of the preaching. His preaching was in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, and was highly satisfactory to all who heard him. Bro. Clark was with us at the beginning and preached a good sermon.

L. BRAMBLE.

Walla Walla Notes.

EDITOR METHODIST:—Your invitation to "write again" is accepted. Our work is slowly but surely improving, especially in the Sunday-school, which has grown from 10 to 34 in two months, and all seem to be much interested. Our morning congregations are very small, but the evening services are well attended, and increasing in numbers.

We have partly furnished the church with new Hymn books, (the Prayer and Praise) but need more; and we have decided to put in electric lights, provided the company can furnish them to us.

I have been engaged in a revival meeting at our country appointment, but had to discontinue on account of throat trouble, which required an operation to be performed, which has been done, and it is now nearly well, I did not lose an appointment on that account, though I suffered much. I am unable to give results of the meeting. It is being continued by a brother of the United Brethren Church. We are encouraged and hopeful. We have received one member, by letter, since Conference. I was glad to receive a letter from my old friend and Conference class-mate, Goulder. Hope to see you both at our next Conference session.

From Council Grove, Kansas.

DEAR BROTHER:—I find myself somewhat delinquent in paying up my subscription to the "Montana Methodist." I therefore enclose $1.00 for another year's reading of your sprightly little paper. I not only feel a deep and abiding interest in you personally as the result of early association, but in your work in that distant region. I often think of the Conference of 1871, when we perspired so freely before the committee of examination. Anxious to pass muster, and be ordained deacons. I remember, too, what a thrill of emotion ran through me when we stood before the sainted Marvin and received the imposition of his hands. From that Conference you went out from us to battle for Christ in that far-off land, and when I bade you adieu I felt that I would in all probability see you no more, but thanks to a kind providence, I have seen your face several times since, and have read everything that has come from your pen that has come within my reach. That Conference in '71, you remember was held in Council Grove. I had no thought then that I would ever be the pastor of the church here, but so it is, I have entered upon my fourth year, and pray God it may be the best year of my life. Nearly twenty years have passed away, since we took the solemn vows of deacons in the church of God and I thank God "that we have not run in vain neither labored in vain." We have some seals to our ministry. Council Grove has changed greatly in that time. From a mere village it has become a city of the second class, with a fine system of water works, electric lights &c. In place of one church, we now have seven. Our church has been able to hold its own amid all the changes and vicissitudes through which it has passed. We have some noble people here. Among whom I mention B. K. Scott and wife. They are natives of Ohio, but are as true to the church as if they had been born in the Southland, It is a mistake to suppose that our church is only for people born in the south. Its non political course in the past as in the present places it in a favorable aspect before an unprejudiced public. May God bless you abundantly in Montana.

Yours fraternally

T. C. DOWNS.

From Pattonsburg, Mo.

DEAR BROTHER:

I send you resolutions of esteem passed by our Sunday School here, after the departure of Brother and Sister Tabor for their new field of labor at Deer Lodge, Montana, which I hope you will publish in the MONTANA METHODIST. Bro. Tabor was our pastor for three years, and was faithful, earnest and efficient. And we will watch his corner in Montana with interest. May the Great Shepherd who blessed his works so graciously here, still bless his works in the Montana Conference. I received a copy of the MONTANA METHODIST, and was pleased to see what a footing our beloved church is gaining in the young sister State of Montana. May the good work go on until the Montana Conference may take rank with the older Conferences of our beloved Methodism.

Your Brother,

G. D. EWING.

RESOLUTIONS OF ESTEEM.

Pattonsburg Sunday School, Pattonsburg Circuit, Gallatin District, Missouri, Annual Conference M. E. Church, South, October 11, 1890.

The Superintendent, J. R. Beckner, appointed G. D. Ewing and J. C. Brownlee a committee to draft suitable resolutions expressing the sentiments of the school upon the removal of Bro. S. B. Tabor and wife to the Montana Conference.

The committee reported the following which was adopted:

WHEREAS, Our much esteemed pastor for the last three years, Rev. S. B. Tabor, was, at the last Missouri Conference transferred to the Montana Conference, and appointed to the station of Deer Lodge in that Conference, and the pleasant relations that have existed during these years, can now only be lived over in memory. Now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That in the removal of Bro. Tabor this School has lost a good and efficient worker and a faithful and good friend to the children, one whose memory we will ever cherish.

RESOLVED, That in the removal of Sister Laura Tabor, this School has lost a good and faithful worker, a kind and gentle teacher and one fully alive to the training of the children in the way they should go. Her memory we will ever cherish.

RESOLVED, That we can recommend Brother and Sister Tabor to the Sunday School workers in their new field of labor, and we confidently believe that our loss in their going out from us will be a blessing to the Montana Conference.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be published in the Pattonsburg Call and a copy sent to the MONTANA METHODIST for publication, and that a copy be furnished Brother and Sister Tabor, and spread upon the minutes of our Sunday School record.

MISS IDA MAY, Secretary. J. R. BECKNER, Superintendent.

is wrong in principle and vicious and demoralizing in its tendency. The gambler either takes the property of another without giving value received, or exposes his own property to loss without the probability of anything in return. In either case he does violence to his own nature and commits a crime against society and against the God of heaven who holds him responsible for the right use of every nickel that comes honestly into his possession. It is not to be compared with mining or any legitimate business or industry. It is illegitimate and evil altogether, whether in the shape of the Louisiana or any other lottery, game of cards, betting on a horse-race, investing in futures or buying chances in a ring-cake or a grab-bag at a church-festival. It feeds the flame of inordinate lust for gain; it fosters indolence, deceit, dishonesty, fraud; pampers and encourages every evil appetite, and utterly unfits the individual who follows it for any high and noble association.

It is appalling to behold the extent to which this vice is practised, and the high sanction that it receives. "Licensed Gambling House" is the sign that greets the eye over numerous doors along the main thoroughfares of many of the towns and villages of Montana. "Licensed" by the Legislature, and by public sentiment in a Christian land—and the fact emblazoned often in letters of gold, that for the sake of a nominal sum of money, men are licensed to carry on a business that robs their fellow-men of all their wealth of soul and body, and then turns them over to the demon of despair to be tormented forever and ever.

Could our readers but take a peep behind the scenes to-night they would be astonished to see how many young men, business men, those who are looked upon as model husbands, sons, brothers, partners, men representing nearly every profession, are spending the evening in these gambling hells. There is the secret of many a fall, many a failure in business, the foreclosure of many a mortgage and the turning out of many a helpless family upon the world. This is why many a man is not willing to give up all and become a Christian—it is the power that this demon has over him.

But how can we wonder at it when children are often schooled in the art around the centre-table from the time that they are old enough to throw a card (bless the memory of that sainted mother who would not allow a deck of cards about her home, and taught, and instilled it into the mind of her boy that there is poison in the very touch of a card), when our fairs are turned into horse-racing, of which gambling is the principal feature, when business exchanges are prostituted from their legitimate use and even church sociables are dull without grab-bags and other games of chance to make them exciting and draw a crowd and nearly everything is made to give encouragement to this vice. The gambling mania infects the very atmosphere of many portions of our great West. Even the women—wives, mothers, and sisters of our land—be it said with shame—are heard discussing stocks, and are found dealing in futures and even betting at horse-races. No wonder that we have had panics that have closed banks and business houses from one end of the continent to the other, and robbed thousands of men and women of all their earnings and have built up a vast monopoly that is able to buy the law-makers and bid defiance to the public sentiment of the best people of one of the great states of the American Union.

Let parents discountenance everything that could possibly lead to or encourage the habit of gambling in their children, let young men avoid this vice as they would the coils of a deadly serpent, let the pulpit, the press, and all the honest yeomanry of our country cry out against this monster evil by voices and votes until it is driven back to the doomed regions from whence it came.

Brief Notes.

— The "Montana Good Templar" comes to us greatly enlarged and improved. It is now the official organ of the I. O. G. T. in Montana, and is edited and published by James T. Farris at Stevensville. The order of Good Templars has been a living institution in Montana from the very first. When the writer came here twenty years ago there were few schoolhouses and churches, but the Good Templar halls at Boulder and Diamond City and other places were opened for preaching, and we were glad to recognize the good work that was being accomplished by the order. It gave us no little satisfaction, after the hall had been destroyed by fire at Boulder several years ago, to know that the lodge could hold its meetings in the first church house that our hands had helped to build. While we believe that the church of God is the grandest temperance organization in the world, yet we wish our brethren of the I. O. G. T. great success in their efforts to banish King Alcohol from our fair mountain land. We congratulate our friend "Jimmie" on his recent promotion to the office of Grand Chief Templar and on the success of his paper. There is no telling what patience and perseverance will accomplish, when directed along right lines.

—While in Wallace, filling our last appointment there, we where entertained in the hospitable home of Mr. E. E. Morrow and wife, whose bright eyed, curly-headed, prattling little boy, two years old, adds much to the joy and sunshine of their home. Mr. Morrow has charge of the electric light works of the town, and from him we learned more about "dynamos," "arcs," "transformers", "motors" etc. than we ever expected to know, and the more we learned, the more we saw how much there is still to be learned. Just think of having electricity to light your street, your home, turn your grindstone, your washing machine, your sewing machine, and everything that is to be performed by machinery about your house, and all regulated—the power turned on or off—in a moment, just by touching a button or a thumb screw. This is getting to be possible. Verily in a short time the steam engine will be a thing of the past. Surely the world moves, and it will shortly be moved largely by lightning.

—It is with a sad heart that we record the decease of Mrs. Cora Hutchinson, who used to be so extensively and familiarly known in Helena and Prickly Pear Valley as Cora Burns. Two homes—her own and her parents — are draped in mourning. The afflicted ones have our deepest sympathy, and we join most heartily in the beautiful tribute to her memory by Brother Bramble in another column of this paper.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests, and shall labor in every laudable way to promote them.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list by the first of January 1891.

Premiums.

To encourage the circulation of the MONTANA METHODIST we make the following offer: —

"To every person sending us five new subscribers, with the cash, five dollars, we will send an extra copy of the paper free to any address ordered, or a copy of "RAMBLES IN WONDERLAND," a clothbound book, by Edwin J. Stanley, descriptive of the Geysers and other Wonders of the great Yellowstone National Park (Price $1.00)."

"To any one sending us two new subscribers, with the cash, two dollars, we will send a copy of a pamphlet, "PATRIOTISM and RELIGION," by the same author. This offer holds good until the first of January 1891."

Begin at once; send money by money-order, postal note, registered letter, express or draft. All communications, business or otherwise, should be addressed to

Out of Humor.

The "Montana Christian Advocate" is not in a good humor, as is evident from an article on the last page of the first paper issued since the recent election, The editor discovers that some of the members of his church have united with the M. E. Church, South, and have not all come back, is alarmed lest others living in the Flathead countrys, where they have never had a preacher, and in other places should commit the same unpardonable offence and that the M. E. Church (North) will not get complete control of every nook and corner of the whole earth, imagines that "tricks are being played," publishes to the world that his church in the near future will "occupy every field in Montana," whether or no. Till it comes, he informs his people that they may "co-operate with other churches" (though in what way nor to what extent is not stated), but warns them that "future trouble will be saved by remaining in the old church, unless an absolute withdrawal for all times is contemplated!"

This is refreshing. We wonder if the editor of the "Advocate" and his co-laborers have always been as scrupulous in advising the members of other churches that they have found without pastors scattered throughout the Northwest to remain in their "old church." We wonder if this is intended to notify all the Christian people of other denominational preferences who have found shelter in the fold of the M. E. church (North) for the sake of Christian fellowship and co-operation for the time being, that they are not longer wanted unless they are there for "all time" to come. Such is the logic of the course advised. It is a poor rule that won't work both ways. But we take it that this advice has a special application and is intended only to intensify prejudice against the M. E. church, South, whose presence and continued and increased prosperity here in Montana, in spite of so much opposition and so many predictions of failure (and which, by the way, begins to seriously affect the reputation of certain prophets for correctness) is causing some of our modern Sanballots and Tobiahs no little trouble and uneasiness.

There are to-day not a few of our members who have united with the M. E. church (North) simply because our church was not organized at the places where they lived at the time, and some of them at least were advised to do so by the preachers of that church. There are some of them under Dr. Raleigh's pastorate at Missoula now, and to our knowledge, no minister of our church has said aught against it. This being the case it ill becomes our brother to sit in his easy chair amid the luxuries of city life and publish slurs and insinuations against men who partly to avoid strife, have gone at no little expense and labor, out on the frontiers, preaching a pure Gospel to the people who otherwise would be in measure destitute, supplying them with the means of grace, and honestly and in the fear of God are striving to build up the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. So far as the charge of "playing tricks" as made by the editor of the "Advocate" relates to the ministers of the M. E. church, South, in the Flathead country, we simply say he is mistaken in the matter, that he better sweep around his own dooryard before going to his neighbor's, and that people who live in such delicately constructed glass-houses should be careful how they indulge the luxury of throwing stones.

That "Falsehood"—Where are the Three?

Why did the "Advocate's" correspondent from South Boulder, and also the editor, pass by in silence that is significant, even if it is not golden, the correction of THREE erroneous and misleading statements that had appeared in the "Advocate?" And why does the editor seize upon one statement made by "Willow Creek," and without waiting for a reply, or explanation, or anything, pronounce a verdict, characterize it "a falsehood nailed," put it in bold faced type, and rush away to Flathead and make other rash and reckless statements. Consistency is a jewel that our brother should seek. It makes a difference whose ox suffers. If the prisoner at the bar were allowed to sit in judgment he would silence every witness. An impartial judge waits until all the evidence is in before rendering his decision. Another witness from the other side might throw light upon the subject. Possibly it might not be a "falsehood." Every question has two sides. We do not know who "Willow Creek" is. We were not in charge of the paper when his letter appeared. But we suppose that he is honest, conscientious and capable of taking care of himself. He shall have a hearing if he wants it. But until then, we remark just here, that when a new Methodist preacher comes into a community where there is but one church established, and that a Methodist church that is served by a regular pastor, establishes a regular appointment, visits the members of that church, and then when some of these members withdraw from the church and join with the new preacher in forming a new church in the same neighborhood, to a looker on or the pastor who possibly knew nothing of the promises made by previous pastors, it would naturally appear that the presence and influence of the new preacher in that community had something to do with the change in church relations. Especially would this impression be strengthened if there should come accounts of "questionable methods" being used in a neighboring community, such as are reported by a correspondent in another column of this issue of the "Methodist."

A Minister Murdered by Indians in '66.

While on a recent trip to Flathead Valley we met with Mr. J. W. Shaw, who crossed the plains in 1866. Captain Parks commanded the train, which numbered about 600 men with 400 wagons and teams and came by the Bridge route. There was a Methodist preacher in the train who traveled with a mule-team driven by a hired man. He was about 40 years old and had a boy about 14 years of age. He preached to the people when they were in camp on the road on Sundays, was an earnest man, and would frequently reprove the boys for swearing. When on a stream, called Rosebud, about two or three days travel from the Yellowstone, the preacher became impatient, left the train, and started with his wagon and team for the Yellowstone. The people remonstrated against such a course, as the country was full of hostile Indians, but he avowed his trust in God, and said he was not afraid of the Indians.

When the wagen-train arrived at the Yellowstone river, they found the remains of the wagon, which had been burnt, and the bodies of the party of two men and that of the boy lying near. They were riddled with bullets, scalped, and stripped of most of their clothing. The hired-man and boy had been killed near the river where they were fishing, as the fishing-tackle was lying by them. The body of the minister was lying on the left side, with hands extended above the head, about 20 yards from the wagon.

Mr. Shaw helped to bury the bodies. They were laid, each in a separate grave, with a blanket for a winding-sheet and left to sleep alone in the wilderness. Our informant could not remember their names.

AMONG THE INDIANS FORTY YEARS AGO—THE SHAWNEE'S-WYANDOTTE'S DARK DEED.

BY L. B. STATELER.

At the conference of 1845 I was changed to the Kansas River District, which embraced all the mission stations in what is now the State of Kansas. This involved another long move. The laborious travel of the previous year was repeated in getting to our new charge.

In connection with the District I also had charge of the Shawnee mission, which was one of the largest missions we had, and thus had to do double duty. I continued in this relation, filling both places. for the next five years so come, during which time we had great success among the Shawnees and gracious revivals on most of the charges.

THE WYANDOTTES,

just prior to these days, had been removed from Ohio to the West. They purchased a township of land, embracing the country lying between the Missouri and Kansas rivers, just above the junction of the two streams, including the site now occupied by the town of Kansas City, Kansas.

A missionary, James Wheeler, came with them to their new home in the West. A commodious and comfortable parsonage, or preacher's home, was erected with the proceeds from the sale of the mission buildings in the country from which they came. Brother Wheeler remained only about one year, adhering north in the separation of the church that occurred about this time.

Edward T. Peery was appointed at the ensuing Conference to Wyandotte Mission. There is an incident that is worthy of being recorded here. When the Wyandottes first landed at their new home, the brethren (Indians) said, "Though we haven't houses in which to dwell, yet the first thing we do shall be to build a house for God." Accordingly they went at once lo work and erected a large log house in which to worship.

The Wyandotte membership was very strong. Perhaps more than ono-half the tribe were well disposed toward Christianity and attended church. A more devout and happy Christian people than the Wyandotte people were at this time, I never had the privilege of laboring with. And this happy state of things continued from 1844 to 1848. We were a band of brothers, loving each other fervently.

In the meantime there was erected a large brick church, which was sufficient to accommodate nearly the entire tribe, numbering 350 or 450 persons. There were with them two native preachers, Brothers Squire Grey Eyes and George Clark, the latter a half breed who spoke English very well and was also a very good interpreter. There were also three Walker brothers, half breeds, whose wives were white women. They were educated, intelligent men, and good interpreters. Their wives were all members of the church. There were also two brothers by the name of Armstrong—Silas and John. They were half Indian, but their wives were white women. The men did most of the interpreting. Sister John Armstrong was the daughter of the late Rev. —— Bigelow, one of the prominent members of the Ohio Conference. Francis Hicks was principal chief of the tribe and a prominent member of the church. Father Hicks, as we called him—father of the chief—a Brother Bigtree, another Brother named Solomon—these men were pillars in the church. We had camp-meetings among the Wyandottes, which were seasons of great good.

I now turn to a topic that is sad to think about, and to an occurrence that was unfortunate and evil in its results.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, North, chose to annul the plan of separation that had been adopted, and treat the Southern Church as a secession. It claimed the right to occupy the entire territory, regardless of the claims of the church, South. Not long thereafter the authorities of that church sent a missionary into our midst—among the Wyandottes—who so far influenced a portion of the members that they withdrew from our church and set up for themselves, and that, too, against the demonstrance of the most intelligent men of the nation, who predicted to them what the sad results would be to their nation. The strength of the church, however, remained intact.

The withdrawing party proceeded at once to the woods, hewed logs and erected another house of worship, so that the little tribe which could easily have occupied one house was divided.

Very sad results followde. That happy state that had existed for four years all vanished away. Brother was arrayed against brother. But a still sadder result followed. A brother of the seceding party had occasion to correct his son. The irate youth determined to have revenge, and went and set fire to the log church where his father worshipped, and it was burned down. The parties worshipping there charged the burning to the other side, and soon thereafter the fine brick church was discovered to be in flames and went up in smoke. Afterwards the boy confessed that he did the burning, and that the parties allied to the M. E. Church, South, were innocent. Thus a nation of these people was rent and torn and deprived of a place to worship in—all because a Conference failed to keep a solemn compact that had been entered into in good faith.

[Alas, this is not the only instance of bad faith of the same kind and in the same direction, nor of the sad, sad results that have followed.—EDITOR.]

—o—

"COWBOY CONFERENCES."

The Richmond CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE seems to be constitutionally opposed to our Western work and criticises it on every occasion. In a late issue the editor opposes the drawing of our strong men from the old Conference and placing them where, as he is pleased to express it, "their talents avail little for the Church." Of course, the judgment of all our Bishops and leading men who have been West and labored there, and understand the situation, goes for nothing! The true inwardness of the opposition is found in the following: "Cowboy Conferences cost. Prosperity here makes preaching possible there, and the soul of a Virginian is worth as much as the soul of a miner beyond the Sierra Nevada."

But what if the miner happened to be a Virginian, and the editor's own boy? Would his salvation be considered too costly? What if the "cowboys" should happen to be connected with one of the first families of "the old dominion?" Anyhow, they have souls for whom Christ died and to whom we must carry the Gospel. Of course they "cost." The salvation of this world was a costly affair. But God didn't hesitate or keep back anything on that account, and neither will we if we have his spirit. He so loved that he gave, and gave as he loved. It was selfishness and coveteousness that suggested the idea of "costliness" and "waste" when love was pouring out her offering to our Lord. How quickly and sharply the Master rebuked it. Of course, prosperity when the church is strong makes preaching possible on the border and in the "regions beyond." The strong help the weak. If one member suffers let all suffer with it. This is the Gospel rule. This is the commission given by our Lord.

Dr. Lafferty's argument applies equally against foreign mission work. Labor there often apparently avails little for the church for years. The time of harvest is not always at hand. Ministers are something besides highly geared McCormick reapers and railsplitters. Paul didn't simply go about eating fruit from growing orchards. He "planted and Apollos watered." He sowed for others to reap. He laid foundations for others to build upon. He sought to establish Christianity on the great centers and on the outposts, just as we are seeking to do in the West to-day. He didn't have very large congregations when he preached to a few women at the riverside, but he preached to them all the same and we see the result throughout all Europe. The good timber that is so easily worked in Virginia has been highly cultivated under favorable conditions for several generations. It ought not to require much work. Our mountain mahogany is rather gnarley and hard to work, but it is very solid and durable and capable of a very high polish. It isn't everybody that can work it successfully.

The truth is,the battles that we are fighting to establish Christianity in the public mind in the great West, were fought along the Atlantic coast more than a hundred years ago. Our work is to clear out the stumps, and prepare the ground and secure a better growth. It cannot be accomplished in a day. We must have time and have help. Our people at home ought to be glad to send their best men to help in this great work. If they all stay at home working only the little patches that their great grand-fathers cleared out and fenced, and planted for them, it is not hard to see the result. After a while the soil will wear out, and the people starve out; there will then be no place "out West" for them to go to for the fresh new land will be pre-empted by others, and the Pacific coast may yet have to send missionaries back to Virginia, as people in the Northwest have been called upon to do for portions of New England! Who knows?

After all, we are glad that the church at home begins to feel the draft made upon her by the West. When the "old nature" begins to squirm it is a good sign.

When the church begins to realize the scarcity of efficient laborers for her extending fields, as we have felt it here in the West for two or three decades, perhaps she will betake herself to prayer, as never before, to the Lord of the harvest for more laborers to be raised up. This is what is greatly needed.

A private letter from Deer Lodge contains the following cheering words: "Bro. Tabor is with us. We all love him and hope he may do a good work here this year. Congregations are on the increase, so is the Sunday-school."

A personal note from Bro. Couey says: "The brethren are stretching or spreading me out in their protracted meetings. I am now with Bro. Bramble, at Alhambra. We have had gracious blessings on Christians, and the spirit of conviction on sinners. There are several seekers with whom we now labor day and night. I am greatly encouraged. The Lord is very precious to my soul. My confidence grows stronger."

WITNESSES AGAINST CHRIST.

Among the Jews—as now among others—more than one witness was necessary to condemn to death. There was not one true witness who made out a clear testimony of wrong concerning Christ. A witness among the Jews was asked whether it was in a year of Jubilee, or in an ordinary year—what month—what day—what hour, he witnessed what he testified. Thus the judges were to make "diligent inquisition" of the witnesses. The witnesses versus Christ were not so definite, but although they may have given corectly the time and place, the great trouble with their testimony was, it was false. A false witness was to be subjected to the same penalty which he sought to have inflicted on the accused. False witnesses were sought, suborned, bribed by the immaculate (?) Sanhedrim to bear false testimony. According to Matthew, two false witnesses testified of Christ, he said, "I am able to destroy the Temple of God, and to build it in three days." John 2: 19 gives the exact words of Christ. "Destroy (suppose you destroy) this Temple and in three days I will raise it up again," here he clearly alluded to his body. If they honestly misapprehended his meaning, they should have given an opportunity for explanation. If they fully understood his reference, the injustice is still more palpable.

Caiphas resolving himself into a witness more than a judge, asked Christ concerning his doctrine and disciples. Christ replied, that he had taught in the Synagogues and Temple whither the Jews resorted; in secret he had said nothing; he had done nothing in a corner. "Why askest thou me, ask them who heard me, they know what I said." It was not lawful for a prisoner to witness against himself. When Christ was smitten by ruthless hands for demanding justice he said, "if I have done evil, bear witness of the evil, but if well, why smitest thou me?" Witnesses were required to be examined separatly; but many testified at once, as well as inaccurately, and hurriedly, against our Saviour. What caricatures on justice were those witnesses? When Christ was also accused by false witnesses of preverting the nation, forbidding to pay tribute to Cesar, saying that he himself is Christ, the charges were equally groundless—a mixture of truth and error. This was also a shrewd dodge to prejudice Pilate. Christ tried to hold down mere excitement following his miracles and efforts to crown him a temporal king met no encouragement from him.

When asked by Caiphas whether he were the Son of God, he answered, "I am." This was considered blasphemy by the Scribes, Priests and Elders. In the first place he had come out of Nazerath, in Galilee. The place and circumstances of his birth were too humble. While Christ's claims were in accord with his life, both were rejected by the Jews because he failed to uphold the sinking earthly fortunes of a race whose leaders had eyes but they saw not; ears but they heard not; hearts but they understood not." Because he told the truth they sought to kill him. He verily was "from above, they were from beneath," To confess Christ, was to be excommunicated. His accusers virtually said, in fulfilling prophecy "this is the Christ." Jewish ignorance was rendered more intense by unbelief, their rulers believed the prophets, why execute their saddest, most injust predictions. Such are the fearful results of bigotry, prejudice; the last analysis of bitter hate.

Ill temper is a symptom revealing an unloving nature at the bottom; it is the intermittent fever which bespeaks intermittent disease within. Temper cannot be changed but by a change of heart. CARE NEEDED.

Christian life in our day is full of activity. It finds pleasure in planning, giving and working for the growth of Christ's kingdom. The spirit of consecration gives joy to all Christians who recognize it and inspires confident hopes in the aggressive movements of the church. But it conceals, also, a great peril. All Christian power comes from communion with God, and from the indwelling of divine grace. One can do good to others only as his own heart pulsates with love to Jesus, and has a present experience of his love. We can impart only what we receive. Any stream will run dry unless fed from unfailing springs. Any Christian labor will be fruitless, and Christian zeal will be like sounding brass, unless the soul waits daily upon God, and finds new strength in prayer and in the study of the Bible. —Sel.

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 2. DECEMBER, 15th, 1890, No 32.

EDITORIAL.

We are glad to receive such a kind and cheerful letter from our Brother Isbell, at Spokane Falls, so soon after his arrival in the Northwest. It is not wrong to be "anxious" in the proper sense about the success of our cause in the Northwest. We trust that the enthusiasm of our Brother is of the kind that will endure, and that it will become contagious and fire the hearts of all our preachers and people in this mountain land.

Our readers will rejoice at the good tidings from Pendleton, Oregon. Brother Howard is one of the solid men in the East Columbia Conference. He calls attention to some things that we will do well to consider. We hope to hear from him often. The notes of victory that come from beyond the mountains greatly refresh and inspire us for the battle on this side. The lines are drawing closer together; the battle waxes hotter, and victory is perching on our banner. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

We take pleasure in publishing the short, note from Dr. Brunner, President of Hiawasse College, and in enrolling him as one of the regular subscribers to the "Montana Methodist." We trust that the dollar will prove a good investment, and only wish there were more such "links" to bind the church at home, and especially the colleges, where our young men are being trained for more service, to the great West. But they are rapidly increasing, thank the Lord. We are taking the best care we can of that "Hiawasse boy,"—giving him plenty af hard work to do—though from the staure unto which he has attained, and the vigor with which he wields a pen, there are not a few who consider him capable of taking care of himself. We hope Hiawasse will send many more such "boys" to the West.

The writer of a short article on "High Toned Dances" is reminded that we cannot publish communications that are not accompanied by a responsible signature. The editor must know the name of the writer, whether he makes it public or not.

Rev. C. W. Sanford, who was once a member of the Montana Conference, writes, acknowledging the receipt of the "Methodist," and in a personal notes, says: "I did not get my certificate in time to present before the Quarterly Conference for recommendation for readmission, and so am out this year again. I expect to leave here soon and go as a supply on the Santa Maria Circuit. Bro. A. A. Oats is the Presiding Elder. When we get moved I will write you again, and some things for the "Methodist." I will then tell you about my trip to San Bernardino, my visit to Sister Reeves, etc., etc. To be in her home and hear her talk carried me back to the years, '70-1-2-3."

The "Sister Reeves" spoken of is the widow of "Uncle Dick" Reeves, os he was familiarly called, a man of sterling qualities, full of religion, the old-fashioned kind, and class leader in the society at Willow Creek. the first of our church that was organized in Montana, until he removed with his family to California, where he died in peace several years ago. Their house was the preacher's home, where many a weary itinerant was refreshed in body and spirit in the early days. Hence these personal references awaken precious memories and stir tender emotions in the hearts of those who shared in the toils of those trying times. We are glad to know that our Sister still lives on earth, and trust that she may be preserved to a good old age, and at last have a happy and abundant entrance into "the home over there."

Rev. E L. Lee writes from the Flathead Valley charge: "At Demersville we are having fine congregations. Last night the large hall was nearly full of attentive hearers. Mr. Stannard was very kind in having the large hall lighted and warmed for the service. A good class of people are coming into the valley. I am praying that something in the way of saving souls may be accomplished at Demersville, and am working to that end."

Ren. W. O. Waggoner, of the Virginia Conference, has been transferred to the Montana Conference, and stationed at Wallace. He has a wife and one child, and is expected to be at his post by the third week in this month. Hundreds of people have been converted under his ministry. We rejoice at his coming, extend to him and his family a cordial welcome to this "country of the mountains," and trust that their labors may be abundantly blessed in the conversion of souls and in opening up a highway for our God in our great Northwest. Wallace is a new field, but a needy, and we believe, a promising one. The Wallace people will rejoice at his coming, and make him feel at home among them.

Rev. F. F. St. Clair, writing from Wilbur, Washington, says: "We open our batteries here to-night for a regular seige. Brothers Hornbuckle and Skee will assist me. The Lord has given us thirty new members since Conference. All glory to his name. Please pray for us. God bless you."

That is a grand report. We rejoice with our brother in his success. May the good work go on, and we believe it will.

At this writing Rev. J. B. Parnall is in the midst of a successful meeting at Fairplay school house, a few miles west of Corvallis, across the Bitter Root River. The writer was present at two services, when the log building was literally packed with attentive hearers, insomuch that the preacher hardly had room enough to kneel and pray. It reminded us of some of the meetings held during our early ministry in western Kansas. We saw a lady press her way to the altar, where she knelt for a few moments in earnest, agonizing prayer, and then arose with countenance all radiant with heavenly light and joy, and praised the Lord for a sense of His pardoning love. Thank God the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, among the miners, the ranchmen, the lumbermen, and all other classes of men in Montana, as well as anywhere else. There had been five conversions and five accessions to the church at last accounts.

We hoped before going to press to hear that the ice was broken—or had been thawed out at Willow Creek, and that there was a mighty outpouring of the Spirit and an ingathering of the people there. Bro. Neill is an honest and faithful minister, and we trust that his labors may be blessed of the Lord this year in the conversion of many souls.

Thanksgiving Day was observed with appropriate religious services, which were participated in by a large and respectful audience at Corvallis, Montana. The writer had the honor of doing most of the talking, and was assisted in the sermon by Revs. Cobleigh, of the Presbyterian, and Seaton, of the Disciple Church. We believe the day was generally observed, as it deserves to be, among our people.

A brother from the East Columbia Conference writes and asks: "Are you going to run the "Methodist?" or will you consolidate with the "Advocate?" (meaning the new San Francisco "Christian Advocate," that has not yet come out). Why should we not keep the "Methodist" right on? I for one, favor it."

We appreciate the friendly interest manifested by our good Brother, and rejoice to know that not a few others of our best men are like minded. There was some talk at one time of consolidating with the new paper, to be published by authority of the General Conference on the Pacific coast, but the sentiment is now in favor of going right on with the "Methodist." In fact we don't see how we could stop it when such lists of subscribers are coming in, so many old ones are renewing, and our columns are crowded to their full capacity with notices of revivals and other church work, and contributions of a high order on other subjects. The paper is just running itself. Though we do not propose to relax our efforts, and we want our preachers and our friends to do all they can in procuring subscribers and renewals, and in furnishing matter for the columns of the paper. There is plenty of "home talent;" as has been demonstrated, to run a live paper here in the Northwest. Let it be cultivated.

Before another issue of this paper reaches its readers, the Merry Christmas bell will be ringing over mountain and valley. How fortunate that the year ends with the festival that reminds us of God's great gift to men, and that as we engage in its innocent festivities, we are enabled for the time to forget the worry, and toil, and confusion of the past and are refreshed with the glad refrain of angels, as they sing, "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will toward men." Let us strive to observe the day in a manner becoming Christian people, and cultivate the spirit of good will that characterized Him who gave Himself for us. A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all the readers of the "Methodist."

The Mission Committee (we call it Board) of the M. E. Church, North, held its annual session recently in the city of Boston. Large audiences attended, and great enthusiasm characterized the public meetings. It appropriated $463,415 to what is called the "home field." We do not know at this writing what is appropriated to the foreign field. But we have long thought that great wisdom is shown in a liberal policy toward the home field—the frontier that is developing so rapidly. For, in planting the church in these rich and promising fields at home, resources are being husbanded that will help swell the contributions to foreign fields in years to come. We notice that $58,850 are given to the "white work" in the South, and $55,450 to the "colored work" there. The sum of $62,750 is appropriated to the "Rocky mountain" region, of which Montana gets $10,000, the same as last year. We think this is much less than the brethren here were expecting, and it may interfere somewhat with the speedy occupancy of "every field in Montana."

BRETHREN, take up your collection for domestic missions and forward to A. G. Clarke, Treasurer, at Helena. Remember that $100 of this money goes to Brother E. L. Lee, of Flathead Valley, and he ought to have the second quarterly installment now, but cannot be paid in full until the money is collected by the preachers.

WHY not set apart the month of January for a special canvass of the "Montana Methodist?" Make an earnest effort to put it into every family under your pastoral oversight. There are many young men, who, if asked, would send it to their parents back home. We want each preacher in the Conference to send us one or more new names just now.

WE sympathize with our Brother Squires in the sad bereavement that call him home. It is a severe blow when the messenger of death visits the parental roof.

REV. W. T. GOULDER writes that that he had a most enjoyable visit to his old Memphis Conference, and says that he could have brought some of the best young men of the Conference with him to this work, if we had places for them or could support them. The Spirit of God is moving, and says to the church, "Separate these men for the work unto which they are called." The tide is rising, and the money will be forthcoming. Let us pray, and work and trust in God, who doeth all things well. Brother G. is at his post again.

ON his way to Wallace the editor was compelled by a wreck and a delay of the train to spend a night and part of a day at Spokane Falls. He spent a delightful evening, socially and religiously, at the home of Bro. E. P. Dyer, where he met with the new pastor, who is in favor with the people, and quite a company of friends who had gathered for a song service. Bro. Isbell has already received seven members into the church since his arrival, and others are coming. He is greatly elated at the outlook.

WE learned that the meeting at Wibur by Brother St. Clair was a grand success. Fifteen persons had joined the church at last accounts, and the good wook still going on.

WE are deeply pained to learn that our Sister, Mrs. A. G. Clarke, of Helena, will be compelled to go abroad on account of her health this winter. Brother and Sister Clark are strong and active workers, and will be greatly missed. Let the church pray for her restoration.

A LIGHT snow fell throughout the State about the 3rd inst.

SPOKANE FALLS has a population of 25,000. We want to give our readers a fuller account of this promising city at some future time.

WE are pleased to find the "Methodist" in favor with the people. Kind words come in from many quarters. If our friends will exert themselves and help us to increase the subscription list, we will promise a great improvement in the paper. What say you?

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

From Pendleton. Oregon.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—

Your visit to the East Columbia Conference strengthen the ties that bind the Conferences together. The visits of the little "Methodist" bring tidings of good to us. Revivals have visited several charges in the Conference, but we, of Pendleton, have not had the Pentecost as yet, but are praying with one accord for the "Power from on High." Pendleton charge was blest last February and March with a wonderful revival, resulting in the conversion of many souls, and forty accessions to the church. Two of them wers licensed to preach, and one was received on trial into the Conference, Henry Barnhart, and is now in charge of the Grand Ronde Circuit. The other, Thomas Means, will, I think, go to school and prepare for the ministry.

We have class meetings for the young people Sabbath afternoon, and prayer meeting Wednesday evening, and still we need a revival meeting, and are praying earnestly for it. Every pastor on this district is at his post, except Bro. Shreve, who has gone East. Bro. Michael, our P. E., hrs organized the work at Boise City, with Bro. Eagle in charge, with prospects for a good year.

Our school at Weston is now under the management of Prof. McHenry, a good man, and an energetic teacher. The attendance is small, owing partly to the delay of the Board in arranging for the term, and not being able to secure a suitable teacher until almost the opening of the session, and again our own people have not patronized the school in some instances, sending to schools of other denominations.

I think we are lame in educational interests in Oregon, Washington and Montana. Something must be done, or we will lose our opportunity. Others are doing well, we not so well. Comparisons are said to be odious, but comparative statistics would bring us to the blush. We know them; our Brethren from other churches know them; let us study them, and profit by them, and remove the reproach. I believe the Lord has called us to "spread scriptural holiness over these golden Western lands, and has set his seal upon our ministry, giving us many precious souls; let us arouse to greater diligence, and while we preach, and build, and gather in the flocks, let us see that all the agencies of the Gospel are called intc active use. I read with interest the reports of your preachers and ours; theirs trials and their triumphs; truly the harvest is great, and the laborers ers are few, pray that the Lord may send forth more laborers. In love,

M. V. HOWARD.

From Butte.

DEAR "MONTANA METHODIST:"—

I pen a few lines to fill my promise to you. The paper is good, and growing better each number, is my cool judgment. The brethren seem to be helping as they ought to do. It is our paper, and we ought to help to build it up.

You notice the "Rocky Mountain Methodist" has become a weekly, but not "weakly." I long to see ours do likewise. We must write, write, write this work into the notice of the church, and upon the conscience of our people.

Well, you have heard of the sad news I got by dispatch—the death of my dear sister. I could not reach home in time to see her face, o. hear her voice, but we know where to find her. And my bereaved parents and the other members of the family seemed to be greatly helped by my coming.

I recognize a sacred obligation to my father's home, along this line—visiting them in times of great trial.

Our meetings were again postponed by this sad dispensation, and I may not resume for some time. About thirteen additions to the church, with several conversions, were the results of the meeting.

Our Second Quarterly Meeting comes the fifth Sunday in November, and reminds me that the Conference year is rapidly moving on. The outlook for our church work is hopeful at this place, and elsewhere on the District, as far as I heard from my brethren. Yours Respectfully,

J. E. SQUIRES.

Spokane Falls, Wash.

Soon after my arrival from Alabama, in the city some copies of the "Montana Methodist" fell into my hands, and I must say I am well pleased with it—the character of its editorials, the spirit of its correspondents, the general make-up, even with most all I saw in its advertising columns. [We hope so.—EDITOR.]

I have been in the city since the 8th inst. Am well pleased with my charge. Have preached four times to good congregations Good Sunday School. Well attended prayer meeting.

The people have met all our wants, and have manifested great concern for the prosperity of the cause of Christ in this city.

This Methodist Itinerant never in life felt so much the need of the help of the Holy Ghost as it does now. Oh, how much to be done! The laborers so few, compared with the grea "fields white unto harvest." Yet, the words, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," came to our heart of faith with as much good cheer, perhaps, as they did to the first disciples. Our people are members of our church from principle, and are full of faith and good works—a foundation sort of element.

If our people back East and South were fully alive to the character and importance of our work in this "great Northwest," and were wholly consecrated to God with all their vast recourses of men and means, very soon much more of this country would be taken for Christ at once. So may it be.

How I admire the spirit of those heroic men who have laid the foundation for our work in this vast country. God himself will build them monuments, both on earth and in Heaven. Am I wrong in being so anxious about the success of the Southern Methodism in the Northwest? R. G. ISBELL.

Notes From Willow Creek.

BY H. B. CCCKRILL.

When I wrote you last it was from Bozeman. The meeting there closed without having accomplished what we had hoped. It was not, however, devoid of good results. Bad weather, snow and rain, dark nights, dog shows and theatrical performances of various kinds, political speakings, and a general election excitement, all contributed to hinder the success of the Gospel in that town. Besides, there is a strong prejudice existing against our church, and that, with a general indifference to the claims of Christ and a membership lacking in spirituality and courage makes it well nigh impossible for us to have a revival there.

But to come to my own charge in which, of course, my chief interest centers. Soon after Bro. Goulder closed his meeting I began to protract at South Boulder. The meeting began with the Quarterly Conference occasion, the 1st and 2nd of Nov.

Bro. Couey remained with me several days, and preached as a Methodist preacher should always do, "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Bro. A. J. Rundell was also present, doing much good by praying, exhorting, testifying and visiting. We continued something over two weeks,the weather being extremely disagrecable part of the time, but closed with a good interest, two added to our church and one to the M. E. Church (North), and the membership revived.

We closed at South Boulder to begin at once at Willow Creek. The meeting is in progress at this wriitng, this being the second week. So far our congregations are good, and we have had as fine weather as could be desired, but no special interest yet manifested. There seems to be a dead lock somewhere. The Spirit of God comes powerfully upon the preachers, but does not seem to extend either to the church or to sinners. Bro. Warren came to our rescue yester day, and we hope the ice will soon be broken, every hindrance removed, and that we may yet have a glorious time. We will give you final results.

I propose to begin a meeting at Poney, a small mining town in the bounds of my circuit, when I am through at Willow Creek. This is called a hard place. Here the preacher generally pays the way, and has a rough set to disturb him while he tries to preach. I have the courage, however, to begin the fight (that does not take much), but whether I will have the courage and strength to conquer. is a more doubtful question.

I rejoice to hear that some of the people of Montana are being converted to God. I rejoice to see that thousands are being converted in our church at large every week, and I am encouraged to go forward and press the battle to the very gates of the enemy. Surely we can overcome if we faint not.

From Hiwassee College, Tenn.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—

As a missionary contribution, where could I place a dollar to better advantage than to strengthen a paper in the great West? Then the dollar will bring much good reading to the East—a kind of link to bind us into one united people.

Take good care of our former Hiwassee boy, now Rev. B. E. H. Warren, one of the ninety and nine preachers that have gone from our halls, into the fields white unto the harvest. Others are here in training now. It is marvelous how God keeps up the supply of ministers in the church, against which the gates of Hell shall never prevail.

J. H. BRUNNER.

Brother Warren's Question.

MR. EDITOR:—In your issue of Nov. 15th, Brother Warren writing about the Belgrade Church, asks: "Why are our churches dedicated before they are finished?" Perhaps I can give some light without professing to have an special "increase in knowledge and wisdom." Had he written furnished instead of finished, it would have been more appropriate, and come nearer answering his question, for I dare say that many of our churches, especially in the West, are dedicated before they are entirely furnished, although they may be generally seated. The Belgrade Church was finished to the extent of neat ceiling, a rostrum for the book-stand, a large platform in front of the door, and a coat of paint on the outside when dedicated. As for the stoves and flue, we did not need them at dedication, for it was midsummer. We had thirty chairs. and planks to seat thirty more persons, loaned for the dedication. The Bishop did not ask why the church was not better furnished, but expressed himself as delighted with the situation. I believe there is no law, except that of expediency, as to know how well a church is to be furnished at dedication. I engaged plain benches in Bozeman to be shipped for dedication, but they did not arrive in time. Brother Warren, conversing with me after Conference, about buying seats for that church, expressed no surprise that it was not done before dedication, for he must have known something of our struggles to raise four hundred—or three hundred dollars above the four hundred donated by the Church Extension Board—to redeem and finish that house when it was five hundred dollars in debt—a mere hull—wrenched from its proper balance by a storm, it had become the laughing stock of infidels, when a year ago there was not to be found the scratch of a pen to entitle our church to the property, or guarantee the lumbermen and carpenters the money due them. I mention not these things to boast of my work, but to give the true situation to the readers of the "Methodist." It was thought best to dedicate that church while the Bishop was out here, when we might have a favorable opportunity to raise two hundred dollars, which we still owed, and this was done. I understood from one of the Building Committee, after the dedication, that he had some funds for seating the house. Ask the rich commonwealth of the "Garden spot of Montana" why the Belgrade Church is not yet adequately furnished. As there is an "increase in wisdom and knowlepge" over that way, we might ask why that entire "Egypt" of "The Northwest" is not converted to God.

Very Truly,
JOHN H. JOHNSON.

Pioneer Sketches—Life Among the Indians.

BY L. B. STATELER.

There was, amongst the Shawnees, for years after the missionaries began to labor with them, strong opposition by the heathen party. This was evidenced in different ways. One incident I will relate. One of their principal chiefs said, "I will go and hear what this new religion is, and what my white brother has to say." He went, and became deeply interested about his personal salvation, not long afterwards joined the church, and to his unspeakable joy, in seeking after God, found the pearl of great price. A short time after his conversion the heathen chiefs summoned him to appear before them, and demanded of him the reason for leaving the religion of his fathers, and going off with this new religion. His reply was very much as it always is with a devout soul, that he had found that peace in his heart that he never had realized before. They told him that he would have to give up his new religion or he would be expelled from the council. He answered them, "You may take such action as you choose, but I will never give up my trust in Jesus." They accordingly expelled him from the council. He remained steadfast, earnest, faithful. The heathen party found that they had made a great mistake. They could not do without him in their council. They invited him to come back again, which he did, and continued faithful and useful, and died in great peace.

That man made known a very strange tradition belonging to his nation. Many generations before, he said, when the Shawnees had gone as far East as they could go—to the Alleghany mountains or beyond—there appeared to their forefathers a very remarkable personage, who gave to them many rules, which, if they would observe, they would be a happy people. These precepts were such if they would follow them, they would be blessed of the Great Spirit.

This mysterious personage then told them that their steps would be directed again to the setting sun. Before he left them he charged them that they should select out of their tribe a certain number of wise men to whom these precepts should be committed, and who should faithfully teach the same to the people, and thus they were to be transmitted from generation to generation. My friend, the Christian chief, was one of the "wise men" thus selected. It was further told them that the white man had these same good words given to him in a book, and that when their white brethren came among them with the book they should accept its teaching. This would be an evidence to them that they should not move again, and that by accepting the teachings of this book they would become a happy and prosperous people.

My friend said that when he saw the white man come with the book he was convinced that that was in accord with the teachings of his fathers. He was so fully convinced that he at once embraced the truths contained in the book. This is surely a remarkable story and a singular coincidence. This chief's name was Wa-wa-la-pe.

After the old Shawnee mission was transformed and merged into the Manual Labor School, we found it necessary to build a large central church, where the regular Sunday services could be held. We called the leaders of the church together, had a consultation, and agreed that we would build a church of hewed logs, 25x50 feet—double lengths of logs—and we divided our forces into companies, giving to each company so many logs to cut and hew, and haul to the place where the house was to be erected. The logs were all to be of one length, and to "face" one foot or more at the little end. The missionary was given two logs to hew and haul to the place for his share. The house was put up in good condition, rafters made of poles, and covered with short boards, which were riven by hand and nailed on, joists were put across and the building was ceiled overhead, The missionary solicited money from friends across the line, in Missouri, with which to buy

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests, and shall labor in every laudable way to promote them.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list by the first of January 1891.

Premiums.

To encourage the circulation of the MONTANA METHODIST we make the following offer: —

"To every person sending us five new subscribers, with the cash, five dollars, we will send an extra copy of the paper free to any address ordered, or a copy of "RAMBLES IN WONDERLAND," a clothbound book, by Edwin J. Stanley, descriptive of the Geysers and other Wonders of the great Yellowstone National Park (Price $1.00)."

"To any one sending us two new subscribers, with the cash, two dollars, we will send a copy of a pamphlet, "PATRIOTISM and RELIGION," by the same author. This offer holds good until the first of January 1891."

MONTANA METHODIST,

CORVALLIS, MONT. OR 91 THIRD AVE., PITTTBURG, PA.

lumber and other necessary articles. There were in the church nine large windows and one large door. We commenced in the winter, performed all that labor, and had the house ready for use early in the summer. "The people had a mind to work."

An incident is given here which shows the vindictive spirit of those lewd, unconverted savages. They came in secret, broke all the windows, piled the seats on the floor, tore down the pulpit and defiled all the house. We had exhausted all our funds in building, and were in a great quandery. It required a mighty effort to refit things once more, but we succeeded in doing it. At this place we held a camp-meeting the same fall, which resulted in sixty additions to the church, and the power of heathenism was broken. Ah, that was a glad, glad day.

The Indiads were very devout in their worship. Penitents would come and kneel down at the altar and weep, and pray, and agonize, and when converted would rejoice and shout aloud and make the groves vocal with their praises. Many of the wild Indians who had not hitherto attended our services, came and were converted.

Lack of the Holy Spirit.

If I am able to discern the state of our church to-day, it is woefully lacking in the possession of the Holy Ghost. Not destitute, but possessed stingily of what is bountifully offered. Here and there you find a man "strengthened with might by the Spirit in the inner man"—they are even common in a few localities, but on the whole they are few and far b tween. How few of the Christians I know are possessed of "all joy and peace in believing," and abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost. But few have even a faint conception of the depth of Christian experience here indicated by the Apostle. So far as experience is concerned, most of us seemed to be living under the the Jewish dispensation when the Holy Spirit was sparingly given, and not under the Christian dispensation, where the Spirit is abundantly poured out upon all flesh. The reason why we are destitute of a rich experience is because of our unbelief. The preacher asks for a mighty baptism of the Holy Spirit, but is not at all disappointed when he fails to receive the answer. He would be greatly surprised if he should get an answer. The church member has fallen into the habit, partly in imitation of the preacher, of praying for an outpouring of God's great Spirit upon the people, but does not really know what he has prayed for, never having had his own soul flooded and his own body thrilled by the Spirit's presence in power.

Many of us have a little experience of peace and joy a way back in the past. Around this we cluster sacred thoughts and pure aspirations, which is well, and allow our imaginations to add all that we think needful to make out a good case of conversion, and in this we rest all our lives, when e might by one step of faith enter into a fullness of blessing that would eclipse all the past, though assisted by a vivid imagination.

We should take fast hold upon the promises of God in all their fullness, knowing that "he that believeth out of his belly shall flow rivers of living waters."

Those who are "ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God," should above all others be filled with the Holy Ghost, and should persist in proclaiming that fullness to others. H. B. Cockrill.

Anarchy in High Places.

"The confession, and the discipline and Paul must step aside before this popular opinion." "We shall never get our rights so long as this old book, the Bible, is the rule of this land." Such sentiments as the above, expressed in the interests of "woman's rights," the one by a religious paper, and the other by a woman in a public speech, is anarchy in high places. Chicago anarchy says: "Down with the law and order of men, and up with men and women to lawless liberty and unmerited equality." But this sentiment says: "Down with God's law, and the order that it institutes in social and practical life, that women may be advanced to positions therein, that are denied to her in that law." Is not this anarchism? It seems clear to us, that Christ was revealed to destroy this sentiment, or "the works of the devil" effected through it. If we understand correctly "the works of the devil," they have their first, highest and only expression among men in the transgression of law and the order that it maintains. Our mother, along the line of intellectual improvement, at the instance of the serpent, set aside law, that she might be wiser in the use of her faculties, as well as extend the sphere of their operation. "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eye, and a tree desired to make one wise. She took of the fruit thereof and did eat, and gave to her husband with her, and he did eat." Should we be astonished then, when this sentiment for improvement at the expense of law, that was inaugurated into the life policy of Adam's race in the fall, is being organized for the final conflict, which will establish law and order in this world during the millennium, if women should press to the front in this hazardous enterprise? It would indeed be strange if it were not so. For the law of heredity, whatever else it may or may not transmit from parent to child, transfers with painful accuracy the effects of the fall, whether wrought in the soul or in the body, If the sentiment to improve her condition, and that of her race at the expense of law, was the policy of our mother in the transgression of law in the garden of innocence, then we should not be surprised if her children insists upon the abolition of even God's law, that "popular opinions" for the improvement of the condition of the race might come to the front. "Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own traditions," said the Savior to the Jews, who had gone beyond the law of God in their efforts to better their condition. Such a sentiment, you see, carries within itself the only recognized standard of life, and hence is the sum of all iniquity. The veritable antichrist, which we see, is pressing to the front in many unmistakable forms, for the final conflict with law and order as established under the reign of "the seed of the woman," who was revealed to destroy this, "the work of the devil." "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way." For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be. Yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." This, because "the law is put into the mind, and written in the inward parts," by God's Spirit, of all who now live upon the earth, while the sentiment that seeks to improve the condition of men and women at the expense of law and order, is destroyed with them that entertained it. Will not the works of the devil then have been destroyed, and "the old serpent chained that he should deceive the the nations no more," into the transgression of law that good may come, "until the thousand years" of rest and quiet and of improvement under the undisputed reign of God's law, administered under the mediatorial triumphs of the Son of God, our Elder Brother, is "fulfilled." Then, should not God's people "look for, and hasten on," as divinely directed, "the coming of the Lord, Jesus Christ," by exposing the sentiment in high, as well in low places, that disputes His reign on earth, and thus hasten the final contest that shall "Crown Him Lord of all?" I came not to send peace, but a sword." "Even so, came Lord Jesus. Amen.

Jesus Before Caiphas.

Josephus tells of a sedition among the priests and others in Jerusalem. The leaders gathered about them a crowd of the baser sort of people, and the priests as well as others cast reproachful words and stones; there was no one to quell the tumult. The High Priests sent their servants to seize the grain, the postion-of the ordinary priests, and the poor families of many of these suffered greatly in consequence. We read of Chief, or High Priests, many or more than one in the same office at a time, which was contrary to law. Julias MacGath speaks of it as an office sought after by speculation—fraud. Men were elevated into this sacred function to gratify the whims of Royalty. Herod the Great, falling in love with the daughter of Simon Boethus, the most beautiful woman of that day in Jerusalem, displaced Jesus, son of Phabeb, and conferred this honor of the Priesthood on the family of Simon. Caiphas had given counsel that it was "expedient for one man to die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not." John xi:50.

When he solemly put Christ on oath as to whether he were the Son of God, the Savior answered "Thou sayest it." In this there was an acknowledgement that the Court was wanting in testimony, in witnesses, in proof, in grounds, for action against the Nazarene. The High Priest violated the law in putting Christ on the witness stand, to testify in his own Case, then in rending his garments. Christ and Paul answered the High Priest according to his folly; both were maltreated for calling a lawless Court to justice. Christ's prophesy that he should be delivered by the Representative Jews to the Gentiles began to be fullfilled when he was ushered into the presence of Pilate. J. H. Johnson.

"A Falsecood Nailed."—Another One!

Mr. Editor: Under the above head there appeared an article in the Montana Advocate of Nov 6th that deserves a passing notice because it is misleading, and shows the unfriendly feeling of the editor towards the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The article was written by Mr. Riggin but signed by Edwin Cooley. This fact perhaps will explain why there are so many misrepesentations in the article and only the true facts in the case were suppressed. The article states that eight "members of the M. E. Church united with the M. E. Church, South, with the understanding that when they got a peacher they were to return to their "Mother Church." There was no such understanding. However, we don't object to members going from us into any church they choose. The facts of their leaving our church are these: Bro Cooley had a difficulty with a neighbor who was a member of our church there, and told his pastor, Bro. Finley, that "if he did not turn out said brother that he would withdraw from the church." Bro Finley refused to turn out the said Bro. because he was guilty of no crime, and Bro Cooley and his wife all at once became greatly interested in the "mother? church." Riggin came over at this time and plead, and visited, and begged our members to join their church, but four was all that joined him. After this the Montana Advocate stated that Riggin had organized at South Boulder with 12 or 13 members. This folsehood was denied, but Dr. Raleigh did not "Nail it!" While the Dr. is in the "nailing" business let him "nail" all. The editor of the Advocates exhorts after the said article and says, "We are warning our people up in the Flathead country where the same trick is being played." What trick, pray? He then says: "Stick to the old ship, etc." "Future trouble will be saved by remaining in the old church." It is a poor rule that won't work both ways, so we showed the above exhortation to a friend who had formerly belonged to our church, but who was then a member of the M. E. Church, and said member promptly withdrew and proposes to come back to his old "Mother Church." Three others will follow. If it is proper for the M. E. Church to drive all those who have formerly belonged to their church out of our church, let us have back all those who have gone to them from us. Let the rule work both ways! Keed up the strife Dr. and many of your best members will return happy to their old "Mother Church."

We are for peace, but if you take the sword remember "he that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword."

B. E. H. Warren.

A LIVE WORK.

Rev. Russell Conwell, of Philadelphia, in speaking of the recent Mission Worker's Convention at Hartford Ct., said:—

Twenty years ago he went around the world to Hong Kong, China, to find a young man said to be there. He did not find the young man at the tea store where he expected to, and in his search he went into a gambling den. There he saw men playing with American cards. A card fell face up, and an old man swore fearful oaths. A young man at the table, named Harry, hummed a tune he had heard his mother sing. The cards were again shuffled, and again the young man hummed the tune. A third time the verse was hummed, as follows:

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er,
I'm nearer my home to-day, to-day,
Than I have been before.

The old man threw the cards on the floor, saying he would play no more cards. The reason being asked, the old man said the song had turned his life. The young man denied singing any tune, and in anger demanded more play that he could win back his lost money. The old man returned the money, saying: "Go and do good with it; I'm going to with mine." The two passed out, the old man asking Harry where he had learned the tune. That old man was Edgar A. Hodgkins. The speaker was correspondent for American papers and narrated the incident. Some time after Mr. Hodgkins wrote to the speaker, saying he had not heard that tune before for forty-three years, when a boy, living in Westfield, Mass. He became a missionary and labored for the saving of men until his death. He found his God on the other side of the globe.

During the last few years God has blessed the work in Philadelphia. The speaker was a captain in the Second Massachusetts regiment during the war. He had a boy—John Ring—to care for his tent. The boy had his Testament and read it. The speaker was an infidel then and laughed at the boy, saying he would have to be the chaplain. The boy said his mother's dying request was for him to read his Bible and he was going to do it. Shortly after he was found reading again, when the speaker was angry and threatened him with confinement in the guard house. He was first told to stand on a chair and preach a sermon from his Bible. The boy quietly turned to the speaker and said: "I love you, but you are a very wicked man." The speaker did not want him to preach after those words. How he felt, every convicted but unrepentant man knows. A few days later, during a battle where his regiment was driven across a bridge which was afterward fired, Johnny asked where the captain's sword was, meaning a beautiful sword presented to the speaker by the people of Springfield. He was told it was back in the captain's tent. The boy went back, found it and rushed to the burning bridge. He fought the flames and smoke until he was insensible, and died shortly after. The captain has never seen the boy's face again, but the sword hangs over the speaker's bed. If the speaker can do any good in the world it is all owing to the brave boy who gave his life to help him.

One curious thing about his work in Philadelphia is the fact that every week just seven persons rise for prayers—every week in the year, for two years. Can anybody explain this? He believed that any one led entirely by God will be led to success, but he did not claim this. Seven or eight weeks ago he exhorted and exhorted for one more, to break the number and make it eight, but it remained at seven. Five weeks ago he forgot to give the invitation, and at the close of the meeting seven came to the platform and gave him their names. It doesn't depend on the speaker, because the same number arise whether he is present at the meeting or not. It may be only a limit of faith, for the people show signs of getting ready to go home when seven have stood up.

A young man in his church came to him asking for instruction to enter the ministry. He agreed to act as teacher; others asked for permission to enter the class until forty were on hand the first night. This has grown until last year there were 1,420 scholars in the school, 143 of this number studying for the ministry.

There is no special means for meeting the bills, but they are paid as fast as due. The Sunday-school has increased until now it has 3,200 scholars, with a salaried superintendent. The new church will seat 5,000.

The Unconfessed Sin.

Francis Xavier has left on record a most remarkable statement. In reviewing his experience of many years as a confessor, he refers to the vast number of "penitents" of all ranks in society who had come to him, numbering altogether several hundreds of thousands, and then he makes the following remark:— "The confession of every sin that I have ever known or heard of, and of sins so foul that I never dreamed of, has been poured into my ear, but not one person has ever confessed to me the sin of covetousness." Were all his so-called "penitents" free from this sin, or were they ashamed to confess it, or were they so ignorant of their besetments as to think themselves innocent? Probably this last was the case, for owing to the deceitfulness of the human heart, very few persons consider themselves as covetous, though they readily charge others with being so. In referring to Xavier's Testament, Bishop Wilmer (of Albama) says:—"I can give almost the same experience. One man only has ever expressed the fear lest he should become covetous, and it is a suggestive fact that he was the most generous man I have ever known—John Stewart, of Virginia. We used to talk this matter over frequently. He would say: 'I have noticed that covetousness is a prevailing disease of old people. I fear it for myself as I grow older, and I know of but one remedy—giving! giving! giving!' He has hit both the diagnosis and the treatment of the disease." It is remarkable that the most liberal are the most fearful of selfishness, and yet it is natural that it should be so. The most learned most feel their ignorance; the most humble their pride; and for the same reason the most generous their selfishness. As to the sin of covetousness, it is undoubtedly extremely prevalent even among professedly religious people, though often hidden under a milder name. "The Lord Covetousness," says Bunyan, called himself by the name of Prudent Thrifty." But this vice is one of the chief obstacles in the way of all worthy efforts for the cause of religion and of charity. It is against this besetment that the warnings and denunciations of our Divine Master and his Apostles were chiefly directed. Many other sins are seen and discredited by moral and religious people, but this subtle one is unsuspected and remains unchecked. Well, then, did he, "who knew what was in man," give the exhortation, "Take heed and beware of covetousness." Let us all be on our guard against the tendency. — Presbyterian Messenger.

PRAYER.

Ere you left your room this morning,
For the labors of the day,
In the name of Christ, our Saviour,
Did you ask for loving favor,
Did you think to pray ?

When temptations overwhelm you,
Is Christ your guide and stay ?
By his grace and through his merit,
Do you claim the Holy Spirit,
Do you think to pray ?

When the clouds of anger gather,
Or reverses crowd the way,
Do you ask for grace to smother
Hatred born toward your brother,
Do you think to pray ?

When great trials overtake you,
Do you think to pray ?
When sorrow's blasts sweep through the soul,
When threat'ning clouds around you roll,
Does peace from Jesus then control ?
Do you think to pray?

THE BISHOP AND THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

One day, when Bishop———, who does not wear clerical raiment, but has somewhat the appearance of an active business man, was in the cars on one of his missionary journeys, a commercial traveller, espying the Bishop's grip-sack, and mistaking him for a fellow "drummer," sat down beside him and opened conversation as follows:

"Good-morning ! You're a travelling man, I guess ?"

"Yes," said the Bishop, who likes a quiet joke; "I'm on the road a good deal."

"So am I. What's your line of goods ?"

"Souls," replied the Bishop.

"Soles ?" said the drummer. "Oh ! boots and shoes, you mean. I carry gents' furnishing goods."

"I do something in that line, too, in the higher grades of goods. Have you been on the road long ?"

"About a year," said the young man. "I travel for Loud & Noise, of Chicago. Which house do you represent ?"

"Christ, Church & Co. A fine firm it is, too; I am proud of them."

"H'm ! don't know as I ever heard of them. Is it a new firm ?"

"No, a very old one. I have been with them twenty years myself, and we have branch houses all over the world."

"So ? Its queer I never heard of them ! How's trade with you now ? Getting many orders ? I find things rather dull. Competition is so sharp in our line that a fellow has to hump round lively to get any business at all."

"Indeed," said the Bishop; "I am sorry for you. We have some rivals, but our firm is so strong that we don't mind competition. The chief trouble we have is with an enemy which is always on the watch to spoil our goods and injure our customers. But we are sure to get him locked up some day, and we are obtaining new orders constantly."

"You're lucky there. Is your house good pay ?"

"Yes, excellent. I can draw on the firm for compensation whenever I please, and my drafts are full paid at sight—no discount. Then I frequently start a new branch of the house in some town, and always get something extra for that."

"By Jove," said the drummer, "that's a good hold. Say, does your house want any new men ? I'd like to travel for such a firm."

"Yes," replied the Bishop, "our house is always on the look-out for good men, especially for the West and for foreign countries. We have branches in China, Japan, Africa, and all over the world; but the firm is particular about its men, and will not employ any but Christians."

"That's a queer notion; but I don't blame them. Jews are a mean lot for travelling men. Say, I believe I'll write to Loud & Noise that I am going to quit them and go with another firm. What did you say the name of your house is ?"

"Christ, Church & Co."

"Where is their main office ?"

"In Jerusalem," answered the Bishop.

"In Jerusalem ! I thought you said they were Christians. I don't fancy those foreign Jews."

"So they are Christians, but the Head of our firm lives in the New Jerusalem now. All the employees have been invited to meet him there and have a great supper. He will bear all the expenses of our journey thither. I would like to have you work for the firm, too, if you are a Christian; or, if not, we'll try to make you one before the time for the great supper comes."

"I don't know about turning Christian," said the young man; "though I would like to go with you to the great supper; but, I say," he continued, catching the Bishop's eye, "what are you giving us ? You're fooling, aren't you ?"

"No, I am perfectly serious. I would like to have you turn Christian and work for Christ and the Church."

"Oh ! I catch on now ! You're one of these travelling parsons. Well, you're a sharp one, anyway," and he looked away and began to whistle softly.

"Well," said the Bishop, "here is the town where I stop."

"It's my town, too," said the drummer, "and I'd like to go and see your branch house, as you call it. I would not mind turning Christian and working for your house if all the parsons were as sharp as you; but those I meet are such awful milksops and duffers."

"Come on, then," replied the Bishop, "we like to get hold of wide-awake fellows like you. If you only knew what a glorious thing it is to work for Christ and His Church, I am sure you would join our company and go with us to the great supper when our travelling days are done."—Standard of the Cross and the Church.

NOTES.

—Butte City is considered the richest mining center in the world. It contains 150 mines in active operation; has 7000 mining claims within a radius of 5 miles; reduces 6000 tons of ore daily; pays out $1,000,000 to employees every month. Its yield of minerals in 1889 was nearly $25,000,000, while the yield for 1890 has been estimated at $30,000,000. Its mining men claim that there is enough ore in sight to keep the present force of 5000 men employed day and night for 100 years.

—Wallace, Idaho has been appropriately called "the Queen City of the Coeur d'Alenes." Its location, at the confluence of the gulches and canyons, which are the natural passways, is such as to make it the trade-center of the rich mining district around it. It already contains about 1200 or more inhabitants, and a business man recently remarked that there is as much money changing hands and as much business transacted as in an ordinary agricultural town of 10,000 inhabitants. There are 150 mines in the vicinity, some of which are known to be very rich, and 11 concentrators within 10 miles of the city, and others in process of erection. We believe that a vast population will one day throng these canyons and mountain sides. Let us make haste to provide them with the Gospel and the means of grace.

—Sitting Bull, the famous warrior-chief among the Sioux Indians, and his son, Crowfoot, together with five or six other Indians, were killed about 40 miles from Standing Rock, Dec. 15. He was arrested by the Indian police, and an effort made to rescue him. He was shot in the melee that followed. Well, his death has, in all probability, saved the lives of many white people. Whatever may be said concerning the cause of the late Indian excitement, yet the death of this man removes a disturbing element among the Indians, and doubtless many of our frontier settlers will feel more secure than ever before. We predict there will be little more Indian trouble in the Northwest.

—Three Indians belonging to the Flathead tribe were hung by the constituted authorities in Missoula on Friday, the 21st inst. for the murder of some prospectors in the northern end of Missoula County a year or so ago. They marched to the scaffold with the coolness and courage of a pugilist going into the arena to meet his antagonist.

—The track laying on the new line of railroad belonging to the Northern Pacific sytem, extending direct across the Coeur d'Alenes mountains along the route of the old Mullon road, from Missoula to Wallace, Idaho, is about completed. The distance between these two points by this route will be only about one hundred and twenty or thirty miles. It will be of great benefit to both Wallace and vicinity and to the people of Montana.

—Brother Isbell spoke in highest praise of the work of the "Itinerant Club," composed of the preachers of the M. E. church, which met recently at Spokane Falls. Bishop Vincent was the leading spirit. He was assisted in his work of lecturing etc., by such men as his brother, Dr. Strong, Dr. Cranston, Dr. Dorchester, the great statistician, and others. It is a kind of traveling university. What a treat to poor Methodist preachers out west who were never inside a university, or even a college. What a grand man Bishop Vincent is. He won our love when he talked so touchingly of his mother at the Centennial Conference at Baltimore, 1884. No wonder Brother Isbell is proud to claim him as an Alabamian.

—A number of Butte and Anaconda men were in Wallace this month looking after mining properties, which seem to be increasing in value. The mine attracting most attention among the party we fell in with is called "Poor Man's Lode."

— We would remind our good Brother, J. W. Bennett of Bozeman, that what appeared in the "Methodist" about a preacher taking part in political matters up in Flathead Valley, was more a statement of what came under our own personal observation than the preferring of any "charges." We stated what we saw with our own eyes, and copied from a "poster" that was put up at a conspicuous place, and which we have in our possession. If our brother doubts our veracity he is welcome to examine the original document on the files of the Indian Lake newspaper, and see for himself.

—The weather at this writing, is just delightful here at Corvallis. We can say truthfully of portions of this month: December's as pleasant as May.

About the Workers.

Rev. J. E. Squires writes from Butte and says, "Our second Quarterly Meeting was good to us all." He has been assisting Bro. Price at Helena, and doubtless rendered good service.

—Rev. J. W. Faubion, of Holton, Kansas, writes on a postal promising a communication, and adds, "I have been assisting the brethren in meetings for about five weeks. Have witnessed about 50 conversions. Uncle James Horn, of Circleville, is dead. God bless you in your work." We could not keep the tears back on reading of the death of dear "Uncle Jimmy," as he was familiarly known. He was a true Christian, and staunch member of the M. E. church, South, at Circleville. We have known him from our boyhood. How heartily he grasped our hand, how the great big tears stood in his eyes, and how peaceful and hopeful his expression, as he cast his eyes heaven-ward when bidding us good-by at our last parting. If he left an enemy behind him we do not know it. Peace to his ashes.

—Kansas was at one time considered a more difficult field for our church than Montana is to-day. There was a mighty array of prejudice against us, and no little effort was made upon the part of some, to intensify that prejudice. But our brethren were patient and persevering, kept aloof from political entanglements, "preached the Word" in demonstration of the spirit, and now are reaping a good harvest, souls are being converted by hundreds under their ministry. We take courage and go forward with glad hearts, feeling that we have a mission in the great West.

— The editor visited Wallace, Idaho and preached there on the 7th instant. The house was packed at night, and the people gave good attention to the word. The singing was the best we have had there yet. Mrs. Dr. Campbell presided at the organ, and rendered efficient service. The people rejoice at the prospect of a resident Methodist minister there. He will have a grand field for the exercise of his gifts. We rented a house with three rooms and provided it with a good cooking stove and accompanying utensils before we left. Vacant houses are scarce there, and rent is very high.

—While in Wallace we were the guest of N. R. Penny, the gentlemanly and popular proprietor of the Idaho House, which we take pleasure in recommending to our friends passing that way, as a first-class hotel. The fare is just splendid. We stopped with our friend when he dwelt under a canvass covering, and we enjoy his hospitality none the less since he has removed to his large building with such commodious quarters.

— Brother Parnall reports nine conversions and accessions to the church during his meeting at Fairplay school-house. At this writing he is engaged in a meeting at Burnt Fork school-house, and during the month of January the battle will be waged in another locality. Brother Parnall is eating no idle bread, and we rejoice that the Lord is blessing his labors so abundantly.

—Rev. W. C. Waggoner, who is stationed at Wallace, had several hundred conversions under his ministry last year in the Virginia Conference. He must not be discouraged if the visible results of his labors are not so abundant in this new field for a year or two. Christianity is not yet established in the public mind here as it is there. The "fallow ground" has to be broken up, the soil prepared, and the seed sown before a harvest. But we earnestly pray that our dear brother will be greatly honored of the Lord in winning souls to Christ and that the revival fire may be fanned to a flame that will sweep over this land as extensively as the forest fires that prevailed in our mountains more than a year ago. The result to the people would be quite different.

—Brother Couey in a private note remarks: "The brethren, as a rule, are doing well. My health is fine—my family quite well. The work moves on finely, at least smoothly." We rejoice at the good health of our brother and his family and at the prosperity of the work in his district.

— We appreciate the kind words spoken of our paper by the "St. Louis Advocate", which is one of the grandest papers in all Methodism to-day. What a career its senior editor has had, and what a work he has accomplished. What an influence far and wide this dear old Advocate—we love its very name—is extending throughout the church and country to-day in moulding public sentiment and in elevating the standard of religious and moral life among the people. It has always been a staunch friend of Montana and the West. We wish it could be in every home in our great and growing state.

FROM THE CHURCHES.

DEER LODGE.

Dec. 7th we closed a two week's meeting, which resulted in 5 conversions and accessions to the church. Bro. Couey was with us three evenings; he did faithful and acceptable work in the pulpit. Our work is moving forward.

Bro. H. C. Blakeman, who has been so faithful and efficient in the church here, has gone to make is home in St. Joseph, Mo. We are sorry to lose him, but trust he will be kindly received by St. Joseph Methodists. Your Brother,

S. B. Tabor.

HELENA.

Our weather is fine, and pleasant for Winter. We have a little snow, but it is not cold. Bro. Price and others of our brethren are engaged in a protracted meeting in our church here, and have been for several weeks, and still it goes on. While it takes a great deal of pounding, drilling and blasting to break down the walls of sin in this country, yet we are at last beginning to see favorable indications. The cloud on last evening made its appearance fully as large as a man's hand. Pray for us, that a great shower of grace may fall upon us in Helena before this meeting closes.

Bro. Squires, of Butte, is with us, and has been for several days and nights. Bro. Couey was with us for several days and did some of his very best preaching.

A. Collet.

FROM BOZEMAN.

Mr. Editor: — I had a happy time while in the South, during my two week's stay in my old home.

On my return I found my work very much as I left it. My good people gave me a joyous welcome on my return and made me feel that my lot was a happy one. I am very thankful.

Mr. Editor, our house yesterday at Sabbath-school was absolutely filled. A few more might have found seats. I never saw the like here before.

My congregations were reasonable and very attentive. I am trying to sow seeds of Gospel truth. I am encouraged. W. T. G.

Editor Methodist:—You insist upon us writing often. Certainly, I love to write when I have anything to write about. Everybody speaks in praise of the "Montana Methodist." It is leading all other religious papers in Montana. It is self-supporting, which is not the case with all of the others.

Through the kindness of some friend, Bro. Bennett, pastor of the North Methodist Church of Bozeman, is receiving the "Methodist," concerning which he makes some observations in the Montana Advocate. If he will read it carefully, he will be greatly benefited and will "grow in Grace and in the knowledge of the truth." Bro. Bennett had been ignorant of the fact that Rev. Hon. S. E. Snider, P. E. of the Helena Dist., had been stumping the Flathead Valley in the interest of the Republican party till the "Methodist" broke the interesting news to his astonished mind. Bro. Bennett has not yet faith in the truth of the statement. He says, in a letter to the Advocate, "Now, I do not think that Presiding Elder Snider would be guilty of such a thing as taking the precious time given him by our church to propagate Methodism in this mountain land and appropriate it to a political party, etc." Yes, it is too bad that Bro. Snider did this, but in doing it he is following in the footsteps of a large majority of the preachers of the M. E. Church all over the United States. A member of the New York Conf. complains in Zions Herald that most of their preachers had been stumping the state in the interest of the Republican party. From Missouri, Illinois, Colorado and elsewhere comes the same cry. And did not Mr. Raleigh a year ago pitch into me lively because I objected to preachers going into politics? If the fountain be muddy the stream will not be clear. Bro. Bennett says: "I think Brother Snider can, and doubtless will, vindicate himself from the charge made against him in the Montana Methodist." I wish Bro. Snider could honestly deny the charge, but alas! alas!! alack!!! he can't do it. Bro. Bennett seems to think I was wrong in referring to certain "enemies" of the church. I insist that our church in Montana has plenty of enemies. If Bro. B. will only open his eyes, he can see them. He assures me that Bro. Craven will not hurt me, etc. Yes, I know Bro. Craven is a "good, warmhearted brother." He was trained by our church, and this is a guarantee that he will keep out of politics and deal fairly. Yes, Bro. Craven did attend some of our revival services here, but Bro. Bennett did not. Complaint is made that I did not visit Bro. B. In all my experience I have never had to complain that anybody had slighted me. Bro. B. parades the news that "some of his children went to our Sunday-school, and taught in my Sunday-school." Yes, they rather enjoyed -t, as our Sunday-school was a good one and those who continue to come are growing in Grace. Our Sunday school here is large, but we still have room and invite all who want to have a profitable time, to come, It is a mistake that any of Bro. B.'s members ever played the organ for me. One person, who afterward joined his church, played for us, but she was paid for it and gave way for another organist. Bro. B. exhorts that all "caviling with one another" cease. AMEN and AMEN! Also, let all the preachers keep out of politics, and write "Rev." instead of "Hon." before their names.

B. E. H. Warren,
Bozeman, Mo.

FROM FAYETTE, MO.

God is with us on our new field of labor. I have just closed a gracious revival at Ebenezer Church, ten miles south of Fayette. Result in numbers, 17; added by profession of faith, 15 adults; baptized at the altar, one infant. Collections amounted to $100.00.

This makes 24 additions since Conference. To the Divine Master be all praise.

Bro. Hannah is getting on grandly at Fayette; has held a meeting of six weeks; had seventy or eighty additions by profession and letter.

Dr. E. K. Miller is doing well on the District, and having tolerably good health. He is a grand man.

Yours in the Gospel,
D. F. Bone.

MORE ABOUT SOUTH BOULDER.

Mr. Editor:—I am interested in letting the public know just the facts about that South Boulder case. Mr. Riggin and one of his members deny the charge of proselyting made against the former. One of our members there, who never belonged to the M. E. Church (North), says Riggin came to him and asked him about joining their church. The brother told Riggin that he saw no use in changing churches, as the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South, taught the same doctrine, to which Riggin replied, "Yes, but I can't stand the word South." If Mr. Riggin don't want to be exposed, let him quit this kind of work.

CONSERVATIVE.

FLATHEAD VALLEY NOTES.

From a private letter, lately received from Rev. E. L. Lee, we extract the following;—

"We have good congregations at Demersville. I think the interest is reviving at Brockan's school house. Have opened up a new work near Egan. Many of the people are German Lutheran, or were in the old country. There is some diphtheria in the valley, and there have been several deaths. — We have not received a "Montana Methodist" since you left. Where have they gone to? [We think the "Methodists" are mailed regularly from the office of publication. We can't say where they have gone to. Those in charge of the postal service will have to answer that question. We are very sorry that such things occur.—Editor] I have been preaching, distributing tracts on missions and taking collections. Have gotten something, but not near the full amount of our assessments."

That is a good report, and even if the full amount of the assessment is not raised at once, such sowing will bring fruit in days and years to come. Our brother is in a new field. Many of the people are poor. But we are apt to neglect our duty on this account. Let the preacher educate the people by keeping the subject before them; lay it upon their consciences, and then, when they get able, it will be a joy to help send the Gospel into the regions beyond.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—I was once excusing myself to an old man for having failed to fulfill some promises and he cut my excuse short by saying, "Oh, well, promises are like pie crusts anyway, made to be broken." I do not exactly agree with him, but it does seem that I have failed heretofore, to write a few notes for the "Methodist" according to promise.

I find it is no child's play to build a church, especially where the preacher has to do all the soliciting, all the collecting, supervise the work and do part of it himself, see that all the material is on the ground in time and the thousand and one other things to be seen after, besides his regular preaching and pastoral work. Our church building at Demersville is progressing as rapidly as circumstances will permit. It is under cover and enclosed with one thickness of boards. The tower is beginning to point its spire heaven-ward. Nearly or quite all lumber is on the ground. The contract calls for its completion by Jan 1st, except the plastering and seating. As it will be too late to plaster this winter, we hope to fix it up temporarily inside for immediate use. We have managed to meet all pressing obligations to date, but the bill for the lumber, which amounts to about $300, is yet to be met. This bill is expected to be paid by Jan. 1st. The only way for it to be done is for all who have subscribed to pay up at once and everybody else do what they can.

I am doing all in my power to raise the money to pay every debt as it comes due. But let the brethren remember that this is our mission field. Our church here is weak in membership and money. The help we have received in this valley has been largely from people outside the church. We must not let the work stop now. Will not every charge in Montana send us a contribution for our church, which is the first in this valley? And will not those who have subscribed send their subscriptions at once? Come brethren, let us put every hand to the wheel and we shall soon have a neat and much needed house of worship. "Come let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach."

The work in general over the valley may be said to be in fair condition. Here-to-fore I have been preaching at five different points. There are two or three more which I expect to open up as soon as the diphtheria in those parts has subsided. Several deaths have occurred already among the children from that dreaded disease.

Demersville is growing rapidly. The M. M. Co., G. H. Adams, and others are doing an immense mercantile business. The leading merchants of the town and valley have had the courage to close their stores on the Sabbath and keep them closed. I have heard of no complaints of a loss of custom therefore. Strangers from all parts of the Union are coming into the valley and it behooves us to be ready to throw around them every religious help. Many of them are religiously inclined, but unless we are earnest and diligent in our Master's cause it will not be long ere they will be blinded by the "god of this world."

Demersville, Mont. E. L. Lee.

FROM QUEEN CITY, MO.

Editor "Methodist,"

Corvallis, Montana.—

Enclosed find a money order for one dollar, which place to my credit. I know I ought to have sent it sooner. I love the "Methodist" and pray that God will continue to own and bless it. May the Lord bless you, Mr. Editor.

John C. Patterson.

This town surely deserves the name of "Queen City" if it is made up of such citizens as the above writer. A man who prays for the success of a paper, prays for the editor and pays for his paper in advance, as our brother has done for three successive years, is surely a royal, good fellow. At least an editor thinks so, and we believe that the editor is more than half right. He that is faithful in little things, will have greater things entrusted to him. Life is made up of little things. In fact, the things that we call "little" are often greatest in the sight of God, greatest in giving type to character and in the results that follow in time and eternity.

But few know the thrill that a little note, like the above, often brings to the editor's heart, especially if he is out in the Rocky Mountains, devoting his time and strength — though most cheerfully — in connection with other labors, that extend over a broad field, to the publication of a paper that is to help in protecting and preserving the sacredness and purity of our homes and in carrying joy and sunlight to them, in saving our boys, and all our people, both young and old, and in building up the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ in this land. He feels that he is not alone in the great work. Heart answers to heart. While he muses, the fire burns. Those whom he has not seen, he loves, and believing, he rejoices with exceeding great joy and presses forward. We hope that several hundred of our subscribers will follow the example of our brother, and each one send us a new name.

„Like a Dozen Letters."

Brother Stanley:—

We received the dear little "Montana Methodist" last week, and it was like getting a dozen letters, for we heard from all the preachers all at once.

No doubt you have heard the sad news of the death of our beloved friend, Sister Britt. She died at Warsaw, Ky., on Dec. 10th, and was buried at Tallmadge, O., on the 13th. "God's children are gathering home." I never knew her in person, but I loved her from all I had heard, and from the beautiful letters she wrote me.

We had an excellent sermon this morning by Rev. M. U. Payne, the gentleman who gave this college to the M. E. Church, South. The Board of Curators have been memorialized to change the name of the college from Howard to Payne Female College. So, after June 14th, it will probably be known as Payne College. We enjoy excellent educational advantages, as well as religious training, here.

Rev. E. L. Kendrick, who spent some time in Montana last year, at Alhambra and East Helena, is here, attending school at Central College. He seems to be an excellent gentleman.

I am glad that Brother Tabor is liked so well at Deer Lodge, and I hope he may be able to do a good work there. M.

General von Moltke, who has just passed his 90th birthday, is credited with these sentiments: "I, myself, abstain altogether from alcohol

I do not consider it necessary or helpful, except, perhaps, after fatiguing work, when the principal thing is to revive one's strength at once. Certainly one of the greatest enemies of Germany is the misuse of alcohol. A healthy man needs no such stimulant, and to give it to children, which is often done, is absolutely wicked."

—Rev. R. S. Clark has moved his family to Great Falls where his sons, who are grown, are engaged in business, and where he will doubtless spend more or less time in the intervals of his regular work on his charge. He preached there one Sunday for Brother Pope, the Baptist minister, who was sick at the time. He recognized in the congregation the faces of Bro. and Sister Bywaters, who were once prominent and active members in our church inPrickly Pear Valley, (because the church of their choice was not there) and who have now found a home in the Baptist church. Bro. Clark writes, "It called up memory of Christian fellowship and pleasant associations of from fifteen to eighteen years ago." This scribe knows something of those pleasant associations referred to, and would love to renew them. We thank God that Christian fellowship is not restricted to denominational lines. As strong a Methodist as we are, we will hold "close communion"—intimate religious fellowship—with the Baptists every now and then, and are glad to find that they enjoy it as well as we do. Blest be the tie that binds.

—Bro. R. S. Clark rejoices that a preacher has been sent to Wallace and adds writing from Great Falls, "I hope that the necessity will arise for many more preachers in the Montana Conference before the meeting of another Conference. There is room here for a Presiding Elder's district. I am pressing the subject of spirituality as a specialty upon my work, which is attended with some signs of success. Spiritual life and power are what we want, and what we must have if we fill up the measure of our mission in Montana. May it prevail until religion becomes a vital force in Montana in saving souls and in typing its young life and in fixing its institutions.

"My son, S. F. Clark, writes me from Helena that he is still unable to be out of his bed where he has lain for more than two months, but hopes to be out on crutches soon. We have had quite a snow-fall at Great Falls, but it has been "chinnocking" for two days past, and much of the snow has disappeared. This is a coming place. Business promises to be good in the spring. The navigation of the upper Missouri would greatly help the town. It is altogether practicable, and I have no doubt will be effected in the near future.

—"Where is my wandering boy?" Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Charles S. Bone, who is supposed to be somewhere in the west, will confer a great favor by addressing the editor of this paper at Corvallis, Montana. He left his home in St. Joseph, Mo., last summer, is 17 years old, about five feet high, has blne eyes and light hair, and will weigh about 140 pounds, and his front upper teeth push out his upper lip somewhat. If he could only realize the inexpressible anguish that his absence causes in the hearts of dear loved ones in a cultured Christian home back in Missouri he would make haste to write and tell of his whereabouts or return at once where he could join with lusty life in the old familiar chorus, "Home again once more." Will our preachers and friends who see this please make diligent inquiry?

—A gentleman in Missouri writing to his son at Corvallis acknowledges the receipt of the "Methodist" which the son had been thoughtful enough to send him and says, "I like the "Methodist." It is a good paper. Tell Brother S. that it has the old time Methodist ring." That is encouraging. Will not more of our young people follow the example of this young man, subscribe for the "Methodist" and send it as a present to "the old folks at home?" It will be a dollar well invested. Send us the money and address before you forget it. The paper will give more information about the country, than you could write in many long letters, and perhaps more of the kind they would like to have than is found in any other paper.

— A prosperous Sunday-school is in progress at Fair Play school-house. We had the pleasure of preaching and attending a profitable class meeting there recently. There is generally a good time religiously, in any service when our old friend, Brother James C. Gardiner takes part. He is a true Christian, and his prayers and testimonies are blessed of the Lord in helping others in the Christian life.

—We had a visit recently from our old friend, Brother H. B. Bell and his wife. He is a Christian of stalwart mould, and one of the staunch laymen of Stevensville Circuit.

—The editor and family recently made a visit to the hospitable home of Brother R. S. Fowler and family, near Victor. Our cellar now has a winter supply of the finest quality of vegetables, such as onions, beets, cucumbers (in salt), rutabagoes etc. The reader will have an idea where they come from—a Christmas present you know. Brother Fowler has a small patch, less than one acre, that he plants in onions, and which brings him several hundred dollars nearly every year.

—From the "Montana Methodist" we learn that our excellent friend, L. B. Stateler. yet lives and is able to do some work in the cause of the Master. He was admitted on trial into the traveling connection in 1837, and we do not believe there is a minister in the Methodist church who has made as great sacrifices of personal ease and comfort, or endured greater privations and sufferings than has Learner B. Stateler, nor is there one who has been more steadily or more faithfully at his work; and we suggest and insist that our friend Stanley procure and publish, or send it here to be published, the leading facts and incidents connected with Bro. Stateler's ministerial life, and lose no time in beginning the work.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

The "Advocate" is mistaken as to the date mentioned. Bro. Stateler was received into the traveling connection in 1831 instead of 1837. Perhaps it was just a misprint.

The "Montana Methodist" is now doing just what the "Advocate" suggests. The editor has much of the matter already in hand, a chapter of which will perhaps appear in every issue of our paper for some time to come. It is mighty interesting reading—interesting to the entire church. Let everybody send $1.00 for the "Montana Methodist", Corvallis, Montana, and get it in full.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, will be held at its office—705 West Chestnut Street, Louisville, Ky.,—on Wednesday, April 8th 1891. Our rules require that all applications for aid shall be on file in this office at least thirty days before that meeting; and to that rule we must rigidly adhere. Blanks for applications will be furnished by the undersigned free of charge to all who will ask for them.

No applications will be considered, nor any other business transacted, at the anniversary meeting to be held in March at Little Rock, Ark.

OUR PAPER.

The "Montana Methodist" is the principal medium of communication between our ministers and people engaged and interested in the work of the M. E. Church, South, in Montana and throughout the Northwest. Corvallis, where its editor lives, is more than a thousand miles from where any other paper, in the interest of our church, is issued. The field is great and large and there remaineth much land to be possessed. Hence, there is a demand for it, and it is doing a work that could not be done so well by any other. The preachers and people realize this, and are rallying to its support. We believe there is no doubt about our paper sustaining itself. It is out of debt and will have money in the treasury after the printers are paid for this quarter, with which to enter upon the new quarter and the new year, commencing January 1st 1891. If we had two or three hundred more paying subscribers, improvements could be made in the paper that would greatly increase its usefulness and extend its circulation.

The principal inconvenience in connection with our paper, is the distance of the place of publication from where the editor lives, and the delay in getting it out. But this is largely compensated for in the amount of original matter that is furnished in each issue and in the excellent make-up of the paper mechanically. Our publishers are doing their best, and doing well. Our correspondents are doing nobly. The variety of subjects treated, the ability shown in the discussions, and the amount of church news furnished by our workers, we believe compares favorably with any paper of the size and circulation of the "Methodist" that comes to this office.

We want it understood that this is not said, and the little extracts from letters that speak kindly of the paper are not published in the spirit of vanity or with any desire of self-adulation. Not at all. But we want our friends to know what others think of the paper. And then, we want them to think about it, and feel, and take the same interest in it as we do.

We want to see some enthusiasm. Let it become contagious, and let the contagion spread far and wide. Let every issue of the "Methodist" fairly sparkle with the warm, fresh life of the church throughout the Northwest. Let it become the crystallization of the earnest prayers, the active labors, the best thoughts and sentiments of its thousands of readers and scores of contributors, all baptized and quickened by the Spirit of our God. Like the sparkling streamlets, born of the gentle breezes under the bright rays of the sun, flowing down our mountain sides, eastward and westward, growing into great rivers that finally pour their waters into the two great oceans and help to sustain the commerce of the world, so let our little "Montana Methodist" send forth pure streams of Christian thought and life from the tops of the mountains, where the Lord's house is being established, east west, north and south, until its influence shall be felt as a mighty power for good amid the many thousands of the representatives of the nations of the earth who are flowing hither to find homes in our own native land. Brother, sister, friend, go to work right at once. Make a special effort during the first month of the new year, and see who can send us the largest list of subscribers. Rest assured your labor will not be in vain.

SISTER BRITT AT REST.

"DIED—Dec. 10th 1890, at Warsaw, Gallatin Co., Ky.,

MRS. MARY BERGER BRITT.

Funeral at Tallmadge, Ohio, Saturday, Dec. 13th. Friends invited."

The above notice sent us in an envelope draped in deep mourning and addressed in the handwriting of our dear Brother, Rev. W. M. Britt, husband of the deceased, contains all that we know of the particulars of the departure of our sister. She and Bro. Britt were married at Colorado Springs three years ago last August or September, and came at once to Helena, Montana, where he was stationed for two years, then removed to Deer Lodge. During the last year Sister Britt was taken with La Grippe, and in the following Spring, advised by her physicians, she went to Ohio and remained at her father's home until she was joined by her husband, who, on account of her continued ill-health, and that he might be near her old home, thought best to transfer to the Kentucky Conference last Fall. She regained her strength to such an extent after the return to her old home and the scenes of her youthful days, that there was some hope of her being spared for years yet to come. But that dire disease, consumption, had fastened its talons too deep in her system to let her go.

Sister Britt was a lady of intelligence, good taste and refined manners. She was positive and firm in her convictions. Though somewhat reserved in manner, yet she was kind-hearted, gentle and forbearing in her disposition. She was a consistent and devout Christian, a true friend and a devoted wife. She was greatly interested in the church work. While her husband was associate editor and business manager of the "Montana Methodist" when it first started, which involved the labor of proof-reading, folding and mailing, she rendered not a little assistance in this arduous work. Her hands folded many of the papers, her pen wrote some of the articles, and perhaps her taste was more than once consulted in the selections for the paper.

She made friends everywhere. None knew her but to respect and love her. She was a great sufferer, but endured her sufferings with a remarkable degree of patience and fortitude. She never complained. She desired to live, but only to work for the Master and do more good. She was resigned to the Divine will, and, doubtless, when the time came, she was ready to enter into her reward. It seems like a sore affliction to see those whom we love snatched away in the prime of life, but the All-father knoweth best. Her work is done and she is at rest. We tender deepest sympathy to our brother in his sore bereavement. May that Gospel which he has so effectually preached to others, solace and comfort him in this hour of trial.

A wide circle of friends throughout Montana, who knew and loved Brother and Sister Britt, will be made sad as they read this announcement. But we shall still be joined in heart, and hope to meet again where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more.

PIONEER SKETCHES.

Life among the Indians.—A Happy Conversion.—Indian Singing. A Thrilling Incident.

BY L. B. STATELER.

I will mention a little incident connected with one of our school-girls at the Indian Mission. It was during a protracted meeting. She was deeply concerned about her soul, came to the altar every day and was there seeking and praying until the meeting was about to close without her having received the blessing she sought. Others of her companions had found peace and gone away, and she was left alone. Then she cried, "Here will I remain, here will I stay, calling upon God until the break of day." Just then, when that determined purpose was expressed, the day dawned. Light broke in upon her soul, and she praised God with exceeding great joy.

Those conversions lasted. That young woman continued faithful until many years afterwards, then finished her course and went home to heaven.

——o——

The Indians are fair singers, as compared with the white people that have no more culture. They have good voices, and are full of emotion. We had books printed for them with both the Indian and English languages, in alternate lines. I learned a number of their choruses, and would join with them in their native tongue as they sang and made melody in their hearts unto the Lord. I remember some of them yet. The following is a chorus much loved by the Creeks:

Hul we mina pe ye koth lese,
Hul we mina pe ye koth lese,
Hul we mina pe ye koth lese,
Pulth ke li e ko[illegible]

English.

I am bound for the kingdom,
I am bound for the kingdom,
I am bound for the kingdom,
With glory in my soul.

I have had occasion to speak of a chief known as one of the "wise men." He and his wife were both Christians. His wife has a fair complexion, but I had never heard her spoken of only as a Shawnee. She had been married three times to principal men of the nation, having outlived her former husbands. I performed the marriage cermony at two of the weddings. She had lived in the tribe as a widow for several years, when a white man by the name of Sage, who lived across the line in the State of Missouri, and had come over to trade with the Indians, saw her, and observing her fair complexion and striking features inquired who she was and whence she came. She was unable to give much information, only that when she was a girl she had lived with the Cherokees. She could give no account of her father or mother.

The white man stated that a great while ago a little sister of his had disappeared from their home, and they had never been able to learn what had become of her. All that he could tell was, that a wicked man, whom his father had testified against for horse stealing, when he went away to prison for his crime, swore that he would have vengeance. They thought that after he was released from prison he might have stolen the child away and sold her to the Indians. He then told the women, "I think you are my sister who was stolen. There is such a striking resemblance. I will write back to my mother and ascertain if there was any mark by which her lost child could be recogized if still alive." An answer to the letter came very soon. It stated that if this was the long lost child a scar would be found in a certain place upon her person. The mark was found just as described in the letter, and it was settled beyond a doubt that this was the little daughter that had been stolen by that wicked wretch away in Southwestern Virginia and sold to the Cherokees, who at that time lived east of the Mississippi. She made her way to the Shawnees, with whom she had lived ever since. She spoke the Indian tongue quite fluently, lived as the Indians lived, and was bronzed by the rays of the sun. As was natural, the brother and sister were both overcome by emotion when the wonderful discovery was made. For this poor woman, who had spent all her life among a strange people without the endearments of home and loved ones, now to discover so suddenly who she was, that she really had a mother and kindred among the white, was too much for human nature so enfeebled by a life of toil and exposure to bear up under. While preparations were being made for her return to her aged mother's home, she fell sick and died.

PRE-ADAMITES IMPOSSIBLE.

The doctrine evolved from ethnological and mythological records, that a race of the human family preceeded the Adamic race on earth, ought not to be received at the expense of the Scripture and the fundamental biological principles upon this subject.

The Scripture, as well as reason in the use of these first and chief principles of life, stand opposed to the doctrine that Adam had a predecessor in the human family.

The former teaches that Adam had his being by direct creation, and that in him the human existence was compressed in its organic completeness, and also, in its far reaching possibilities. To the truth of this, reason, gathering its data from nature, deposes in its clearest dictates. Reason declares that two humanities, nor two beings comprising one humanity, or existence, could no more be created than that two principles of right could be ordained, or two universal spaces be provided for in one universe. Nature's testimony in this controversy is, that life in kind, can only be duplicated through the laws of procreation.

Creation, it is clear, could neither provide two existences in one being, nor one existence in two beings. Two bodies cannot enter into one space at the same time, neither can two individuals of separate and distinct creation, enter into, and comprise one existence. We could conceive of three unoriginated Gods constituting the God-head, as readily as that we could see how two human beings, separate and distinct in their creation, could enter into one humanity. The truth is, that neither will our instinct which we regard as the elements of human intelligence, nor nature allow us to entertain either of these propositions as possible. "God is three persons in one" unoriginated existence, and not one such existence in three unoriginated individuals. Reason discloses this fact in the triple co-ordinate fuuctions of all forms of individual being, yea, even in operative nature this principle in the divine life is potent. Hence the inspired saying: "The invisible things of Him are clearly seen from the creation of the world, even His eternal power and godhead." So that men are without excuse for their ignorance of the existence of God, and also of His eternal power. The Godhead then, we see, teaches the great truth that existence or life, must be individual in kind, however many co-ordinate functions, or powers of operation, enter thereinto. Hence to provide for the perpetuiety of existence in kind, which of necessity must inhere by creation in one individual, as the creating Godhead is one being, a second person must be created of the first, then we shall have two individuals in one existence, as was the case with the man and the woman of Genesis, and the issue from these will be three individuals in one existence, thus in its perpetuiety, imaging the Sacred Trio, and teaching thereby that its author is Himself three persons in one existence, or divine being. So we see that reason says what the Scripture says, that is, that "the woman" by creation "is," of necessity, "of the man." Then that which has been the subject of ridicule, contains the only plan for the creation of woman, that reason can entertain a moment as at all possible. So that the "foolishness"—that which in this connection has been regarded as the "foolishness" of God, is seen to be wiser than the wisdom of man, indeed; the wisest understanding. The creation of woman then itself, explodes the Pre-Adamite doctrine, for it teaches that every human being must be the offspring of Adam and Eve, whatever may be their complexion, or their relative capacities, or wherever found. "God has," indeed, "made of one blood all nations that dwell upon the earth."

PONTIUS PILATE.

Most probably from Rome—Procurator of Judea for ten years. Pilate is represented by Josephus as being a man of impetuous, obstinate temper; a judge who sold justice, and for money pronounced any sentence the people desired. He mingled the blood of certain Galileans with his temple sacrifices. He tried to deliver the Saviour from the hands of the Jews, who for envy had delivered Him to Pilate, until he saw that his own life might be endangered. He showed his opposition, or hatred, to the Jews, by not changing, at their request, the inscription over the cross. Divine influences, with long suffering, seem to have been working through the mocking, wicked Herod and the ruthless Pilate, to check the tide of Jewish persecution heaped upon Christ. First these rulers found in Him nothing worthy of death. Richard Watson speaks of an overruling Providence here to cause the righteousness of Christ's character to stand out as clear as noon-day. The message of Pilate's wife was enough to turn a stony heart to grief. Judas, hanging himself in despair, witnesses for Christ. Then the testimony of the Roman centurion and guard, and of His fellow-sufferer, who asked to be remembered in Christ's kingdom, speak volumes for Christ. Pilate marveled at the silence of Christ when He was accused by His enemies. Pilate's loathing to let the Saviour be crucified, indicates that this hard-hearted Roman Governor was touched with the unearthly grandeur and heavenly power of this strange personage. When Pilate enquired whether He were the King of the Jews, Christ asked whether Pilate had evolved this question in his own mind, or had he been simply a creature of imitation, and heard it from others. Jesus wanted to know if Pilate was an earnest, anxious enquirer after truth. Pilate then asked if He were a King; the Saviour, disclaiming all earthly pretensions to being a

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests, and shall labor in every laudable way to promote them.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list by the first of January 1891.

Premiums.

To encourage the circulation of the Montana Methodist we make the following offer: —

"To every person sending us five new subscribers, with the cash, five dollars, we will send an extra copy of the paper free to any address ordered, or a copy of "RAMBLES IN WONDERLAND," a clothbound book, by Edwin J. Stanley, descriptive of the Geysers and other Wonders of the great Yellowstone National Park (Price $1.00)."

"To any one sending us two new subscribers, with the cash, two dollars, we will send a copy of a pamphlet, "PATRIOTISM and RELIGION," by the same author. This offer holds good until the first of January 1891."

worldly king, said that He was born to bear witness to the truth. He claimed to be a King of Truth, in the midst of liars and blasphemers. Had His kingdom been of this world, then He and His servants would have taken the sword, either to perish or to conquer by it. He was "from above, His enemies from beneath." He was the life, the truth, the way; they were death, error, sin. When derisively asked to descend from the cross, to save Himself, He gave us the greatest lesson in true courage, moral sympathy and heroism in dying for others. He could not come down from the cross and do the Father's will. The cup must not pass. "Though He were a Son, yet learned He obedience by the things He suffered." "He endured the cross, despising the shame, wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name above every name." Let every knee bow, and every tongue confess His praise.

SUNDRIES.

"History, Prophecy and Gospel" is the title of a new publication on the International Sunday School Lessons for 1891, edited by E. Benjamin Andrews, D. D., President of Brown University. The recent revival in the study of the Sunday School lesson should occasion much hope. "We study the words and works of God," should be the motto of every church to-day, and the Sunday School should be the church at study, and the regular services should be the Sunday School at worship. The demand is for a wide spread revival in the study of the Scriptures, for they make wise unto salvation. This work of Dr. Andrews is a volume of nearly 500 pages, English quarto size, elegant in print, paper and binding, and is sold at the very low price of $1.75 a copy. Much critical scholarship has been brought to this work by able and devout men, as contributors. This work can be had of Silver, Burdett & Co., Boston, Mass. The lesson plan for 1891, takes us six months in the Old Testament and six months in the New. We plead for an advance in Sunday School work in Montana.

"The Christian Ministry," by Rev. S. W. Cope, of the Missouri Annual Conference of the M. E Church, South, Nashville Publishing House, Barbee & Smith, Agents. Price, 50 cents per copy. The author of this little book is known personally to some of our brethren in Montana, and to all by reputation. This is a small 16 mo., of handsome appearance. It is full of vital truths on the institution of the ministry, the work of the ministry, and the endowment of the ministry. It is worthy of a large circulation, especially among the young ministers. The writer perused the work with pleasure and profit, and cordially commends it to the church. Buy it, read it, and you will not regret it.

A revival in Helena. Does this surprise you, Mr. Editor. Well, it is really true. The work was begun Nov. 16th, and it has increased in interest and power from then till now. The tone of piety in the church is being elevated. God is in the midst of his people. How long we shall continue, we cannot now say. We ask the readers of the Methodist to pray for us.

The church here is quite solicitious about the health of Sister A. G. Clarke. She has been quite sick for a month, and has lost considerable flesh. The doctors have advised that she be carried to some noted mineral springs in California to spend the winter. She and Brother Clarke start this week. They will be away four or five months. The church is loth to give them up even for a few months, they are so identified with every interest of our beloved Methodism in Helena that their absence from a single service is conspicious. May a gracious Providence preside over them during their absence, and may Sister Clarke return fully restored to health.

William R. Logan and Mary B. Redding, of Alhambra, were married Sunday, Nov. 25th, at 2:30 p. m., this scribe officiating. The wedding was private, and they took the train immediately for Salt Lake City. They will return in about two weeks and reside in Alhambra. Blessings upon the worthy couple.

SALVATION.

This is the word that has come thundering down the ages laden with the very essence of heaven; echoing and reverberating from heart to heart, home to home, land to land; leaping over mountain and valley, carried over sea and ocean, wafted here and there, 'till the whole world is being filled with the grand refrain "Salvation to lost mankind." The beggar in his hut, and the king in his palace are alike made to rejoice. The lonely miner here in our own mountains, away from the refining influences, and comforts of society, have the sweet sound and praises God. These old canyons are being filled with the songs of Zion proclaiming "Salvation." All heaven rings with the shouts of souls made free, and around the throne of God angels cry "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Lift high the banner; forward, ye soldiers of the cross! Let the battle cry be "Salvation!" "Save that other man."

Christ and hope came into this world at the same time, because "He is our hope." There was once a temple dedicated to Hope in the Roman Empire, but one of the Roman historians said, with sarcasm and scorn, "that it had been struck by lightning." Such a temple had no permanent place in the worship of the pagan. Christ brought hope, and in millions of hearts the temple has been raised that will never fall.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

No more important question is before the Christian world to-day than that of saving the young people and organizing them for efficient Christian work in connection with the church. The matter is receiving much attention, and of course there is difference of opinion as to the best way of accomplishing the desired end. The Christian Endeavor Society is an organization that claims to be non-denominational. It seeks to organize societies among the young people of all the diffrrent chnrches, each of which is expected to work for its particular church, but to be connected with, and in a manner controlled by, the United Society. It has its own literature and a general reading course.

The Trustees of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor have recently addressed a letter to the Board of Control of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church, North, a Young People's organization within that church, kindly but earnestly protesting against the organization under that name, asserting that it has ap propriated in part the methods of the Christian Endeavor Society, and insisting that it should have the name of the Endeavor Society and work in connection with it. It claims that the work of the Christian Endeavor Society brings all the denominations into closer sympathy with each other, while the "League" has a tendency to foster the sectarian or denominational spirit.

The Board replies very kindly and ably by assuring the board that many of the methods which they claim the Epworth League has borrowed from them, have been in use by the Methodists for more than a hundred years —and really suggested the name of Methodists given to that great body of Christian people that now — in its different branches—numbers "about six and a third millions of ministers and members, and a domestic and personal affiliation of about thirty millions of adherents." Not a few of these were put in use by John Wesley himself, and Methodism is the outgrowth of them. We wish the correspondence could be given, but lack of space forbids.

In an editorial upon the subject, the Northwestern Christian Advocate contains the following timely and forcible utterances, which are capable of a much wider application than is here intended:—

"There is one more reason not mentioned in the Epworth letter why Methodists may consistently hesitate to commit the trainiug of their young people to any society affected in any degree by Westminster theological antecedents. While no formal theology is taught in the Endeavor society, its words, whether printed or spoken, are certainly not flavored by Arminianism. Its methods are those of the traditional "union" kind. Its emphatic points are not placed where we as a church prefer to place them. Presbyterians and Baptists and Congregationalists might well be at home in that society for good and sufficient theological reasons, but the disciples of Arminius readily discover something they do not find at home. Our young people are not theologians; but, after all, under the influences of which we speak, it happens that some of our young people, if they do not actually enter other churches, at least fail to become Methodists, or the kind of Methodists who have done and continue to do the most for Methodism. Whether our children remain with us or go to other churches, they do indeed become Christians. That, however, is not quite enough, else Methodists cease to have any reasons for existence. We prefer, while our children are Christians, that they should become Methodist Christians. That point is not quite as valuable or pressing to our Congregationalist brethren, who might very properly be supposed to be better pleased to obtain our children, than to spare their own children to Methodism. In the name of catholicity we prefer to retain our own children, and thus see to it that they are educated as tolerant, liberal Christians. We should be reproached were we convicted of indifference respecting that education. We do not propose to be indifferent to our own flesh and blood."

There is truth and good sense in the above. Much of the so-called Union Sunday-school literature that we have had sent to the West for many years has had the same flavor, when there was anything forcible or impressive in it at all.

The M. E. Church, South, will soon have an organization of the same general character of the Epworth League, and we believe that the Presbyterians, Baptists, and other sister denominations are working along the same line. This is right and proper. But let each bear in mind the closing words of the reply of the Epworth Board: — "While we cannot adopt your name, or papers, or reading courses, we pledge you to carry a banner which you will recognize at sight as that of your allies and to wield weapons whose hilts, and not their points, shall be toward your hearts."

News and Notes.

—John, a brother of David Livingstone, and who is an octogenarian, sat on the platform when Stanley lectured at Toronto. The presence of one so closely related to the great missionary traveler and explorer who exerted such an influence in Stanley's career, must have been an inspiration to the lecturer.

—The Northwestern Christian Advocate, in discussing the financial panic that has threatened the country, says: "We know of one house in this city—and it is not the largest — whose excess of necessary duties payable because of the new importing rates is $200,000. That is to say, the passage of the McKinley Bill and the early date of its application practically demanded the addition of $200,000 to the capital of the firm. If that strong house had been somewhat embarrassed, the sudden call for that large sum in order that the already purchased goods might be imported prior to their sale, might have precipitated disaster. Of course these goods will be sold, and their increased cost by reason of the new tariff will bring the $200,000 back into the treasury of the firm, but the interim may greatly modify the retail market, or hard times may destroy it."

It has been proposed to extend the date of payment of revenues upon imported goods from Feb. 1st to July 1st, which, it is said, will release $10,000,000 to add to the circulating medium of the country. This will relieve the embarrassment somewhat. The outlook is more hopeful. It is thought that a general crash will be averted. Still, it is being felt most keenly in Montana. It has embarrassed many enterprises. We were told that men who have hundreds of thousands in banks in Helena cannot draw a dollar out. The banks are holding it to provide against a "run."

—A writer in the Holston Methodist, speaking of Matthew Henry's Commentary, says: "For spiritual incisiveness it is as the sword of Goliath—'there is none like it.' I weary of 'critical study of the Bible,' and long for juicy morsels of practical truth, and a draft of water from wells of salvation that haven't been fouled by a scramble to get at the bottom of things. I have a lot of metaphysical mud (Teutonic) on my shelves that I would be heartily glad to get rid of."

What young Bible student has escaped this "mud?" The sweetest water that we ever tasted, so we thought, came from sparkling streams near the top of the Rocky Mountains, that were reached by following the tortuous windings of a horseback trail that leads from Montana across to Elk City, Idaho. The water was not muddied. It was fresh from the eternal snows from which it had been released by a glowing sun, and just gurgled up from beneath the great rocks, and we laid down by the stream or dipped it up with our hands or with rude tin cans, and drank to our heart's content, and blessed the name of the old mountaineer who did not try to drink for us, but simply led us to the spot after a long journey through a dry and thirsty land. So we bless the teacher, the preacher or the commentator who leads us to the fountain of living springs, and especially the name of Him whose great mission was to bring life and immortality to light and who cries to the world: "Let him that is athirst, come; and whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely."

—The Montana Christian Advocate refers to our approval of the action of the Tennessee Conference in suspending Dr. Kelley, the Prohibition candidate for governor, and states that the Michigan Conference of their church located two of its members for the same reason, and announces with a somewhat triumphant air, "The Methodist Episcopal Church is not a political church." We are glad to hear this, and hope it is true. We rejoice to know that the example and teaching of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are at last exerting such a wholesome influence upon our big sister. May the reformation prove thorough and abiding. We wonder if Bishop Joyce will be chided for pledging that million bayonets to support the "Force Bill?" Let us see.

—We appreciate the invitation, which is also extended to all the brethren of the Missoula District, to attend the District conference of Helena district at East Helena next month. There is a tempting bill of fare, and we would enjoy it exceedingly. May great grace rest upon the conference.

—It is encouraging to note the prosperity and promise of not a few of our pastoral charges since they have been supplied with regular and efficient pastors.

—The Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Stevensville is the most vigorous organization of the kind in the conference. The ladies raised about $90, as a Thanksgiving offering, and just by contributions in the old fashioned way—without any festivals or pandering to the flesh of any kind. Sister Parnall is one of our most systematic, enthusiast c and efficient workers. She would make a splendid District conference secretary.

FROM THE CHURCHES.

ON THE SECOND ROUND.

BY A. C. COUEY.

BUTTE.

The Second round on the Helena District began with Butte; the fifth Sabbath in November, and Saturday before.

After fasting Friday we had the usual 11 o'clock Saturday service, also preaching at 7:30 Saturday evening. My soul was refreshed Sunday morning and evening, to preach to my old flock with many "outside" friends, where I had been pastor for four years. Nowhere on the District do I feel so much at ease as in the Butte pulpit. I noticed a marked advance in the many interests of the church since Bro. Squires has been at the helm. Twelve have been added to the church during the quarter, several children baptized, finances were well up, though the labor had not been equally distributed among the Stewards, and the Sunday School has grown in numbers and interest. There is a magnetism in Squire's song. He is a team in a Sunday School and in a revival. In a word—Butte prospers. As predicted sometime since, we will soon need a more commodious church edifice there.

HELENA STATION.

I found Bro. Price the third week in a revival meeting. The burden of soul-saving was pressing the pastor's heart. He was urging travail upon the part of the church. I was with him about one week, preached nightly and twice on Sabbath. Though the meeting at this time was not flattering, was not without promise of good results. During the week I was there two persons, a father and a son were received into the church by profession of faith. The quarterly conference showed the charge to be on advancing lines. A number had been received, several infants baptized, the spiritual state of the church much improved, and finances well up. Since the quarterly conference, the meeting has gone steadily on. Some of the fellow laborers assisting, and already quite a number have been converted, and united with the church, and the end is not yet. This station is in the most prosperous condition of its whole history.

BOLDER AND ELKHORN.

Leaving Helena Friday morning, Dec. 12th, I came to Boulder, preached at 7:30 p. m. to an appreciative congregation, which was large for a week night. Saturday Bro. Johnson and I visited in Boulder, and at 6:30 in the evening took the branch road for Elkhorn. a distance from Boulder of 20 miles, by rail, though but 10 over the mountain trail. Brother James Dunlap had heated and lighted the "hired hall," and awaited our arrival. I preached to ten or fifteen people, and Brother Johnson announced the Sabbath services. Bro. Johnson told me beforehand that a Bishop could not get more than a dozen people to hear him Sabbath morning. So I prepared for the worst. At 11 a. m. I had Johnson, and Bro. Dunlap on the inside and four hundred and ninety-nine on the outside. We had a prayer service, and left an appointment for 7:30 p. m. In the afternoon we attended the Sunday School, which was organized as I understand by Rev. R. F. Beady of our church, the first Methodist preacher possibly in the camp, in the winter of '86,-'87, but by want of watching as well as praying, it is no longer ours, but is in the hands of the M. E. Church. How this is, deponent saith not. In the afternoon, Johnson said to Bro. Dunlap, "Where can we get some extra chairs for the people to-night?" The brethren preceded me to the place of worship to arrange, and to my great gratification, when I entered the house a few moments before service, every seat was taken. More chairs were brought and yet many were turned away for lack of room. I have not had a pleasanter hour for some time. The intelligent miners, mill men, and merchants of Elkhorn, hear well and pay well. Monday was spent in company with Brothers Jas. Dunlap and S. McDonald, two good whole souled men, in behalf of the pastor's salary for the remainder of the conference year. We succeeded admirably. I left this ideal mining camp Tuesday morning, feeling that God had been with us in all our work. Johnson is trying to educate his people to a system of "Scriptural giving" to the support of the church, a matter greatly to be desired above the "starts and jerk" system, or want of system in fairs, suppers, chance games and such like practiced in some places. If people are going to give, let them give straight, and not by a round-about, doubtful process. At Boulder we had preaching Tuesday evening, and afterward held the quarterly conference with almost the full board of Stewards, Sunday School Superintendent, and Church Conference Secretary. Johnson's plan was to protract both at Elkhorn and Boulder as soon as practical. Finances in this charge were in arrears at the time of the conference, but I got favorable news since. I hope for better things still.

DEER LODGE.

December 20th and 21st were days for the Second Quarterly Conference in the nice little valley city, where the writer has his headquarters, which he calls home, the home part meaning for his family.

Brother Tabor and his faithful band have matters in good trim in the Deer Lodge Station. The Sunday School grows—several have been added to the church during the quarter. The Ladies' Aid Society here is the most active in the District. We have as much promise here as in any charge in the conference. Finances are well up here in every matter except for Ministerial support, which will not be so long I am sure. Tabor makes the best use of the Church Conference, of any preacher in Helena District. The foundation in Deer Lodge is Christ, and the build- of 'Gold, Silver and Precious stones.' —Amen.

FROM BOULDER.

Brother Stanley:—

My second Quarterly Meeting has just past. Our P. E. was with us in the Spirit. His pulpit ministrations were edifying to Christians; to sinners convincing. He set on foot plans for increased financial support of the P. E. The first fruits came in the way of a liberal donation to-day. We can "bear all things" in this line. Boulder and Elkhorn collected about $175.00 for various church purposes the past quarter. We are trying to stress our stated Sunday services in Methodist fashion, useing our Standard Hymn Book, and following our ritual in the order of public worship. Nearly all our moneys are raised by voluntary weekly and monthly contributions. Long live the Montana Methodist.

Very Truly,
JOHN H. JOHNSON.

MOSCOW, IDAHO.

Dear Methodist:

I write under the press of many duties. The paper comes regularly with its warming and refreshing influence. I also received ome sample copies for distribution.

We have held no special service as yet on account of the weather. It has not snowed, and we are getting impatient, somewhat. [That will sound strange to some of our readers in the "sunny south."—Editor.]

We are contemplating several protracted meetings on this charge in the near future. We have planted our batteries at Vollmir, a new town on the N. P. R. R. It is a thriving little place. We have secured a desirable lot on which we hope to build a church edifice soon.

It seems to take a great deal of work to keep the church awake in this country, in this age of progress, where there is so much to sap the spiritual life of the so called Christian. "Because iniquities shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." It is true in this our day. But I am not discouraged, neither am I surprised.

We are considering at this time a call from Brothers Compton and Skee to assist in protracted meetings. One has opened fire on the enemy's camp at Palouse City, and the othes will begin soon at Oakdale. We are asking the Lord and consulting with wife, too, as to whether we shall go or not. [We imagine there will not be much difference in their dedisions.—Editor.] Wife and the baby have both been sick, and you know what that is, [Yes, we know, and have experienced how hard it is to be away from home at such a time. What Methodist preacher has not?—Editor.] But I must close, for these notes are getting too long. God bless you, Mr. Editor, and the dear little Methodist.

WILL S. HORNBUCKLE.

Dec. 27.

SPOKANE FALLS.

Our First Quarterly Conference was held Dec. 21, and 22. Brother Swift, our much beloved presiding elner, had just returned from Tennesee and Alabama with renewed zeal for the success of our Northwestern work, bringing with him Brother Terry from the Memphis Conference, 1 more recruit to E. Columbia Conf. Brother Swift preached us an excellent sermon at 11 o'clock, and Brother Terry followed at 7:30 with a very earnest, clear and practical sermon.

Fifteen additions to our church were reported. A very good showing for one quarter.

We had one of the most delightful Christmas trees at our church it was ever my pleasure to attend, followed by supper in the basement, amply supplying the wants of the large congregation. All the exercises reflected credit on the Superintendent, Bro. Krider, and all others of our church and Sunday School workers. There were several presentation speeches made in connection with valuable thank offerings. At the close of one of which this scribe was made to rejoice in the posession of quite a purse.

The outlook here is still encouraging. We hope to commence a series of special services soon.

Love to all the Brethren,
R. G. ISBELL.

BAKER CITY, OREGON.

Editor Methodist:

I get the nice little paper all right. Get my dollar's worth too. It was a good investment. I get to hear from the work all around by taking it.

I have just received six real substantial accessions to the church. The blessed Gospel has power. Light shines all over my circuit. I feel confident that I am on the eve of great things. Oh I am truly blessed and it is all hope and no despair with me.

D. W. YOAKUM.

WALLACE NOTES.

The new preacher, Rev. W. C. Waggener, with wife and one child, little Mary about four years old, arrived in Wallace on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 28th—expected to arrive on Friday, but were disappointed in the connections. Our Brother was delayed a week at Owensboro, Ky., with an attack of pneumonia. He preached at night, the house was crowded to overflowing, many persons stood in the aisles and about the door, and listened with rapt attention to a short but earnest and impressive sermon on "Service and Serviceableness." Not a few tears were wiped from the eyes of hardy mountaineers. Everybody was delighted. The general sentiment, public and private, was, "He is the right man for this place." The penny collection amounted to $12.25.

A new church is badly needed, as it is quite evident that the school house where serviees are now held will not begin to accomodate the people, and the public hall is very expensive.

Announcement was made for the organization of a Sunday School the following Sunday, and the literature was ordered for it at once.

Wallace is the newest appointment in our Conference, and the most remote, by the present route of travel, from the center. It is a great change for our Brother and his family to come so far, and from where the church is strong and prosperous to such a new place. Let them have the benefit of our sympathy and our prayers.

"Though sundered far, by faith we meet
Around one common mercy seat.

The Bank of Wallace failed just before Christmas, with liabilities amounting to considerably more than $100,000. It is thought by some that payment will be made in full on all deposits. Yet it has had a most depressing influence on business. A common expression was, "It is worse than two fires." Another bank is to be in operation soon.

On Monday morning the new pastor began to make ready for housekeeping. The writer was sorry he could not stay to see the family safely domiciled in the little "hired house," but duties of a pressing nature forbade it. Our friends there will take good care of him. We expect to hear of a good work there.

Warsaw, Ky.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

You have doubtless received notice ere this of the death of my dear wife. Though so long expected it came as a sudden shock, which only those who feel can understand.

I know I have the prayers and sympathies of my brethren, and the tenderness of God was never more felt than in this time of trial.

I enclose you an obituary prepared by her sister, Julia, for the Mont. Methodist.

Your Brother,
W. M. Britt.

WALLA WALLA.

The Methodist:—

"Time passes swfitly by," and today a new year is born. The good and bad deeds of 1890 have passed to record, and eternity alone will reveal them. Now is the time for the renewing of "covenants," and may God help us to keep them when renewed.

This occasion is fraught with many pleasant anticipations, some to be realized; many to be blown away by the wind of disappointment. My heart goes out to such in sympathy. I am meditating, and my thoughts go forward to the time when the "old year" of this life shall have passed away, and the day of our "new year" shall dawn in the "Eternal City," the "New Jerusalem;" that dawn never to fade into night. That day shall be eternal. And O, what a "greeting there will be," at the meeting with the "redeemed of God" around his throne, in that city whose "walls are of jasper" and whose "streets are of gold!" Praise the Lord!

My people were exceedingly kind to their pastor, presenting him with a fine suit of clothes; handsome jacket for use while at study, and several other useful articles much needed, and more appreciated.

Our Sunday School exercises were very interesting, and a decided success. We begin the year much encouraged. Last night at our prayer meeting we had a "shower of blessings," and two young men expressed a desire, and determination to become followers of Christ. Praise the Lord!

I hope to begin a "meeting" at my country appointment this month, pray for us.

Ben Hogan and Lieut. Lavery, the converted pugilist and saloon keeper, are here and doing a good work. The simple story of the power of Jesus Christ to "save to the uttermost all who will come unto him" as told by them in their plain, but forcible way and demonstrated in their lives, is having an influence that is being felt throughout the city. The pastors and their people are co-operating with them.

We send greeting to the brethren of the Montana Conference; and wish the "Methodist" a happy and prosperous "New Year."

Here and There.

—During the month of December severe storms prevailed in Virginia, Pennsylvania and adjoining states; also along the Pacific coast. It is remarkable how the Rocky Mountain region has escaped. At this writing, Jan. 2d, the weather is pleasant and the ground is dry and dusty. The people would really prefer to have more snow and to see the weather colder.

—Rev. D. B. Price, writing from Helena, says:—Our meeting still continues. It is a remarkable work. There have been 10 conversions. I may continue through January. Brethren Johnson, Squires, Couey and Tabor have been, and are, assisting me. — We trust that scores may be converted there ere the meeting closes.

—Bro. Parnall has been protracting a meeting at Burnt Fork. Sickness and death in the neighborhood have interfered somewhat with the attendance, but friends report some refreshing services. The pastor is pressing the battle vigorously.

—A new preacher has arrived on the Flathead Valley charge. He is not a "transfer" (though we are happy to state there is no prejudice against this much discussed class in our Conference), but "to the manor born." He made his appearance at the home of Bro. E. S. Lee and wife, where he is expected to attend "training school" for several years before admission into full connection in the regular ministry. Hearty congratulations to our Brother and Sister.

—The carpenter work on the church at Demersville was completed before the first of Jan. The building of this house was a necessity, as the public hall has been sold for other purposes, and there is no other place in which to worship. Having to build before getting assistance from the Church Extension Board, and when the resources of the people interested in religion are limited, and the financial crisis coming on just when it did, these things have left the committee in somewhat straitened circumstances. We trust the friends will rally to Bro. Lee's assistance and help out a worthy cause.

The building is plain, though neat and substantial; it is the first church erected in Flathead Valley and will do much to establish and give type to religion in that country.

—The Northern Pacific is one of the best equipped railroads that we know of. Its location—right in line with the course of the steamships crossing the Pacific Ocean, the splendid harbor of Puget Sound, the low pass in the Rocky Mountains, where it is seldom blockaded by deep snows, and leading through a country so vastly rich in precious metals, agriculture, timber and other resources, it bids fair for a large share of the traffic of our great Northwest.

—The Sunday School Budget, Magazine, Little People, Visitor (weekly) and Lesson Papers, for Jan., are on our table. The Magazine is enlarged and improved—that is, it contains more expository matter. We do not see how anyone could find fault with the Visitor, with its sunny face and so chuck full of excellent matter for our young people. The Sunday School lessons for this quarter are in the Old Testament, beginning with "The Kingdom Divided." 1 Kings xii, 1–17.

—A private note from Rev. David Morton, our Church Extension Sec'y, contains the following: "I am glad to be able to report that nearly all the Conferences are advancing in their collections. I think this year the increase will be about $3,000." He also says that "somehow or other you or 'Uncle China' (A. G. Clarke), or somebody else always manage to come out short a few cents in making your remittances for Church Extension." We are surprised at this, for we have always taken a special pride in seeing that the Church Extension assessment in our Conference was raised in full, and generally a little in excess. We have never failed in raising what we honestly thought was our share. There has been an oversight somewhere. We thank our brother for calling our attention to the matter, and especially for paying the dollar out of his own pocket to balance the account and save the credit of our Conference. We shall see that it is refunded. There is no department of our general church work in which we take more interest than Church Extension. Our collections for this fund just have to be raised. We cannot afford to neglect them. While we are gratified to know that the church at large is advancing along this line, yet the advance is nothing in proportion to the demands of the work. If our preachers and people at large could witness a scene that the writer witnessed last Fall, and heard what he heard, as half a dozen men came before a Conference Board and with hearts almost breaking, and tears in their eyes, made their earnest pleas for help, and if they could see a letter that is on our table, pleading for help to save and finish a church that is greatly needed, they would be more liberal in their contributions to this cause.

—Many years ago—in 1858 or '60—Lieutenant Mullan, of the U. S. Army, distinguished himself by opening up a public highway, a wagon road, from the Missouri River across the Rocky Mountains and also through the rugged Coeur d'Alene range to the head of navigation on the Columbia River. This road brought two distant portions of our country into closer connection and had much to do with the settlement and development of the Northwest. Many persons passed over it and secured good homes and ample fortunes in the land beyond the mountains.

Another officer, a Waggoner, has recently been stationed at a point on the old road, right in the midst of the Coeur d'Alene Mountains, where things, religiously, appear as new and wild and rugged as the cliffs and canyons around. We expect that our brother will be instrumental in opening up a permanent highway through this region that shall not only bring our preachers and people on either side the mountains into closer sympathy and co-operation with each other, but upon which multitudes of the ransomed of the Lord shall come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.

IT'S TOO THIN!

Our church has entered the South believing it had a mission there. Our ministers have been ostracised, mobbed, derided and killed. The M. E. Church, South, has entered the North believing it had a mission here. Their ministers have been kindly received and fraternity sought. — Montana Advocate.

Yes, the M. E. Church (North) entered the South, but in what way and under what circumstances? It went there in open violation of what the Methodist Church in the South held, and what the highest authority in the land, the Supreme Court of the United States, decided to be, a solemn compact, legal and binding, and which had been made in the interest of peace. It went there, in many instances backed by bayonets and taking forcible possession of churches and other property that did not belong to it—that belonged to the M. E Church, South, and from which it had to be ejected by the courts of the land. It sought to make the impression that the Church, South, would soon cease to exist. The avowed policy of its agents was "disintegration and absorption." Its ministers, in many cases, allied themselves with one of the great political parties of the land and sought to force upon the people of the South social customs that were odious to them and such as the people in the North are not yet willing to tolerate as a rule—we refer to what is commonly called negro equality. Is it any wonder that there should be strife and turmoil under such conditions? Who is responsible for this state of things? If the Advocate would intimate that the M. E. Church, South, had anything to do with the "mopping" and "killing" of ministers, we might appropriately ask, who is responsible for the violence done to ministers of the M. E. Church, South, many of whom on their own ground and in the discharge of their duties were maltreated and shot down — because they were ministers of the M. E. Church, South, and preached nothing but the Gospel of Christ?

As to fraternity, the M. E. Church, South, has labored earnestly for peace and genuine fraternity. The separation of the church was in the interest of peace, and if the plan of separation had been observed by both sides as it was by the Church in the South, all this clamor and confusion that has filled the land would have been avoided. The M. E. church, South, was the first to propose fraternity between the two churches, but her offer stood rejected for 30 long years by the M. E. Church, North, and when, at last, messengers came to her clothed with proper authority, they were kindly received, others appointed in return, together with commissioners authorized to consider and remove the obstacles in the way, if possible, that they might have a fraternity founded on Christian principles and one that would abide. In her Gen. Conference and in the Annual Conferences, in Montana and elsewhere, she has responded to all offers of fraternity that have been made on reasonable and Scriptural grounds, by the M. E. Church, North, as well as from other bodies of Christian people. Her ministers never came North until years after the compact had been broken by the other party; and she has spent little or no missionary money in the North properly, while the Church North has sent hundreds of thousands of dollars, much of which has been worse than wasted, into the South. As to the great West, it was new and neutral ground, into which people have flocked from all points of the compass, among them not a few ministers and members of the M. E. Church, South, who have helped to pioneer the way, and are striving to live and let live, to preach nothing but Christ and Him crucified, and to cultivate true Christian fraternity with all who are trying to advance the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But we are getting tired of shams —of fraternity that does not fraternize—of that spirit that professes great friendship and good-will for the M. E. Church, South, before the world, and yet is seeking to disintegrate and destroy it. If our brethren can outpreach us or out-work us in getting people converted to God or in going out into new fields and getting societies and Sunday Schools organized, or in any other legitimate way, we bid them God-speed, and rejoice at their success. But we beg them not to sow dissension among our own people, strive to turn them against us and others without cause, build houses on the ground that we have preempted and are occupying and cultivating to the best of our ability, with what savors of a boastful air, publish to the world that they are going to "occupy every field in Montana" — no provisos specified — and then try to make the world believe that they are doing all they can in the interest of fraternity! It's too thin!

JUMPED TOO HIGH!

Sometime ago this paper had occasion to rebuke the arrogance and show up the rashness of some statements made by the Montana Christian Advocate, which so agitated the editor that he fairly lost all self-control, imagined that he saw a "ghost dance"—Stanley's ghost dancing over the Doctor's editorial scalp — became so frightened at the spectacle that in his effort to gather up and re-hash the riddled remnants of his former effusion for a farewell war song, he seems to have forgotten what he had said, and what we had written, denying that we had uttered a word about his charge (when our paper shows that it has all been fully disposed of, so far as there was anything to it), and seeing that he was about to lose some of his followers, who were offended by his rashness, in rushing back to lay up the gaps and smooth things over, he changes his statements from what they were at first—(saying that he advised his people not to join the M. E. Church, South, whereas he used the term "other churches" at first, and also made other charges) and winds up by accusing us of "insinuating that the Advocate is a political paper" (upon which point he seems to be very tender), which thought never entered our mind at the time, and then in truly original style he hurls at the imaginary offender (a ghost, perhaps) his favorite epithet, "contemptible falsehood," and mutters something about "the spirit of a true gentleman." In taking our brother to task for an unkind remark, we had been provoked to use harshness, but simply said "the editor is mistaken." This is his manner of retort. But he was pressed for something to say. Witnessing "ghost dances" is a serious matter to the Doctor, and has an unhappy effect upon his temper as well as his nerves. We fear he will not survive the shock—in fact, word just reaches us that he has expired—as editor. Like Sambo's deer, "he jis' jump so high he kill himself." Adieu to the departed chief!

—A brother in Spokane Falls remarked to us, "The Methodist gets better and better. Those letters of Brother Stateler have a wonderful charm for me." But the best compliment is a good list of subscribers sent in by Brother Clark. Who else will do likewise?

—Our friends who are in arrears for the paper will please send us the amount at their earliest convenience. Address E. J. Stanley, or "Montana Methodist," Corvallis, Mont.

—The New Issue, a live prohibition paper, published at Bozeman, by Revs. Wilder Nutting and M. J. Hall, speaks very kindly and encouragingly of Bro. W. T. Goulder and his work in Bozeman.

—The Coeur'd Alene Miner states that our new pastor at Wallace, Rev. W. O. Waggener, has made a fine impression, and that the services had to be removed to a large hall, because the school house was insufficient to hold the people that came. This is cheering.

—Rev. Jacob Mills has been elected editor of the Montana Christian Advocate, and the paper removed to Bozeman.

—We have several interesting communications on hand for the next issue of our paper. They came a little too late for this one.

—Just as we are mailing our copy, a letter from Rev. A. Y. Skee brings the good news that he has organized a society of 19 members at Oakdale, with more to follow. Look out for his letter in our next issue.

—The Quarterly meeting services of the Stevensville charge, held at Victor, especially on Sunday, 4th, were largely attended and were very refreshing. The sacramental service was the most spiritual and impressive that we have attended for many days.

—There were four, instead of three, Indians hung at Missoula some time ago.

—The Indian excitement has developed into real fighting at last. More than a hundred Indians and many soldiers have already been slain. What havoc the savages would have made had they got among the settlers!

OBITUARY.

Mary R., beloved wife of Rev. W. M. Britt, and daughter of F. and E. Berger, of Tallmadge, Ohio, died Dec. 10, 1890, at Warsaw, Kentucky.

Early in life she chose the "better part," and until the day of her death she sat at Jesus' feet, earnestly listening to His voice and gladly doing His will. In the Sunday School, and in all charitable work, she was loving, earnest and faithful, winning many for the Master by the sweet influence of her Christian life. In the home circle the light of her beautiful character show brightest. "The heart of her husband safely trusted in her," and in all his work she was a faithful and efficient helpmeet. Brothers and sisters, with all who knew her best, testify that the radiance of the Saviour's glory was always reflected in her face and life.

During her last illness, which was long and painful, Jesus was very precious to her. She loved to talk about Him and commune with Him. She was carried to her long resting place in the cemetery at Tallmadge by loving hands, and many testimonials of affection and devotion were brought by those who could not come.

"Calm on the bosom of Thy God,
Fair spirit, rest thee now!
E'en while with us thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow."

Died, near Stevensville, Montana, on Friday, Dec. 26, 1890, after a long and painful illness, Sister Harriet Smith, wife of "Uncle" Hiram Smith, aged 61 years.

Our departed sister united with the M. E. church, South, in Georgia, about 23 years ago, and remained in that communion a consistent member till the day of her death. Her funeral took place on the following Sunday, being conducted by the writer. A large and sympathetic audience was in attendance, the deceased and her now grief-stricken husband having been long and widely known, and highly respected in the community.

—J. B. PARNALL.

Prayer.—Give me a clear understanding against all impurity, a right faith against all doubtfulness, a firm hope against all difficulties, fervent charity against all indifference and negligence, great patience against all disturbance, holy meditation against every filthy imagination, continual prayer against the assaults of Satan, good occupation against the tiresomeness and drousiness of the heart, a devout rememberance of thy holy passion against the wounding of the same by vices. Assist me, O my God, with all these, thy good gifts, and confirm me in all thy holy words."

PSALM I.—THE TWO CHARACTERS.

BY J. H. JOHNSON.

Only two characters described in this Psalm: the righteous, the ungodly. The latter have many names and subdivisions. These names, together with their characteristics and attitudes mentioned, indicate activity and progress in sin.

The righteous are brought forward under forceful metaphors, indicating fruitfulness. Both characters—directly opposite—are graphically portrayed. The entire ground of the sinner's life, as well as the field of the Christian's activity, is covered so clearly that, "He that runneth may read." No one need mistake it. The lines between the church and the world are here drawn very distinctly. "The end also cometh when the righteous hath hope in his death, but the wicked is driven away in the last hour." There are but these two classes in the world. The Master said, "He that is not for Me is against Me; he that gathereth not with Me, scattereth abroad." Every one is either in the broad road to death, or in the way of life. There is no neutral ground; he who tries to make such ground injures himself more than the cause he would espouse.

1. The character of the wicked.

(a) The ungodly.

The marginal rendering of the term is wicked. It indicates wicked thoughts purposes and volitions. The ungodly are without God, unlike God. This person may stand on the threshhold of a deliberate life of sin. He is not considered in society a bad man. By far the greater part of his antagonism to God may be kept within "the carnal mind," so as not to be manifested in the life. The trend of his thoughts and affections is worldly. Still the ungodly are classed with sinners. "Where shall they appear in the final day." For frequent use of this term see Jude 15.

(b) The sinner. This term indicates an open violator or transgressor of divine law. He is outspoken in his opposition to Christ. Like the outlaw in civil government, the sinner defies authority, disdains obedience, discards the discipline of Heaven, and stands out boldly against these—will not have the man Jesus to rule him.

(c) The scornful. These are ridiculers—mockers. "I have not sat with vain persons."—Ps. xxvi, 4. "I sat not in the assembly of the mockers,"—Jer. xx., 17. Ridicule is far from intelligent, earnest inquiry or argument.

2. Methods of the sinner's opposition to God.

(a) The counsel of the ungodly.

Counsel may mean consultation, conference, as when a company take counsel together. It may also denote advice, instruction. To walk in the counsel of another is to live out their instructions. The counsel of the ungodly is to put off religion until the last day. It is often to hold position or reputation, at the expense of moral character. All wicked schemes and devilish deeds are planned in "the counsel of the ungodly." The wicked, like the devil, often try to draw the good into their pernicious counsels.

(b) The way of the sinner. The way indicates the well-troddeu path of sinful habit. The way of the sinner is the peculiar sin in which he excells. Scarcely any sinner is noted for every specie of sin. "Let the wicked forsake his way." "The way of the transgressor is hard," entailing much suffering even in this life. "There is a way that seemeth right," because of inclination and partial blindness, "But the end is death." The way of the sinner is often sleek and easy, because of habit and the momentum of depravity. "Enter not into the path of the wicked."—Prov. iv., 14.

(c) The seat of the scorner. The settled state of carnal security, rooted, grounded in infidelity. This seat is at the gate of hell.

3. Steps and degrees in sin.

The well known postures of walking, standing and sitting express forcibly not only degres and activity, but growth in sin. He who walks in the counsel of the ungodly unless he turns rapidly, will soon stand (become more settled in sin) in the way of sinners. He who stands in the way of sinners, will probably at an early day take his seat among the confirmed skeptics—the blasphemers. "Avoid the way of the wicked, pass not by it, turn from it, pass away."—Prov iv., 15. Go in the opposite direction to sinners; turn your back on the world. These must be positive, active progress away from sin, to reach Heaven. Repentance, according to one of the best New Testament preachers of this age, is "to turn around in the path of sin and go in the opposite direction to that of the sinner." Every hour spent in sin, every step in transgression, is another stroke of the oar that rushes the feeble bark of the sinner along the stream of death—lulled to sleep by the song of the tempter. All nature smiles on him, enthused by the cheers of his godless companions, he finally wakes up to find himself going over the cataract of eternal night and despair. Resisting the power of God is a hardening process, the rebounding influences blighting and sinking the rebellious soul. There is a hardening process in all nature where two bodies continue in collision. He that resists God in the spiritual world must receive to himself the greater damnation. He falls upon the stone—Christ—shall be broken—broken by repentance, faith, submission, confession; but on whomsoever this stone shall fall—i.e., in wrath—it will grind him to powder. "The Lord resisteth the proud."

"Blessed (happy) is the man who thinks on his ways, and turns his feet unto the testimonies of God."

We will next consider this character.

If every moment lent,
Each day, each hour, with thee begun,
For thee alone be spent."

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests, and shall labor in every laudable way to promote them.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list by the first of January 1891.

Premiums.

To encourage the circulation of the MONTANA METHODIST we make the following offer: —

"To every person sending us five new subscribers, with the cash, five dollars, we will send an extra copy of the paper free to any address ordered, or a copy of "RAMBLES IN WONDERLAND," a clothbound book, by Edwin J. Stanley, descriptive of the Geysers and other Wonders of the great Yellowstone National Park (Price $1.00)."

"To any one sending us two new subscribers, with the cash, two dollars, we will send a copy of a pamphlet, "PATRIOTISM and RELIGION," by the same author. This offer holds good until the first of January 1891."

Begin at once; send money by money-order, postal note, registered letter, express or draft. All communications, business or otherwise, should be addressed to

HOLINESS.

Should the work of regeneration and of sanctification among sinners and believers, go together? Such we believe is the true order of God. Salvation must come out of Zion. The church is to obtain and impart life. The sanctification of believers in the church, and the conversion of sinners out of it should go on simultaneously. Mr. Wesley believed and said, "For each believer sanctified, ten sinners would be converted."

The best, the easiest, the most profitable and the most extensive and lasting revivals are those which commence with the perfecting of the saints. Such reformations move easily and powerfully, and go deep and thorough in saving souls. This was true of the most powerful and extensive revivals under the labors of Wesley, Bramwell, Hunter, Carvosso, Caughey, Tinney, and Mrs. Phœbe Palmer.

The sanctification of believers constitutes the best possible preparation the church can posess for the reception of converts to her bosom. It is to be feared many, very many genuine converts have been ruined by uniting with cold, worldly and unsanctified churches. The church of God carries a fearful responsibility in this matter.—Rev. J. A. Wood.

TRAVELERS TELL US that the South American Indians have unwrinkled faces, no matter what their age may be, and find the explanation in their freedom from care. They might add lack of thought and effort as well. We may never see the time when North American women have unwrinkled faces, but if the lines of labor and even sorrow must come, let us see to it that the wrinkles of doubt and distress never mingle with them, and mar the faces God would make the mirrors of his love.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER was lately received by a friend of the Church Missionary Society in Lincolnshire "Mr.— Wen a Boy i stole a few ½ pence from a man it bothers me the Man is Dead so i hav sent you a shilling for the Missionary to take it on my mind—getting a Old Man."

Sometimes—quite universally, indeed—compromises are effected between fashionable and Christian social life, for the accomodation of worldly people with tender consciences, and Christian people with tough consciences; but compromises of this character are always surrendered to the wrong side. Christian society by consenting to an alliance with it consents to neutralization by it. It is the old and everlasting impossibility of serving God and Mammon. So distinct are the spheres and the atmospheres of these two forms of social life, that the Christian gentleman finds nothing in fashionable ociety for the satisfaction of his social nature, and the fashionable man finds nothing in genuine Christian social life which is not to him a burden and a bore.—J. G. Holland.

AROUND THE WORLD. By Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix, D. D. With an Introduction by Bishop Marvin. 600 pages. 12mo. Cloth. Price $1.

Bishop Hendrix's tour was made in company with Bishop Marvin, in '77. His book holds its place among the very best of its class. On questions of geography, local characteristics, and customs of the East it is quoted as authority by some of our best informed writers. It is a standard book, as far as such a book can be so in the ever-changing currents of life in the world; but the currents keep pretty steadily in the same channels when one has crossed the Bosporus.

☞We offer above the cheapest books of travel we know. Volumes of like character and intrinsic worth are not published elsewhere at these prices.

Montana Methodist.

Vol 2. JANUARY 30th, 1891. No. 35

SPECIAL NOTICES.

—Let our advertisers remember that the METHODIST goes into the homes of hundreds of the best people of Montana, and the list is constantly increasing. It is common for our friends to remark, "I read everything in the METHODIST, advertisements and all." This is seldom the case with one of the large secular papers. Our subscribers become so familiar with the names of advertisers that when they wish to make purchases it is natural for them to order from those with whom already they seem to be well acquainted. They also know that none but first-class business men advertise in this paper.

—Do not forget that your subscription for the year 1890-91 is now past due. We find that quite a number of our friends who commenced taking the paper in '88, have never paid but one dollar. They have just neglected to renew. It is well to attend to this matter at once and not let it run so long. The bill will not seem as large, and you will feel more like continuing your subscription, and then the money will greatly help the paper. Send by post-office money order, registered letter, or draft, to E. J. Stanley, or "Montana Methodist," Corvallis, Montana.

—If any of our friends who have subscribed, are not getting the paper, we will be thankful if they will notify us, that we may correct the error, if our fault. We endeavor to have each subscriber's paper mailed regularly, but of course cannot be reponsible for irregularity in mail deliveries.

—Brethren, do not forget to send us postal card reports of your work at least twice (the 1st and 15th) each month. We extend the same invitation to our Sunday schools, Epworth League, and Parsonage Society, and Home Mission Workers.

"Help Those Women."

Miss Lucinda B. Helm, Secretary of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, in a private letter, says: "Many thanks for your excellent little paper. I noticed your mention of our society. Do stir the people up on this subject. Our Western people ought to uphold us when we are working for them, and I believe have done their cause good. Pray for us, and help us all you can. We want to save our own country."

Almost the first question asked, when a new parsonage is to be built, or an old one repaired, is, "how much can we get from the Parsonage Society," and almost the first thing done by the preacher when the work is commenced is to make application for help from this Society. Perhaps some of our people hardly knew there was such a society until then, and the preacher, to say the least of it, never before felt so keenly the importance of the work. Then let us rally in response to the earnest appeal of our Secretary. She is full of zeal for this work and has given her best thought and effort to it for years. Her labors have been of incalculable benefit to our western work. It was largely with a view to rendering greater assistance to the West that the changes were made, principally at Miss Helm's suggestion, at the last General Conference. Let every preacher make it a point to contribute something to this cause this year. Do not wait until you want to build a parsonage in your town. Help now and then you can ask help with better grace when you need it. Quite a number of preachers are living in hired houses." One with four in family, at Wallace, is paying $18 a month for three small rooms, the largest 12 feet square, with only one thickness of boards, and papered inside, and roughly built. Another is paying $25 a month. This counts up during the year. How much better if this money could be saved to the church. How much better use of it the preacher could make if he had a house to live in free of rent. By providing homes for our preachers we are doing as much to establish our cause as by building churches—yea more, for when a preacher is located in a community where he can live at reasonable expense he will build a church, if at all practicable. Again we say, "Help those Women," who labor with us in the gospel.

About the Workers.

There are many of our readers who will take special delight in reading the thrilling letter from Brother Boyns, who is stationed at Oakland. He made hosts of friends while in Montana. We knew that he could preach, and find that he also knows how to use the pen. For some time we have seen his mark (or thought we did) in the columns of the "Pacific Methodist." We rejoice at the progress chronicled in his letter which awakens so many memories and wonderfully stirs and refreshes us.

The things referred to in Brother Skey's letter are familiar to nearly all of us, who have been in the west any length of time. The lack of means and men to occupy vigorously has tended to dishearten the few who were in the field and hinder them from doing effective service. Who knows, however, but that these delays and disappointments will work for our good in the end?" They have tended to curb ambition, to keep us humble, to test our patience. our perseverance and our faith, and possibly have developed qualities that will fit us for greater achievements in the years to come. "It was after the disciples had "toiled all the night and taken nothing," that the Master came and told them to "launch out into the deep and let down the net for a draft," and they enclosed a great multitude of fishes, after which they were called to be "fishers of men," and entered upon a career of usefulness never dreamed of by them before.

But the past labors have not been without fruit. Our Brother says he was saved from sin through the ministry of our church. Others have been saved also. They are now pressing the battle and carrying the standard forward. Already a brighter day is upon us. Reinforcements—and they are no "feather-bed aristocracy" either—are coming to our relief. The lines are being extended and strengthened, and shouts of victory are coming up from every part of our great Northwest. We thank God and take courage. The mention of Father Newton's name in Brother Skey's letter thrilled us. On our first circuit in Kansas we have sat for hours listening to stories related by Brother Israel Cook, of Father Newton's labors among the miners about Boise City, Idaho, and we have some Oregon friends here in Montana, who think there never was another such man as he. Dr., now Bishop Fitzgerald, gave him a place in his "California Sketches." We never saw him, but we love him as we do every other veteran soldier of the Cross who bore the brunt of the battle along our western border through so many long dark years. The righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance.

Brother Couey has taken advantage of an extra Sunday or two from his regular district work to visit some unsupplied fields within the bounds of his district, and finds great destitution in places where we would not expect it, and where the people are attentive and respectful.

Brother R. S. Clark sends quite a list of subscribers and says that in the spring he hopes to make quite a canvass for new subscribers and new advertisements. He is anxious to have the paper enlarged, and is willing to bear his proportion of the increased expense. What say the rest of the brethren?

From Great Falls we hear that "the weather is fine, no snow, river open, men plowing and excavating for building, spading up the ground for water-pipes, and building going on just like in summer time. A flower was brought in from the mountains at Carterville that usually blooms in May."

We Must Enlarge.

We regret that the program for the Helena District Conference did not appear in our last issue. It was sent on but crowded out, together with a number of excellent articles. There are many things that we desired to say in this issue, but cannot for lack of space. We give way to our correspondents and to reports from the various fields, which are always interesting to our readers. A number of excellent communications are compelled to lie over until next issue. We are glad the brethren consider the METHODIST a worthy medium through which to express their thoughts and report their labors. We shall strive earnestly to merit their confidence and their kindness. We can promise them about 2,500 readers, with the number increasing at the rate of about 100 every month. We send from 20 to 30 new names for the mailing list with the matter for every issue.

But our paper is too small. It must be enlarged. In not a few instances, it is about the only paper taken in the family to which it goes. We want it to contain a variety of good things suitable for all classes. But few of the excellent selections that we cull from our exchanges ever get in—no room. We need a Sunday school department; also one for Home and Young People, for Temperance, etc., but we can't have them now. It is our intention to make the METHODIST one of the best papers in the west. Let us have your co-operation in the good work. Send a list of new subscribers at once and you will be surprised at the result of your effort.

Editorial.

—We are happy to announce that the Sunday school committee of our church has agreed upon a plan for the organization of the young people, to which we referred in our last issue. It is to be called the Epworth League—a very fitting name, reminding us of the place where John Wesley received that systematic training that under God, prepared him to do so much toward taking the world for Christ. The object of the League is to encourage the young people in the systematic study of the Scriptures, acquaint them more perfectly with the doctrines and polity of the church, and fit them for more efficient Christian work in every relation of life. Let our preachers procure copies of the constitution and by-laws, by sending to Rev. W. G. E. Cunningham, Nashville, Tenn., or J. R. Pepper, Memphis, Tenn., and begin the work at once. We shall refer to this matter again.

—The "oldest inhabitant" has never before seen such fine weather as we are having in Montana, this winter. The thermometer has hardly been to zero in Bitter Root Valley. The roads are dry and dusty, the days are bright and sunny, and men go about their work with their coats off just as if it were May. Already farmers are making active preparations for spring work. There is scarcely any frost in the ground, and water is running in the irrigating ditches. Serious fears are entertained as to the sufficiency of the water supply for farming and mining purposes next summer. Ranches provided with river ditches will be in demand.

—Now and then the types make us say strange things, though we seldom correct them. In the issue of Jan. 15th, in last line of fourth column on first page, instead of "District Conference Secretary," it should be "District, or Conference, Secretary." In the first column on fifth page, sixteenth line from top, instead of "turn them against us and others" it should be, "turn them and others against us." This will make some better sense. In another place "mopping" should be "mobbing."

Helena District Conference.

The District Conference of the Helena District will convene in East Helena, Feb. 17th—20th. One day, Thursday Feb. 19th, will be given to the District Sunday School Conference, for which see program elsewhere.

The following will be discussed briefly by the brethren of the District on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. Each subject will be presented by the brother to whom it has been assigned, in a short address, and then opened to the Conference for discussion. We wish only the synopsis—no long, tedious paper—none longer than a foolscap page, so that all can take part in the discussion.

The conference will open Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock with devotional exercises, and an Experience and Consecration Service.

—o—

PROGRAMME.

1. Brief outline of the Cardinal doctrines of our church.
2. Do we need a more rigid enforcement of the Discipline in our church?
3. Synopsis of our Missionary Work.
4. Synopsis of the Church Extension and Parsonage Movement.
5. How to conduct a prayer-meeting for the best results.
6. The Church Conference. Its purpose and benefits.
7. Our Church Schools and Literature.
8. The Disciplinary System of Finance.
9. How to hold revivals in Montana.
10. Should we combine the prayer-meeting and class-meeting, or hold separately?
11. Miscellaneous—The Conference may inquire. What can be done for the special advancement of our church work in the District, aside from present plans.

N. B. Rev. S. B. Tabor, of Deer Lodge, will preach Monday evening 7:30. There will be preaching services every evening during the Conference. Let us pray for a gracious revival.

A. C. COUEY, { Presiding Elder Helena District.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Joanna Sherrill, wife of Jacob Sherrill, deceased, was born in Franklin county, Tenn., August 6, 1815, and departed this life on the 28th of December, 1890, at Corvallis, Montana, aged 76 years and 4 months. She came with her husband from Missouri to Montana, in 1865, and bore bravely her share of the privations of a frontier life, She raised a large family of children, and outlived the greater portion of them. She was formerly a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, but on coming to Montana united with the M. E. Church South, of which she remained a consistent member until her death. She had not an enemy in the land, and was doubtless well prepared to join the loved ones who had precedsd her to the better land. Rev. T. W. Flowers conducted the funeral service, which was attended by a large company of neighbors and friends. We extend our sympathy to the sorrowing children and other relatives We know what it is to have, and to give up a Christian mother. Boys, you know where to find her.

It was with great sorrow that we chronicled, in our last issue, the decease of "Aunt" Harriet Smith. We have known her in prosperity and adversity, in health and when passing through the deep waters of affliction. She was noted for her good common sense, her energy, her honesty and candor, her affection for her family, and fidelity to her friends. Many a hungry and weary itinerant has been fed at her table, and warmed and refreshed at her hearthstone in the little cabin by the roadside, in the gold mines at Yam Hill, in years gone by, this writer among the number. We always esteemed it a privilege and a pleasure to visit her home, whether in a cabin or a mansion. Before the war her husband went to California to seek his fortune. For years all communication was intercepted, and she knew not his fate. But all this time she remained true as a wife and mother, until her husband returned. We bless the memory of Christian mothers, and of those who have ministered to God's servants while laboring to establish His kingdom in this land. God is not unrighteous to forget their work and labor of love.

FROM WASHINGTON.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—As the new year is the time for turning over new 'leaves, 'I thought I had better turn a new leaf in my blotter and let you know that I am still among the living and minding the appointed gap. I came home from Oaksdale to-day, where I have been holding meetings for a few nights to strengthen our stakes and gather up our members. We organized with 19 members, and some who became discouraged and had gone into other churches, are coming back home as soon as they get their letters. I thank God for what He is doing for us, and that our work is attended with some measure of success. And yet I feel sad when I look back over the past and think of the many opportunities that we have let pass, of building up our church here.

Fifteen years ago Brother Burger was traveling and preaching through this country. Then the present site of Oaksdale, was government land. Thirteen years ago Brother Crow moved on to his ranch, then a wild bunch-grass prairie. Brother Burger found him before he had his first little house built to shelter his family. Now the bunch-grass is plowed under; the orchard and shade trees have grown around the site of the old house, the cabin having disappeared to give place to a beautiful house where Brother Crow entertains his friends in good old-fashioned Methodist style. The owner of it has only kept pace with the country. By hard work and good management the settlers have become well-to-do; the country has developed and new towns are springing up, Oaksdale among the number.

Our people had an organization at a school-house four miles from town, and there it remained until last Saturday night. When I first came to the circuit, over a year ago, I proposed moving it to town, but no, no, the Thorn Creek appointment had to be kept up. So I preached once in town and once in the country for awhile. At the last appointment in the country, I did not see so much as one member of our church in town present. Thank God, they are moved at last, though it took a year to accomplish it. But now that we are in town we are in a borrowed house that could have been our own and we could have had the largest membership in the place, if we had followed up the work that was begun here in the first settlement of this country. This is not the only case of this kind that I might mention. Father Newton organized a class where Milton now stands, or near there, 17 years ago, with 36 members, and the most of them representative people—some the bone and sinew of this part of the country. I organized there two years ago with 16 members. Brother Hazzard built a church there last year.

I do not write these things because I have the blues this new year morning, nor because I have not faith in the success of our church in this country. I was saved from sin by our church being here. I gave my life to the church and will give it for the church, and I cannot help thinking that if I live to be as old as one of the brethren of the Columbia Conference, I have half a century to work for the Master and for the church I love in this country. But as I look over the past and look forward to the future and plan the work for the coming year, I feel that much depends upon what we do now. This is the best time we will ever have to secure lots, and thus drive our stakes clear down to the center of the earth. We ought to profit by the past.

If it could be avoided, we ought not to leave an important work to be supplied and then not send the supply. If we do our part of the work that God demands of us in this great new country, we must have more men. And we do not want "feather bed cavalry" either, but strong, hardy men who can go into the great centers of civilization, as well as on the outposts, and plant our standard on an equal footing with the other churches of the land. Pray that God will send more laborers into this part of his vineyard.

A. Y. Skee.

Thrilling Words From California.

Dear Brother Stanley:—You don't know with what relish I devour the contents of the appetizing little "Montana Methodist" which you so kindly send me. The very names of some of the advertisers call up associations which my memory will never let die—Barrett & Jackey J. R. Boyce, Jr., Rodgers' Hotel, Missoula, &c., &c.

How often do I think of that Conference at Stevensville, in 1884, and the gracious revival we had, of grand old Father Stateler, my room-mate for a week at Catlin's Hotel, and good Brother Flowers and his wife, with whom I spent another week.

I have had a lady in my congregation recently, from Butte, and I trembled with emotion whilst I chatted with her of Mr. and Mrs. Barret, who were as kind and loving and considerate to me as if I were their nearest relative—of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin(the elect lady and her children),—of dear Mrs. Cockerell, gone on before to heaven—of Father and Mother Kemper, still lingering but waiting to go—of the married son, and the unmarried one, when I was with them, but who like you has since become a Benedict. How we used to tease you on the subject! I was glad indeed for your sake when I found that you had crossed the Rubicon, or rather had captured the Brook. I don't forget Whitehall and the kindness I received there—linked all the closer to us in California, by the death of one of our brightest Native Sons, whose widowed mother was greatly comforted when I told her what a father and mother Major and Mrs. Brook were sure to have been to her boy. Then Helena, and thehospitality of Bishop Granbery and myself enjoyed under the roof of Brother and Sister Clarke.

Thank God that you now have a pastor again and a church in Butte, and are extending your borders towards our East Columbia Conference. "On, Stanley, on!"

Well, you will be rejoiced to know that we of the Pacific Conference are living and growing. We have recently started a mission in San Francisco, that has enrolled in two months a membership of about thirty—also a church in Alameda (between this and San Francisco) with a similar membership. We are now about to organize in Berkeley (which almost adjoins Oakland on the north) so that we shall soon have five preachers where a year ago we had but two. Of course we have to fight our way. Nothing unusual for "Cow-Boys"—but if witty Dr. Lafferty will come out to this coast we will show him that we have a people here who deserve consideration and are as good and self-sacrificing Methodists as ever dear old Virginia can produce. My contributing members gave last year to our church an average of $73 each! Do the churches even on the favored "James River Circuit" beat that? Instead of despising us they would would do well to emulate our zeal and self-denying labors. The "Richmond Advocate" is a bright little organ, but its vision is somewhat circumscribed—the Rocky Mountains are too high for it—but heaven looks down upon upon us all with equal eye and will reward us each according to our works There are but a few who can expect a crown so bright as that which is awaiting the Christian pioneer hero – dear old Father Stateler! Let us be content if we only bring up the rear.

FROM THE CHURCHES.

How the Battle is Going.

UPPER WILLOW CREEK.

We are progressing slowly but surely, I think. Some of the Christians are enjoying religion, and the preacher in charge is not without the abiding witness of the Spiri t.

I began yesterday, Sunday, to hold a meeting at Upper Willow Creek. Both the Sabbath services were good, with a fair attendance. Our church here got a fearful backset a year or so ago, but I think will come out of her difficulties more than conqueror. A membership of 7 or 8 have been found, and we look for them to adorn the Gospel of Christ which they profess. Our cause at Willow Creek seems to be doing well, though we should do better there is no doubt. At my last appointment 3 were received into the church, the result of our protracted service. At this point we will hold our Second Quarterly Meeting, first Saturday and Sunday in February.

At South Boulder a little cloud of dust has been raised, but I think it will be seen when it all clears away, that our cause has not suffered. We go forward hopefully at this point.

We have not undertaken the meeting at Pony yet, but propose to do so soon. Asking the prayers of the readers of the METHODIST, I am as ever, your brother in Christ,

H. B. COCKRILL.

EAST HELENA.

Rev. L. Bramble writes: "I am getting along very smoothly in my work. Have good-sized congregations, and very attentive. Six have been added to the church." We acknowledge a kind invitation to spend a Sunday with our brother there, and to be present at the District Conference. It would be a pleasure to do so if at all practicable to make the trip.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Stanley.—I closed a nine days meeting at Salesville, last night. A general awakening and five accessions to our church, with more to follow. I begin services at the Phipps school house, next Saturday. B. E. H. WARREN.

Bozeman, Jan. 15.

The above was written on a postal card, and did not occupy all the space either. Let us have many such.

DAYTON, WASHINGTON.

Mr. Editor:—I receive the METHODIST regularly, and enjoy reading it. You are giving us a good paper. We are worshipping in our new church. I hope you can worship in it with us at our next Annual Conference. We have a beautiful little church. It cost, including the lot, about $3,600. The Lord is with us. We have had six additions to the church since Conference. We expect to begin our revival meeting soon. Remember us in your prayers. G. H. GIBBS.

WALLACE, IDAHO.

From a private letter and postal card, we learn that the pastor, Bro. Waggener and family, are comfortably located in their little "hired house," on the mountain side. The people have received them very kindly, and they are in good spirits. The pastor has been unwell, but is at work and is quite hopeful. He writes: "Fifty-five out at morning service and 152 at night. Fine attention. Outlook good. Organized a Sunday school, though only 20 joined it at first. Hope you ordered literature. We pray, trust, and expect a glorious revival."

TOWNSEND CIRCUIT.

Rev. R. S. Clark writes: "We had a good time at Cartersville, the first Sabbath in the month at night. We are having full houses there, and the people are pleased to have us serve them. We have the use of an organ that a friend loaned us. I have supplied them with our hymn books, and Sister Tawhey kindly plays for us. We are learning to sing.

I filled the pulpit for Brother Pope, the Baptist minister, again on last Sunday night, as he is still unwell. He is a clear, forcible preacher. One is impressed upon hearing him, that he "studies the word and prays over it until it burns into his bones, and then tells it," as Bishop Simpson exhorted the theological students at Yale to do. He is building up a good work here. He knows our church and is in warm sympathy with it. We wish there were more of his kind in Montana.

DEMERSVILLE.

The carpenters' work on the new church is completed. The pressure in money matters, caused a little disappointment in raising funds according to promise, and Brother Lee is a little cramped and hindered from completing and occupying the house as he greatly desires to do. He writes: "We have the church seated with cheap but comfortable seats. It involved no extra expense. We had some lumber left over. I went to work myself and got the carpenters to give a day's work apicce, and we have seats for about 150 persons. We could now, with merely a nominal expense, have quite a comfortable place to worship in at Demersville. All we lack now is some lamps and a little building paper. I have made arrangements for the lights, but I will not incur any more expense until the present indebtedness is provided for. The people are clamoring for Sunday school and church services. The town is still booming, and is full of people. There has been no preaching here for several months for there was no house to hold it in. I think that now is our golden opportunity. If we could collect the money that has been subscribed it would be a great relief to us. I have prayed earnestly, and supplemented my prayers with earnest efforts, that this enterprise should be a success [and those prayers and efforts have not been in vain. It will be a success.—Editor.] Our church will soon be in town. Lots are sold all around it. Buildings will soon begin to crowd it."

HELENA.

The protracted meeting has closed. Results were, 15 additions and the church much revived. Congregations continue good and the work is moving on. The pastor and congregation joined with the other churches of the city in carrying out the program for services during the week of prayer.

BUTTE.

The pastor reports the work in good condition. Thirty-five young people out at an ordinary service. The Sunday school work, to which special attention is given, advancing, and the future full of promise. The editor spent a most delightful evening recently with Brother Squires and family, and some special friends who came in. We had heard of Squires' singing before, but found that the half had not been told. And he seems never to tire at it. He and his wife are a whole team at the organ. The memory of that evening will linger long with us. Thank God for Christian homes, where the service of song is such a delight.

WHITEHALL.

We had the great pleasure of spending a Sabbath recently at Whitehall, and of hearing Rev. L. B. Stateler, the pastor, preach. It was a delightful occasion. We never saw the grand old veteran in better health (considering his age) or finer spirits. His mind is clear, his faith strong, and his hopes growing brighter every day. He rejoices that he is still able in any way to advance the cause that is so near his heart, to which a life of sixty years of unremitting toil has been given. Our friends are anxious to erect a neat chapel on the new town site, on the railroad where lots have been given by Brother E. G. Brooke. The two past seasons have been so disastrous to stockmen financially, and our people in this valley are mostly in the stock business, that they are not as well prepared as formerly to shoulder such an enterprise, yet they hope to build during the coming season.

If there is any such a thing as prior right on account of pre-occupancy, and constant occupancy, that has any claim to respect in church matters, surely we have it here. In the winter of 1874-5, a protracted meeting was held on the site now occupied by Whitehall, where there were a number of conversions and a society was formed, since which time the M. E. Church, South, has been the only church that has endeavored to occupy that field regularly until a very recent date. Ministers of other churches passing that way have been hospitably entertained and kindly treated, but they thought it not worth while to have regular preaching there. The services have usually been held at the old Whitehall Hotel, on account of general convenience to the people. But from the time Brother Brooke had the town site laid off on his own land,(he gave the ground for the depot buildings), he has announced his intention of having a church building erected there, as soon as it was deemed practicable to build. This was generally known. There seems to be no earthly use for more than one house of worship in so small a place at present. But it is a free country, and if other brethren feel like crowding in and building, too, and can do so consistently with the principles of Christian courtesy and fraternity, the responsibility must be upon them. That is all.

WALLA, WALLA, WASH.

Editor METHODIST:

I am looking for the METHODIST, which comes like a sunbeam to my home, only too seldom, would it were every week.

Yesterday was a "time of refreshing" with us. Forty-three present at Sunday school, and all alive with earnest zeal. I tell you my heart was stirred as I beheld their expectant faces; and I believe the end is not yet.

We had a good congregation at the morning service; as also in the evening, when we received four into the church, two on profession of faith and two by letter. We engaged in a regular "old-fashioned Methodist hand-shaking," after which we had a short season of prayer and song. It was a happy time. All praise to God. P. M. BELL.

SIXTY YEARS ON THE BORDER.

Life Among the Indians.

BY L. B. STATELER.

During the five years that I was on the Kansas River District—from 1845 to 1850—I visited all the stations in the northern part of the Indian Territory. Many incidents occurred in connection with our labors among the various tribes, some of which might be of general interest. I give a few:

A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

There was in the church in Delaware Mission, a woman whose name was Marshall, who had once been the wife of a trader by whom she had raised quite a family of children. She was then a widow. She had been for quite a length of time afflicted, apparently nigh unto death. On Sunday evening the Christian Indians were gathered at her cabin holding prayer meeting, during which service she died—to all appearance. The women prepared the body for burial, sent a messenger some twenty miles away to the Manual Labor School for the children who were brought home, as was supposed, to see the last of their mother. The following day she revived again, and suddenly gave signs of life. She opened her eyes, and from that low state gradually recovered and was restored to her usual health. The missionary laboring there, Rev. E. T. Perry, conversed with her in regard to her state during the time she was apparently dead. She was very backward about communicating. saying that it was not lawful for her to tell what she had seen. She said: "I will tell you what I experienced when my spirit left the body. I felt myself to be suddenly released from this flesh and blood and saw my body lying there, and saw the religious people praying—was conscious of it all as I ascended. The house seemed not to be in the way, and I found myself in the company of a glorious messenger. We seemed to leave the earth and speedily passed far away, when we suddenly came in sight of a glorious company who were rejoicing, and happy beyond description. I heard their sweet songs which thrilled my spirit. I cannot repeat their words—can only tell you that much."

The whole after-history of this woman comported with her sincerity in making these statements. She appeared like one belonging to a different world. It was all real to her, and she was so thrilled with what she had witnessed that she rejoiced in songs of rapturous praise. The last I knew of her she was happy on her way to heaven.

This is given as an item in the religious history of the Delawares, as showing their character and the influence and power of the Gospel among them. The reader can form his own opinion.

THE KICKAPOOS.

The Kickapoo Mission was established in 1833, and Rev. J. C. Berryman placed in charge. Everything had to be commenced and built from the ground up—house for the missionary, school building, everything. It was near the head of Walnut Creek, some thirty miles or more west and a little north of where the city of Atchison, Kansas, now stands. As early as practicable the people were gathered and the missionary began to instruct them in the Christian religion. He soon found that he had a rival in religious work. There was among them an Indian professing to be a prophet sent by the "Great Spirit" to teach the people. This would-be prophet had a large following. He told them that while a white brother was sent with a book to teach the Indians, he was sent without a book, receiving his authority direct from the "Great Spirit." After a considerable time had elapsed he concluded to unite with the missionary, and so he and all his band joined with the Christians.

So they continued for some time. But the "prophet" seemed to become jealous lest he should lose his authority and influence, and be superseded by the missionary. The result was that he drew off and took most of his followers with him. He continued to teach them as previously. Some years afterwards he was overtaken with small-pox. It soon became evident that he woul die. He told his followers that he would rise again in three days. He died, and his people hung around him expecting to see his words fulfilled. They remained with him until the three days were past—until the body became so decomposed that they could not endure the stench. They then burned the body, lost faith in the "prophet" and his teaching, and were scattered abroad. The name of this "prophet" was Ken-e-kuk. [This was the name of a little town on the old military road in Brown county, Kansas, located near the line of the old Kickapoo reservation. I have been there a number of times, when traveling a circuit in Kansas. It was doubtless named for this same Indian.—Editor.

A TRAGIC OCCURRENCE.

There was a tragic occurrence amongst these same people, which shows the power of the gospel to elevate a heathen.

There was a very aged man who was converted in his old age, whom I afterwards saw at church when attending the Quarterly meeting there. He gave evidence of sound conversion. In his old age he had no family and no one to depend upon except a daughter with whom he made his home. This only daughter was ruthlessly assailed by another Indian woman and killed. The aged man said, "When I found that my child was killed, I determined in my heart that I would avenge her death by taking the life of the woman that murdered her. As soon as I determined upon that, at once I felt myself going into darkness. I spent the night in the most dreadful agony, feeling that my peace was all gone and I a miserable wretch, and that that act itself would cut me off from heaven. I knew I couldn't live but a short time. I was mighty anxious to get to heaven and rest in the happy world above. I felt that I had my choice—to go and commit that act and be lost, or not to do it, trust in Jesus and be saved. I could do either. I then said, "I'll let God punish that wicked woman: I'll leave it all to him. I won't do it.' Then it all got light about me again, then I lifted up my heart to God in prayer to help me to trust in Him. I am alone. My child is gone, but I am trusting, and it won't be long till I'll be in that bright world where I shall rest forever."

It was a joy to look upon his face and witness his trustful spirit while he related this story in a plain, simple way. It was not long until his end came and he was carried away to that Heaven he so much longed to see. Surely the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, even to the poor Kickapoo Indians.

Dissimulation, What It Characterizes, and How it Should Be Treated.

If there is any one sin that more than others characterizes the "Old Serpent," it is, we think, love with dissimulation. Judas' kiss of betrayal, and Brutus' and Joab's friendly salutation, followed quickly by the murderous dagger, belong to this class of sin. David also used this stroke of satanic policy to deceive Uriah, and thereby concealed the heinous crime he had committed against him, and failing, it seems by the interposition of Divine wisdom, which alone can successfully meet it, he then employed it in his—Uriah's—destruction, and that in the most dastardly manner. No wonder that the Apostle Paul, after he had instructed the Romans to let their "love be without dissimulation," should have at once added, in a style so pointed and vigorous: "Abhor that which is evil, and cleave to that which is good." Love with dissimulation always carries in it the purpose to deceive, that advantages may be had, and hence the character of the actor, whatever might otherwise be, or promise, is compromitted in this treacherous policy, and therefore must not be considered one moment. As a palliative, love may ostensibly feed the hungry, and clothe the naked; but if a purpose to obtain an advantage is associated therewith, then the character of the would-be benefactor tumbles into ruin at this point, and the beneficiaries of his bounties, to save themselves from the contamination of such an iniquitous disclosure, must abhor the whole movement, while they regard the actor as an enemy of the most dangerous character. "He that committeth sin—sin planned, sin designed, not sin of infirmities, or of ignorance necessarily—is of the Devil." He who receives into his love and confidence those who seek to destroy him, or the interests that he is laboring to establish, under the guise of friendship, is thereby embracing a moral viper, and if he is therewith destroyed, who is to blame? Has not God told him that his safety in his communication with this character is to abhor it, and thus keep it at a moral distance that will secure his heart and life from its deadly venom? Otherwise their spirit and purpose will be transferred to their victim and develop in his consent to their plan for his ruin, and thus he lends his aid to effect his own destruction, and all because, forsooth, they profess to be doing what they are doing for his good, or the good of others, upon Christian principles. "Treat not a fool according to his folly lest you be like him," said Solomon. It is not possible for the human heart to admit a man into its friendly communion, whose purposes and actions are wrong, because in other things his purposes and life may be right, without itself becoming afflicted with the iniquity thus sought to be disguised; and hence the deceived party, while he makes the deceiver "wise in his own conceit," is not only injured in his person, or in the interests that he guards as sacred, but is corrupted in heart. All of the affections of the human heart assimulate the moral elements, both good and bad, that present themselves to it, and that are cherished by it, save one only, and that is, hate. Hatred makes the heart invulnerable to any moral force whatever. Hence it is that, in the philosophy of salvation through the regin of God's grace in his Son, we are instructed to "hate sin with a perfect hatred," wherever, or in whomsoever found. But instead of exercising this affection, and securing the heart against the inroads of sin in all of its forms, the tendency of to-day life is to demolish the line of distinction between vice and virtue, and build up character out of destructive admixture. This being true, we should not be astonished that there are many that are "Sickly and weak among us" in the spiritual conditions of life. Good health and a vigorous, strong system are only found where the functions of life are allowed to perform their office without restraint, rejecting that which enervates and destroys, regardless of its association, and assimulating that which builds up the wasted tissues. A vigorous and strong moral character cannot exist where the affection hate, which is a vital function in the spiritual economy of man, is not allowed to perform its office, and secure the heart and life from the infectious touch of sin, regardless of its fascinating associations. The worst kind of a lie is a half truth, "than which there never was a better truth uttered. It ought to be written in letters of gold, upon the blue archway of heaven, so that all could see, and hate this deadly moral compound and thus save their hearts and lives from its enervating and ruinous touch. We believe that a disregard of this principle or protection in the moral life of the church in accepting advances without rebuking the dissimulations with which they are associated, has done much to tone down that high type of spiritual integrity that once characterized her intercourse with the various faiths and pretensions among men. In five out of the seven churches which the ascended Savior examined in the opening chapters of the Book of Revelation, dissimulators are recognized. And in four cases the paotors are either praised for exposing them, or censured for allowing them to practice their dissimulations upon the people unrebuked. To one of them He said, whose admintstration was not otherwise faultless: "But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate." R. S. CLARK.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list

WHITE AND RED BROTHERS.

BY REV. E. R. EDGERTON YOUNG, A MISSIONARY TO THE CREEK INDIANS.

He had gone to a tribe which had never heard the Gospel, and summoned them to a council to see if they were disposed to become Christians. The principal chief, according to their unwritten laws of precedence, spoke first. His voice was good, and full of pathos. He said:

"Missionary, I have long lost faith in our old paganism." Then, pointing down to the outer edge of the audience, where some old conjurers and medicine-men were seated, he said, "They know I have not cared for our old religion. I have neglected it. And I will tell you, missionary, why I have not believed our old paganism for a long time. I hear God in the thunder, in the tempest, and in the storm. I see his power in the lightning that shivers the trees to kindling wood. I see his goodness in giving us the moose, the reindeer, the beaver and the bear. I see his loving kindness in giving us, when the South winds blow, the ducks and geese, and when the snow and ice melt away, and our lakes and rivers are open again, I see how he fills them with fish.

"I have watched these things for years, and during every moon of the year he gives us something; and as has he arranged it, that if we are only industrious and careful, we can always have something to eat.

"So, thinking about these things which I observed, I made up my mind years ago, that this Great Spirit, so kind, and watchful, and loving, did not care for the beating of the conurer's drum, or the shaking of the rattle of the medicine-man. So I for years have had no religion. Missionary, what you have said to-day fills up my heart and satisfies my longings. It is just what I have been expecting to hear about the Great Spirit. I am so glad you have come with this wonderful story. Stay as long as you can, and when you have to go away, do not forget us, but come again as soon as you can."

Another speaker was an old man with grizzly hair. He was a queer, savage-looking man, and spoke in an excited way. He said:

"Missionary, once my hair was as black as a crow's. Now it is getting white. Gaay hairs here and grandchildren in the wigwam tell me I am getting to be an old man, and yet I never heard such things as you told us to-day. I am so glad I did not die before I heard this wonderful story. Yet I am getting old. Gray hairs here and grandchildren yonder tell the story. Stay as long as you can, missionary; tell us much of these things, and when you have to go away, come back soon, for I have grandchildren and I have gray hairs, and I may not live many winters more. Do come back soon. Missionary, may I say more?"

"Talk on; I am here to listen," said the missionary.

"You said just now 'No tawenan' (our Father)."

"Yes, I did say our Father."

"That is new and very sweet to us. We never thought of the Great Spirit as our Father. We heard him in the thunder, and saw him in the lightning and the tempest and blizzard, and we were afraid. So when you tell us of the Great Spirit as Father, that is very beautiful to us."

Lifting up his eyes, after a moment, to the missionary, he said, "May I say more?"

"Yes," was the reply, "say on."

"You say, No tawenan (our Father). He is your Father?"

"Yes," said the missionary, "He is my Father."

"Then he said, while his eyes and voice yearned for the answer, "Does it mean He is my Father—poor Indian's Father?

"Yes, oh, yes; he is your Father, too," was the reply.

"Your Father—missionary's Father and Indian's Father, too?

"Yes, said the missionary.

"Then we are brothers," he shouted.

"Yes we are brothers," said the missionary.

The excitement in the audience became wonderful. But the old man had not yet finished. He said, "May I say more?"

"Yes, say on; all that is in your heart," was the reply.

"Well," the Indian resumed, "I do not want to be rude, but it does seem to me that you, my white brother, have been a long time in coming with that big Book and its wonderful story, to tell it to your red brothers in the woods."

CARE FOR THE CHILDREN.

Two things have distressed us no little in connection with our church work in the West, both in Kansas and in Montana. One was the comparatively small number of young persons belonging to the church in some of our societies; the other, the difficulty of getting grown persons to superintend Sunday Schools and attend and take a lively interest in Sunday School work. We have seen a society, respectable in point of numbers, with scarcely a member belonging to it under twenty-five or thirty years of age, insomuch that the question could but arise in our mind, what will become of it when the present membership dies or is otherwise removed? Another large and rather flourishing society has been observed, with a number of young people in it, and plenty of them in the community, that could not furnish officers to man and conduct a Sunday School successfully.

The result of all this is that many of our young people, upon growing up, either wander away into other churches or become indifferent to religion, are blinded by the god of this world, led captive by the devil at his will, and are lost to Christ and the church. How can we wonder at such a result when there is such indifference and inactivity among the older members in regard to their spiritual welfare? Not a few of our preachers, we fear, get so accustomed to preaching to grown-up people that they lose, in a great measure, their interest in children or lose the "nack" of interesting them in religious subjects. If this state of affairs should prevail, our churches will be shorn of their strength and their glory will depart.

Some one has said that men cannot be developed perfectly who have not had the care and training of children from infancy to manhood; that we might as well call a tree perfect without a leaf or flower, as to say a man is perfect and complete in his life who has never gone through the experience of bending down and giving himself up to those who were helpless and little. This is according to nature. No household is complete without children. The architecture and the furniture may be fine and elegant, the parlors and premises tastefully kept, the music ever so charming, but without the innocent prattle and laughter of childish voices ringing through hall and parlor, there is such a sense of incompleteness that the interested visitor instinctively asks the very familiar question: "Where are the children?" or "Have you no children?" the reply to which often cause no little embarrassment.

So with the household of faith, the church of God. She cannot attain to the full measure of her spiritual completeness without the presence of "the child in the midst." We cannot go to heaven and leave the children behind. The "babes" must be fed "with the sincere milk of the Word," and the children developed "unto perfect men, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." We need the exercise, the discipline and inspiration that the presence and the training of this fresh young life in the church will give us. If we are too cold and stiff and selfish to get down and adapt ourselves to children, we may expect Christ to rebuke us as He did the Disciples.

This writer blesses the memory of that man of God – Rev. H. A. Davis —who, on his first visit to our home, manifested a kindly interest in a little boy, and gave him the first chapter of John to "get by heart," and recite when he came again, and also that dear good class-leader that knelt at his side, and talked, and wept, and prayed, and pointed him to Jesus, the Savior of boys. We can never forget the names nor the faces of the zealous men and women who used to travel from two to four miles across the prairies of Kansas in ox wagons, or on foot, on Sunday mornings, to meet a half dozen or more boys and girls, some of whom had come as far with the same kind of conveyances, where, in a log cabin, we studied our Scripture lesson, recited our verses and sang of a "happy land that is far, far away." Who knows how much those little songs, those Scripture lessons, and those kind words contributed to the salvation of those boys and girls? We would not have been without such experiences for the world.

Are we doing as much in proportion for the children and youth today? As parents, as Christian men and women, as pastors, whom the Lord has charged especially, saying, "Feed My lambs;" are we doing our whole duty? We see our children grow up, become indifferent and wander off into the world of ungodliness. Do we realize that perhaps the fault is at our door, and if they are lost their blood will be on us? They are full of life and will have employment. The devil is only too busy with his "wiles," trying to deceive them, and alas, is only too successful. The case of the young man possessed of the evil spirit, which the disciples could not cast out, is a suggestive scene, and is being re-enacted in our land every day. When the widow's son was dead and the mother came to Elijah in such sore distress and made her plea for help, the prophet took the child alone into an upper room and stretched himself full length upon the prostrate and lifeless form, eye to eye, mouth to mouth, heart to heart, hand to hand, three times in succession, and then prayed mightily unto God that the soul might return again unto the child, and he revived, and was restored unto his mother. We must get close and keep close to the children and young people, let them feel the breath of a warm, loving, healthful, active, cheerful Christian life, and give them work to do and food to eat that is suited to their capacities and congenial to their natures, if we would save them. This is one purpose of the Epworth League. Let our pastors introduce it and make the most and the best use of it possible, and let each and every one betake himself to fasting and prayer to God for Divine guidance and greater spiritual power in the home-life, in the social life, and in every-day life, that we may take better care of the children whom God has given us to train for heaven.

THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

There will be an Ecumenical Conference, composed of 500 delegates, sent by the various bodies of Methodism throughout the world, held in Washington City, D. C., in October, 1891. There will be 200 delegates from what is termed the Eastern division, and 300 from the Western, which includes North America and her missions. Our church will have 63 delegates, who have recently been appointed by the bishops. At the almost universal request of the church, the bishops head the list—10 in number, besides 36 ministers and 10 laymen. We haven't room for the entire list. The following are a few of the names: A. G. Clarke, Esq., of Montana; Rev. J. C. Simmons, of California; Rev. George Needham, of Denver Conference; Rev. J. D. Hammond, of Missouri Conference, and Rev. J. C. Morris, of Southwest Missouri Conference. Remembering that the appointments were without reference to Conference lines, we consider it quite a compliment to have a representation from Montana, and congratulate our Brother Clarke on the high honor which is so worthily bestowed upon him. No better selection could have been made. Honest, unassuming, yet dignified in his bearing, a man that stands high at home, successful in his business undertakings, pure, zealous and true to the church, he will reflect credit upon the cause and the locality he represents.

THE SCARRITT BIBLE AND TRAINING SCHOOL.

The first meeting of the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training School for missionaries and other Christian workers, was held in Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 30, 1890. Present: Bishop Hendrix, President; Mrs. Julia E. Simpson, Secretary; Miss Belle H. Bennett, Mrs. Ruth E. Scarritt, Mrs. Susan Jones and Miss Mary Helm, ex-officio member.

Miss Bennett, the agent, gave a statement of her work and plans, and reported $14,021.88 on hand, and $27,500 in subscriptions. Plans for the building were presented, and the Building Committee was given authority to select a plan and proceed with the work as soon as it could be done without incurring debt. It cannot be begun until the whole amount required—$50,000—is collected. The Building Committee consists of Mr. W. C. Scarritt, Dr. J. J. Tigert, Bishop Hendrix, Rev. W. B. Palmore and Mrs. L. R. Moore.

The growing need of trained workers in mission fields renders it desirable that the Training School be opened at an early date—in the fall of '91, if possible. Only one-half the amount needed is collected. Miss Bennett is doing fine work, but must have help. The officers of the Women's Board of Missions and the brethren of the ministry are urged to bring the matter before the people. Easter Sunday is appointed as the time for special services and collections for the Training School. It is a grand movement and far-reaching in its influence. Let all our people rally to its help.

FROM THE FIELD.

BUTTE.

Dear "Methodist":—

Your coming is welcomed to our table, but long to see you come oftener—say once a week.

The city is not so busy as for some time past, but seems quite as full of people—many of them looking on, simply. Large plans have been laid for the abatement of the smoke nuisance in the city, which, when accomplished, will add much to the desirableness of the place as a residence. The cold weather which has been expected daily for three months has not made its appearance yet—it may be fore my readers see this note.

Temperance lecturers, Salvation Army men, and ministers of the Gospel are "crying aloud and sparing not" the buttresses of sin in this Ninevah.

I think the cause is on the up-grade here—all the congregations are growing and the Sunday School work is markedly so. We are to have a County Sunday School Convention here soon, which I hope will give this most important work a still greater impetus, with our most valuable members as officers of our school here, and quite a number of the members in the Bible classes, and a large field and white before us in the adjacent part of the city. We are having a flourishing Sunday School.

We have set apart each first Sunday as Missionary Sunday for the school. And now as I am on that matter, I mention that we have organized a "Missionary Reading Circle," under the plans given by the "Columbia, Mo., Chautauqua." Fifteen members are now enrolled and "more to follow."

I have set apart next Sunday as the time for collection for "Domestic Missions." I hope not only to secure the collections ordered by the Conference, but to secure as much of the educative influence upon the church as possible by these occasions, and through these claims. The Sunday School lessons are used for prayer-meeting themes on the Thursday before the Sabbath for the lesson, and the mutual help is very appreciable.

The revival spirit is among our people, and several have united with the church since the meetings closed.

Faithfully, JOHN E. SQUIRES.

SOUTH BOULDER.

Bro. I. A. Westmoreland, a layman writing to have his paper changed, says: "We have preaching twice a month and prayer meeting every Sunday. I think there is a good interest taken in it. But I hope to see more believe in the Lord."

That has the right ring. Prayer meetings are the life of the church, and when a good interest is taken in them by the lay members, we doubt not that many more will be constrained to "believe in the Lord."

STEVENSVILLE.

Brother Parnall held a meeting at Lo Lo, at which there was one bright conversion and accession to the church, and a general religious interest awakened in the community.

LELAND, IDAHO.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—

We are in the midst of a grand revival. Souls are being converted. Such an interest has never been manifested in this part before. It is raining and muddy, but the people go to church all the same. Bro. H. B. Terry, a recent transfer from the Memphis Conference, is assisting. God is blessing his labors.

W. S. HORNBUCKLE.

BAKER CITY, OREGON.

Dear. Bro. Stanley:—

I received another "Montana Methodist" last night and was made mighty glad over its contents. My prayer is constantly "Lord, draw me nearer to all my brethren." I left my circuit, not to stay away, neither on secular business, but to preach. Helped Bro. Barnhart a week in Grand Ronde Circuit, or what is called La Grand and Moss Chapel Charge. Ten accessions. Bro. Burger was there also, and in good preaching trim. I then went and assisted Bro. Burger in the Summerville Circuit. Six accessions up to the time I left, and doubtless more will join. Am now at Wingville. The place was so named because it was commonly said that the left wing of Price's army had settled here. Well, many of the people are now in God's army and fighting the grand battles of faith and truth. Began here three days ago. Brother Barnhart is stirring all hearts. Three or four said last night: "Pray that we may be saved," and the church is full of ardor. We expect great things. Pray for us.

D. W. YOAKUM.

BOULDER.

Rev. J. H. Johnson writes:—

"My church work moves slowly. Have received 7 members this year--6 by certificate, 1 by profession of faith, baptized 10 children." Bro. J. also expects to do something in the way of building before the year is out.

DEMERSVILLE.

Rev. E. L. Lee writes that through the kindness of our good friend, Mr. J. E. Clifford, arrangements have been made for the temporary occupancy of the new church and also for plastering it just as soon as the weather will permit in the spring. The burden is lifted for the time and the pastor is happy. He says: I will preach for the first time in the new church next Sunday morning and evening. It is not finished, but will be fairly comfortable this pleasant weather. Two friends donated two chandeliers with Rochester burners, and Mr. Keith sold us a large Rochester lamp at cost, and so we have the house brilliantly illuminated at a nominal cost. We have a seating capacity of 150, quite comfortable seats will answer until we can do better—at a cost of only $10.70. I praise God that once more we can preach in this thriving little town. To God be all the glory! Houses are now going up beyond the church."

We never doubted that Brother Lee would come out all right. We rejoice that the way is opening, and are grateful to kind friends for their timely aid in a good cause. We believe they will never regret it. May that new house of worship be the means of great good to the people in and around Demersville.

WALLACE.

The pastor, Rev. W. O. Waggener, in a private letter writes: "Everything seems to be moving along smoothly. The morning congregations run from 35 to 60; at night from 150 to 200. Collections average about $12.00. Finances are depressed here, as you know. Many are out of work, and little money in circulation. We expect it to be much better in the spring. Under all the circumstances I may say we have much to encourage and very little to discourage us. I like it better and better, though one or the other of us have been sick ever since we came—getting acclimated, I suppose. I have not done as much as would like, but am now getting down to it in a somewhat steady gait, which I hope to keep up and improve upon. We got our Sunday School literature all right. We hold our Sunday School in the school house. Had 34 out on Sunday afternoon. It grows every week. My Bible class is composed of adults of both sexes, and will prove very interesting, I think. They have no preaching at Mullan. I will arrange to go there on some week night before long. Expect to commence revival services before long. Pray for us. It's a hard fight we have to make here, but the Lord is mighty, and we expect the victory. Will have to hold services in the school house during the week. May have to write for you to come and help us. Hold yourself in readiness. It is said there never has been a conversion in W. Oh, that we could have an old time revival here."

FROM CIRCLEVILLE, KANSAS.

An old friend and associate of our boyhood days, a member of the M. E. Church, North, writes: I have received two copies of the MONTANA METHODIST. I read them carfully, and think it a splendid little paper. It makes me think of our boyhood days at school and Sabbath School on Soldier Creek. I will tell you some things about our church. We have had one of the very best revivals that has been held here for many years—rather I think it has just begun. There were 21 joined by letter and on probation. But the best work was with the membership. Several who had been members for years, but had not been converted, were soundly and savingly converted. As Brother John Faubion would say, they have got religion. You can tell the difference in the Sunday School, which now numbers about 100 scholars, though there are two other schools in town. Bro. Alec Oarsler is our Superintendent this year, and your humble servant, assistant. I shall work on and try to do all the good I can. I think of you often, and pray for your success in your work for the Lord Jesus.

B. H. MCCART.

LA GRAND, OREGON.

Editor MONTANA METHODIST:—Dear Brother, I will at last write to you. It is not necessary to tell you that while at Conference last fall I found out how small and weak I was, and when Bishop Hendrix read my appointment I shrunk up until one sheet of THE METHODIST would have covered my insignificant form. I never came so near "wilting" in my life. I never knew what "back out" meant, at least in my own experience. I have met all the difficulties and dangers incident to the life of a locomotive engineer, and always felt myself equal to any emergency. But oh, how weak I felt when called out on this new Road. My inexperience in this new life seemed like a heavy grade on a new road, I knew not when or how I would reach the top. But my time card, the Bible, assured me that I should have help; so I just went into the telegraph office and dropped down on my knees and told the Great General manager of this route that I was coming with a heavy train of immortal souls, and I needed help, and to send it now, and, praise His Great name, it came, and in six months and a half after I was converted, I took charge of this work, La Grand and Moss Chapel.

I have met with many discouragements in this new work, but God has wonderfully strengthened me and has blessed the work. Bro. M. V. Howard assisted me to start out. He turned the switches for me and got me out on the main line, and in the latter part of October we held a meeting of a week's duration, at which we got our machinery in working order. We found out the weak points and strengthened them. The members on the work got warmed up and smoke began to rise, which showed that there was fire. I kept fanning away, and the blaze broke out, and two were added to the church. The fire continued, and three weeks ago Bro. Yoakum and Berger came to my assistance, and we held a meeting at Moss Chapel, where there were six conversions and ten accessions to our church, and the work goes on. We have no house to worship in in La Grand, so I hold meetings in my house. I have purchased three lots in a desirable and suitable locality in town, upon which we expect to erect a house of worship as soon as spring comes. I found some hard work here, but I enjoy it. The "old timers" here looked upon me as a forerunner of disaster to the church at Moss Chapel, but they have proven themselves my best friends. They not only hold up my hands, but help me in every way possible. We have a few members in La Grand and expect many more before the year closes. Pray for us.

HARRY BARNHART.

BIG BEND, WASH.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—

Our Second Quarterly Conference was held at Wilbur, Wash., Bro. Reg. B. Swift, P. E., in the chair, Jan. 17–18. I give you a condensed report for the quarter: There are two flourishing Sabbath Schools using our literature, with about 60 enrolled members. During the 3 months we have received into the church 32 members, 15 by baptism, 14 by profession, and 3 by letter. There are nearly as many more yet to be received. To God be all the glory, forever, Amen!

The financial exhibit was as follows: Foreign missions, $21.00; Conference Claimants, $2.75; Incidentals, $13 00; S. S. supplies, $5.25; P. C., $75.25; P. E., $10.00. We expect, by God's help, to have a "clean sheet" by District Conference.

We are in the midst of another meeting, from which we expect great things of our Lord. By the way, our P. E. grows on us constantly. He was well received at Wilbur, and preached grandly.

Well, we are working for the dear little "Montana," also. We enclose you two subscriber's names, with the cash, together with my own subscription. Is it not amusing to hear the excuses given by Christians for not taking a church paper? One says, "Bible enough; that takes all spare time," yet the same one has spent hours reading trashy novels. Another "cannot see," yet before his conversion read Free (?) thought papers by the hour! Another says, "cannot afford it," and by his own confession spends $5.20 per year for tobacco. "Will a man rob God?" Another takes 7 secular papers, and of course he cannot afford to take his church paper! The two names sent are both wives of unconverted husbands, and have sent for your paper out of the little pin-money they have saved up.

Please pray for us. Our constant prayer is "Lord, keep us humble, and continue to use us to Thy glory!"

Love to all the Montana and East Columbia brethren. A proposition: Let the two Conferences named spend Friday before 1st Sunday in March in fasting and praying for the "enduement of power from on high" (Feb. 27). What about the Spokane District Conference? All in favor of making the MONTANA METHODIST our organ, say "Ay!"—"Ay!! Ay!!! Ay!!!!" Opposed, "Nay." "Nay!" (from California brethren.) "Ay's" have it.

Yours saved to date, Hallelujah!

FRED. ST. CLAIR.

FROM DR. J. C. MORRIS.

My Dear Bro. Stanley:—

I did not think when I left you in the Northwest that it would be so long before I wrote to you. I have thought of you and the dear brethren out on the picket line much, and have talked with my Father in Heaven about you, but I have had too many demands on my time to write you. I have just been reading the MONTANA METHODIST. That's good reading. The Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Stevensville does well.—Price is in the midst of a revival.—A crowd at Elkhorn.—The Hallelujah Chorus in the Palouse country.—Sinners coming to Christ all over the church.—The house at Demersville going up, the first church in Flathead Valley.—Skee has organized at Oakdale — the blessed old patriarch, Stateler, still preaching and writing. One thing seems to me so delightful—Montana and East Columbia are so beautifully blended together. A long life to the MONTANA METHODIST and its editor. May their shadows never grow less.

I have been very busy in my work. From Lebanon, Oregon, to Monticello, Florida, I have travelled over a large part of the church. Everywhere I have gone I have had a word to say for the heroic men out in the fore front of the battle. The Lord has no truer soldiers enlisted in His army. Oh, how often I have told the preachers and the people in the older Conferences of what you refer to in your Editorial Notes—the faithful, earnest men before a Conference Board, with hearts almost breaking, and tears in their eyes, making pleas for help. Truly, if the church did only know these facts they would be more liberal in their contributions to this cause. My visits to the Conferences have brought me to believe it. The brethren down in Florida said to me: "You must make our assessments higher and they will not be so hard to raise." There is a truth there. They see the facts, and when these are presented by themselves the heart of the church will respond. Bishop Duncan said at Florida Conference: "The Church never expended any money in missionary effort to better purpose than what she is giving to Church Extension."

Give my love to every one of the brethren in the Northwest. God bless you all. Especially remember me to my dear old Brother Stateler.

Man is always dependent on God for success in his work. God is never dependent on man for his success even in man's sphere of work. Hence man owes everything to God, while God owes nothing to man. It is a privilege to work for God; but he who does best and most for God is "an unprofitable servant" whom God has honored in spite of his unprofitableness.

ABOUT THE WORKERS.

—Our readers will relish the interesting letter from our Assistant Secretary of Church Extension, Bro. Morris. Such earnest words ought to be an inspiration to every faithful worker in our church throughout the Northwest.

—We rejoice to hear from Brother Barnhart, the converted locomotive engineer. His letter stirred our heart most deeply. He is on the right track. What if it is "up grade" (who would have it otherwise) and a heavy load? If God be for us, who shall stand against us? We believe that the Lord is with our brother. Read his letter.

—Rev. D. B. Price has been suffering some with throat trouble, though we are happy to know that he is convalescent. We regret to learn that Sister Price is a constant sufferer, and trust that she will find relief with the return of spring.

—Brother Lee writes that his wife is suffering from rheumatism, and is unable to attend to her household duties. We are very sorry to hear it. May she be speedily restored.

—Brother J. H. Johnson is giving us some excellent short sermons and articles on religious topics, which are highly appreciated by the readers of the METHODIST. Our Brother is specially gifted in this line.

—A sure enough "Hallelujah Chorus" comes up from Big Bend. No wonder Brother St. Clair is happy. What a chorus he and Squires, of Butte, would make if they could sing together. We would love to hear them. How they would make the welkin ring! Thank God for a religion that makes us love to sing—gives us something to sing about. Even those who are not blessed with the gift of song, cannot help making melody in their hearts unto the Lord.

—We are thankful that Brother Squires is taking such a lively interest in the young people and in the Sunday School work. We need a genuine stirring revival along this line. Let it be wide-spread and come now.

—Mrs. S. A. Riley, of Boulder, sends an express draft for $2 to pay her subscription for two years, and adds: I am sorry that I have been so negligent and have not kept my subscription paid up. Will try and be more punctual in future. I am very much pleased with the METHODIST and wish it great success.

—We are glad that our friends are pleased with the paper. We shall try to make it better all the time. Because the amount of a year's subscription is so small, and because it is frequently inconvenient to procure a postal note or draft, many just neglect to send it. We are not afraid but what they will pay up; but short settlements make long friends, you know. The money that is now due us on subscriptions, if paid, would help to enlarge and improve the paper. We want no one to stop the paper because of inability to pay for it, but would be glad for those in arrears, who feel that they can spare the amount, to forward as soon as convenient. Our subscription list is increasing right along. Let each one strive to send us a new name right away.

—Mr. A. D. Chamberlin, who lived in Montana several years, writes from Williamstown, Mass.: "I don't like the winters here very well. It snows and blows and the roads are drifted full. We have had good sleighing here ever since before Christmas, and it's snowing to-day (Jan. 17)." Mrs. Polly C. Thomas, an elderly and zealous Christian lady, who has many friends about Corvallis and Stevensville, Montana, and other portions of the West, is now at Williamstown, in reasonable health and waiting for the Master's call to the home beyond the tide. She believes in the old-time, heart-felt religion, and talks it, sings it, and lives it every day. She will have many stars in her crown.

News and Notes.

—After a dead-lock that extended through one session and nearly half another, and cost the State many thousands of dollars, the Montana Legislature has at last come together, and our law-makers are busy enacting laws for which the State has been suffering greatly. The Democrats have the Speaker and organization of the House. Three of the Democrats and two of the Republicans from Silver Bow—the county in dispute—were sent home, which leaves the Republicans a majority of one, with all the original members present. The death of Mr. Witter will leave a tie. We trust that such an occurrence will never take place in our State again.

—There was a change in the weather and we had quite a respectable blizzard on Saturday night and Sunday morning, the 1st inst. The mercury went down to twenty below zero, though it did not materially discommode the writer in a ride of eight miles to an appointment and back on Sunday night. The snow only fell about four inches deep. We hoped to see much more. It is again very mild and pleasant.

—On Wednesday night, the 5th inst., the store building of the Missoula Mercantile Company at Corvallis burned down. The loss was quite heavy. It will be replaced by a better one in the spring. It was with difficulty that the fire was kept from spreading. Merchants, ministers, doctors, farmers, one and all, worked like heroes to save the adjacent homes and business houses. Would that they would work together with the same enthusiasm against the great enemy of "God and Home and Native Land."

—The "Montana Christian Advocate" comes to us from Bozeman, its new place of publication, in a bran new dress, much enlarged in the capacity of its columns and in the variety of matter they contain, and much improved in every respect. This is the first copy of the paper that has reached our table directly from the publishers or managers. If it is a fair specimen of Bro. Mills' work in his new relation, his success is already assured. Our acquaintance with him has been limited, but we have always regarded him as a Christian gentleman, and we wish him great usefulness in his new field of labor.

—The Epworth League is very popular, and Leagues are being organized all over the church. Let us not be behind.

—Bishop Fitzgerald has been quite sick since he returned from his extensive Western tour, but is convalescent. It is said that he will make his permanent home on the Pacific coast.

—Dr. C. K. Marshall, one of the prominent pulpit orators of the M. E. Church, South, recently passed away.

—Hon. William Windom, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, dropped dead at New York the 29th of January.

—Hon. A. C. Witter, of the Montana Legislature, from Beaverhead County, died at Dillon, January 31, where he had gone to be with his sick wife, who passed away just a few days before his decease. They were both buried in the same grave.

—In a note from our Church Extension Secretary, Brother Morton, replying to an appeal made for assistance in a special case, which was very urgent, he says: "It gives me positive pain to say that I see no way by which I can help you. The money pressure is very severe all over the country, and we are threatened with a panic like that of '73 or '87. I know of nothing to be done except to reef our sails and weather the storm as best we can. I am sure our Board can do nothing for you before April." Well, we've been in worse storms before, and we do not fear this one. "We will weather the blast and land at last, safe on the evergreen shore."

—Surely something of interest has transpired in each pastoral charge in the Montana and East Columbia Conferences within the past two weeks. You have had a good Sunday School, or a good service that was profitable to yourself or others. Then why not drop us a line on a postal card about it, as several have done? Don't keep all the good things to yourself. Many hearts all over the church are just aching for the words of cheer that you might send them. In olden times they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another. Let us keep up the practice; use our paper as the medium and have a regular Montana Methodist class meeting.

—The January number of the "Quarterly Review" of the M. E. Church, South, is exceedingly interesting. It contains several articles, each of which is worth the subscription price for a year, which is $2.50.

FROM THE MISSION ROOMS.

The Missionary Secretaries met in council January 15th, and made careful examination into our missionary affairs.

In view of the financial condition in portions of our Connection, the results achieved have been beyond our anticipations. There has been a general advance in the collections under the assessments. The response to the special appeals for new missionaries and enlargement has been most encouraging. With this cheering outlook at home, there is even still greater encouragement from our mission fields. The work is expanding. From every mission calls come in for re-enforcement. The Master is leading us on.

The field Secretaries will continue their work on the line of enlargement. We need, to meet the present and pressing wants of the field, forty new missionaries in addition to those already provided for. The Annual Conferences have responded. The Sunday Schools are falling into line. Many churches and individuals in our connection, in addition to their regular assessments, are well able to send out and support a missionary in some of our missions. Will each pastor take this matter on his heart? Will he, with his congregation, take it to the throne of grace?

The Secretaries have planned a general canvass of the Church. They are expecting the Great Head of the Church to move on the hearts of both pastors and congregations that they may co-operate cordially in the work of extending the kingdom of Christ among the nations.

—We print elsewhere the report of our missionary secretaries. We rejoice at the enlargement of the work and the increased interest that is being awakened on the subject of missions. Our heart is in the work. We rejoice at every missionary that sails from our ports to a foreign shore. But while this is the case, we also long to see enlargement in our own land, and along our Western border. It is our honest conviction that our forces in the West should be greatly strengthened and the appropriation to this field greatly increased. Let our Secretaries plan and work for this

MARRIED.—In Helena, January 22, 1891, Ephraim F. Tusley to Martha Cowper, Rev. D. B. Price officiating. The groom is a native of Missouri, and the bride a native of Scotland. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends and acquaintances. Choice refreshments were served. Lord, send Thy blessing upon the couple.

OBITUARIES.

Died, January 30, 1891, on Ambrose Creek, near Stevensville, Mont., Martha Marinda, the youngest daughter of W. M. and L. Franks, aged 2 years and 10 months.

The sad event came as a sudden shock to the bereaved family, as the dear little one, who had been sick for several days previous, was not considered to be at all dangerously ill.

The funeral was appointed for Sunday, Feb. 1, but owing to the severe snow storm which raged on that day, it could not take place until Monday.

How comforting to the grief-stricken parents at this time should the words of the blessed Master be: Suffer the little children to come unto Me.....for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

With feelings of deepest sympathy, in which a wide circle of friends join, we pen these lines.

J. B. PARNALL.

It is with sadness that we chronicle the decease of Mrs. Amanda Woolverton, wife of John C. Woolverton, which occurred at her home at Whitehall, Montana, the 6th of January, 1891, of pneumonia. Her illness lasted but a few days. The death of her little infant took place on the 5th. Deceased was a consistent and zealous member of the church of the Disciples, was an affectionate wife and mother, and leaves a husband and six children, besides a wide circle of friends, to mourn her loss. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. L. B. Stateler. We know what it is to be bereft of a mother, and we commend the afflicted ones to the God of all grace, who alone can sustain and comfort in times of such deep distress.

SIXTY YEARS ON THE BORDER.

Among the Indians—A Thrilling Incident.

BY L. B. STATELER.

There was generally a camp-meeting in each one of the mission charges every year. The Indians of the various tribes visited each other's camp-meetings. Hence, our congregations were very large, and the results were glorious. Many were converted.

I will relate an incident which occured at one of the Shawnee camp-meetings. There were several of the Kaw Indians, who lived away to the West near the wild tribes, happened to come to one of our meetings. Though they could not understand either the English or the Indian tongue, yet one of the party was powerfully wrought upon by the Holy Spirit. Sister Johnson, the wife of Rev. William Johnson, who had spent many years amongst the Kaw Indians, and had learned their language sufficient to instruct the poor struggling mortal how to find Jesus, went and knelt by his side and guided his faith to repose in Him, the sinner's Friend, and with streaming eyes he rejoiced, giving thanks and praise to God.

These annual convocations among the different tribes resulted in great good. There was something about them that suited t e Indian nature. Many who did not attend the regular mission services, attended these meetings where they witnessed the wonderful displays of Divine power, were graciously awakened and brought to embrace the Lord Jesus.

It pleased God, amongst those who were converted, to impress and call into the work of the ministry a number of native men. They were generally earnest preachers, preaching and exhorting with that fervor, accompanied by the Holy Spirit, that resulted in the conversion of souls.

THERE WAS ONE

whose history is a little peculiar. His name was Ma-she-la-boze-man (accent on the second syllable). He was remarkable in that he underetood most of the Indian languages. He was, himself, a Pottawatomie, but his wife was a Shawnee. Bozeman, while yet a young man, went with others of his tribe on a hunting and trapping expedition to the Rocky Mountains, which was a distance of twelve or fifteen hundred miles or more, the way they went—up the Missouri river. They were gone for several years, trapping otter and beaver, the furs of which they carried back home on their ponies. The country through which they passed was occupied wholly by hostile Indians, so that the journey was extremely hazardous.

A THRILLING INCIDENT

occurred while they tarried near the mountains. They had set their traps for some distance along the stream—a mile or two from their camp, which was back in the mountains. Bozeman went on a mule down a steep gulch to the creek, one morning, to look after the traps, carrying his gun with him for defence. On his return to camp he looked up and saw a great bear approaching him along the mountain-side above. With all the beating and hallooing, and kicking he could do, the mule, all oblivious to the danger, could not be forced out of a walk. On came the bear at a rapid pace, apparently bent on the destruction of the two invaders of his dominion. Bozeman stopped and awaited the approach of the beast determined to make the best defence possible. When but a few steps away, he fired and broke the bears arm, which brought it to the ground, and like a great barrel it commenced rolling and tumbling over and over down the steep mountain, passing right by the man and the mule, but not stopping until it reached the bottom of the canyon far below. Thus our hero's life was saved.

This incident made such an impression upon Bozeman's mind that he went away to himself to make a solemn vow to God. And away there in the wild fastnesses of the Rocky Mountains, where perhaps a white man had never set foot, he prayed, and he promised that if God would spare his life to get home again he would consecrate himself to the service of the Lord. His prayer was answered. He arrived home in safety. He availed himself of the first opportunity to hear the missionary, very soon joined the church, made a profession of religion, and became active amongst his people in doing good. He never faltered in his religious course during his life. He became a regular preacher and assistant missionary to his own tribe—the Pottawatomies. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Capers, at the Indian Mission Conference, held at Doakesville, in the year (I think) of 1847. He passed away from his labor to rest not long after that Conference.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—

We received the Montana Methodist yesterday. It is quite a relief from study and the duties of the day to glance upon the columns of that dear little paper. It seems to take me back to old Montana. Bro. Tabor writes us that he had been to help Bro. Price in a meeting at Helena, and that they had a great blessing. I pray that God's blessing may be with all our preachers, and that Montana will come out on the Lord's side yet. I attended church on Sunday and heard two splendid sermons, one by Rev. W. A. Hanna, the pastor at Fayette, and the other by Rev. J. D. Hammond D. D., President of Central College.

We are having lovely weather here. No snow since Christmas. It is raining a little to-day. I am so glad that the Sunday School at Deer Lodge is prospering. They have a Ladies' Aid Society there now, and expect to buy a new carpet for the church. We are sewing some for them now, and will do all we can to help them out.

The Church's Secret of Power.

When a church so far forgets her mission, and becomes covetous as to seek money, above the salvation of souls, and raises her moneys largely by appealing to fleshly motives; when she stops to calculate numbers, wealth and social status above purity and spiritual power, she becomes shorn of her strength by the Delilah of this world, and mocked by the Philistines of sin.

A church that slackens her hold on the vital and essential principles of the Gospel, takes her eye of faith off Christ, and is charmed by the allurements of the world, is wanting in power from on high to convert and edify souls, drifts into indifference, and without repentance will have her candle-stick removed.

A church may grow rapidly and immensely, for a time, in wealth and numbers, by compromising with the world, but soon will become corrupt, and often will be made a tool by the world to accomplish only evil ends. God pity such a church—whether it be individual or denominational. A church becoming enamored of worldly mammon scarcely knows where to stop; she pursues the phantoms of earthly hopes until, torn and bleeding, she lies prostrate on a sensual world—menaced, at the feet of her enemies. We know some churches that are contributing largely to these sad results, and are wondering why God does not visit them with gracious rains of grace.—J. H. Johnson.

Brother Johnson's "Light."

Some time since, in order to correct a wide spread evil, I referred to the fact that Brother Johnson, as preacher in charge, had had a church that was unfinished, dedicated to the service of God. Two other cases similar at this time are doing harm to two other denominations in Montana. Bro. Johnson seems to have fired at me too quick, and hence his article abounds with peculiar, not to say funny statements. He keeps it prominent in his article that he "has had no increase in knowledge and wisdom." This was useless, as his article plainly revealed that fact. His reasons for having an unfinished church dedicated, reminds me of a case said to have occurred in Arkansas. Speaking of furnishing the church he says: "As for stoves and flue, we did not need them at dedication, for it was mid-summer!" The "traveler" in Arkansas found a man's house with no roof on it, and he asked, "Why don't you cover your house?" The farmer answered "It is raining" He then asked, "Why don't you cover it when it is not raining?" The answer was, "We don't need a roof when it is dry." Bro. Johnson excuses himself by saying "I dare say that many of our churches, especially in the West, are dedicated before they are entirely furnished." How can one excuse himself for not doing his duty simply upon the grounds that some one else has not done their duty? This is his position. He also finds some relief because he had "borrowed some plain benches in Bozeman for the dedication, but they did not come." So in the absence of these "plain benches" that "did not arrive," he "borrowed thirty chairs" and "planks enough to seat thirty more." What has all the above got to do with the subject? Does not all the "borrowing" business look more like child's play? He also says "the Bishop did not ask why the church was not better furnished." No, I presume the dear Bishop thought it was not necessary to ask that question at that time. It was eminently proper to have had the Bishop preach in the church and raise the two hundred dollars the pastor could not raise, but it was not proper to have him dedicate a house without seats, lights, stoves, flue, pulpit or paint. I certainly sympathize with any pastor environed as was Bro J., and I appreciate all he said about securing funds for finishing the building, but if it took two more years, that house should have been completed before it was given publicly to God. I find it difficult to raise the money needed to finish the house, for the people are ready to say, "Why, I thought the house was completed and dedicated." The amount raised in subscriptions at the dedication falls short of finishing the church and paying the debts, over one hundred dollars. To raise this amount one must explain over and over that Bro. Johnson and the Bishop had an unfinished church dedicated to God. In the future, I beg all the brethren not to have churches given to the Lord till they are finished and "furnished" and free from debt.

Kindly Yours,

B. E. H. Warren.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the [illegible] and help double our list

Persistence of Power.

WHAT a man can do in the world, is largely decided by what a man is determined that he will do in the world. A tallow candle can be driven through an oak plank, if only a fair charge of powder is back of it in the rifle-barrel. And a mere worm can find its way through the same plank, if only he will keep at it long enough. Even a steel-pointed shot would make no impression on that plank, without the force which drives the candle, or the persistency which guides the worm. Native genius is the steel-pointed shot. Determined energy in a man of weakest mind and frame, represents the powder-driven candle. The plodding, humble worker is like the penetrating worm. No man has so few or so feeble faculties, that he cannot do a great work in the world — if only he has the energy and persistency to do it, whether he can do it or not.—S. S. TIMES.

Neither Fear Nor Hope,

Mr. Robert Owen once visited a gentleman who was a believer. In walking out they came to the gentleman's family grave. Owen, addressing him, said: "There is one advantage I have over Christians, I am not afraid to die. Most Christians are afraid to die, but if most of my business were settled, I should be perfectly willing to die at any moment." "Well," said his companion, "you say you have no fear of death; have you any hope in death?" After a solemn pause, he replied, "No!" "Then," replied the gentleman, pointing to an ox standing near, "you are on a level with that brute; he has fed till he is satisfied, and stands in the shade, whisking off the flies, and has neither hope or fear."—Ex.

Seeking Holiness of Heart.

H. B. COCKRILL.

Besides having faith that there is such a blessing, that it is for you, and for you now it must also be sought after. We must pray, inquiring of God, we must meditate, finding, if possible, what our relation to God now is, and what it should be, and what our motive is in seeking this great grace. If we do not look into these matters carefully we are liable to ask amiss, that is, for a selfish consideration, to consume it on our own lusts, to feed our own ambition. Hence God requires us to "seek" if we would find.

It is important for us to have a somewhat accurate conception of this blessing before we can ask for it intelligently. We cannot have this without much prayerful thought and reading of God's Word in reference to it. In seeking this blessing we are nearly always, if not always, led to make specific covenant with God to give up all sin. Sins of the heart, habits of sin, evil thought, imagination and ways. When God sees us in earnest about "cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit and desiring to perfect holiness," then He comes and takes full possession of his temple, which is our body, baptizing us with the fire of the Holy Ghost, consuming or destroying the body of sin, "or law of sin or death" that has given us so much trouble.

Does the prospecter expect to find gold, the most precious of metals, without seeking for it, without seeking long and diligently for it? No, of course not. No more can we expect to find this great power of God without a concentration of all our powers in search of it.

Work Will not Hurt.

Remember, my son, you have to work, whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around, you will see that the men who are most able to live the rest of their days without work are men who worked the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with over-work. They die sometimes, but it's because they quit work at 6 p. m., and don't go home until 2 a. m. It is the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, and gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names, even; it simply speaks of them as "old Soandso's boys." The great busy world doesn't know that they are there.

So find out what you want to be and do, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are, the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and better satisfied will the world be with you.—R. J. Burdette.

HELENA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Ninth Session of the Helena District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in East Helena, Montana, Feb. 17th, 1891, at 9 o'clock, A. M., Rev. A. C. Couey, P. E., in the chair.

The conference was opened and led in a love feast by the Presiding Elder, after which W. T. Goulder was elected Secretary.

There were present: A. C. Couey, S. B. Tabor, L. Bramble, R. S. Clark, W. T. Goulder.

The hours of meeting and adjournment were fixed as follows: 9:30 and 11:45 A. M., and 2:30 and 4:00 P. M., the afternoon session to begin with preaching.

A. C. Couey and L. Bramble were appointed a committee on public worship, and S. B. Tabor and J. H. Johnson a committee to examine Quarterly Conference records.

The Presiding Elder preached a sermon at 2:30 P. M., after which the name of D. B. Price was added to those present in the morning. D. B. Price made an encouraging report of his charge. He read a very interesting paper on the leading doctrines of our church, after which a brief discussion followed, upon the subject of Christian perfection. By motion of S. B. Tabor, the preachers were requested to preach upon our cardinal doctrines of the church, on the first Sunday of March next.

Fifteen persons have been added to the church in Helena. Seventy-five per cent. of the people take our church literature. S. B. Tabor preached at night. J. H. Johnson came on the second day.

On account of sickness and the cold weather, Brothers Warren, Cockerill and Stateler, together with a number of laymen, were prevented from attending the Conference.

The preachers brought fine reports of their labors, and were full of hopefulness for the future.

Owing to the lack of space and the time at which we go to press, it is impossible to give a full account of the proceedings in this issue.

The editor was permitted to attend one day. His heart burned within as he met and talked with the brethren. A further report of the proceedings will appear in our next issue.

A. G. Clarke, J. W. Kemper, A Collet and J. W. Currin were elected delegates to the Annual Conference Alternates: E. G. Brooke, Willian Beall, Flovins Keene, G. L. Duke.

A movement was inaugurated for building a District parsonage. The Sunday School Convention was a new and interesting feature. It was held on Thursday, with D. B. Price, President, and Miss Laura Dawes, Secretary. It closed up with a stirring children's service at night, conducted by J. E. Squires, who is surely one of the most efficient workers in this line that it has been our privilege to meet. We rejoice that we have a brother in our midst with such gifts.

The brethren, by resolution, heartily endorsed the "Montana Methodist," and promised it their continued support. We were glad to meet with Brother Rush McDonald, of the Southwest Mo. Conference, who is seeking health in our pure mountain atmosphere.

Since meeting with the preachers from the various portions of the State, we find that the snow is fifteen inches, and even two feet deep in some localities, and much deeper in the high mountains.

PRAY FOR YOUR MINISTER.

In the sixth chapter of Ephesians, after speaking of the "wiles of the devil," describing the armor of God that the Christian has to put on, and giving directions for its more effective use by "praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perservence and supplication for all saints," Paul then adds with the fervor of his great soul, "and for me (your minister), that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the Gospel for which I am an ambassador in bonds, that therein I may speak boldly as I ought to speak."

Many do not stop to think of the intimacy of the relation between a spiritual church and its pastor, or how much the latter is dependent upon the former for the full measure of his efficiency in fighting the good fight of faith. The church is a spiritual body; the minister, in a sense, is its head, its mouthpiece. He is called "the angel of the church." He is its chief representative, enunciates its principles and gives expression by word and deed to the life that throbs within its heart. He is "set for the defense of the Gospel," and sent as an ambassador to make disciples and "persuade men to be reconciled to God." Hence he is the principal target—a shining mark—for the fiery darks of the wicked.

What is the head without the heart, or without the body? Are they not "members one of another?" When one suffers they all suffer. Though Paul was "called of God," "had seen Christ," was not "a whit behind the chiefest Apostle," and declared that he could "do all things through Christ strengthening him," yet with what pathos he pleads with the church. "I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me. That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea, that I may come unto you by the will of God, and may by you be refreshed. Ye also helping together by prayer for us. Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the Word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified. Pray for me that utterance may be given unto me—an ambassador in bonds."

If Paul needed the prayers of God's people, how much more the ministers of the present day. Alas, the true minister often finds himself "in bonds." The infirmities of his own nature within, the wiles of the devil, the opposition of the ungodly, the indifference of those who are "at ease in Zion," the waywardness of the wicked, besides the "care of all the churches," these all press upon him. He remembers those who are bound as bound with them. Great truths are to be announced. Great sins are to be rebuked. Great issues are at stake. Precious, immortal souls are in the balance, and are to be saved or forever lost. No wonder he asks "who is sufficient for these things," and cries out, "Brethren, pray for us."

It is through this agency of prayer that "Christ strengthens" the hands and hearts of his servants. "The fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much." Every minister knows how much easier it is to preach to a praying congregation than to a criticising one. The discovery that even one humble Christian in a Congregation was praying for him has not only saved many a man of God from defeat, but has nerved and helped him to gain a great victory for the Lord. It was prayer that brought the fire down that consumed the sacrafice, and caused the prophets of Baal to be put to shame. We were not so surprised at the success of Mr. Talmage's preaching after we heard in a prayer-meeting in the small room adjoining the tabernacle, held a half hour before the regular preaching service, so many of those earnest working men praying "for Brother Talmage; that he might preach the Gospel in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." We were prepared for the heart-searching and soul-comforting sermon that followed. The great preacher seemed to be conscious that thousands of hearts were raised to God in his behalf, and it was no trouble to preach. The church of one hundred and twenty souls was engaged in united, persistent prayer when the Holy Ghost descended, and Peter preached with boldness, every man heard the Gospel in his own tongue, and thousands were saved in one day. There would be more Pentecosts to-day if there was more earnest, agonizing, importunate prayer.

Then, Brother, Sister, pray for your minister. If he is not as spiritual as he ought to be, it will make him more so, or if not, in time the Lord will send another in his place. In this way you become a "co-worker with God in the great work of preaching the Gospel of saving souls, and advancing the kingdom of God upon earth." In Christ's name we beseech you, "brethren, pray for us."

SOUND DOCTRINE.

No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven. That scriptural declaration settles beyond dispute the duty of every Christian man toward the liquor traffic. If we write down murder, drunkenness and blasphemy as sins which shut souls out from heaven, then whoever does not seek to save men from those is not seeking their salvation. Whoever makes it easier to commit these is helping men to perdition. This reasoning will not seem severe to any except to those who are friendly to the whisky traffic.—Central Baptist.

GEORGE WILLIAM Curtis says: "There was never a great result achieved in our history which did not spring from Sunday-school politics. America is the child of the Sunday-school, not of the saloon."

ALONG THE LINE.

HELENA DISTRICT.

A. C. Couey.

Friday evening, Jan. 16th, I left Deer Lodge for Bozeman, to hold Bro. W. T. Goulder's Quarterly Conference. The 2nd time recently have I been belated on the Home State Pass route from Butte to Bozeman. This time a freight train was derailed ahead of us, keeping us at the summit of the mountain two hours, making it 1:30 a. m. when we reached our destiny. I met up with Bro. Jno. Pulliam, the Baptist Missionary Superintendent for Montana and Idaho. I am convinced that what he does, he does on right lines in church work. He is from the good old, tar heel State of North Carolina.

I found Bro. Goulder in good spirits, and his work in good state. Preaching Saturday evening, Sabbath 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., Sunday School at 3 p. m., constituted the religious services. The Sabbath was a delightful one to me. The sacramental service was very tender, the largest number communing I have seen at this place. The Sunday School is one of the most inspiring that I find on the District.

Sabbath evening we organized an Epworth League among the young people of the charge, possibly the first, since the Sunday School Committee gave us the Constitution and By-Laws, in the bounds of the District. We organized a League in Butte about twelve months since, the first in the State, of our church, so far as I know.

Monday afternoon we held the Quarterly Conference, which showed quite an advance over the first quarter. At 4:30 p. m., Monday afternoon, we organized a missionary society among the Sunday School children, consisting of twenty-eight children, with a lady manager.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Tuesday morning Bro. Goulder and I went out to Phipps' School House, in what is known as the Middle Creek Country, to assist Bro. Warren, in a protracted meeting, which he had commenced the Saturday before. The weather was crisp, but the moonlight nights favored us and we had crowded houses every night, with a very profitable day service of good attendance. When we left Bro. Warren Friday, we did so with reluctance, for the services had already become very refreshing and gave promise of a gracious revival. I learn since from Bro. Warren that twelve have been converted, with fifteen accessions to the church, and others to come by letter. To organize here, seems to be of divine leading. This will give compactness to our work, as this point is only six or seven miles from Bozeman. My visits in the homes of the people were very pleasant, and I shall be glad to go again. Missourians are thick out there.

TOWNSEND.

Saturday the courteous young pastor of Bozeman, accompanied me to the depot, where I took the train for Townsend. I arrived here at 1 o'clock, and about 3 p. m. caught sight of Bro. R. S. Clark surveying the town for me. I was soon "carted" and conveyed to the home of Bro. McFadden, one mile from town, to spend the night. A pleasant evening, a good night's sleep, a quiet morning, and at 11 a. m. we assembled in the sanctuary, where I preached to a small congregation of appreciative hearers. It is not customary for the people here to have preaching in the day, our church, once a month making the exception, hence the small attendance. I suggested to Bro. Clark a change, which I consider highly needful to avail anything at Townsend.

DUCK CREEK.

After hospitable entertainment, dinner and a short rest, we set out for Duck Creek, ten or twelve miles distant, where we held service in a small school house at night. One lady was there, who told me after the services closed, that she lived forty miles from where there was any regular preaching. This land is not yet all taken up. All the services were pleasant, both at Townsend and Duck Creek, which places are in the same Circuit, but one thing was neglected, which I hope will not be repeated, viz: no provision had been made for the Communion Service. Finances on this Charge, as shown by the Quarterly Conference, were exceedingly behind. Not enough was raised during the quarter for the prorata to the Presiding Elder, to pay his travelling expenses in reaching the Charge. I hope for amendment at this point also. True the people are poor, but too many cattle are on those ranches, to deny the Gospel to the families—where there are bright sons and fair daughters to take the place of the fathers and mothers. We can afford to be poor in purse, but to starve the soul, where we can do otherwise, is sin.

WILLOW CREEK.

Between the Townsend Quarterly Conference and that of Willow Cteek, I ran home for a few days. However. I did not run all the way, for by a little wreck on the Northern Pacific, between Mullan Tunnel and Garrison, we missed connection, and the result was the choice of walking eleven miles, rather than wait fifteen hours to reach home. A little soreness was the chief inconvenience. Friday night at 10 o'clock, Jan. 30th, I reached the Willow Creek depot. The snow was drifting, but the stars lighted me a half mile, where I met Bro. Cockrill, who made satisfactory explanation why he did not reach the train in time. We were soon in comfortable quarters, in the home of Sister Roberts. Saturday morning the thermometer had dropped considerably, and by preaching time at 11 a. m., the snow was driven with a wind which was tempered at zero or below. I preached to five good brethren and the preacher-in-charge, after which we held the business session of the Conference. Just here I wish to record the fact, that one of the stewards. Bro. T. T. Black, breasted the storm to come from another point on the Circuit, twenty miles away. He came with a good collection for the preacher, brought his wife who was also accompanied by another lady friend. I record this for an example to other stewards and their wives. I did not hear this brother say he regretted that he had come—although the blizzard continued to rage until Sunday night, when it reached 30° below. If our laity in Montana will show such interest in this, our preachers will take on an enlarged faith in the growth of our church in these mountains and valleys. I am glad to report quite an advance in all the interests of the church on Bro. Cockrill's work, with the one exception of Sunday Schools — they hibernate This question confronts me, whenever I learn of a Sunday School going into winter quarters, while the day schools continue. "Is it because the day school teachers have more reward in $50 00 to $75.00 per month than the Superintendents and teachers in the Sunday School expect in Heaven—?" I have hope in the resurrection.

WHITE HALL.

After spending Monday and Tuesday with Bro. Cockrill among his members, he came with me by private conveyance to Father Stateler's home. Here two days were spent in quiet retreat with the well-known veteran of Montana Methodism. Bro. Cockrill returned to his work Thursday. Bro. Stateler and I came to White Hall via. train, Friday. Saturday morning brought another change of the weather, which had moderated very materially since the Sabbath previous. We had gone to Bro. Brooke's, two miles and a half from the new town of White Hall. The weather was so severe that we prevailed on Bro. Stateler to remain indoors. Bro. Brooke and I drove up, found Bro. S. F. Tuttle, who came from Fish Creek, ten miles distant. We did not attempt service in the school house, but had Bro. Tuttle to go with us down to our stopping place, where we held the Quarterly Conference. The reports show much to encourage us in regard to this charge. A church building enterprise is the chief interest just now. More about this later. Sabbath morning the thermometer registered 16° below zero. Notwithstanding the cold weather, at the 11 o'clock service, we had the schoolhouse about full—a pleasant service. Bro. Tuttle, another exemplary steward, who came ten miles and returned Saturday, came again Sunday, brought his wife, and remained till after the evening service, after which they went back home. He said to me: "I feel paid in coming." The self-sacrificing, as a rule, enjoy the services of the sanctuary. Let more of our brethren do as those mentioned in these notes. Preachers do this way all the time—follow their example. We had the sacramental service at night at White Hall. To me all the means of grace were a joy. Bro. Stateler, with a local preacher living near White Hall, protracted the meeting from the Quarterly Conference. May the Lord bless their labors abundantly.

I am now at home in Deer Lodge, making ready for another trip to embrace three Quarterly Conferences, the Jefferson County Sunday School Convention and the District Conference. I will report these in my next.

PENDLETON DISTRICT.

East Columbia Conference.

Editor "Methodist":—Our Zion is advancing all along the line. Every charge in the District has had some prosperity since Conference.

Yes, Dr. Morris, the boy is growing rapidly, and hurting very much, and must have something done for him.

Fifteen per cent. increase in five months, is better than drawing a seashore net through the dew.

We have had one hundred accessions on this District since Conference.

Bro. C. C. Eagle, who was appointed to Boise Valley Circuit, in Idaho, commenced last October with no membership at all. When I visited him October 11 to hold his first Quarterly Meeting, I feared he would have a hard struggle to pull through. And when I saw him borrow a mattock to dig some wood for fuel, on an open plain where there is not sufficient timber to get a good riding switch, I thought he would have a hard time of it; but when he returned in two hours with his wagon loaded with wood, I knew he was going to succeed in something. He commenced singing the old Methodist hymns in the old missionary style, and preaching the (old) Methodist doctrine in the same old style. Mr. Editor, did you ever blow an old familiar horn in the presence of an old hound and watch the effect? [Indeed we have, more than once.—EDITOR.]

On the first day of January I reached Boise Valley again for the Second Quarterly Meeting, and found

Bro. Eagle in the midst of the most gracious revival that country has ever witnessed. Thirty had been converted, and twenty-nine others at the mourner's bench; not just voting for Jesus by holding up hands, or standing up for prayers, but down on their knees, seeking repentance carefully with tears, in the old Missouri style. (Mr. Editor, I am not a Missourian, but I've been there.) I remained ten days, and closed with about fifty-five conversions. We have now an organization of twenty-eight members at that place, and twelve or fifteen more will join us soon as health and weather will permi, the entire families to be at church at once. Twelve or fifteen joined the M. E. Church, North. The people have given Bro. Eagle a good support, and presented him with a nice suit of clothes on the Christmas tree, and gave him a cow, and paid up the Presiding Elder's claim to date.

At the four points I have reached in the last five weeks, viz.: Pleasant Valley, Boise Valley, Pine Valley, and Grande Ronde Valley, there have been ninety conversions. We have purchased lots in La Grande, worth $400, on which to build a church, and are hungry and hurting there. The lots are paid for except $100, and the trustees propose to pay that without subscription.

To God be all the glory. Hallelujah! E. G. MICHAEL.

DEER LODGE.

Dear Brother Stanley:—I am so glad to say that I am still saved. Jesus is with me all the time. I went with Brother Tabor to Race Track to attend a protracted meeting that he held there. Praise God, we had a blessed time. I never saw so many poor, starving souls in my life. I am praying earnestly that God will bless those dear people. I am so glad that our church is increasing, and am praying for a soul-saving baptism of fire at Deer Lodge, and for a general revival along the lines where our ministers are laboring. I send you a dollfor the "Methodist." Praise the Lord. Letta L. Lightfoot, or Sister Lightfoot—"grandma," as she is familiarly called—is "happy on the way," and she has cause to be. "Her strongest trials now are past, her triumph is begun." The faith, patience and perseverance that she and many others have exercised, and which have been so severely tried during the long years of the past, have not been in vain. We learn from Bro. Couey that the meeting referred to—eight miles from Deer Lodge—resulted in five or six conversions; the way is open for organizing a good society and for regular preaching there, with the prospect of a new pastoral charge being developed in the valley by Conference. Who would not feel like saying, "Praise the Lord?"

HELENA.

Rev. D. B. Price, the pastor, writes: I am almost well again, was able to fill my pulpit Sunday. Health is not very good among our members here just now. The work of the church moves on well.

POTLATCH CIRCUIT, IDAHO.

Rev. W. S. Hornbuckle writes under date of Feb. 14:—We are holding the fort at Bethel. Closed at Leland with eight conversions. We have had five up to date at this point, and the work still goes on. Eight additions to our church. Praise the Lord. God bless the "Methodist."

CORVALLIS, OREGON.

In a private letter from Rev. D. Atkins, who is in charge of the college at Corvallis, Oregon, and who represented the Columbia Conference at the last General Conference, the writer says:—I have often thought of writing to you, feeling as I do, so much interest in your work in common with all this Northwest. I write now principally for the reason that I would hear from you, as to the progress and outlook there.

We have cause for gratitude here. Interesting revivals have blessed our labors here at several points. We are building two new churches in the valley, now nearly done, and lots are bought and plans laid for others.

Our college suit will be tried next week—17th—at Portland. I am anxious to see the end of it. It has been a very unpleasant and laborious work for me, and my work often seems to me to be such as not to bless the church as much as it should, but I hope for the issue.

We have been greatly disappointed about our paper. Only now are we beginning to see any signs of permanency.

I understand you are invading Idaho. How I wish we had a man in Western Washington. Seattle is a fine point for us. There are more of our people in Washington than in any of these States.

Our preachers are faithfully at work and we expect large results. I should be glad to hear from you, and to see a copy of your paper.

Yours Truly, D. ATKINS.

We are heartily glad to hear from Dr. Atkins, and trust that we have betrayed no confidence in giving our readers the benefit of his excellent and newsy letter. We, too, feel a deep interest in the work in Oregon, and rejoice at their success. We have often longed to meet the brethren of the Columbia Conference face to face, and have not yet given up the hope. We trust that our church will get its rights in the college case, that the institution may be released from its encumbrance, and that our brother may have reason to rejoice that his earnest and self-sacraficing labors have not been in vain. We hope to hear from him again.

SPOKANE FALLS.

Brother Isbell, our pastor, is at Dayton helping Brother Gibbs in a revival service. I don't know the results. Brother Swift has just returned from Big Bend, where Brother St. Clair is accomplishing a glorious work. We have organized an Epworth League, which, I think, is a good thing. Our Sunday School and prayer meetings are moving along nicely. We hope to have a revival service soon, which is very much needed. We like your paper, and think it improves all the time.

Notes.

—If you are in doubt about the M. E. Church, South, having a mission in Montana and the Northwest, just read the reports from the preachers in this issue of the "Methodist." Some of them would have been a credit to the Methodist cavaliers of fifty years ago. About 140 conversions and additions are reported in this issue. God is on the giving hand. A "hallelujah chorus," as Dr. Morris would call it, comes up from all over the field and rings through mountain and valley from Bozeman, Montana, across the Rockies, and along the great Columbia to the Pacific coast. It proves what we have long been saying, that one great need of our work was more men (efficient ones), and means to put us on something like an equal footing with our sister denominations here, sufficient to inspire confidence in our permanency in the field. The people are here, and many of them without the Gospel. Brother Couey reports that there will be demand for several new men in his district next year. In this paper there is a macedonian call from a destitute field, and still the people are coming in by thousands. Let us press the battle.

—Talk about the heroic days of Methodism passing away when a preacher traverses his circuit across mountains and valleys and through rugged canyons on foot, and another digs wood with a mattock—a borrowed one—and with the sword of the Spirit, digs up sinners by the score from the quarries of depravity and succeeds in getting a fire to burning whereby they are warmed, renewed, and saved by whole families!

—Brother Michael, in his stirring letter, refers to the illustration used at Conference by Dr. Morris, when he saw and heard the preachers pleading with tearful eyes for help in building churches and parsonages. It reminded him of a hungry boy suffering with growing pains. After all the pains were a good indication. We rejoice that the "boy" is still growing "growing." Our brother takes the pith out of the criticism of a would-be witty editor when he says, "Fifteen per cent. increase in five months is some better than 'drawing a sea shore net through the dew." God bless the Presiding Elder and all the brethren of the Pendleton District.

—A State Savings Bank has been opened in Butte City. The names of A. H. Barret, S. V. Kemper and E. D. Leavitt, among the directors, are familiar to many of our readers.

—Gen. W. T. Sherman breathed his last on the 14th instant.

—We deeply sympathize with Brother and Sister Franks in their sore bereavement. When we were at their pleasant home, only a few months ago, the little baby girl was the life of the household. We have known Mary since she was an infant. It is such a satisfaction to know that she had given her heart to the Lord, and was ready to go. They are not dead, only gone before. They have not lived in vain. Their work is early done, and they have entered into rest, secure from the wintry blasts of this sin disordered world.

—We are sorry to learn from Bro. Couey, that his little son Charles has been afflicted for some time, and is threatened with pulmonary trouble. Charles is a bright and promising boy. We trust that the disturbing cause may be removed and the little fellow's health fully restored.

—A brother near the Pacific Coast pleasantly twitted a member of the East Columbia Conference with the remark that, "the East Columbia and Montana Conferences were coquetting." No brother, there is nothing of the kind, no occasion for it. It is a pure case of "love at first sight," and the attachment strengthened with the acquaintance. But there is no thought of a wedding. They are too young and too busy; besides they are already keeping house. We shall just content ourselves with considering one another and provoking to love and good works.

—A beautiful snow-fall of from six to twelve inches in depth, visited our state recently, and ranchmen and miners are rejoicing. The weather is fine.

—We heard Rev. M. L. Streater at the Disciples Church, deliver two very fine lectures on the Yellowstone National Park, at Corvallis, quite recently. His descriptions are very fine and full of thrilling interest. He said he actually shouted "glory be to God in the highest" while witnessing a geyser make one of its finest displays. We told him he was like a Methodist. We do not wonder that people go into ecstasies at such scenes of splendor and beauty.

—Renewals and new subscriptions to the METHODIST are the order. They are coming in fast, but there is room for more.

Sixty Years on the Border—Among the Indians.

BY L. B. STATELER.

The Peoria Mission deserves a word of notice in these sketches. Soon after the Mission was established the Rev. N. M. Talbot, an experienced preacher, was sent to labor with them. There were three or four tribes—Peorias, Peyankeshaws, We-ahs, and Miamis—associated together and speaking the same language, so that one interpreter served them all.

Brother Talbot was very successful in his work. Most of the Indians in this mission were converted from heathenism, and became earnest Christians. After laboring many years in our mission work, Brother Talbot was transferred to Missouri, the portion now embraced in the Southwest Missouri Conference, where he was laboring when the late war between the States came on. He accepted a position as chaplain in the Confederate army, in which he continued until the close of the war, after which he returned to his regular work and continued to labor as an Itinerant preacher until it pleased God to call him Home to rest.

Two of Brother Talbot's daughters married Methodist preachers, both of them sons of Rev. Wilson L. McAllister, of the Indian Mission Conference, and late of the Tennessee Conference, and who, like Brother Talbot, has long since gone to his reward on high.

After Brother Talbot left Peoria, Rev. Nathan T. Shaler was sent to labor there. He was faithful and earnest, and no doubt instrumental in doing a great work. He also subsequently went to Southwest Missouri. After laboring some years there he was placed on the superannuated list. He has many years ago gone to his reward. He departed with the shout of victory on his lips.

Revs. Thomas and William Johnson were brothers, members of the Missouri Conference, and were sent to this Indian Mission work as the first missionaries in 1830. They were the pioneers, and broke the way. They labored for a year or two alone, getting the work organized, after which others were sent to their assistance. Brother William Johnson finished his work on the mission field, passing away in 1842, and slumbers in the Shawnee Mission burying ground, near where the Manual Labor School building stood.

Thomas Johnson's health failed in 1840, and he transferred to the Missouri Conference, whither he went that he might have medical assistance. Recovering his health he remained for some years in that Conference. In 1848 he returned to the mission work, which was included in, and known as, the Kansas Mission Conference. He remained a member of that Conference until the commencement of the Civil War, and the Conference was broken up. During the war he resided across the line in Missouri. Near the close of the war a company of armed men—I suppose they were soldiers—at a late hour of the night came to his front gate and called him up, pretending to want information about how to get to Kansas City. He directed them to go west along the main road. They then asked for water. He pointed them to the well, told them to help themselves, stepped inside and closed the door, when they immediately fired a volley, killing him almost immediately. He sank down in his wife's arms, and never uttered a word after he was shot. The brutal murderers then demanded entrance, tried to force the door open, and finally set fire to the house. But the heroic wife stood guard over her dead husband's body, defended herself and her home, and put the fire out after the villains had gone. Thomas Johnson was a Union man, and a peaceable man, but true and loyal to the doctrines and usages of the M. E. Church, South. He was a man of great force of character, but sought to avoid all entanglements in political affairs. Why he should be thus cruelly murdered while living in quiet retirement in his home with his family, remains a mystery complete. His loss was deeply felt in all that portion of the country. Who these midnight assassins were has never been ascertained.

Edward L. Peery, who had labored many years in the itinerant work, commencing in the Holston Conference, was sent at an early period to labor in the Indian Mission field. He served in different charges, part of the time as Presiding Elder and part of the time as Superintendent of the Manual Labor School. He subsequently located and settled near Kansas City, where in the fall of 1864, he finished his earthly course and entered into rest. He was an humble and faithful servant of God and the church. His wife who served with him so long in the mission work still survives him.

Rev. Jerome C. Berryman also came early to the field and served for many years in the work. He was Superintendent of the large Manual Labor School for a number of years, was also our delegate to the General Conference of 1844, at which the Indian Conference was organized. He was appointed Superintendent in the Conference. During his stay in that work he lost his wife, leaving him quite a family of little children to care for. Not long afterwards he transferred to the St. Louis Conference and established a high School at Arcadia. After filling quite a number of appointments in conjunction with that school, a number of years ago he was placed on the superannuated list. He is still living and resides in the southern part of the State of Missouri. He has attained to his eightieth year, and as I learn from him by letter, is still able to preach occasionally. He has been in the Methodist ministry more than sixty years, and is loved and honored by the church he has served so long and so well.

The Heroic Dyke Master in Holland.

On the northernmost part of the mainland of Holland there is a point extending nine miles, unprotected by any natural barrier from the sea. More than two hundred years ago the Hollanders undertook the gigantic task of raising dykes of clay, earth and stone; and now behind the shelter of the embankment numerous villages and towns are safe from their powerful enemy, the sea. The spire of Alkmon, a town of 10,000 inhabitants, is on a level with the dyke. A master is appointed to oversee the workmen constantly employed in watching the dykes.

A century ago, one November night, a fierce gale was blowing from the northwest, and increasing in fury every minute. The dyke master had planned to go to Amsterdam. It was the time of the spring-tide. He thought of the dyke. Shall he give up his pleasure trip to Amsterdam? The dyke! The urgency of his visit is great! But the dyke! Inclination against duty. It is six o'clock, the tide turns and rises. But at seven the stage starts for Amsterdam. Shall he go? A struggle: his inclination is to go; his duty to remain. He looked up at the wild and fast increasing storm, and he decided to go with all speed to his post.

When he reached the dyke, the men, two hundred in number, were in utter and almost hopeless confusion. The storm had risen to a hurricane. They had used up their store of hurdles and canvas in striving to check the inroads of their relentless foe. Then they shouted, "Here's the master! Thanks be to God! All right now!" The master places every man at his post; and then a glorious battle commenced—the battle of men against the furious ocean. About half-past eleven the cry was heard from the centre, "Help! Help!" "What's the matter?" "Four stones out at once." "Where?" "Here!"

The master flung a rope around his waist, four men did the same; forty hands held the ends of ropes as the five glided down the sloping side of the dyke. The waves buffeted and tossed them, bruising their limbs and faces, but they closed the breach, and were then drawn up. Cries for help were issuing from all quarters. "Is there any more canvas?" "All gone." "Any more hurdles?" "All gone." "Off with your coats, men, and use them for canvas," shouted the master, throwing off his own. There they stood, half naked, in the rage of the November storm.

At a quarter to twelve, only half an inch higher, and the sea will rush over the dyke and not a living soul would be left in all North Holland. The coats are all used up. The tide has yet to rise till midnight. "Now, my men," said the master, "we can do no more. Down on your knees, every one of you, and wrestle with God." And two hundred men knelt down on the shaking, trembling dyke, amid the roar of the storm and the thunder of the waves, and lifted up their hands and hearts to Him who could say to the waves: "Be still!" And, as of old, he heard them, and saved them out of their trouble. And the people of Alkmon were eating and drinking, dancing and singing, and knew not that there was but a quarter of an inch between them and death. A country was saved by one man's decision for duty!

Young man, it "pays"—truly it "pays" now and then, and as it will for all time—for you to do your duty. —Times of Refreshing.

PEACE is the proper result of the Christian temper. It is greatest kindness which our religion doth give us, that it brings us to the settledness of mind and consistency within ourselves. —BISHOP PATRICK.

—o—

TOO BUSY TO PRAY.

The surest way to kill religion is not to murder it outright, but to kill it by piecemeal. Neglect, more surely than the dagger, stabs religion to the heart. To give religion no set or sacred time is to murder it outright. To allow other interests, even the most pressing and benevolent, to crowd religious duties out, or into a corner, is to kill it slowly but surely. A busy mother was asked how she got time to pray, replied: "I am up one hour every morning before my family stirs." This is the secret of growth in grace, of calmness and strength for the day's duties. The busy ones who have prefaced the engaging duties of the day by their hours of holy and ardent communion with God are the strong ones. Daniel was a very busy man, the cares of a great empire were on him, but he found time to pray three times every day —and this praying was of more benefit to the prime minister than all his diplomacy. Christ was a very busy man. The divinest of business filled his heart and filled his hands, exhausted his time, exhausted his nerves. But with him even God's work must not crowd out God's praying. Saving people from sin or suffering must not, even with Christ, be made substitutes for praying, nor abate in the least the time or the intensity of these holiest of seasons. He filled the day with working for God, he filled the night with praying to God. The day working made the night praying a necessity. The night praying sanctified and made successful the day working. Too busy to pray gives religion Christian burial, it is true, but kills it, nevertheless. —NASHVILLE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Seeing the Pleasant Side of Life.

If we were only as prompt to recognize the really pleasant and good things that can be found in the world around us, and which some times seem to be the relics of a better nature that has survived the fall, as we are to detect and exaggerate the little, the selfish and the unworthy things we find, how much more should we illustrate the spirit of Christ, and how much brighter the same world would be for ourselves and others. But, probably as the result of the original sin that is still in us, we are very slow to do this thing; in fact, it is about the last thing we do— if we do it at all. Our neighbor may be a firm friend of the poor and the defenceless; he may prove his benevolence by innumerable kindly and liberal acts; he may be exemplary in private and in social life; yet all these qualities go for nothing, because we look at him through a microscope of a double-million magnifying power, with which we are able to detect a few flaws that we do not like. This hypercritical spirit is not that of our Lord, and is not the one that is to make the world brighter and better. This is to be done by love—the love that sympathizes with all forms of goodness; that is quick to recognize every kindly act, and that does not stint its praise, while it is sparing of its blame.—THE EVANGELIST.

ALONG THE LINE.

PINE GROVE, OREGON.

Dear Brother Stanley:—I have been thinking of you and our dear Montana Methodist paper. What good cheer it brings to the homes of the people of our wide spread Zion all over this far West. The last one I saw was full of good things. I seemed to hear the voices and see the faces again of the brave little bands, each member at his post. and to hear the watchword shouted along the line, "holiness unto our Lord."

I came here in poor health, and to-night am in much pain, but under the care of our loving Lord I am shouting the victory of the cross. Have held one protracted effort. Our Presiding Elder came in time to carry the work forward, when I had to give up and was near the glory shore. He left on Wednesday, and I was able to continue the meeting until Sunday evening. We have eleven accessions, and the blessing of the Lord is felt all over this Pine Valley.

At our prayer-meeting last night two men paid their vows unto the Lord. Several are happy in the faith, who have not joined, but will do so. All glory to our God and to the Lamb. God bless the Montana Conference and the "Methodist."

R. B. CREGO.

P. S. I have given away the last copy of the "Methodist." Have one or two names to send you if this gets through all right. Will send you a dollar the first opportunity I have to get a postal note. We are fifty-seven miles from a money order office.

R. B. C.

BOZEMAN STATION.

Brother W. T. Goulder writes:—Am moving along fairly well with my work. Congregations improving and a greater interest being manifested. I try to "preach the Word."

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Brother Warren reports that he is very busy on his charge and meeting with good success—fifteen accessions at Middle Creek, with more to follow. The people showed their appreciataon of the service rendered by raising a collection for the preacher in charge, amounting to $125.

BOULDER.

Brother J. W. Currin renews his subscription, and says:—Everything is moving on smoothly here. The Boulder Epworth League numbers 38, and new additions at every meeting.

CORVALLIS AND GRANTSDALE.

The second quarterly meeting for this charge was held at Grantsdale, the 14th and 15th of February. The snow storm that prevailed at the time prevented a full attendance, though the services were interesting and profitable. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at night. Brother Flowers is preaching to appreciative audiences. He is the only minister who preaches regularly in Grantsdale now. We trust that the friends there will do something more for his support than heretofore

A very interesting Sunday School is in progress in the Presbyterian Church. It shows that a school can be carried on in winter as well as in summer when "the people have a mind to work." We were pleased to meet with some old friends, Mr. Gerge Baker and family, also with Brother Curry and family, who never tire of talking of Fayette, Mo., and of our splendid colleges at that place.

STEVENSVILLE.

Brother Parnall expected to visit Demersville and assist Brother Lee in a meeting this month. But the storm, together with sickness in Bro. Lee's family, prevented. At this writing he and Brother Rickman, of the Baptist Church, are carrying on a meeting at Victor with encouraging prospects.

DEMERSVILLE.

Brother Lee writes us that he is confined to the house waiting upon his wife, who is suffering from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. Let earnest prayer be made for our Sister's speedy recovery. Bro. Lee is very hopeful for our cause at Demersville.

FROM MARTINSDALE.

The "St. Louis Christian Advocate" of late date contains the following:

A note from W. L. McMurray, of Martinsdale, Montana, says, "We are right in the midst of the Rockies, about 140 miles north of Bozeman, and 65 miles north of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and where there is great need of missionaries, as there is no preaching through this region of country by Southern Methodists nor by any other denomination that I have been able to hear of, and I have made inquiry to some extent in the last three months of my sojourn in this part of the country. A majority of the settlers are Missourians, and some Southern Methodists among them. The people—some of them are rich, but we need the preached word badly. The weekly visit of the "St. Louis Christian Advocate" is almost beyond calculation. We hail its visit as a treat."

We have sent our brother McMurry (we wonder if he is related to W. W. McMurry, of Missouri, if so he is of a good stock) some copies of the "Montana Methodist," and trust that Brother Couey will make it a point to visit that section at an early day. Those people must be looked after.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.

Dear Brother Stanley:—I just closed a two weeks meeting in the country. I was disappointed in securing assistance, so did all the preaching myself, except one sermon by Bro. J. B. Chamberlain. Result: only two conversions, to my knowledge, the "brethren" strengthened and all made to rejoice. Our closing service was a happy time; shouting after the "old time Methodist order" was heard. The weather was unfavorable during the whole meeting. The neighborhood has for years been under the influence of rank and bitter infidelity, but the meeting had a marked influence, and I believe seed has been sown that will "bring forth fruit in due season."

My throat suffered from the exertion, and I am forced to postpone my meeting here in the city because I cannot get help. Revival fires are burning all over the District.

P. M. BELL.

PALOUSE.

The "Montana Methodist" comes regularly to hand. We like it. I am glad to see frequent notes from the Spokane District. Feel ashamed that I have not written. I have written so seldom for the past few years that it is somewhat of a task to do so. Your visit, Mr. Editor, to our Conference at Spokane, was greatly enjoyed by us all. I also enjoyed meeting you at Bro. Dyer's—the time you talked me to sleep. Next time let us sit up and have our talk out.

Am glad you have commenced to close the gap between the Montana and East Columbia Conferences, if you did come over on our side of the mountains and into our territory. [How much territory do you claim—all out of doors?—EDITOR.]

Well, that's all right. We hope to annex the whole of the Montana Conference after awhile. [No, we propose to take in E. Columbia on our march to the sea.—ED.]

The brethren in this District are doing well, but Bro. St. Clair is apparently excelling them all, having added over sixty since Conference. The Palouse Circuit is not burning with Gospel zeal as I would like to see it, but there are hopeful signs. We commenced a meeting here on Christmas night, which continued for nearly three weeks. Several brethren assisted during the meeting, but most of the preaching was done by Bro. Hornbuckle, and was on the style of Jeremiah in Egypt. He raked the

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list sinners, the church and the preachers. Good was accomplished. The people came out—some of them to see and hear "these shouting Methodists, South, of the Lord." One man, an avowed Unitarian, thought Hornbuckle's speech and preaching "despicable," but was so far won over as to admit that he was convinced of the sincerity of the preacher, and gave some substantial proof of his appreciation. We believe that he was stirred, or as we sometimes say, was "dug up;" but would not admit any disturbance of his calm serenity. Three, I believe, confessed conversion, and six or eight were added to the church here, most of them by letter.

This is a hard place to hold a revival meeting in, but a revival is sorely needed, and we expect to try again in the spring. Bro. Hornbuckle writes: "When you get ready to open fire on Palouse again let me know, and I'll come and do my work over." We'll send for him.

Bro. H. B. Terry, our new transfer from Memphis Conference to the Lewistown Circuit, has been doing efficient service in helping me and Bros. Skee and Hornbuckle in protracted meetings. He is thus becoming initiated into the pioneer itinerancy—even to walking on one trip seven miles, two of which were up out of the Pollatch canon. He thanks me for starting him out on his first missionary trip. I am sure the brethren will thank me too.

Your transfer to Wallace is, if I mistake not, an old friend and college mate of mine. His first session at old Randolph, Macon being my last. We did not become so intimate as some of us who were three or four years together there, yet we were together for a year, and he doubtless remembers me. I should like to see him. Am glad he is in good heart. If he and his good wife are not discouraged at the outlook, coming as they do from surroundings so vastly different, they must have the grace and grit necessary to make them successful itinerants in this great Northwest.

I have in my circuit three towns and a country appointment, and churches nowhere except at the latter place. In Palouse and Moscow I have had trouble in securing a place for preaching.

Will try to write again—a shorter letter and say more.

Feb. 6, 1891. J. W. COMPTON.

From Rock Creek Basin.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of Montana:—I have been thinking for some time of writing a few lines, urging that we uphold our pastor's hand more, and take more of his burdens on our own shoulders. First, let us use our influence to get all the members to attend church. Just think how we would feel to preach to empty benches month after month. It is not only a privilege, but a duty also, to go to the house of the Lord. And then, brothers and sisters, let us not wait until the end of the year to pay our pastor, but give to him now, and give liberally, and when we have given him all the money we can spare, do not stop at that, but "pound" him with meats, fruit, vegetables, butter, flour; grain for his horse, and some of you who have plenty of cows, send one of them to him so that his family will have some milk. Let us try to remove from his mind the fear that his family will suffer for the comforts of life, and see how he will repay us for our love and care for him. Let us make him feel that we love him, and when we feel that he has done us good, tell him so.

I have read in other religious papers that the ministers of the M. E. Churches are the poorest paid of all. I don't see why it should be so, for our people are blessed with as much of the good things of this life as the members of other churches are. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. Let us deny ourselves and do more for God's cause, and see if we will not get a blessing, such as our souls have not received for a long time. Then, teach the dear little children to give, for some day they will take our places. Let us live nearer to God, trust him more, grow in grace and in the knowledge of Him who loved us so well as to give His only begotten Son, that we might through Him have eternal life. Let us have more patience and forbearance towards each other. Let all strife and unkind feeling die out of our hearts, and the love that thinketh no evil take its place, and then will the good work go on and the people will be saved.

With much love,

MARY E. WILLIS.

DIED.

On Ambrose Creek, near Stevensville, Mont., Feb. 10, 1891, MARY, the oldest daughter of W. M. and L. Franks, aged 13½ years.

This makes the second death that within two weeks has taken place in this hitherto strong and healthy, but now afflicted and grief-stricken family. Measles was the precursor in each case.

How mysterious are God's ways with the children of men, and yet amid all we know that He is love, and what else we "know not now we shall know hereafter."

Mary was a bright, genial, affectionate girl, the pride and joy of her parents, and the beloved of all who knew her. Better still, she was a Christian girl, having some time previous to her sickness given her heart to Jesus. Well do we now recall her clear, definite testimony which she frequently gave during the Protracted Meeting which we held at the Ambrose S. H. last fall, and how the radiance of her countenance likewise bore witness to the reality of her experience.

When about to die she remarked to her sorrowing mother: "Don't trouble for me, I am all right," and soon after she fell "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep."

The funeral took place on the 12th of Feb., 1891, in the presence of a large number of sympathizing friends. Owing to continued sickness in the family, the funeral sermon was deferred till some time in the near future. J. B. PARNALL.

Prevalence of Divorce.

The tendency to leniency in divorce laws and the great increase in the number of divorce cases in our country are alarming. We learn that in some States there is one divorce to every ten marriages. In portions of California the reports show one divorce to about every 7 marriages,and in one of our large Western cities, Denver, Colorado, one to less than every four marriages. The looseness of our laws encourages carelessness in assuming these solemn vows, and facilitates the severance of these most sacred ties on the slightest pretence. Four-fifths of the applications for divorce are granted by the courts of our land. This indicates an alarming state of affairs. Marriage is not a sacrament, as the Romanists teach, but it is an ordinance of God, and is more sacred, and its vows more binding than many are wont to consider it. The great Centennial Methodist Conference, held in Baltimore in 1884, passed resolutions strongly condemning the laxity of public sentiment in reference to divorce, and every Christian denomination in the land has given utterance in one way or another, to the same sentiment. The purity of society, the purity of the family, and of the home rests upon the sacredness with which the marriage relation is observed. The State cannot afford to symyathize with wrong-doers at the hazard of undermining its own foundations. Such sympathy will prove to be like that of the followers of Joshua with the Gibeonites who came to them in disguise, with old clothes, and dry and mouldy bread, as though they were from a very far country, when they were enemies occupying the towns right in front of Israel's conquering hosts. It led to a compromise from the effects of which the Israelites never recovered.

The rigidness of divorce laws and the hardships that they may entail upon a few individuals are nothing in comparison to what they contribute to the welfare of society and to the protection and purity of the home. And in nine cases out of ten these so-called hardships are the result either of personal wickedness or inexcusable carelessness in the parties themselves either before or after marriage.

Some one has said that the secret of the decline and fall of the Roman Empire was not in the devastation of Goth and Vandal, but in the decline of virtue and purity in the homes of the Roman people. Let us profit by the lesson that others have learned at so dear a price.

Let every minister, every officer of the law, every judge of the court, every man and woman of our land oppose with might and main this growing mania for divorces. For just as we ignore the law of God at this point, the law that our Savior announces in the New Testament, we license crime, demoralize and destroy the home and turn innocent children out as helpless paupers upon the world, to be ruined perhaps for time and eternity, and society—the nation suffers a loss that cannot be repaired.

Helena District Conference

Rev. W. T. Goulder, the Secretary, has kindly furnished us with a copy of the proceedings of this body, from which we make the following notes in addition to those published in our last issue:

The pastors reported a revival spirit prevalent and progress in all departments. About sixty persons had been added to the church since Annual Conference. All were encouraged, and determined to press the battle with more vigor than ever before. A decided advance has been made in the Sunday School work. Most of the preachers reported good Sunday Schools, well attended, and teachers doing good work. The preachers and people realize the necessity of devoting more time to the children and of doing more thorough work in the Sunday School.

After an instructive paper by D.B Price, on the cardinal doctrines of the church, there was a discussion on the subject of "Christian Perfection," which showed that the preachers are fully alive to the importance of this great doctrine.

A master paper was read by Rev. R. S. Clark, on Church and Parsonage Extension work. It made such an impression upon one man in the audience, who, though not a member of any church, at once offered to donate the lots upon which to build a parsonage at East Helena.

A paper full of revival fire and enthusiasm was read by J. E. Squires. The Conference requested its publication in the "Montana Methodist." It appears in this issue.

The Conference realized the great need of a parsonage for the presiding elder, and appointed a board of trustees who are to act as a building committee, select the location, collect funds and go forward with the work of building or purchasing a District parsonage, as soon as sufficient funds are on hand to justify such action, and action is not to be delayed longer than the 1st of May, 1891. The following are the trustees appointed: N. Evans, William Hensley, Robert Renshaw, M. O. Reed, and Rev. S. B. Tabor, of Deer Lodge; A. H. Barret and J. W. Kemper, Butte; A. G. Clark and S. C. Achby, Helena. The presiding elder, Rev. A. C. Couev, was instructed to act with the committee.

In view of the fact that $700 or $800 is paid out annually by the preachers on the District for house rent, the brethren resolved "to do their utmost to build parsonages where most needed, and to enlarge old ones whenever necessary."

Rev. J. H. Johnson read an instructive paper on the subject of Missions.

The editor of the "Montana Methodist" and P.E. of the Missoula District were present the last day, and added much to the interest of the Conference by making an encouraging report of the condition of the "Montana Methodist," and also giving an account of the work in his District. He said a post had been established in the center of a large population in the midst of the Couer d'Alenes. We are no longer a distant and isolated part of the church. Since Annual Conference he had shaken hands with our brethren, the noble standard bearers of our cause in the East Columbia Conference, and had mingled his labors, tears, prayers and songs with theirs. The wires are up, connections are established and the electric current of Christian sympathy and brotherly love now flashes through the columns of our little paper and strangely warms and thrills, and inspires the hearts of our advancing hosts throughout all this Northwest. A line of posts is now established all the way from Bozeman, Montana, to the Pacific Coast.

It was the sense of the Conference that the amount of $3,000 was greatly needed to meet the urgent demands upon us for enlargement and occupancy of outlying fields.

The pulpit was ably filled by the various brethren in attendance, and there was a fine interest manifested in the services, but the severe snow storm, and cold weather, prevented a large attendance, and compelled a suspension of the services after the following Sunday night.

Brother Bramble had provided ample accommodations for all members and visitors. The generous hospitality of the good people of East Helena, was duly appreciated and acknowledged by appropriate resolutions.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The new Pacific Coast paper is launched at last, under the title of Pacific Methodist Advocate. The first issue, Volume 1, No. 1, is on our table. Rev. H. M. Dubose is editor, and Rev. R. P. Wilson, business manager, employed by the Book Agents, Barbee & Smith. The paper is published at San Francisco, Cal., by authority of the General Conference, in the interest of our church on the Pacific Coast. It is a 12-page paper and neatly gotten up. We voted for it. We now welcome it to our table, and with heart and soul bid it God-speed in its grand mission in our great and growing West.

Bishop Haygood expects to locate in Los Angeles, and it is thought that Bishop Fitzgerald, by the earnest request of the Pacific Conference, will locate in California. With a General Conference paper, and two bran new Bishops, we shall expect great things from California Methodism.

Rev. E. C. Finley, late of Montana, was married at Caledonia,Mo., Feb. 11th, to Miss Jennie Evans. Rev. J. C. Berryman officiating. We send congratulations from "the tops of the mountains" and wish the happy couple much joy.

On the first of the month there was a great flood on the Gila river. in Arizona. From 1,000 to 1,400 people were left homeless at Yuma, Arizona; from 40 to 100 persons were reported drowned, and $2,000,000 worth of property destroyed in one county.

On Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 28th and March 1st, there fell the deepest snow that has been seen in Missoula county, for many years. But little wind accompanied it here. At Corvallis, the snow measured 21 inches deep on a level, and 30 inches on a level further up the valley. It is reported from 20 to 30 inches in the principal valleys of the State. Stockmen who are short of feed, are looking serious, but farmers and miners are rejoicing, for it gives promise of plenty of water for irrigation and mining purposes, the coming season.

Stanley, the African Explorer, has decided to place the royal presents he received, in honor of his achievements, amounting to about half a million dollars, at the disposal of General Booth, to aid in his great work of helping the poor of London. This is surely commendable.

The people of Canada are warmly discussing the question of annexation.

The "force bill" did not pass Congress, neither did the free silver coinage bill.

MONTANA.

Of the six states, Washington, the two Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming, admitted to the Union during the past decade, Montana the forty-second, is the largest in area, first in wealth to the per capita of its population, and fourth in population.

The mean length is 640 miles, greatest width 305 miles, with an area of 145,770 square miles. It is greater in extent than New England and New York combined. The census of 1881 showed the population of the territory to be 39,159, including 35,385 whites, 1,765 Chinese, 346 Africans and 1,663 Indian citizens. The census enumerators of 1890 returned to the census bureau 131,876 names as the result of their labors.

Prospectors in the mountains, cowboys and shepherds living in the isolated portions of the northeastern counties to the number of 4,000 or 5,000 were omitted in the enumeration.

Montana has within its borders about 35,000,000 acres of land fit for cultivation, a space which its present population fails to crowd. Nevertheless, this new state produces now $50,000,000 in mineral, agricultural and live stock materials in a year, so that its industries count immensely in the proportion to the per capita of its population.

The following is a statement of the total assessment of the territory for the years named, and gives a clear illustration of the steady and substantial growth experienced since 1880:

	Total assessment.
1880	$18,806,802,00
1881	24,040,806.30
1882	33,221,319.12
1883	44,698,461.28
1884	49,746,286 91
1885	52,847,536.40
1886	55,076,871.53
1887	60,099,493.70
1888	67,430,533.70
1890	100,123,298,05

Property is not taxed at over 60 per cent. of its true value. The mines which constiute the largest productive industry and represent millions of dollars of market value, only pay a tax on their net output and surface value of government price, and the value of mills and other improvements erected thereon. Taking this into consideration and placing other property at its true value, the total wealth of Montana to-day may safely be placed at the magnificent figure of $150,000,000, showing that cannot be equalled by the same amount of people elsewhere on the face of the globe.

The chief source of Montana's wealth is mining. The entire mountainous portion of the state, embracing over one-third of its surface, is rich in minerals. The greatest copper mine, the greatest silver mine and the greatest gold mine in the world are located in Montana, being respectively the Anaconda, Granite Mountain and Drum Lummon. The Granite Mountain is the best dividend-paying mine on the continent. It pays $200,000 per month for the stockholders. The output of the mines of gold, silver, copper and lead for the decade will approximate $250,000,000, divided as follows: Precious metals, $170,000,000; base metals, $80,000,000. Of this product the Rutte mines contributed $122,562,000, including $25,000,000 (estimated) output for 1890. The output for the state for the closing year will not fall below $40,000,000, divided equally between precious and base metals. Seventeen listed mines of the state during the decade paid in dividends $21,000,000. A careful estimate places the profits of non-listed or close-corporation mines during the same period at $60,000,000 additional.

About eight-ninths of the cultivated area of Montana is still unoccupied. The number of farms in 1889 was 5,026. On 26,155 acres was raised 770,200 bushels of wheat and on 84,678 acres 3,026,572 bushels of oats. Over one-half the total amount of grain produced is raised in two valleys, the Gallatin and Bitter Root. These valleys are contiguous to the most thickly populated portion of the state and afford a ready market. Montana is by far the best watered of any of the Rocky Mountain states. With Clark's fork of the Columbia, on the Pacific slope, and the Yellowstone and the Missouri, with their various tributaries, on the Atlantic slope, water for irrigation purposes for every foot of tillable land in the state is assured.

The wonderful nutrition of the native grasses in connection with the salubrious climate has given Montana the distinction as the leading stock-growing section of the West. The range system in vogue ten years ago, with its countless thousands of horses, cattle and sheep upon the ranges, unprotected from the storms and bitter cold of a severe winter, nearly collapsed during the unprecedented drouth, followed by a heavy snowfall and extreme cold of 1886-7. The farm of the valley now supplements the pasture of the hills and plains. A careful estimate shows the number of different animals in the state to be as follows: Cattle, 1,320,000; horses, 232,900; sheep, 2,700,000. This is an increase in ten years of 10 per cent in cattle, 59 per cent. in horses, and 77 per cent. in sheep.

At the beginning of the decade the only means of transportation was the primitive stage-coach. At the close of 1890 there were three transcontinental lines within the state—with branch roads leading to every important agricultural or promising mining center, aggregating 2,200 miles—main lines and branches.

The growth of the school system during the past ten years is as follows: Number of school houses, 1880, 92; 1890, 332. Value of same, 1880, $72,620: 1890, $748,720. Number of school children, 1880, 5,623, 1800, 29,740. Number of teachers, 1880, 120; 1890, 478.

The rapid growth, enterprise and introduction of modern architecture, of rapid transit, electric lightings, etc., so characteristic of the West, are striking features of every city in Montana. The leading cities are Butte, Helena, Missoula, Anaconda, Bozeman, Great Falls, Livingston and Dillon, and their respective rank in population may be set down in the order named. Butte shows the largest increase in population and wealth during the decade, the showing being a jump from 4,000 to 30,000 in population, and from $5,000,000 to $30,000,000, in taxable wealth, exclusive of mines.

A board of ten expert architects has been selected by the World's Fair Committee. Five are from Chicago and the others from New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Horace Greeley once said this on the school question: "If we give up the Bible we only weaken our common school system, while we fail to conciliate its enemies, and only excite to new and inadmissible exactions."

Jules Simon, the now venerable French statesman, in his article in the December Forum on the "Stability of the French Republic," quotes this remark which the Emperor of Germany made to him: "In my position it is better to do good to men than to inspire them with fear."

Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, is forty-four. When he first landed in America, a lad of fourteen, he had neither a dollar nor a friend, nor the ability to speak the language of the country where he came to make his home. In the meantime he has acquired a reputation as a writer and speaker of English, has been elected to Congress, owns one of the most influential papers in America, and from its profits has erected a building valued at more than $2,000,000.

A Boy who became Famous.

A boy, only six years old, was sailing with his father down the Danube. All day long they had been sailing past crumbling ruins, frowning castles, cloisters hidden away among the crags, towering cliffs, quiet villages nestled in sunny valleys, and, here and there, a deep gorge that opened back from the gliding river, its hollow distance blue with fathomless shadow and its loneliness and stillness stirring the boy's heart like some dim and vast cathedral. They stopped at night at a cloister, and the father took little Wolfgang into the chapel to see the organ. It was the first large organ he had ever seen, and his face lit up with delight, and every motion and attitude of his figure expressed a wondering reverence.

"Father," said the boy, "let me play!" Well pleased, the father complied. Then Wolfgang pushed aside the stool, and, when his father had filled the great bellows, the elfin organist stood upon the pedals. How the deep tones woke the sombre stillness of the old church! The organ seemed some great uncouth creature, roaring for very joy at the caresses of the marvellous child.

The monks, eating their supper in the refectory, heard it, and dropped knife and fork in astonishment. The organist of the brotherhood was among them, but never had he played with such power. They listened; some crossed themselves, till the prior rose up and hastened to the chapel. The others followed; but, when they looked up into the organ-loft, lo! there was no organist to be seen, though the deep tones still massed themselves in harmonies, and made the stone arches thrill with their power. "It is the devil," cried one of the monks, drawing closer to his companions, and giving a scared look over his shoulders at the darkness of the aisle.

"It is a miracle!" said another. But, when the boldest of them mounted the stairs to the organ-loft, he stood as if petrified with amazement. There was the tiny figure, treading from pedal to pedal, and at the same time clutching at the keys above with his hands, gathering handfuls of those wonderful chords as if they were violets, and flinging them out into the solemn gloom behind him. He heard nothing, saw nothing besides. His eyes beamed and his whole face lighted with impassioned joy. Louder and fuller rose the harmonies, streaming forth in swelling billows, till at last they seemed to reach a sunny shore, on which they broke; and then a whispering ripple of faintest melody lingered a moment in the air, like the murmur of a windharp, and all was still.

The boy was John Wolfgang Mozart.—Exchange.

BISHOP TO AFRICA.

Just at this time we are hearing much of Africa. Not only through books, but from the lips of Stanley, the great explorer. This man has urely acc omplished much, and has shown a degree of heroism, endurance and trust in God, worthy of all honor. But our picture brings before us another hero, who could likewise tell much of Darkest Africa, Bishop Wm. Taylor. Not for fame, not for gain does he cross and recross the ocean; but to speak the joyful Gospel news, and to turn the darkness of African night into bright day. God bless this Missionary Bishop.

OUT AND OUT.

BY JENNIE FOWLER WILLING.

Even young people may be "out and out" for Christ. They may live in the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians as certainly as may Christians of double, or treble their years. Let me give you an instance:

When Dr. George Lansing Taylor was a lad in his early Ohio home, he gave his heart to the Lord; and, like many another, he had to suffer persecution from his school-mates. The indignities were hard for a young fellow of fifteen to bear; but he learned at the very outset to love his enemies. One day that love was pretty thoroughly tested. Fortunately for the salvation of all concerned, it was not found a minus buantity.

He was sharpening a pencil when a book slipped off the desk, and fell upon the floor. He bent over to pick it up, with his large, sharp jack knife open in his hand. The boy who was his chief persecutor gave his hand a kick that drove the knife into it, gashing it fearfully, and nearly laying open the thumb joint. Young Taylor shut his hand so tightly as to stop the flow of blood. Then rising with no sign of anything having gone wrong, he asked permission to go out. Crossing the street to the house of the nearest doctor, he had the wound sewed up and dressed.

"Do you know," said the surgeon, "You have come within danger of losing the use of your right hand? Who was it that kicked you? You can make him smart for it. His father can be made to pay well for such a job as that! Who did it?"

Taylor positively refused to tell. He was far more anxious to do the boy good, than to have him suffer for his meanness. He never showed by word or look that he resented the injury. The love of Christ had taken all resentment out of his soul.

Six or seven years later he had finished his college course, and had taken the principalship of a school for the training of teachers. Among his pupils was the young man, though older than himself, who had kicked the knife into his hand. There was not one of the scholars more faultlessly loyal to the young teacher.

The Holy Spirit was poured out upon the school, and many of the students were saved.

One afternoon that young man asked Taylor if he could talk with him a few moments after school. When they were alone he asked, "Do you remember, Mr. Taylor, when I so nearly ruined your right hand by a brutal kick?"

"I think I do," replied the teacher pleasantly, "I shall carry the scar to my grave."

"I had no idea of hurting you so badly," said the other. I hated you because you had become a Christian. You never seemed to resent it in the least. And now I want to tell you that that jack-knife has been sticking in my heart ever since. Lately the Lord has been twisting it around, till the agony has become unbearable. I want you to forgive me and ask God to help me out of this torment about my meanness."

The two young men dropped on their knees; and from that hour they were not only brothers in Christ, but fast friends. Patient love had conquered.—Selected.

Notes

Senator George Hearst, of California, died at his residence in Washington, the 28th of February. His remains were conveyed in a special car to California for burial. He was a self-made man--was born in Franklin County, Mo., helped his father on the farm, attended the district school, went West forty years ago a poor boy, and was worth from ten to fifteen million dollars when he died. We wonder whether or not he was "rich toward God," without which the wealth of the whole world is nothing but vanity and vexation of spirit.

Our old friend and brother, G. H. Carrow, of Helena, renews his subscription; and adds: "I do think the dear MONTANA METHODIST is the most interesting little paper that I ever had the pleasure of reading. I appreciate it more and more with each number. May it ever prosper, is my prayer."

The writer of the above belongs to that class of men, prospectors and miners, who have contributed so largely to the development and prosperity of this mountain-land, and to whom the country owes a debt of gratitude that will scarcely ever be paid. Like most miners, he reads extensively, knows when he strikes a pay streak, and stays with it. We prize his encouraging words, and trust that by our united and persevering efforts the METHODIST may be the means of helping multitudes of prospectors—seekers after spiritual truth—into the possession of the "true riches" and of that inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation."

Sister Lee, wife of Rev. E. L. Lee, of Demersville, is better.

We greatly enjoyed meeting with Brothers Bramble and Tabor, whom we had not met before, and had the great satisfaction of a visit with their families. We were "filled with their company."

While at East Helena we had the pleasure of meeting Rev. Rush McDonald, a superannuated preacher of the Southwest Mo. Conference, and found him a sweet-spirited Christian gentleman. We expected him to make a visit to Stevensville and Corvallis; but he writes us that he will go to Oklahoma; expresses gratitude to the friends about Alhambra. for their kindly interest in him, and wishes success to the METHODIST. May the blessings of God attend him.

The editor came home in the big snow storm and was taken down with a severe attack of La Grippe, on the very day set to commence preparing matter for the METHODIST. As a result there are some things left out that were intended for this issue. But our correspondents have kindly helped us out. We have several excellent articles left over for next issue. Our brethren will accept thanks and be patient. In the meantime don't forget to solicit new subscribers for the METHODIST.

The District Conference and the snow storm, together with the sickness of some of the preachers, or their families, has interfered with revival work. But we trust the work will go forward soon again, and that reports will be sent in promptly.

How we enjoyed the long, long talks with our true yoke-fellow, the Presiding Elder of Helena District. We didn't care much if were caught in a snow storm while going to the train and were two minutes late, for we put in two or three solid hours at the depot discussing plans and counseling together, while waiting for the next train. It was refreshing to visit his family again.

There was much in our heart to say about our visit to Helena, East Helena, and Deer Lodge. The many old friends we met, the renewal of subscribers, and the many kind words spoken for the METHODIST, but it is impossible to say it now.

From The Churches.

VOLLMER, IDAHO.

Rev. W. S. Hornbuckle writes from Vollmer, Idaho: "We closed our meeting at Leland, with nine conversions and six accessions to our church. We organized there with eight members, two having joined before. I think I would be safe in saying that our Methodism is established at that point. The Lord was with us in power."

STEVENSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall was stricken down with La Grippe in the midst of a promising meeting at Victor, conducted by himself and Brother Rickman, of the Baptist Church. Rev. M. D. Hortonberry, a local preacher, took the pastor's place on Thursday, and the present writer arrived on Saturday, hoping to help in the good work, when the severest snow storm that has visited this region for years, came upon us and materially hindered the work. There were six or eight penitents, and two were converted. We trust that the good work will be followed up, and that there will be a mighty outpouring of the Spirit at Victor. We visited Brother Parnall at his home at Stevensville, and found him convalescent, though he will not be ready for active work for some time. The labor of five protracted efforts was too much for our brother. Sister Parnall also had a severe attack of La Grippe about the time of our visit there. We hope she is better now.

WALLACE, IDAHO.

From the Coeur dA'lene "Miner" and also from private sources, we learn that our pastor at this place is hard at work, is in favor with the people, and preparing for better things in the future. This is the newest charge in the Conference. A church building and a parsonage are greatly needed. The weather has been very unfavorable. Snow fell on twenty-seven days, consecutively. This has prevented the holding of protracted services. Still the Sunday School continues, and the work deepens in interest. The congregations continue good. The pastor is quite hopeful.

FROM WASHINGTON.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY—I have just read the METHODIST almost from first to last. Oh, how my heart is stirred by that spirit which is moving the hearts and hands, tongues, and pens of those indefatigable standard-bearers of the Cross, whose letters appear in the METHODIST. So full of joy and gladness, hallelujahs and amens. I feel like saying, roll on, roll on, good and glorious work, roll on, victory is nigh.

The night has been long and dark, with only a star here and there to give a feeble light through some opening in the clouds. But, now, if we mistake not, we can see gleams of light, and the dawn of the morning. Surely it cannot be said now (although it has been said), that the M. E. Church, South, has no mission in this land. She has a mission here. What is it? To save souls through Christ, and to cultivate Emanuel's ground. Blessed is the church that holds fast to sound doctrine.

A consecrated ministry will take the world for Jesus. Consecration! Oh, how much there is in that word! The atheistic world can take the church with a secular ministry. But the devil himself cannot overcome the church with a consecrated ministry. The minister who has laid soul and body upon the altar, and says, here Lord, take or send me, and use me for thy glory and the salvation of souls. will be successful. God's word for it. I never knew a minister who had conversions in his congregation during the year to report at his quarterly meetings, that did not have a good financial report.

God has instituted the church, and commissioned men of the church led by his Son, to conquer the world. The different societies that have been organized in the church (and I think there is a limit to them), may serve as helpers in the evangalization of the world, but they of themselves will never save the world.

Now, I will say in conclusion, that the church in Washington never had brighter prospects before her than she has now. She has more laborers in the field now than she ever had since first organized here. God bless the METHODIST. N. Y. SEVAD.

FROM HOLTON, KANSAS.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY—I have been intending to write to you for months, but have been so busy in protracted meetings, and paying off church debts, and—well you know all about it. I don't see where you get time to write so much, but, according to your day and trial grace is given I suppose. I have always felt a deep interest in your work in that far off field, and rejoice with you in the evidence of success now apparent. Your paper is doing much to enlist the church in your welfare.

After a 14 weeks siege in meetings in which more than 100 were converted, and more than that number brought into the church, I rested a few days, and now I am in a meeting at the school house, near your father's.

This is the fifth day since we began. There is some interest. Last night, after preaching as best I could, I gave an opportunity for persons to speak. The second one to rise was Father Stanley. God wonderfully blessed him, and we all wept (saint and sinner) like children, as he spoke of the dealings of God with him all these years. I feel that God will give us the victory here also.

This has been a year of success in this Conference. At present I predict the greatest increase since our organization. The last meeting in which I took part was held at a new new town on the Santa Fee Railroad, near the old town of Mt. Pleasant, and in the very community where

Bro. Frank Williams was mobbed in 1861, for being a Southern Methodist preacher. In two weeks we had 44 added to the church, and a sufficient sum raised to build a church.

No other church has ever prospered in that community but the one that was persecuted. Hence the fulfillment of the promise, "Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness sake, for theirs is the kingdom of God." Don't be discouraged my dear brother, for God is with us as a church. Our candlestick is in its place. "There is leaven in the meal." O God, be our light and our salvation.

Inclosed find $1, which apply on my account. I don't know how much I owe. J. W. FAUBIAN.

"How to Hold Revivals in Montana."

BY J. E. SQUIRES.

Certainly, my dear brethren, no question can engage our thought and heart, as Methodist preachers upon this border field, more vital than the one given at the head of this paper.

The subject assumes the imperative necessity of Revivals of Religion in general, and if it did not, I should not stop to argue such a question before a body of men called of God to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, and representing a great church that was born in the throes of a gracious revival, and which in its glorious history of a century, in "spreading scriptural holiness over these lands," has universally conquered by this very emblem.

2. The field to which our thought is directed, and upon which our heart is fixed—Montana—is peculiar in some respects—it may be peculiarly hard.

The exterior is uneven and irregular, if not uncertain in its products.

The agricultural sections are small, and tend to the isolation of the people into small settlements which, perhaps care little for each other.

The towns and cities are built up largely by mining interests, which by their shifting character make an unsteady and unsettled population. And more, by the very methods of securing the treasure from the bowels of the earth, tends to recklessness of life and limb.

But greater than all of these is the felt difficulty arising from the fact that men are in this land, most of all, for money, money at any price; money, "the root of all evil"—the love of it.

Men are here avowedly for the money and boldly declare that they do not want things better here.

And added to all of this—if not already included in what has been said, is the fact that men in this land are away from the associations which would have held them in some sense. And as members of several families, the other members of which are away somewhere, and the appeals that would impress if they were present or near, are not heard. And if one is converted he is not so interlinked to another who hears, as to draw him.

Such in brief is the field under survey, and some of the peculiar difficulties.

The possibility and special necessity of a revival of religion.

Can We have revivals in Montana under these circumstances? Shall we make the effort? I answer that we can and must by the help of God. Not that we have not already had some results along this line. All honor to the men who have poured out their strength and life upon this field, and to you, dear brethren, whose years of faithful labor under the trying conditions of the new and primitive period in this field, have won a heroe's fame for you with God, but we want to see greater things than these. We must see them.

Dr. Lyman Beecher said: "Unless it rains faster we will perish with drouth, men are going down to hell by the generations. And these are our brothers by our very sides." If it were true as he declares—in his time and in that land, what shall we say of this field? If "dews" from heaven will satisfy the plant already growing, we must have showers of rain for the newly set plant on this new ground. It must come, and that largely through our own church, and if to this generation, through US.

I declare that our Methodism has no mission here if it does not blossom in gracious revivals of Religion. Our palladium. It will come as it did in the days of Finney and Edwards, in 1830 to 1857. When all over the new grounds of the Eastern and Middle States great showers of grace fell upon the church and rebuked infidelity, and moistened the ground for the growth of the half century.

My brethen we shall see it, and unto this very end are we come to this white and wide field.

The very obstacles which seem in the way shall be turned upon the enemy, and where sin has so greatly abounded, "grace shall much more abound." "Wilt thou not revive us again that thy people may rejoice?"

"How shall we hold them?"

We now come to the all important and eminently practical question—the way to secure this most desirable, and I answer first of all ends, that revivals will come here essentially as they do all over the earth among the children of men.

They are under spiritual laws—as well established as those which bring the literal rain from the skies. And they come down from God in Heaven and are not "gotten up" like fox-fire always is. The preacher of the word of God is, by the very functions of his office, in God's kingdom the important and chief acting agent—using the methods ordained of God, applying the elements, putting them together and completing the current that the Divine electric spark may do its work. The preacher then, is to be the important factor in this work, not that he is to do all of the human part of the work, but he must see that it is done. The preacher and his preaching. "He must believe in revivals," says Mr. Moody. And I fear my brethren, that we must hear this. Are we not largely skeptical at this point? Do we believe in Revivals, God's choice and honored method of saving souls; and that as his called ministers, this is our chief business? I press this question home upon every conscience before me to-day. The preacher must be REVIVED to hold revivals, and is the sine qua non. Bishop Mallalieu says a revival preacher is the first and great desideratum to a revival, and that means a poker that won't cool off in snow.

The preaching is the output of the mine—the preacher's heart and life, and everything depends upon its character so far as the revival is concerned.

Positive, earnest preaching, which aims at, and expects results, will bring results. Men in this age are not going to listen long to negative, or other than the most fearless and positive declaration of the truth of God. And in no land is this more fully true than in this ffeld. The stalwart, sturdy character of our citizenship demands this, not doubts, but certainties.

But it is not enough to declare the the truth, never so plainly, and the doctrine with positive declaration; the man himself must be the embodiment of the things declared—earnestness that glows in white heat in the soul of the preacher will arrest men and reach them, and by God's grace save them. This was the secret of Whitefield's power; he spoke the truth as though it was the truth, and he knew it, and felt it.

Aim at results; put a point on every arrow. Shoot to kill. Then look for game, expect to see men saved—upon the altar.

In what has been said of the preacher, as the agent in bringing down revivals, and the preaching of the Word, as means at his hand, I would not remove any part of the obligation which God has laid upon the church in its membership; but the preacher must set them on fire, and then direct the flame, he is God's man.

Now, if any brother is disposed to think that I have stressed the human side too much in answering, "How shall we hold Revivals in Montana?" let me add that all the power comes from God. The Holy Spirit does the work, but he does it through agencies of his own appointment—and the holy ministry is the important link in the chain. Study and prayer and consecration, all enter in to make the agent effective, and all of these come out in the character of the preaching.

Survey the field calmly but hopefully. Know its peculiarities and difficulties. Then know that our God can and will pour out showers of blessings upon this field, that he will do it through us as his called ministry.

Now turn your heart and thought to this problem: Do you believe in Revivals—that God will send them through us? Are you "revived?" Could any fire catch from you at all? Do you preach in such a positive way and in such earnestness as to reach men and hold them? Do you aim at results and expect them—opening the way for seekers to come too?

If not, then "cast your your net on the other side.' Pray, preach, sing, talk work and plan for revivals. Secure co-operation of ministers and Christians. Put yourself in range of Divine power—"Bring ye tithes into the storehouse and and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven etc."

Let us cast our net on the other side, and test the Master—"it will break with the multitude of fishes."

OBITUARY.

DIED.—Feb. 14, 1891, at the residence of her son-in-law, in Prickley Pear Valley, Miss Emily Hardgrave, aged 69 years, 4 months and 5 days. She was born in Madison County, Ky. When she was in her sixth year, her widowed mother removed to Boone County, Mo., and from thence, after a lapse of about a year, to Macon County, where Emily was reared. Her parents were Baptists. At the age of about 20 she was converted, and joined the Methodist Church, and afterwards joined the Baptist Church. In 1840 she was married to Hezekiah Hardgrave, whom she leaves, together with all her children and a number of grandchildren, to mourn her loss. Brother and Sister Hardgrave came to Montana in the fall of '71, and in '72, not having a church of her choice, she united with the M. E. Church, South, in the communion of which she died triumphantly. Sister Hardgrave was a mother in Israel, full of years of labors and affection. Her house was among the homes that the Saviour has provided for His ministers who should leave houses and lands in His service. She told us, a few days before she passed away, that she was ready to go, even longed to leave this world of affliction and pain, and go home to her eternal rest. The funeral service was held at the house, the writer officiating, after which, quite a funeral cortege, though the day was very rough, followed her remains to where Allie Hardgrave, her granddaughter, was laid away less than a year ago, and there committed her body to the grave to wait the resurrection morn. May God's blessing rest upon her family.

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the [illegible] and help double our list

A SHORT SERMON.

BY J. H. JOHNSON.

"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

The word lost indicates former possession. The loss is felt in proportion to the value of the lost. The enthusiasm with which we seek the lost is proportionate to the benefits to be derived in its redemption. The interest of the search is also guaged by the intrinsic worth of the lost and the danger in which it is involved. Man lost was once in God's possession; made in the divine image, contributing more to the glory of God than other and lower creatures, his fall must have been quite a loss in heaven. In the fifth chapter of Revelation we read that, no man being found able to loose the seals of heaven's mysterious book, the "Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David prevailed to open the book, to loose the seals thereof." He read the situation, and shouldered the task of the world's redemption. The angels unfallen are interested for man. "There is joy in the presence of God among the angels over one sinner that repenteth." In this fallen state man in the innocency of infancy, by virtue of the death of Christ, is in a sacred state. But, by actual transgression, he strays from the field, and is lost. Whatever costs us but little, or nothing, does not long engage our thoughts when it is lost. A man searches for a thousand dollars with a thousand-fold more interest than that which characterizes him in looking for one dollar. We look for a lost child with more enthusiam than we have in searching for a lost coin; that is if we rightly value the child, and give the coin its true place. The highest interest centers in the search for a lost soul. When the peril of a lost child in a thinly-settled country infested by wild animals is fully known to a few sturdy pioneers, the enthusiasm with which they search the wild wood through a dark, or tempestuous night, with sleepless vigilance, is only equaled by the value of the lost and the danger to which it is exposed. So the intense desire, purpose and will with which heaven searches for us is equaled only by the value of immortal souls, their peril in this life and the possiblities growing out of their redemption. With an everlasting love God has loved us. Seeing the iminent peril of the Jews, Christ sprang first to their rescue, as if they were sinking in the midst of a turbulent stream, while the Gentiles were nearer the shore. The Gospel must first be preached in Jerusalem —then in the uttermost parts of the earth.

Let us have an Evangelism that does Disparage the Pastorate.

"Bishop Key began a series of meetings yesterday at Francis Street, St. Joseph, with hopeful indications for gracious results. The brethren on adjacent charges have come to town to see if a bishop can hold a protracted meeting. We are expecting great things."—S. W. Cooper, in St. Louis Advocate. Why should not great results be looked for in protracted efforts to save souls when a Methodist Bishop is directing the services? Are they not the chief pastors of this great evangelizing church who have passed up to the Episcopacy through large experiences in this work of a living ministry? Should not the relation of chief pastors qualify them for greater efficency in this line of service in the Master's Kingdom? We have never been able to see why the Episcopacy should retire these able servants of the Master from this evangelizing arm of service. And nineteen years of experience, and of attentive observation of the practical workings of our policy as a whole, from a Western standpoint, has profoundly impressed us with the importance of such service from our bishops, especially on the frontier. There were those from the West who were honored with seats at the late General Conference, that labored when and where they thought it best to do so, to create the impression in that body that services of this character were much needed to build and strengthen our work in the West; and we were much gratified that that venerable body was in sympathy with us in this need, and gave to us two new bishops that should live among and serve us as chief pastors in all special efforts to advance our cause in the opening fields of the great West, when opportunity would permit. It is reported that Bishop Haygood is going to make his home in Los Angeles, Cal. We shall hail his coming among us with joy, regarding it as an epoch in the advance movement of our Zion. We hope that Bishop Fitzgerald will also come and live with us, and with his distinguished Episcopal co-laborers help us, and thereby teach and inspire us how to advance the Master's Kingdom in these special, and of all the most efficient, efforts to save souls. It is to be hoped that this new departure in Episcopal service, by Bishop Key, will soon become the rule of their action and pastoral oversight among us, and not the exception as it is now. Bishop Hendrix, in visiting and preaching at our principal points, where it was practicable to do so, did much to strengthen our cause, and to impress our people in Montana with courage to strike for grander results in the building up of the Kingdom of God in these Western wilds. None but those who are on the ground can see, and fully appreciate, the value of his service as chief pastor among us. But, if we mistake not, time will disclose its practical results to the gratification of all those who are watching with interest our advances here. Our bishops ought, it seems to us, to be the evangelists of the church. They are on the ground as chief pastors, and hence not instructors, nor irresponsible ecclesiastical tramps in the revival interests of the church. We would that an evangelizing fire would break out from our College of Bishops that would sweep irresistibly throughout our borders, reviving our people, purifying their faith, and quickening their zeal, and saving souls in numbers, commensurate with the resources of a great church in efficient operation under God.

EDITORIAL.

CENTENARY OF JOHN WESLEY'S DEATH.

One hundred years ago, on March 2nd last, John Wesley, the illustrious human founder of Methodism, departed this life. Throughout the civilized world the Centenary of this interesting event has just been commemorated, having been participated in not only by the Methodists themselves, but also by the admirers and sympathizers in other communions, along with Statesmen, politicians and philanthropists irrespective of class, creed, or party—a fitting tribute of respect and esteem to the man who nobly declared, "The world is my parish."

From being numbered by only a few thousand at Wesley's death, the Methodists have now grown into a vast army, aggregating several millions of members, with a still larger number of adherents. The "little one has thus become a thousand and the small one a strong nation." How wide and powerful for good has been the influence under God of this one man!

Much has been accomplished in the past one hundred years. To God be all the glory!

But what of the coming century? Will it show results proportionately as great and lasting as the past? We venture no prediction. In that sense we are neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet. But this we are bold to assert, that only in so far as it is moved and actuated by the principles, (not necessarily the practice) of our sainted founder, will Methodism achieve that full measure of success in the future that now is gloriously possible to it.

John Wesley, with a heart full of love to God and humanity, practically applied the Gospel to the spiritual and temporal needs of the people among whom he lived and labored. Not because he loved novelty and change, for he was by nature a conservative to the backbone, but moved by an almost irresistible influence within himself and directed partly by external circumstances that Providentially affected him, he was constrained to break loose from old effete customs, to drive out from the deep circuitous cast-iron ruts of past generations and ages, and guided by the Bible, the Spirit of God and good common sense, to strike out for himself and his followers a straight new course towards the goal of holiness, usefulness and happiness. In this as we have seen he was eminently successful.

No one, or even all of its particular forms of church government, is as we understand it, essential to Methodism. It could we believe, if necessary, (but it is not) survive even the abolishment of the Itinerancy or the disuse of the class meetings, important, wise and powerful factors in our economy as they are, which have our hearty approval and support.

For Methodism is life, not mere form—spirit, not the letter only. It is the adaptation of the best means for the holiest and best ends, sound spiritual wisdom. As Paul puts it in regard to himself: Methodism is the becoming all things to all men with the one all-consuming desire of trying to save some.

To follow slavishly Wesley's methods in the present day may be in some particulars, as un-Methodistic as it would have been for him to have copied the Church of England or the Church of Rome. But to become possessed of his spirit—a spirit of firm, unswerving, whole-hearted consecration of body and soul to Christ—is preeminently fitting, proper, right. Yea, it is essential for us. Shall we all seek this, not for the glory of Methodism, but in order to help speed the time when the Kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

HERE AND THERE.

—Please do not lay the blame of all the mistakes and blunders in this issue, on the head of the unfortunate editor. He, for two or three weeks past, has been having a "bout" with la grippe. After being "downed" twice, the second time quite severely, he is now, we hope, getting the better of his assailant. The pen of an amateur who has been called in to assist in making up the paper, on this occasion, writes these lines.

—A Methodist, as well as any other "Bible Christian," should be distinguished from others by having a definite, clear, and fresh experience of the mercy and grace of God, and then being able and ready to relate it on all proper occasions. Are not the common social circle, and the circle of our friendly correspondence, as well as the class and prayer meetings, very fit and proper occasions for such testimonies? How many thus make use of these golden opportunities? A few with whom we are acquainted do so. "Go thou and do likewise," and thus help to spread the Gospel.

—Is it a young convert who reads this? Brother, sister, have you yet fully realized the fact that God converted your soul in order that you might work for Him? Get yourself interested in the salvation of some one else, as Philip was, and don't cease your efforts until you have brought your Nathanael to Jesus. Lend a helping hand also to any weak Christian you may come in contact with, even though you feel yourself in the same category, and then, above all, do not forget to "Watch and Pray" to keep yourself right, for only thus can you help others.

—The cruel, treacherous, un-American Mafia had to be suppressed (as we hope it is) in New Orleans by the bullets of the outraged, although long suffering citizens, after but a comparatively few of their number had fallen victims to their fiendish power. But what about the equally cruel, treacherous, death-dealing liquor traffic that slays annually in our midst its tens of thousands, besides inflicting untold misery and suffering on the helpless and defenseless women and children? When will the "lords" of this great whiskey-cursed nation—the people—awake to a sense of their duty in this matter, and with kingly authority unitedly declare, whilst they thrust their innocent, yet all-powerful ballots into the box, that "alcohol shall rule no longer?" The Christian citizen is the one whose duty it is to take the lead in forming public opinion on this great question, at the same time "Voting as he prays." The Christian women are trying to do their part—at least some of them are. What are the Christian men about? Yes, that means you, my good brother.

—Quite an epidemic of la grippe has been raging in Bitter Root Valley during the past two months. All three of our preachers located here have with their wives, been prostrated by it, but are now recovering, except Sister Stanley and baby, who are both still quite sick. No fatal results have as yet been reported.

—Bro. Parnall reports one accession to the church at Stevensville on Sunday morning last.

—During the recent sickness of the Pastor at Stevensville, Rev. M. D. Hortonberry, a local preacher, turned "circuit rider" once more, and filled the vacant gap with pleasure to himself, profit to his hearers, and gratification to the sick preacher.

—We clip the following appreciative note from a recent number of the Nashville Christian Advocate:

We read with delight the reminiscential letters of Rev. Learner Blackman Stateler in the MONTANA METHODIST. He has been for sixty years in the itinerant ministry, and all of that time on the border. It is fit that the closing years of his long and consecrated life should be passed in good health and comfortable circumstances.

—Our brethren and friends on the Helena District are making a very wise and necessary move in the direction of securing a parsonage home for their Presiding Elder and his family. From a private letter just to hand from Bro. Couey, we are glad to learn that the outlook is promising. Hope the project may soon materialize. The rent bill is what usually in the West draws heaviest on the limited means of the preacher.

—We call special attention to a well written article from the pen of one of our young lady members at Bozeman, Miss Lulu Biggs, entitled, "Facts," which all will do well to read and ponder.

—We rejoice that through the Epworth League as well as the Sunday School and other agencies of the church, our talented young people are finding an ever-widening field in which they are willing and ready to work for the Master.

—Our old friend, Rev. H. A. Bomland, formerly of the Mission Conference, but for many years past of Texas, writes us from Waco that he was in the midst of a gracious revival of religion, which was growing with every service. He expresses a friendly interest in our work in this country. We wish our brother abundant success in all his labors.

—Brother Stateler writes from Whitehall: "My health is reasonably good. I preached here yesterday. Hope to accomplish a little more before I go hence."

—Rev. C. W. Sanford is now in charge of a circuit at Gaudalupe in Santa Maria Valley, Cal. He writes to a friend that he is well pleased with the country. The Santa Maria Valley is about the size of Gallatin Valley, and nearly all kinds of fruit are grown in great abundance.

—We trust that our brethren will not forget the resolutions adopted and the promises made in regard to working for the MONTANA METHODIST, by getting new subscribers and securing the renewal of old ones. The printers have to be paid the first of April, and we hope our friends will lend a helping hand. Let each one send a new subscriber at once.

FACTS.

BY MISS LULU BIGGS.

Read at the Epworth League in Bozeman, Mont., Feb. 25, 1891.

In this world we find ourselves confronted, no matter which way we turn, by facts.

Sometimes pleasant, somtimes far otherwise, but always stubborn facts.

One of the facts before us is this: The youths of our land are growing; their young feet are running swiftly up the pathway of life; their young minds are reaching out and taking in with every phase of development, something from their surroundings.

And what are their surroundings? Evils of every kind; snares set by Satan himself; allurements held out by those who are his confreres, the world and its so-called pleasures offered them, if they will worship him.

As the mind begins to unfold it demands food, and food it will have. Feed it with that which is good and it will be healthy, vigorous, active, alive. Leave it to feed upon its surroundings and you will have a dropsical deformity which breathes the breath of death wherever it moves.

Parents sometimes forget that God will hold them responsible for the precious souls given to them and entrusted to their keeping. Of the homes you may know how many have Christ for the chief cornerstone?

On the face of the dial in Oxford was placed a Latin inscription, which meant: "They perish and go down to our account." It meant the hours, but as I read the story an unseen hand seemed to write "Souls" instead of "Hours." Oh! friends, can it be that perishing souls around us are being set down to our account?

We cannot force the unsaved to seek the shelter of God's fold, or the Ark of safety, but we can do all in our power to direct the feet and minds of the young to the testimonies of the Lord.

In middle life the cry of the watchman on Zion's walls may reach them, and the uncertainty of earthly things may cause them to seek their place among the workmen of the Lord.

In old age when life has been spent in sin, the mind accustomed to doubting the fading promises of this world, they find it hard to accept by faith the wonderful testimony of the Word of God.

But in youth character is being made, and the mind is receiving those impressions which so often shape it for eternity. When the mind is reaching out after food; when faith has not yet been shaken by "dead-sea-fruits" of this life; when it is easy to believe, and the future looks bright, surely then is the time of all times to scatter with unsparing hand the seed of the Kingdom.

Often the heart of the sower must ache and even agonize over his work, but "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seeds, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

Often we see no fruit of our labors, and discouragements creep into the heart, but we have the solace of God's Word. "Paul may plant, Apollos may water, but God giveth the increase."

In the Sunday School with the young gathered around us, is one of the best places for seed-sowing, and there, [as well also in the Epworth League.—ED.] with that assurance that God's Word shall not return unto Him void, they who can say with Paul, "I know whom I have believed," can do much for the Master.

Then, brothers and sisters, let us plead for the young, let us see beyond the clear blue eyes which are looking to us for counsel, the immortal blood-bought souls. And remember that the noisy, joyous, and even rude young lives around us are the future men and women of our land, those upon whom will rest our churches, Sunday Schools and Government.

Let us plead for the young, but not forget any, for God's Word says: "He that winneth souls is wise," and "The wise shall shine as stars in the firmament," and "Blessed are they that sow beside all waters."

THOUGHTS FROM THE LIFE AND CHARACTER OF MOSES.

The world is full of beacons. Great men have lived in every age. When you find society taking a step forward, be sure that some stalwart son is there making use of the best instruments of his day, leading and moulding all toward the perfection of a certain plan. You will also see that society recognizes no state lines, no sects, no customs; the great man is our brother, what he learns, we claim as our own. God incarnates his great truths. The story of the creation, and the truth of God's power is learned from the trembling lips of the earthquake, the lightning's flash, and the thunder's roll; but the love of God is made known by heart beats; he selects men of flesh and blood like ourselves to further on the interests of his kingdom.

The person whose character we are called upon to delineate in this article and who stands as the hero of his day, was no other than Moses, the author of the Pentateuch, the great lawgiver.

A Jew by birth, his father and mother poor, and in slavery; a decree had gone forth from Pharaoh, the king, that all male children born among these Jews should be put to death. Jobkebed, his mother, wild with excitement. and eager to save her child, planned to have him spared, and thus I see a scene at the river side, which eclipses all others. A beautiful child in a basket, made watertight, floating among the reeds on the river; near by stands his sister, eagerly awaiting the result, and a little further stands the mother herself. Yonder behold the flash of the setting sun-light, gleaming from the capitol on the water that bright evening. Presently the daughter of Pharaoh, with her maids are making their approach upon the the scene. Attired in bathing habits, they are ready to take their accustomed bath in the refreshing waters of the Nile, when their attention is arrested by the strange sight of the ark among the reeds. As it is brought near, the cry of an infant is heard, and they behold, smiling amid his tears, the brightest, and most beautiful child in all Egypt. He is adopted by the Princess, and his own mother employed as nurse to care for and raise him for her.

Oh! the fullness and grandness of God's care and preservation of His children. Now comes an interval of forty years mostly spent in the house and court of Pharaoh. These were not lost years, but spent in education and instruction. Several interesting events transpired in which Moses took part, one marked incident being his killing an Egyplian for smiting an Israelite, thus showing his impetuous nature and love of his people at this time. In fear of his life he fled to the mountains of Midian, where he remained for forty long years. Here he married the daughter of Jethro, and served as a shepherd, and here he learned those lessons of humility and trust in God which he afterwards so exemplified in his character. At the end of forty years he yielded to God's command to go down into Egypt, and liberate his people from Egyptian bondage and tyranny. Wonderful deliverance in answer to prayer. God hears His people's cry, and in His own good time sends help and succor. Let us not forget that. Witness the plagues, the journey to the Red Sea, the crossing, Pharaoh's army in pursuit, the safe arrival in the wilderness, where for forty years they wandered, fed on the manna which fell from Heaven.

Notice a few characteristics of that grand and good man. 1st. As a law giver he never had a peer; indeed very many of our laws to-day are formulated from the laws he gave us nearly four thousand years ago. In his obedience he has had few equals. Never but once after leaving Egypt, do we learn of his presuming to disobey God, when he was commanded to speak from the rock water for the people, he struck it with his rod, while the water gushed forth, and the people were supplied. Yet for this act of disobedience he was not permitted to enter into the promised land. In his meekness and humility he stands unrivalled. We are told he chose rather to suffer affliction with his own people, than to enjoy all the pleasures of Pharaoh's court, and when God told him He had chosen him to go and deliver His distressed and down-trodden people, he said, "I am slow of speech, send Aaron." His unselfishness and love for his people marked his whole life. He was educated at Heliopolis, the chief seat of learning in Egypt, and the Apostle Paul tells us he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. He stands in culture and intelligence at the head of all his associates. Josephus says he was tall and portly, like most great men; that he was an inventor of no mean character, having invented a chariot and a device for overturning chariots; that he taught grammar to the Egyptians, and music to the Grecians, and as an instructor had not a peer in all Egypt. Again he says he was closely allied with all the interests of his people, and ever aimed to further their temporal and spiritual welfare.

More than this he was a Statesman of the highest and noblest kind. There is a marked difference between Moses, and many of the so-called statesmen of to-day; selfish, narrow-minded, and sensual in their ideas, while Moses was broad, noble and righteous in all he said and did. Finally we take our leave of him in that land of Nebo, where with his life's work accomplished, he is permitted to view the land of promise so soon to be occupied by his people. On yonder mountain he is buried, not by human hands, but by God's angel, and the place no man has been able to discover. Let us imitate him in the boy, the man, the scholar, the statesman, the Christian, and finally Heaven with all its effulgence and glory will be ours.

FAITH.

The will power has much to do with faith. It is a great stimulus to faith to say I will believe, and to say so is right and Scriptural. We are commanded to believe and condemned if we do not do it. The Scriptures assume that we have the power to believe. Therefore, when one is conscious of having renounced all sin and is sure of having made a complete surrender and consecration to God, it is not only safe, but a duty to say, I believe God, through Christ, takes me, accepts me—saves me. The emotional evidence may not be an immediate concomitant, but it is sure to come, and to come soon, if the soul keeps itself in this attitude of sin renouncing trust in Jesus.—Divine Life.

BACH'S LAST DAYS.

THE GREAT COMPOSER'S MUSICAL AND RELIGIOUS ECSTASY.

Over the eyes of Sebastian Bach in his last days there lay a veil of impenetrable night. But the darker without, the brighter it grew within. To his eye or faith there shone a warmer, clearer heaven, and he was constantly more and more drawn upward by its attraction. He felt an irresistible longing for the glory in which he believed.

One day in the middle of July, 1750, he had been sitting for some time in his easy chair, his hands folded, his sightless eyes directed upward, when he asked his son Frederick to write for him what he would dictate. He had scarcely put down a few notes, when he interrupted his father by saying, "What a motet for eight voices!" "Does that strike you as wonderful, my son?" exclaimed the father. "Oh, that I could sing with a thousand voices what I feel at this moment. Oh, take my hand and lead me to the organ." The son obeyed, and the happy old man played what was in his heart, though with a trembling hand, and what he would have dictated to his son. "Yes, my dear," he said to his wife, who sat near him, "my days are numbered. I feel that my end is near; but I have no anxiety. My Savior is at my side; my eyes behold him. Should I not gladly depart to be with Christ?" "Don't say so, dear Sebastian," said his wife. "What shall we do when you are gone?" "The Lord is the father of the fatherless," he replied, "and the God and judge of the widow. He will never leave you nor forsake you. But I shall be singing to him the new song. Hallelujah. Let me go; let me go to the land where I long to be; where my eyes shall be opened to see the King in His beauty. Cease your lamentation and sing with me, 'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly; my feet are weary; my strength is gone. The way is too hard for me. Oh, for the peace which Jesus gives."

While they sang together and he played the melody, the aged man suddenly exclaimed, with a voice full of joy: "What is that?" His friends, standing around him, were alarmed and cried out, "What is it, father?" "Oh, I can see again! I can see! Great and gracious God, I am not worthy that Thou shouldst come under my roof. I see you again, my dear wife and children. What a mercy! before I go hence. Call all my children, that I may once more feast my eyes by a sight of them."

The children were quickly brought in and stood around their dear father. "Oh, my dear children," he exclaimed, "you look just as I used to see you. Come and help me praise God for His goodness in that He has so revealed his power to a feeble old man. He has heard my prayer. I will never doubt that He will receive me to Himself in the heavenly mansions."

Then came a few unexpected and blessed hours. The face of the great composer was lighted up with an unearthly glow. He drew from his organ strains an immortal glory. But the wonderful revelation was too much for him, though it was only like a twinkling star, lighting up the darkness of the night. But it was more than he could bear. The happy surprise threw him into a burning fever, and on the evening of July 28, 1750, he gently fell asleep.

How much we have heard of this great composer and his wonderful music! How delightful it is to read of his happy end.

IT MAKES THINGS SAFE.

Years ago, a young infidel was traveling in the West with his uncle, a banker, and they were not a little anxious for their safety when they were forced to stop for a night in a rough wayside cabin. There were two rooms in the house: and when they retired for the night they agreed that the young man should sit with his pistols, and watch until midnight, and then awaken his uncle, who should watch until morning. Presently they peeped through the crack, and saw their host, a rough-looking old man, in his bear-skin suit, reach up and take down a book—a Bible: and after reading it awhile, he knelt and began to pray; and then the young infidel began to pull off his coat and get ready for bed. The uncle said, "I thought you were going to sit up and watch." But the young man knew there was no need of sitting up, pistol in hand, to watch all night long in a cabin that was hallowed by the word of God, and consecrated by the voice of prayer. Would a pack of cards, a rum-bottle, or a copy of the Age of Reason, have thus quieted this young infidel's fears?

Every one knows that where this book has influence it makes things safe. Why is this? If it were a bad book, we should expect to find it in the hands of the worst men. In New York there was once a kind of rogue's museum—a place where they had all kinds of skeleton-keys, and jimmies, and brass knuckles, and dirks, and pistols, and implements of mischief, which they had taken away from roughs and criminals. Do you suppose there was a single New Testament in the whole kit? Why not? If it were a bad book you would expect a man to have a revolver in one pocket, and the New Testament tucked away in another. There was a row the other night, and a man broke his wife's head with a—Bible? No! it was a bottle! Where the Bible bears sway, the rows and quarrels do not come. H. L. H.

ALONG THE LINE.

FROM VOLLMER, IDAHO.

Editor "Montana Methodist":

I pen these lines right on the eve of leaving home to be gone some eight or ten days, to engage in another conflict with Satan, after having been detained at home on account of sickness in the family and in person.

We have held some two or three meetings, of which I gave you some account briefly on a card, in all of these we held the Prince of Darkness at bay. In one instance for a long time, the meeting seemed to hang, but we trusted in the Lord; as David said we "went forth in the strength of the Lord God," and he got the victory for Himself.

Some "sky-blue conversions" and some pungent convictions, but at first the "cloud" seemed to be only the "size of a man's hand." There were some faithful ones who watched the moving of the storm ready to do the bidding of the leader. Like Gideon's faithful few, ready to break the "pitcher" and hold up the "lamp," or go and tell Ahab: "Prepare thy chariot and get thee down that the rain stop thee not. One of these faithful ones was Rev. H. B. Terry, who by his faithful preaching brought souls to Christ. He is no "feather-bed cavalry"!

Cannot tell what the end will be, but one thing is certain, Southern Methodism is already established in that section. How will this sound in the ears of those men (called Christians) who call us the "copperhead Church" and "Rebel Church"? The Lord have mercy!

We are getting a deep interest awakened on the subject of missions. Send the names of six subscribers for the "Missionary Reporter." Collections being taken and the people responding to the calls. The Stewards are awake to the needs of the Pastor and Presiding Elder. Last Quarterly Conference they reported $70 for P. C. and $9 for P. E., and for other expenses, $9. We never served a more willing people to do what they know to be their duty. Unfortunately for some of them, that they have not anything to do, and consequently they waited for the preacher to do all heretofore. Well, when the work is organized then there is no trouble to get the collections ordered by the Conference.

Love to all the brethren of the Montana Conference. I seem drawn close to them through having met the editor of the "Methodist."

Yours,

WILL HORNBUCKLE.

FROM WINGVILLE, ORE.

Editor "Methodist":

Your paper, full of good news, keeps coming. I have held twenty-three days' services here at Wingville. Will close to-night, with six accessions as the result. Hope to start in soon at Baker City. I expect much good in the near future. D. W. YOAKUM.

Baker City, Ore.

EAGLE VALLEY CIRCUIT.

Editor "Methodist":

I have been assisting Bro. Crego on the above circuit for ten days. Eight accessions to date, and the meeting still continues

As I have proposed to write you every two weeks as long as news holds out, I send you this. The meeting is being held in Eagle Valley, and we think of trying Pine Valley next week. D. W. YOAKUM.

WALLACE, IDAHO.

In a private note to the editor, dated March 11th, Rev. W. O. Waggener writes: "Our congregations keep up well, considering the bad weather, though the Sunday School has been interferred some by it. Last Sunday was the first bright day we have had here for weeks. It snowed some every twenty-four hours for thirty-two days. The snow is three or four feet deep now. My congregations are the most attentive I have ever had anywhere, but alas! the fruitage seems slow. It will come. The Lord has promised it and His promises are "yea and amen."

The pastor and his family had an attack of la grippe in common with a large number of other people in the town of Wallace. Our brother was recently the recipient of a handsome donation which was gotten up by some of the young ladies of this place.

BOZEMAN.

Brother Goulder, under date of Feb. 25th, writes: "My work is moving nicely. Good congregations on Sunday, pleasant service."

"BUTTE BITS."

Dear "Methodist":

Your cheerful face greeted us again this week, and we want to say that you look happy and hopeful, and help to make us so.

The response of our brethren from the East Columbia Conference, reporting their work so fully and endorsing the "Methodist" so heartily is very gratifying, and to my mind phenomenal.

Why shall not Editor Du Bose and Editor Stanley divide the territory (and the $10,000) and give us an "Intermountain" and a "Pacific Methodist."

Butte is busy, and promises to rush on as before. Much sickness and many deaths since the opening of the year. Great demand for the services of the doctor and preacher—men and families that could not be approached at all, in health, send for us now.

I make the most of these occasions, and through them upon all I come in contact with. We are in the fourth week of a Union Revival Meeting. About sixty have professed faith in Christ, and the work goes on indefinitely. Hundreds were turned away from the hall Sunday night.

All the congregations of the city are being built up, and I feel like we are going to see the things for which faithful predecessors have labored and prayed. Brethren who have written me to help them in meetings may know why I cannot come to them for some time yet—we intend pushing the battle here to the very gate.

All the interests of the church are hopeful here, and we hear with great joy, the notes of victory from the whole field and from our part of it. May great grace be upon you all, my brethren. Amen.

JOHN E. SQUIRES.

GOOD CHEER FROM THE COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor:

We are able to report substantial progress this year in the Columbia Conference. The spirit of revival is upon us. Marked success has attended our labors, in many places. There have been over one hundred and fifty conversions in the Willamett District alone. No true pastor can content himself without revivals. We have this evidence of our call to the work and God's smiles upon us. The increased quickening is not a mere spasmodic effort for success, but, we trust, the normal spirit of our work. In matters of ecclesiastical consciousness, we must follow the law of individual, personal self-denial, and aim, not at men's success, but for the salvation of men.

We have never had such an era of church building. We realize that we are here to constitute one of the permanent religious factors of this country, and we are showing our faith in the enterprise by investing money largely. There will be, perhaps, a dozen new churches built within the next year, in our Conference. You are joining hands with East Columbia across Idaho, filling that gap. We must plant in Portland, Seattle, and all western Washington. We have numerous friends and members in all that part of the State. Our watchward is Onward. D. ATKINS.

Corvallis, Ore.

OBITUARY.

DIED—On Three Mile Creek, near Stevensville, Mont., March 6, 1891, William Clarence, son of W. H. and S. J. Copp, aged 11½ years.

A delicate child from infancy. Of late years he had been afflicted severely with rheumatism, particularly since November last. His sufferings were at times very great. Like Stephen of old, dear Clarence died calling upon the Lord, "Jesus! Jesus!" he exclaimed with emphasis, as a bright light illuminated his countenance, and we trust that his happy spirit is to-day with the Savior in Paradise.

The funeral took place on the 7th, being conducted by the writer.

May the "God of all consolation and grace," abundantly comfort and sustain the dear sorrowing parents, particularly in the hope of a happy reunion in the "Sweet bye-and-bye." J. B. PARNALL.

SIXTY YEARS ON THE BORDER LABORS AMONG THE INDIANS

BY L. B. STATELER.

There were other brethren who labored for a short period of time in this work, most of whom have since passed away. Among these was the late Rev. Nathan Scarritt, of Kansas City, Mo., who died since the preparation of these sketches was begun. In 1848 he was placed in charge of the Classical Department of the Manual Labor School, where he remained for three years. He often assisted the missionaries in adjacent fields in holding protracted meetings, preaching through an interpreter. He threw himself into the mission work with much zeal, and gave promise of great usefulness in it. But there being a vacancy in the pulpit at Lexington, Mo., he was deemed the most suitable man for that place, and was accordingly transferred thither. He afterwards served as Presiding Elder of the Kickapoo and Lecompton Districts in the Kansas Conference. Bro. Scarritt filled many important stations in the church with great credit and efficiency. Just before his death, he proposed to donate a beautiful and valuable site in Kansas City, Mo., and $2 000 in cash, for the contemplated Bible and Training School for missionary and other workers, provided it was located there, and the church would raise $25,000 additional. The offer was accepted, and arrangements were about perfected when our esteemed Brother, who was in attendance at the General Conference at St. Louis, as a delegate from the South West Missouri Conference, in May, 1891, was called to his home in Kansas City by sickness, from which he never recovered, departing this life on the 22nd of the same month.

Aarangements for the carrying out of this scheme were completed at the session of the General Conference above referred to, and the institution was at once named the "Scarritt Bible and Training School." It appears quite fiitting that a man who gave some of the best years of his life to mission work should be permitted to assist in founding such an institution, and that it should stand so near the site of our old Manual and Labor School, and right on the border of the mission field where many faithful men and women labored so earnestly and so successfully for the conversion of those Red Men of the West.

After Kansas Territory was organized, the Indians began selling out their reservations, and though the Government surveyed the land and allowed each individual or head of a family to select a tract, consisting of 200 acres, and issued patents for the same, as to other citizens, they soon became dissatisfied and began to sell out their homes. Being invited by the Cherokees in the Indian Territory to come and make their home with them, they soon sold out all their interests and emigiated to the Cherokee country. So it comes to pass that in the locality where our missions enjoyed such a great prosperity in the days and years gone by, there is scarcely a family remaining of all these tribes.

Before closing the sketch of our work here, it is proper that I make some general remarks concerning the Indians among whom we labored.

Our success among them was largely attributable to the fact that these Indians were settled. Though they were not large farmers and stock raisers, yet they cultivated the ground and made at least a partial support for themselves in the way of raising grain, vegetables, cattle,hogs, horses, etc., which with the annuities that they received from the Government, made them a fair living.

They were surrounded on two sides, north and east, by white settlements, and on the west by wild and savage tribes. Though the buffalos abounded by the million not many day's travel west of them, yet the fierce Cheyennes and Arapahoes were there in great force, made their home there, and they were the deadly enemies of the domestic tribes.

Had those tribes amongst whom we labored possessed the liberty of the plains, and been permitted to go and chase the buffalo and antelope at will, we could have accomplished but little among them religiously, or by instructing their children, for it seems to be nature of an Indian to take delight in the exciting chase. As it was, but few of them would venture out either to trap or hunt, where they were exposed to so much danger from their enemies.

Several times during my stay small parties did run this risk, but they seldom all returned again. I will give an incident to the point.

A company of sixteen men, organized under the direction of a prominent chief, amongst whom was one of our native preachers, a most worthy and useful man. They had gone westward into the Cheyenne Country, some hundreds of miles away. They had left the timber and were out on a broad open plain, when all at once they were surrounded by a vast number of savage and blood-thirsty Cheyennes. There was no possible way of retreat, and the only thing left for them to do was to fight for their lives. Against such fearful odds there was no hope. A desperate conflict ensued. Their numbers were rapidly thinned, and it was not long until the last man had fallen except the preacher. He then threw down his gun and drew from his bosom his Hymn Book, printed in his native tongue, and looking up into Heaven sang one of the songs of Zion. The Cheyenne chief at once ordered his men to cease firing, intending to save him, believing him to be some great "medicine man." But the chief could not restrain his men. The Christian man was shot down, and they all lay dead upon the ground side by side, their bones being left to bleach upon the plains.

Months passed away, the families of the fallen were left at home in suspense. There were none to tell the sad tale.

The great Santa Fe road or trail was travelled regularly every spring and summer by caravans going to New Mexico. There came to the camp of one of these companies of traders one day, an Indian bringing with him a book which was carefully wrapped up and well preserved. He inquired of the whites what it was, and then told in detail how he came in possession of it, how the Delawares had come into their country, how the Cheyennes surrounded them, and had a great fight, with the results above mentioned. He gave the book to the teamster, who brought it home and related the story obtained from the Cheyenne Indian. I was among the Delawares at the time and saw the little relic which was all of the effects that remained of the adventurous spirits who several months before had gone forth on their hazardous undertaking. They went out in the spring and the word came back in the fall.

Laughed at the Warning and Went On.

A gentleman, wandering along on the beach of Scotland, where the high rocks came near the sea, was unmindful of the fact that the tide was rising, which would cut off his retreat. A man on the top of the rocks shouted "Hallo! the tide is rising, and this is the last place through which you can make your escape; you had better climb up on to the rocks." The man laughed at the warning and went on. After a while he thought it was time to return; he came back and found retreat cut off. He tried to scale the rocks; he clambered half way up—could get no farther. The wave came to his feet—came to his waist—came to his chin, and with a wild shriek for help he perished.

The tides of eternity are rising. Those only will be saved who get on to the Rock of Ages; yet men saunter along in their sin and play in the sand. We come out and shout, "Hallo! hallo! the tide is rising." They laugh at our excitement, and say that there is no danger. After while they resolve to return, but it is too late. The waters of eternal destruction gather about their feet; they try to climb, but get no farther than the foot of the rock, and, with eyes rolling in horror, and hands flung up, and a shriek of despair that rolls among the mountains of death with long-reverberating echo, they drop forever.—[Sel.

SACRED TO THE MEMORY

OF THE REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Sometime fellow of Lincoln College,
Oxford;
A man in Learning and sincere Piety
Scarcely inferior to any;
In Zeal, Ministerial Labors, and extensive Usefulness,
Superior, perhaps, to all Men,
Since the days of St. Paul.

Regardless of Fatigue, personal Danger, and Disgrace,
He went out into the Highways and Hedges
Calling Sinners to repentance,
And Publishing the Gospel of Peace.
He was the Founder of the Methodist Societies,
And the chief Promoter and Patron
Of the Plan of Itinerant Preaching,
Which he extended through Great Britain and Ireland,
The West Indies and America,
With unexampled Success.

He was born the 17th of June, 1703;
And died the 2nd of March, 1791,
In sure and certain hope of Eternal Life
Through the Atonement and Mediation of a Crucified Saviour.
He was sixty-five years in the Ministry,
And fifty-two an Itinerant Preacher;
He lived to see, in these Kingdoms only,
About three hundred Itinerant,
And one thousand Local Preachers,
Raised up from the midst of his own people;
And eighty thousand persons in the Societies
under his care.

His Name will be ever had in grateful Remembrance
By all who rejoice in the universal Spread
Of the Gospel of Christ.

Soli Deo Gloria.

The above inscription, taken from the marble tablet erected to his memory in the chapel, City-road, gives us a clear and concise history of John Wesley, the centennial of whose death occured March 2d 1891. — His father was Rev. Samuel Wesley, Rector of Epworth, Lincolnshire; in whom he had from earliest years an example of a respectable and influential clergyman. His mother, Susanna Wesley, was a woman of "sanctified wisdom, masculine understanding, and acquired knowledge," and was the early instructress of John and his brothers Charles and Samuel. Her special interest, however, centered in John, who, at the age of 6, during a fire in the parsonage, was providentially rescued from death. As a result of this special care, John became early serious. At the age of seventeen he was elected to Christ Church, Oxford, where he diligently pursued his studies, and distinguished himself by great progress. In her correspondence with him at this time, his mother urged him to resolve to make religion the business of his life, advice that was not lost upon him, as we shall see. In 1726 he was elected Fellow of Lincoln College. As a scholar, his reputation was established. He was critic in the Latin and Greek classics; was well acquainted with Hebrew, and several modern tongues. The study of Mathematics so fascinated his mind that he found it necessary to turn his attention to other studies; in Natural History he was well versed; Anatomy and Medicine likewise claimed his attention. He was also a writer of repute, but always wrote to instruct and benefit that class of people who had little learning, little money and little leisure time.

In November, 1729, John and Charles Wesley, Mr. Morgan and Mr. Kirkman, nicknamed "Methodists," met several evenings each week, chiefly for the study of the Greek Testament. During the next few years the number of Methodists was increased, and in addition to meeting for counsel and study, they resolved to spend two or three hours each week in visiting and relieving the poor and sick, sacrificing therefore all superfluities.

About the middle of the year 1735 the trustees of the new colony of Georgia desired to send out clergymen, to minister to the spiritual wants of the colonists, as well as to convert the Indians. Propositions were made to John Wesley, which were accepted, and his brother Charles volunteered to accompany him. He landed Feb. 6th 1736, labored faithfully and earnestly and returned to England January 3d 1738. His religious experience up to this time had not been satisfactory to himself, but in May of this year he could truly say: "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." And now began that glorious ministry, that life of ceaseless activity, toil and labors in the Gospel, whose results are summed up in the inscription quoted above, and which only ended when "The weary wheels of life stood still at last."

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Though denominational, as its name indicates, yet it has been so conducted as to be pronounced by worthy ministers of other denominations, the best religious paper in the state. It shall strive to merit this high encomium in the future as in the past.

The Editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, has been in the active work of the ministry in Montana for nearly twenty years and has watched the growth of the country from its infancy. He has an extensive acquaintance among the people, understands their needs, is thoroughly identified with their interests.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, both East and West.

It will publish letters of travel, descriptions of the country, general news, news from the churches, sketches of pioneer life, interesting historical incidents, biographies, anecdotes, sermons, and articles relating to Scripture doctrine, and religious experience and practice.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER.

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

The paper will contain something for ministers and laymen, church members and non-church members, the aged, the middle-aged and the young, the educated and the uneducated, and shall contribute in the fullest measure possible to the creation of a high and wholesome public sentiment upon all moral and religious questions, and to every thing that looks to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR per year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list

STORIES OF VON MOLTKE.—Two pretty stories are just told about Von Moltke. One is that on taking out his purse to pay a cabman after a rather long ride, the cabman starting his horse, called out, "No, no; it has been a great honor for me, Herr Feldmarschall," and drove off, to receive the Count's photograph, with the words, "To his cab-driver." And the other is that an American lady, with a young daughter, staying at the hotel where the great soldier was attending a regimental banquet, sent him a photograph of himself, which she asked him to sign, and so give more to the girl on her seventeeth birthday than all her presents had done. In reply, mother and daughter were invited to the supper- room, were treated by Von Moltke with the kindest hospitality and received the photograph, on which was written, in English, "I have been young, and now I am old, but I have not seen the righteous forsaken."—Harper's Bazar.

"Well, Tommy," said a visitor, "how are you getting on at school?" "First rate," answered Tommy. "I ain't doing as well as some of the other boys, though. I can stand on my head, but I have to put my feet against the fence. I want to do it without being anywhere near the fence, and I guess I can after a while."—Jewish Messenger.

Keep a Clean Mouth, Boys.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved when I was a child never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolution and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. The utmost care of the parents will scarcely prevent it. Of course, no one thinks of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We can not imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart", the next thing to swearing, and "not so wicked"; but it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young reader, keep your mouth free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean; for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—The Olive Leaf.

What Made a Boy a Missionary.

Dr. Cyrus Hamlin has told in a five-minute speech how it was he came to be a missionary. He said: "In the vast majority of cases missionaries are made by the influence of the family. My widowed mother made me a missionary. She had me read every Sunday out of the PANOPLIST, and then later out of the MISSIONARY HERALD. We had in those days in our town a missionary contribution box, a cent box, and we were encouraged to earn some special cents for that box. I remember well one occasion which was, I think, a turning-point in my experience. When the fall muster came every boy had a pocketful of cents to spend. My mother gave me seven cents, saying, as she gave them, 'Perhaps you will put a cent or two into the contribution box in Mrs. Farrar's porch on the common.' So I began to think as I went along, shall I put in one or shall it be two? Then I thought two cents was pretty small, and I came up to three–three cents for the heathen and four cents for gingerbread; but that did not sound right, did not satisfy me, so I turned it the other way, and said four cents shall go for the heathen. Then I thought, the boys will ask me how much I have to spend, and three cents is rather too small a sum to talk about. 'Hang it all,' I said, 'I'll put the whole in.' So in it all went. When I told my mother some years after that I was going to be a missionary, she broke down and said: 'I have always expected it.' "

CHRISTIAN GROWTH.

A plain account of the Christian life, in which no human authority is quoted and no word of controversy is found. The book is the fruits of Bible-study and experience in the life of the Lord. This little work has helped many. 18mo. Paper, 10 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

CALIFORNIA SKETCHES.

(TWO VOLUMES.)

These sparkling volumes have had a great run, and their popularity is still great. They are true pictures of phases of western life that are vanishing, and touch both the fount of tears and the springs of laughter; while the undertone is deeply spiritual. Each volume is complete in itself, but whoever reads one will want the other. 16mo. Cloth. Price, singly, 75 cents. Both volumes $1.25.

GLIMPSES OF TRUTH.

Of the thoughts in this beautiful book Bishop Granbury says: "They are flashes of light for the understanding, arrows of conviction for the conscience, refreshing essences for weary souls." It is a book for a quiet hour or for a present to a friend. 12mo. Cloth. Price, $1.

CENTENARY CAMEOS.

The many warm expressions of approval—those who read such of these sketches as appeared in print during the centenary year of Episcopal Methodism in America–led the author to the preparation of this volume, which is a gem of mechanical beauty, worthy of the glowing pages in which our spiritual ancestors are protrayed with graphic power and rare spiritual insight. Octavo. Cloth $2. Cloth, gilt, $3. Morocco, gilt, $4.

EDITORIAL.

A Great Movement.

Gen. Booth's book "In Darkest England, and the Way out," in which the great philanthropist portrays in such vivid colors the wretched condition of the tens of thousands of London's poor, right in the midst of royalty and in the very heart of a professedly Christian government, whose boast is, that the sun never sets on its banners, and in which he proposes a scheme for their relief and elevation and Christianization, is attracting much attention among all classes, high and low, on both sides of the water. And well it may, for it brings the Christian world face to face with a problem that, whether it will or no, whether pleasant or unpleasant the task, it has got to meet and grapple with and solve in one way or another.

There is not only a "darkest Africa" and a darkest England," but there is also a "darkest America." Right in the heart of our great cities, which are the boast of our civilization and even in our villages, contiguous to the homes where our children are being reared, and under the shadows of the churches where we meet for worship are found squalor and wretchedness, and dens of infamy that, if the thought were possible, would put to blush the prince of darkness himself. They ought to cause every lover of a Christian civilization to blush with shame, every Christian heart to "sigh and cry on account of the abominations in the midst of Jerusalem," and fire the soul and nerve the arm of every Christian philanthropist to rush to the rescue, like the Hollanders do when their dykes are in danger of breaking, and stay the mighty tide of evil and save the perishing millions before the storm of fiery indignation bursts upon our world in all its threatened fury.

Every civilization has its extremes, its curses as well as its blessings, its victims as well as its fortunate ones. The palace and the palace car, with all the luxuries peculiar to each, have also their perils. The crowned head is in danger of the dynamite, while the railroad magnate may be destroyed in a moment by the derailing of a car or the neglect of a switchman, as was the case at Butte City, not long ago.

The devil is taking advantage of all the changed customs and modern appliances to demoralize and hasten men to ruin and is engulfing them by hundreds of thousands, seemingly, alas, before the church is half awake to the danger of the situation or has adjusted its life-saving apparatus to the new condition of things. Sometimes there are twenty-five or fifty saloons and gambling houses in a new town out west before there is a single minister or a church. The devil's emisary goes with the first rush to the new mining camp carrying his wares and his blankets on a pack-horse, or perhaps on his back, and commences his business under a tree, in a tent or a rudely constructed cabin, while, alas, too often the agent of the church waits until he can travel in a stage coach or a sleeper, and on his arrival, like Paul at Athens, "His spirit is stirred within him because he sees the place wholly given up to idolatry,"—Bacchus enthroned and enshrined and holding high carnival everywhere.

Christ came to seek and save the lost, and he did it. He reached the masses. He ignored ease and luxury, disregarded ceremony and conventionality. "He received sinners and ate with them." The common people heard him gladly. He went to them. We find him in their homes, their work-shops, their fields, their fishing boats, and at their weddings and feasts, as well as at their funerals, mingling his life with theirs. He found his disciples at the lakeside and called them from mending their nets to be fishers of men. He preached regeneration to a ruler of the synagogue in the night time. He found Zacheus in a sycamore tree, bade him come down, went with him to his home, not waiting, even, for an invitation, and carried salvation and joy to a household. Even on the cross, when in the very agonies of death, amid the jeers of the multitude, he showed his love combined with his power, by saving the dying thief, thus rescuing a brand from the burning.

In the synagogue he exclaimed: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, for he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, and to set at liberty them that were bruised." To confirm John's faith, the Master said, "Tell him what you have seen; that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." He touched humanity at the lowest point, at every point, and caused it to throb and thrill with a diviner life. He brought a blam for every wound, a cordial for every fear.

What the Saviour did then for humanity in person, he does now through human instrumentalities when the agents are in proper relation with himself. To his disciples he said, "Greater things than these shall ye do, because I go unto my Father." It is a far greater work to save a soul from death than to raise the dead or open the blind eyes, for this was the very object aimed at in all the miracles of our Lord—in all that he said, or suffered or did. "All power," he said, "is given unto me, go ye therefore, preach my gospel to all nations—to every creature." Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

This is the use, and all the use, that God has for a church to bear witness—to save men, all men, rich and poor, everywhere, whether "in Jerusalem"—the great city or "in Judea" our own country—or "in the uttermost parts of the earth"—heathen lands. Whenever it ceases to do this work its candlestick is removed and its glory departs and is given to another.

This is what Gen. Booth is seeking to accomplish by means of his gigantic scheme. He has gone down into the pit with his great heart bleeding and yearning over men, that he may get close to them, make the Gospel known to them and felt by them and that Christ and Christianity may no longer seem like a myth — a cold theory — but become tangible and real to them and be received by them. This is just what John Wesley did when he was turned out of the churches, and, standing upon his father's tomb, in the open air, under the blue canopy of heaven, with streaming eyes and burning words, as he preached to the eager multitudes; he shouted, "The world is my parish, and every man is my brother."

Some are criticising, such as Huxley and Tyndal. Of course. What do they know about philanthrophy—about soul-saving? But the great masses of the wisest and best of all creeds and conditions approve and help. The scheme was formally inaugurated in London on the 30th of January last.

Nearly, or quite, a half million dollars have been subscribed to it.

The scheme may be, and doubtless is, imperfect, but it was born of heaven, and will be successful in more ways than one. We shall watch its progress with much interest. In the meantime let each lend a helping hand to the same great movement by striving to help a fellow-man out of the pit into which sin has thrown him and up to a higher and better life.

Some Reflections.

A little girl, rather she is almost a young lady now, whom we have known from infancy, writes to the editor telling him that she has given herself and all that she has to Jesus, and adds, "Pray for me, that I may ever be faithful." There is such a calm and decided purpose expressed in the simple statement that we could not help being impressed by it as we read it while lying in bed sick with the grippe. Such good news always thrills us. Who can tell the result of such a gift, such a choice? The world will deride and make light, but good people, angels and God approve. It is the grandest thing on earth to be a Christian. It is only by letting God have his way with us, and in us, that we are fitted for this life or the one to come, and that is just what giving one's self to Jesus or living a Christian means. The Master, after he had given the disciples power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, to cast out evil spirits, with assurance that nothing should harm them, said to them, "Notwithstanding, rejoice not that the spirits are subject unto you, but rather rejoice because your names are written in heaven." The power to work miracles is nothing compared to being "the child of a King." With what holy rapture the now sainted Bishop Marvin used to sing:

"I'd rather be the least of those,
Who are the Lord's alone;
Than wear a royal diadem
And sit upon a throne;"

with the words that usually accompany it:

"Oh, what a blessed hope is ours." etc.

We trust that our youug friend will be a whole-hearted Christian, and prove faithful to the end of life, and that many, many more of them throughout this great North-west will follow her example. This writer began Christian life when but a youth, in a western frontier settlement, and he feels a great interest in, and knows how to sympathize with young Christians in this western country.

ALONG THE LINE.

Helena District on the Third Round.

BY A. C. COUEY.

I can scarcely realize that so much of the Conference year is behind us. With March 1st, I began the third round of Quarterly Conferences on the Helena District, beginning with Boulder and Elkhorn, Bro. J. H. Johnson's charge. With February our Montana winter began, but of all the blizzards of the two months of February and March, we had the gale Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, while at Boulder, attending the Jefferson County Sunday School Convention and the Quarterly Conference. On Sunday night, March 1st, even the "old-timers" succumbed to the inevitable and gave up the service. The quarter with Johnson and his people had been one of straits, but I hope "they escaped all safe to land" without the loss of the ship.

The Currin brothers, and Eastridges also, all leave Boulder this spring for other parts of the state. Sister Johnson and three children have already gone to Tennessee, on an extended visit, so that Bro. Johnson will have quite a depletion of ranks from now till Conference. There is coming as well as going in this country. So the law of compensation holds good in church matters as in everything else.

DEER LODGE.

Brother Tabor and his good helpmeet always do well. The reports for Deer Lodge the third quarter were encouraging. The membership here during the year has increased about 75 per cent.—the people are taught the good old Methodist doctrines in a loving, practical way. Finances are up in all respects to date except the pastor's salary. Which of itself declares the faithfulness of the pastor. The people of Deer Lodge will run up that column and strike a balance sheet before Conference, if any other in the District does. This, I understand, is her record from the beginning of operations here in 1887.

BUTTE STATION.

Mrs. Couey accompanied me to Butte for the Quarterly Conference occasion, with our old parishioners from '86–90. By special invitation we made headquarters at Judge Barrett's, where we were entertained in good old-Virginia styled hospitality. On our arrival we learned of the death the night before, of Father Thompson Kemper, whose name stands first on the roll of members in Butte Station. By arrangements of the family and pastor, I was to conduct the funeral services, Sabbath at 11 a. m. A large gathering of old friends at the hour named, showed the tender regard in which this modest saint was held. Father Kemper died in great assurance, and our last tribute to his memory, was made with a confidence that we would meet again. The body was taken to the old home in Missouri Valley for interment.

The work moves on prosperously at Butte. The membership here has run up since Conference 50 per cent. with nearly every interest of the church advanced.

The mortality in Butte, during the late fall and winter, is without precedent in the history of this young, thrifty city. Business is also quieter there, than any time in ten years. There have been some business failures. The stringency in the money market everywhere, the exceedingly dry seasons for three years, have touched this money heart of Montana.

HELENA STATION.

The Quarterly Conference here embraced Easter Sunday. On my arrival in this our present state capital, I found Brother Price, the pastor, with the telegram in his hand, announcing the death of his father at 10.30 a. m., Saturday, March 28th. The shock was a severe one. Bro. Price and his wife received many assurances of Christian sympathy from His people and friends while I was with them. The Sunday services were tender and profitable. A good revival had blessed this charge during the quarter. The most marked advance, however, was in the Helena Sunday School. The attendance at public services had averaged less than any time during Price's pastorate. He accounts for it on the ground of the extremely bad weather during February and March, and the sickness which prevailed in the membership.

If our people would plead in behalf of our pastors, as do the pastors for their people, surely we would have to tear down the old and build new houses to accommodate the people, who would flock to the house of worship. The finance in the Helena charge is the very best for Ministerial support, in the District. They will pay all claims made upon them this year. This charge, however, is in sore need of a modernized house of worship. A little discretion in the sale of the old and the purchase of new, would have been very helpful to this "Mother of Churches" in Helena. I trust the Annual Conference session there next summer may give direction to a much needed change, in order to future success in this important charge.

The District Parsonage Movement.

The examination of all the features of this enterprise—including location, the value of property, the liberality of the people, etc., favors purchase in the little city of Deer Lodge. It is not yet definitely decided, however, but will be no doubt, before this is in the hands of the readers of the "Montana Methodist." If the final decision results in the choice of Deer Lodge, I believe it will be to the best interest of the incumbent or the Presiding Eldership for several years, at least. The judgment of eight of nine in the board favors Deer Lodge, when all the circumstances are considered. The absence of the ninth, in California, has forbidden his counsel in the matter—but no doubt he will concur with the eight. I am anxious that the whole Disirict shall take part in this indispensable matter of housing the Elders' family, that he may go free.

—o—

BIG BEND.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—

It may seem to you, and others, that our quarterly meetings come in quick succession; but I am, nevertheless, going to report our third for this Conference year, (March 21-22). Bro. Swift was with us in rather feeble physical health, but in splendid preaching trim.

His sermons on "The Love of Christ Which Passeth Knowledge." and These People Have I formed for Myself," were masterly efforts. The business session was pleasant and profitable.

Bro. Jas. Gabbert, a man who, but a few months ago, was an open blasphemer, but now clothed and in his right mind, sitting at the feet of Jesus," was elected Secretary. He is a steward, and rode 28 miles on horseback to attend the Conference. God bless such men! [Amen. Editor]. They are an inspiration to a pastor, and a Presiding Elder, also, I guess.

Our Circuit is in a splendid condition. We had during the quarter 24 accessions, and about 11–10 of them are "Happy on the way," too! Glory be to Jesus, our Lord. Amen.

The financial status was as good as usual. We have several subscribers for the "Nashville Advocate," and we send you some more for the precious little "Methodist." [That is good. Ed.

There have been about $100 worth of literature of all kinds, sold on our work since Conference. There has been another magnificent, and promising Sabbath School organized during the quarter. Not a Union (?) School, but ours. There is a movement on foot to build a church in the near future. Amen! We have about 50 members at one point, and it would be a shame if we could not build us a house in which to worship. Don't you think so, Mr. Editor?

We are to have a Camp Meeting on our Circuit, beginning the 27th of May, and continuing over the 5th Sunday.

All the brethren in our District are urged to attend. Begin to make your plans now. We have a grand place for such a meeting, and my people will support it handsomely. Please do not fail to come. Railroad fare of the preachers who may come, will be paid in full. Bro. Stanley, we will not take "No," from you. You must come! Remember date: May 27–31 inclusive. Praise the Lord for what He is doing through "Southern Methodism, in the great "Northwest!" Amen! All through the Big Bend, a "Macedonian cry" is heard, and we are powerless at present to answer it.

If they will send us one more man at Conference, we will depend entirely on the people for a support and let him have the present Missionary appointment. Brethren of the East Columbia, a proposition: Let us deny ourselves, and put a man in the field, at the next session of our Conference out of our own salaries. That would mean at least two more recruits.

Rouse ye, rouse ye, in our Savior's name, and listen to the cry of our perishing countrymen!

More anon, God bless you, and the whole "Methodist" family.

Yours in Jesus' Perfect Love,

FRED ST. CLAIR,

FAIRVIEW, WASH., March 23d.

FROM HELENA.

DEAR METHODIST:—The cause of righteousness prospers in Helena. More people attend church now than ever before in the history of this place. The leavening process is going on, rather slowly, but certainly and effectively. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Sunday, our esteemed and efficient, P. E., Brother Couey was present and delivered two strong, instructive and soul-feeding sermons. It was a pleasure to have him with us on Easter Sunday. The Quarterly Conference was held this evening. The reports of the pastor showed the Sunday School was never in a more hopeful condition than now; and that the general state of the church was encouraging. There has been a net gain of seven this quarter. All the finances are well up. The indications are that there will be a healthier, and larger increase in the church the next four months than at any time in two years.

In sadness and in tears have I written these rambling notes. My dear father, Dr. S. D. Price, of Altheo, Ark., died Saturday morning at half-past ten o'clock. I did not even know that he was sick, and the shock was almost more than I could bear. He loved his preacher boy tenderly and prayed for him daily, and my poor heart is broken, as a deep shadow has fallen upon me. I need the prayers of my brethren now.

D. B. PRICE,

HELENA, March 30, 1891.

WILLOW CREEK.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—

Sunday night I closed a week's meeting at Pony. Though the results were not altogether satisfactory, yet the meeting was by no means a failure. The few Christians in Pony seemed revived, and two were baptized and received into the church.

There was no little opposition from the saloon element, and the dancing crowd, and I am sorry to have to say that some of these professed to be Christians.

The meetings were begun in a hall but this was locked against us Friday, and the congregation that gathered Friday night was compelled to go home without entrance. Saturday I secured the school-house where I preached Sunday morning and at night. Truly the preacher was "cussed" and discussed. But the good people were on my side, I was assured.

Pony is a little mining town and is in easy distance from Willow Creek, and South Boulder. When we have societies organized, so it will always be convenient for us to furnish it the Gospel, and I think we have a good prospect of building up a strong society there. While the town is quite dull now, its permanence as a village is assured and it is likely at any time "to go on a boom." I will preach there each month until the close of the year. Cordially,

H. B. COCKRILL.

March 31st.

WALLACE.

Rev. W. C. Waggener writes from Wallace, that he is preaching to serious congregations, though the inclement weather has greatly interfered with his protracted effort. He is quite hopeful. Before this is in type we expect to join our good brother in his work.

WESTON, OREGON.

Our brother, Rev. F. C. Adkins, who is now in charge of Weston Circuit, writes: "I closed a five week's meeting recently. There were about 70 conversions and 37 accessions to the church, with more to follow. The good work goes on. The Lord bless you in your work. Excuse this card. I will try to do better next time. Change my paper to Weston, Oregon." My dear brother, do not ask to be excused for such a card as that. Would to God that you and every other preacher in Montana and East Columbia, could send us a similar one for each issue of the "Methodist." Surely the Lord is doing great things for His people. Praise His holy name.

EAGLE VALLEY.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—

I have been on the sick list, and have been slow in giving you the account of our glorious victory at Eagle Valley. I held a meeting three weeks. The Holy Spirit backed the word of our Lord to the conversion of souls. Fourteen were added to our little Zion, and "more to follow." All glory to God. My heart is filled with a sense of His presence.

Our dear brother, D. W. Yoakum, was with us in his happiest mood for preaching, and gave the people thirty-two of his best sermons.

About $800 was pledged for a new church building. We are looking forward to our third Quarterly Meeting for good things and great things I hope to be able to work on, but am in safe hands and ready for marching order' to go or stay, as the Lord wills.

R. B. CREGO.

March 18th.

FROM RICHMOND, VA.

A recent subscriber to the METHODIST, living in Richmond, Va., writes: "I am charmed with your 'little paper,' and will try to get it circulated in my city. At Wallace, Idaho, you have one of Virginia's best ministers. He was my pastor two years. It was hard to give him up, but it seems the best will go to that work. You must take good care of him and his family in their 'little home on the mountain-side' and send them back to us soon."

We assure our friend that we will try and take the best of care of our Virginia preacher and his family, whom we have already learned to love and esteem, but we will not promise to send him back. He is right where he is needed most. Our Virginia friends must not try to keep all the good things. They have plenty of good preachers left, and they must not grudge us the few that we get in the west. This is the only kind that can accomplish any good here, and the souls of the western pioneers need saving as much as those in Richmond. We rejoice that our friend promises to get some subscribers for the METHODIST in Richmond, and we hope that it will awaken such an interest there in regard to our work in this great Northwest that next fall Virginia will send us half a dozen more such preachers as our Brother Waggoner.

We rejoice at these ties that are increasing and strengthening, and drawing the hearts of our people in the far East and South closer to us and enlisting their prayers for us. It is just what we have needed for a long time. God is in it all. The leaven is working. The fire is burning. The same spirit that strengthened and inspired our fathers to plant Methodism on the James river and along the Alleghenies a hundred years ago is strangely warming and stirring the hearts of their successors who are to-day planting it on the head-waters of the Missouri and the Columbia, in the Rocky Mountains, in the Couer d'Alenes, in the Cascades and along the Pacific coast.

FROM CIRCLEVILLE, KANSAS.

Dear "Montana Methodist":

As we all like you so much, I thought I would contribute a few lines to your columns. We are having genuine March weather now, and every one who has visited Kansas at this time of the year knows what that means—changeable, cold and blustery. We had quite a snowstorm on the 7th, inst. It was what we would call a regular blizzard, though I hardly think our blizzards are anything to compare in severity with those you have in Montana. But this is a lovely day; the sun is bright and warm, and the wind is from the south.

Brother John Faubian has been holding a series of meetings at the Lone Vale school house in our neighborhood. His excellent sermons have made a good impression upon the people, especially the young men. Some of them have resolved not to swear or drink again, and if they keep their promise, and the meeting accomplishes no more, that of itself will be very good. Bro. F. was called home by the illness of his family at almost the beginning of his meeting. He expects to return again and continue the good work. Papa says that Bro. Faubian was a good preacher when he entered the ministry, and that he improves all the time. We all like him very much.

This is my first letter to a paper. I hope you will overlook some of the mistakes and not throw it into the waste basket. BESSIE STANLEY.

FROM CHATANOOGA, TENN.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

Your paper, the bright little METHODIST, has been coming two years to my address. I have enjoyed it very much. Your "notes from the field" being of special interest. Father Stateler's letters are full of interest too. My husband and myself sojourned for a while in your state — then a Territory — and we had the pleasure of meeting the present editor at Mr. A. Collet's. I enclose two dollars to pay arrears. We wish you much success upon the tripod, and hope your paper will continue to increase in circulation and usefulness.

JENNA L. BATES.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

We remember the meeting referred to and rejoice to hear from our friends of other years and to know that they are still abounding in the work of the Lord. Our acquaintance with them was short though very pleasant. We would be glad to have an occasional note from Chatanooga—Editor.

—A private letter from Kansas says: ".....We have had a great deal of snow and rain this winter, more than usual. The best prospect for winter wheat that I ever saw in the state. Stock of all kinds is very low; corn 60 cents per bushel and hard to get at any price, and hay not to be had at any price. Times are very hard; money is scarcer, and trade of all kinds is dull."

—We desire to call the attention of our readers to those who advertise with us. None but first-class firms are allowed space in our columns. We cordially recommend those advertising in this paper as entirely worthy of your patronage.

—Please note the change of the Helena Pharmacy from 115 to 137 N. Main Street. The new quarters are more spacious and elegant and Mr. Lockwood is as smiling as ever. All of our Helena patrons, to wit: Flaherty, the Undertaker; Mares & Fisher, Butchers; Montana Shoe Co., Paynter Drug Co., I. X. L. Bazaar, Jackson's Music House, Merchants' Nat. Bank, Dr. Steele and the Belvedere House are doing well and are better prepared to serve the public than ever before. Don't forget this and that the Paynter Drug Co., has all kinds of Grass, Garden and Flower seeds.

How we are apt to Forgive.

A minister once made an effort to show one of his church-members the duty of forgiving another member who had done him a serious injury. After administering a great deal of sound advice, without producing much impression, the pastor thought he would try what virtue there might be in Scripture, and quoted the injunction: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head," to which the aggrieved brother listened without interest, until his pastor came to the "coals of fire," when his eye flashed, and he smote the table with his fist, saying: "That's it; "I'll burn him!"

In this the unforgiving man spoke openly what a great many feel in secret. We all admit that forgiveness is a beautiful thiug in theory, and still more beautiful in practice; but, after all, how hard it is really to forgive. Consciously, or unconsciously, we often wait to "get even," and then the thing is done easily and heartily. Or we wait to do our offending neighbor a "good turn," until we carry out the "burning" idea by an illustration of our own Christian magnanimity and his meanness in a way which he will remember. Or we argue ourselves into the belief that we are at liberty to wait until the offender "comes down" and asks forgiveness, which is readily granted, simply because it is our triumph and his humiliation. All these are common ways of forgiving, but does any one of them fulfil the law of Christ.

A HOLY life has a voice: it speaks when the tongue is silent, and is either a constant attraction or a perpetual reproof.—Hinton.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

True excellence or greatness is not concerned about the attent on it receives at the hands of men. It is the lack of it that causes us to worry and fret and complain of a lack of appreciation. After all that is said and done, as a rule, every man will find his level and pass for all that he is worth. When our Saviour healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, and raised the dead he charged the people that they should "tell no man," but they could not keep the secret and blazed it abroad, insomuch that the people pressed upon him to hear his words and be healed by his touch. When the disciples disputed about the chiefest place, he taught them that true greatness consists in true service, "For the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and give his life a ransom for many." Let us seek to have the mind that was in Christ. He thought it not robbery to be equal with God, yet made himself of no reputation, humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. God exalted him, and he will exalt every true follower of His to be a king and a priest unto himself. It is only a question of time. Let patience have her perfect work.

Home Sunday Schools.

We again urge upon our preachers and people the importance of organizing home Sunday-schools, or classes in homes where the inmates cannot attend Sunday School for the study of the Scriptures. There are hundreds of families all over Montana and Washington and Idaho, on stock-ranches, in the mines or lumbering camps, who go to church or Sunday School but seldom, if ever. Let the preacher hunt them up, get them to take the "Sunday School Magazine," the "Weekly Visitor" for the young people, the "Little People" for the children, and the Quarterlies for all who can study the lesson. Urge them to study God's word. We have known much good to result from this course. We know of a pastor who supplies seventy-five persons with literature, and has fifteen classes in connection with a Sunday School, where regular attendance perhaps does not exceed twenty-five. He has what he calls "Home Classes." One of them is thirty miles away. They study the lesson at home, at the same hour the school is held, send in their reports and their collections, get their papers, and their books from the library, and are quite enthusiastic over the thought that they belong to the great Sunday School army and can help something in carrying on the work. They will always bless the memory of the minister who first interested and organized them in such a work. What are rail-roads and mail-routes for? Let us use them for carrying something besides goods, garden seeds and godless literature. Make use of them to "prepare the way of the Lord," to open up a highway through these mountains for our God. There is no telling how much can be accomplished along this line by a little systematic effort, coupled with a moderate amount of enthusiasm. This will help along the line of the raising tide of religious life in the home, a subject upon which we hope to have something to say before long.

An Important Matter.

Three years ago the Montana Conference of our church constituted a fund, which is to be increased by contributions, bequests, etc., and loaned out, the proceeds to be applied to the worn-out preachers, and widows and orphans of deceased traveling preachers, who are claimants on the conference. A board of trustees was appointed and instructed to incorporate, but upon investigation it was found that the existing statutes of Montana would not permit the incorporation of the board of trustees in accordance with the plan sought to be carried out by the Conference. But the matter is in a fair way to be provided for, as the following will show:

HELENA, MONT., MARCH, 13th, 1891.

Rev. E. J. Stanley:

I have received the communication of yourself and A. C. Couey and S. B. Tabor, also a circular in reference to the incorparation of religious and benevolent societies, and have laid the matter before the code commission. We will see to it that the code provides for just what you desire in the matter. Section 574, page 806 compiled statutes of Montana, would seem to cover the case, but we will make it of wider range and more definite and certain.

Very Truly,

D. S. WADE.

Notes and Personals.

—Michael and his angels—the angels of the churches in Pendleton District East Columbia Conference, are contending with Satan, not over the body of Moses, but "for the faith once delivered to the saints," and over the bodies and souls of the brave pioneers of eastern Oregon, Idaho, and Washington, which they are seeking to rescue from the power of the prince of darkness. With what success the notes of victory and glad hallelujahs that come echoing up through the gorges and canyons of the Coeur d'Alenes will best proclaim. Those brethren are an heroic band, a Gideon's host, and they are doing a grand work. We continue to welcome them to our columns, every one of them, and bid them success in the name of the Lord of hosts.

—With the return of Spring and the busy season and the close of the regular time for holding protracted services, we hope that our brethren will not relax their efforts for the conversion of souls, in the least. Paul went from house to house, with arguments, exhortations and tears, persuading men and women to be reconciled to God. There may be some Lydia by the riverside, whose heart the Lord is just ready to open for the reception of his preached word, or some jailor in the prison, or some Zacheus in a sycamore tree, or some poor blind Bartemeus by the roadside begging, who is just waiting for you to come with the message of love and life and peace. Let the revival fire continue to burn in every heart and in every pastoral charge.

—If any of the readers of this paper know the whereabouts or post-office address of C. C. Stith, who is 49 years old and formerly followed teaming about Deer Lodge and Butte City, Montana, they will confer a great favor on his aged brother by dropping a line to the editor of this paper, or, to Nathan B. Stith, Brest, Jasper Co., Mo.

—A brother sends us quite a newsy little letter, containing many items that would be of interest to our readers, but instructs us not to use any portion of it for the columns of the METHODIST. If all were to do this, pray how would we get the news?

—When Gen. Booth formally inaugurated his scheme for evangelizing and providing for London's poor, he received letters expressing the hearty good will of his royal highness, Prince of Wales, and of her majesty, the Queen, but no subscriptions from them. Nehemiah said, when rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, "But their nobles put not their necks to the work of the Lord." There are too many who say, and do not. This is why there is so much for Gen. Booth, and others of his spirit, to do to-day.

—Those who wish to set out fruit or ornamental trees, will do well to call on, or, correspond with Burroughs and Sudden, whose advertisement is found in another column of this paper. We can vouch for the excellence of their home-grown trees, the prices are much below those, that have formerly ruled here. The proprietors are reliable Christian men.

—A gentleman just over from Helena, says that the Missoula Mercantile Company's business house at Missoula, is far in advance of any thing of the kind in Helena, and is the largest and best arranged store he ever saw.

—Our friends should not forget to call on N. B. Donley, at Missoula, for he keeps a splendid stock of goods, and is worthy of an extensive patronage.

— A gentleman remarked to us recently, that he frequently looks through the advertisements in the METHODIST just to see who patronizes the paper. The same man wished to invest in real estate in a certain locality, and by means of a card in our advertising columns, he opened up correspondence with a real estate firm that may result in a business transaction, amounting to thousands of dollars. Let our business men make a note of this. Our paper is read and patronized by people that it is worth while to know and deal with.

—Brother Abram Collet, one of the substantial members of our church in Helena, spent a couple of days with us about the first of the month. He was one of the first men that we got acquainted with in Helena twenty years ago, and many scores of times have we been refreshed and entertained under his hospitable roof. His house has ever been the itinerant's home. It was a real pleasure to have him under our roof and to talk over the trials and triumphs of the past. He and Sister Collet think some of purchasing a ranch in the Bitter Root Valley.

We deeply sympathize with our Brother, Rev. I. B. Price, in the sore bereavement that has come to him by the death of his father. We know something of the bitterness of the cup, for we gave up a mother while traveling our first circuit in Montana. Though earth will be darker now, heaven will be more real than ever before, and the memory of that father, and the thought that he is safe at home, will comfort, strengthen, and cheer the "preacher boy" in many a dark and trying hour and help to prepare him for the work that God has given him to do While it is hard to give up our loved ones, yet we have a strong consolation who have fled to Christ for refuge.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Bishop Haygood says that throat trouble had nothing to do with his going to California, that he has been preaching "go" all his life, and he thinks it about time he was "going." We admire the spirit in which he goes, and cordially welcome him to the West. We shall expect to see him up among the mountains of Montana before long, as also our dearly beloved Bishop Fitzgerald from San Francisco. The presence of these two men on the Pacific coast will greatly strengthen our cause there.

—The MONTANA METHODIST was never as prosperous as at present, and there is every reason why our friends should do all they can to increase its circulation and extend its influence.

—Rev. F. F. St. Clair, that aggressive and successful Itinerant of the Big Bend country, writes, April 1st, that he has been prostrated recently with nervousness, and is now at Spokane Falls consulting a physician and recuperating for the summer campaign. He sends a handsome list of subscribers for the METHODIST, and adds, "Still there's more to follow." We trust that our brother's health will soon be fully restored, and that the summer campaign may be even grander in its results than the winter one has been, and that is saying a good deal. The stirring words and splendid reports from Big Bend have greatly refreshed our hearts on this side of the mountains. We greatly desire to be at that camp-meeting, but fear that duties nearer home at that time will prevent our attendance. May the cause of our Master triumph gloriously.

—Rev. E. L. Lee writes that La Grippe has been very prevalent in Flathead Valley—fully one-half of the people have had it. It was in an aggravated form, and some cases proved fatal. Spring is at hand. He hopes to hold a protracted meeting as soon as it will be practicable to occupy the new church at Demersville. We are glad to know that Sister Lee has recovered from her illness.

—Rev. J. B. Parnall and wife cheered the MONTANA METHODIST sanctum with the light of their sunny faces quite recently. They are always welcome visitors.

—"Rev. H. A. Bomland, formerly of the Mission Conference," as the types had it in our last issue, should read "Rev. H. A. Bourland, formerly of the Missouri Conference."

—We have a letter from Mrs. J. W. Compton, widow of the Rev. J. W. Compton, late of the Pacific Conference, in which she expresses her appreciation of the MONTANA METHODIST, and expresses the hope that it will continue to live and prosper. Her heart is strangely drawn to the country, even to the particular home (White Hall) from which her gifted son was taken by a mysterious providence four years ago next fall, and she cherishes with fondness the names of those who ministered last on earth to the wants of her darling boy.

—MARRIED —March 12th, 1891, at the residence of the bride's parents, in Bozeman, Mont., by Rev. W. T. Goulder, Mr. Horatio S. Corbly and Miss Rosa Sparlin.

—The editor is able to be about, but both he and his wife recover slowly from the effects of the Grippe. We are very grateful to our brother, J. B. Parnall, for the efficient aid rendered in bringing out the last issue of the paper. Doubtless our readers enjoyed the change. Bro. Parnall is a pithy writer who says what he means and means what he says.

—Brother J. H. Snow writes from Stewartsville, Mo., renewing his subscription to the METHODIST, and adds, "I read many Methodist papers, but none interest me more than yours. We appreciate such kind and cheering words, and trust that in the resurrection morn our brother shall have a robe white and pure as that which his name suggests."

—We rejoice to welcome that faithful steward, who rode so far on horseback to attend Bro. St. Clair's Quarterly Meeting, as a subscriber to the MONTANA METHODIST. He shows his faith by his works. The taking of a church paper will help him to help the church and be useful. The Lord bless him and all such.

—Bishop Hendrix has an admirable article in the NEW YORK INDEPENDENT, giving an account of the M. E. Church, South. It is written in the Bishop's best style and will do much good. We are sorry that we cannot copy it for the benefit of our readers.

—o—

Bro. Pepper, of the Christian Standard, gives some good advice to his contributors that may well be heeded by all who have occasion to write for the press. We commend the following paragraph to "all whom it may concern"—and it "concerns" more writers than most people (out of an editor's office) would imagine: "Boil down. Paragraph. Punctuate. Cross your t's. Dot your i's. Write with ink. Read all over half a dozen times. Correct as you read every time. Write only on one side of the sheet. After all corrections, rewrite, so that the printer can read it without wasting an hour. If you don't care to take so much trouble, throw it in your own waste bas ket."

Notes from Bozeman.

Perhaps the readers of the METHODIST would like to hear something of the good work going on in this place, through the faithful and earnest labors and teachings of our esteemed pastor, Bro. Goulder.

The congregations are good and a greater interest is being manifested. The good seed sown here has not been in vain, while some has "fallen by the way side" "and some in thorny places," yet some has fallen in "good ground" and has taken deep root in the hearts of the people. Nine persons have been received into the church since District Conference, four on profession of faith and five by letter.

We have a very interesting Sabbath School, with an average attendance of fifty. Our Young People's League, organized a few months ago, is doing nicely, we have about fifteen members, and new ones are added at each meeting.

The devotional meeting should be made the principal one of the League. Much good can come of these meetings, and souls may be saved, if we do our part. Already three young persons who were members of the League, have "come out on the Lord's side" and united with the church.

We have also a children's missionary society known as "Little Workers" organized some time in January with twenty-eight members. Since that time, the membership has nearly, if not quite, doubled that number, and they are working for the missions they represent.

There is a work for us all to do, then let us be up and doing, and—

"Work, for the night is coming,
When man's work is done."

GOD'S GRACE.

My grace is sufficient for thee—2. Cor. 12: 9.

How God's promises fit into and fill every need of man! Water for the thirsty soul, sandals for the rocky path, stars for the night-watches, and a staff for Death's valley. "My Grace is sufficient."—A Christian home is gladdened by the gift of a son. Another Abraham rejoices, and another Sarah "laughs." Affection's tendrils, in fond close-clingings, encircle that boy. The earthly hopes of father and mother are centered in him. They picture him growing up a support and solace to them, an ornament to the community and a blessing to the Church of God. Prophesies of happiness and usefulness gild, as a sun-track, the path of his future. Fifteen years pass away swiftly, joyously. A stalwart lad, supple of form, bright of mind and pure of heart, stands before his parents—their pride, their joy, their comfort, their stay. His feet swift on willing errands speed—his hands are deft to lift the burden from mother or father. Suddenly!——the more crushing from its suddenness — the bolt falls, and that boy is laid on a bed of affliction! Disease takes hold upon him, and a helpless cripple, he walks no more. How bitter the cup! — yet in it "the sweetening branch!" How grievous the burden, yet "underneath the everlasting arms!" Is God's grace sufficient now for parents? sufficient now for poor, crippled boy? Let us see. For five long years he has not walked a step! The pastor visits the house. The father comes into the parlor and says, "I want you to go in and see our boy—I thought at first his affliction would kill me, but God knew best, and my child has been more of a blessing to me since afflicted than ever before. His patient suffering is a sermon every day, and his cheerful smile is the light of the home. I thank God for His goodness and His grace." The mother enters just then and says, while the tear glistens, as it will in mothers' eyes, "He is more comfort to me than anything else, except my religion, and he shows me every day how much religion is worth." The pastor enters the sick-chamber—the crippled boy—an angel spirit in a tortured body—reaches out a wan hand and with a smile illumining his face says, "I am so glad to see you." Glad am I to see you," replied the minister, "but sorry to find you so afflicted." Quickly comes the answer, "That's all right—Jesus and I settled that long ago. I can now say 'it is good for me that I have been afflicted.' I just lie here and think about God and his goodness, about Jesus and His love until sometimes I have to shout aloud. Besides, brother, this isn't going to last forever—up yonder I'll move about, doing God's will as swiftly as any angel."

A pleasant, hallowed hour was spent—prayer was offered, fervent "Amens" came from the couch. As the prayer ascended there was a "light on the face"—Christ within—the hope of glory shining through. God's grace was sufficient for afflicted youth. How about feeble, old age? We'll see. An old man, weak, weary, worn and helpless sits before his fire. Eighty-and-five years have bowed his shoulders, and left their frosts upon the scant locks that hang about his temples! Erect, with nobility stamped upon every inch of him, he had once walked before his people—their social and religious leader. Affluence had been his. An unsullied name he bore. High endowments of mind and heart had God given him, and as a Local Preacher his fame had gone abroad. Campmeetings sought him for Sunday hours. Stately periods, garlanded with choicest flowers of rhetoric, had issued from his lips, and the lightening flash of his eagle eye had brightened and heightened even the eloquence of his speech! How changed! Friends of his youth, and children of his home nearly all gone. Old age and feebleness—extremes are upon him. To him, also, the minister of God pays a visit. After a cordial welcome and a few minutes pleasant conversation, the question was asked, "Brother, do you not sometimes wish for the return of the old days when you were young and strong?" "No," answers the grand old man, "I am past that milestone in my Christian experience. I love God well enough to be satisfied where He puts me. I have served him through a long life. He has been everything to me, and has never failed me for an hour. In my first childhood I learned to love and trust Him, and now in my second childhood I am not going to begin to quarrel with my heavenly Father." A moment's silence, and then almost as if talking with himself, he resumed, "I have outlived all who started with me. I know more people in Heaven than I do on earth. My sun is nearly down, and if my ears were not so dull, I think sometimes

I could hear the rolling of the last river—I'll soon reach it—it matters not when, for surely the Pilot of the Gallilean lake will be there. Glory be to God, for such a Saviour, and a heavenly home almost in sight!" The quivering voice took something of its old triumphant tone and the eye flashed with some of the old-time fire. God's grace was sufficient—Aye, and is sufficient for every want, and sorrow, and trial, and age, and times and place of man. Let us learn the lesson.

The above are not fancy sketches but true incidents that occurred in a single day's pastoral work when the writer was a "boy preacher."

THE MAN OF GALILEE.

BY ATTICUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D.

A Book for the times and for the People.

"There is little danger that any intelligent reader, after taking it up, will lay it down without finishing it."—Bishop Fitzgerald.

"The best book yet published with which to counteract the teachings of Ingersoll and his kind."—Dr. Potter, Georgia.

We have read all the books about Christ that we could get hold of, and we hesitate not to say that this is, to us, the most satisfactory of them all. It is the smallest in size of them all, and the greatest of all in matter."—Dr. C. W. Carter, New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"A work of genius that will live in freshness and power long after the author has passed away from among men."—Dr. Cunningham, Sunday School Editor.

"Meets the unbeliever on his own ground. It assumes nothing, but the argument is as complete as it is possible for human thought and language to make it."—Dr. Lafferty, Virginia.

"One of the strongest and most original arguments on the divinity of Christ it has ever been our pleasure to read."—Dr. Kirkland, Southern Christian Advocate.

"I have read all the books about Him from Fleetwood down. 'The Man of Galilee' is the best."—Rev.. R. G. Porter ("Gilderoy").

Northwest Border Notes.

SPOKANE DISTRICT.

Dear Brother:—A brief note I will now send. I have just started on "Third round" on the District. Although my health had been so poor for several months before Conference: I have been enabled, through God's abounding grace, to complete two rounds on the District without missing but one appointment. I am very grateful that the prevailing "grip" has almost loosed its hold on me, after "suppressing" me for more than three weeks.

Our District seems to be getting on well in every line and at almost every point. The preachers are at work, except one or two who have literally worked themselves down, and ought to rest for a month or two, if it could be. With two exceptions, every charge has been blessed with revivals, and some of them attended with most gracious results, extending throughout the charge. Scores have been converted, one hundred and sixty have been added to the church, an increase of forty four per cent in the six months. the battle is still in progress at some points, and the revival fires are still burning, and, we believe, spreading. We hope to see the whole District blazing with revival fire before Conference. We must see it, or fail in our mission as a church.

There is improvement in the finances on most of the charges, although some of our preachers are still doing much work and receiving small pay. But there is large room for greater improvement, which we believe is coming soon. Collections for the connectional claims are coming in slowly. The preachers who began early on these, have them well in hand. (One Bro. has most of his claims "overflowing" already.)

Others are way behind. I believe our brethren are not going to spoil the fine record we made last year. Every claim, I trust, will be brought up in full.

We have started in for a good record on church-building. Five of our charges are planning and working for a church to be built in their respective bounds. Some of them we confidently expect to see completed before next Conference. The good Spirit is stirring the hearts of some of our people on this subject, and some of the preachers are "pressing" this very important move, thus "rooting" our church to the soil to stay and to grow. Alas! how many promising societies have died for the want of simply being rooted in the soil. But, the Lord be praised, a better day is breaking all through the great west. The church-building era is opening upon us.

—Things that make the preachers heart-sick in a Revival effort:

Members for whom the world justly has a contempt.

Members that have to be bagged to do their duty.

Members that will sit back and say "now we will see what this preacher can do."

Members that become stubborn and will not commit themselves fully to the work in hand.

Members that are just beginning to wake up when the meeting is ready to close.

Members that have quarrelled with the sinners, or with one another.

Members that live in such a way during the year that their professions of interest in sinners and of devotion to God is generally believed to be false, when made in the prostracted meeting.

Members that persistently refuse to pray in the altar services though often called upon to do so.

SIXTY YEARS ON THE BORDER—LIFE AMONG THE INDIANS.

L. B. STATELER.

After the tragedy described in our last paper, there was another company of our Indians went out in a different direction—to the country inhabited by the Sioux. They had not been long out, having reached the trapping ground for beaver, when they were discovered by the murderous Sioux. They had their beaver traps set and their tents stretched, when two of their number, who were brothers and sons of the Christian Chief who lived near the mission, went to look at the traps, which were set along in the bend of the creek. While they were in there, the Sioux appeared in the narrow neck of land, thus hemming them in, and opened a deadly fire upon them. The men at the camp heard the firing, hurried to the scene, but were too late, alas, to do any good. They found their comrades lying dead on the ground with their scalps taken off, and saw the savages who had committed the bloody deed disappearing behind the neighboring hills. They then gathered up their effects hastily, and leaving their dead behind, mounted their ponies and started homeward, travelling all night to get out of reach of their enemies.

And so it has ever been with the fated Indian race. They have been fighting and devouring one another from the time they were first found on our eastern shore until the present.

The Indian is as susceptible of the Gospel as the white man when he is stationary, and has a home. There is abundant proof of this, and it is as easy to convert him as to convert the white man, other things being equal, and when an Indian is truly converted to God I think we may safely say that he is as stable and firm as his white brother, or, if there is any difference, he is more so, for he is sincere and earnest in his profession.

There is a peculiarity about Indian worship that is highly commendable. When they assemble at church they go in a quiet and orderly way, and without stopping outside to converse, they pass on and take their seats as if in deep meditation. You seldom hear a word spoken in church by them, though they may have to sit there for many minutes before the service begins.

They usually all join in singing in their native tongue, and at the close of the opening hymn, when the minister kneels, the congregation usually—almost universally—kneels with him. And though they are not usually demonstrative, yet you will see their lips moving and hear many prayers uttered in whispers only, going up from devout worshippers to God. They are, as a rule, more attentive to the appointed times of religious worship than their white brothers. When an Indian is happy he is not ashamed to express his gratitude to God, his tears, possibly, expressing more than his tongue. Yet I have often known them to shout the praises of God in most rapturous strains.

It is customary for them when they assemble together for prayer meetings, which they hold very regularly, to call upon every brother and sister to lead in prayer. For they seem to conclude that every Christian man and woman is ready to offer prayer in the public congregation.

I have often been with them when they were near the dying hour, and conversed with them in regard to their prospect on the other shore. In the most trusting manner they expressed themselves with readiness and clearness that removed all doubt in regard to their future happiness, so much so, that one would often be impressed with the beauty and force of that verse contained in one of our hymns:

"Life's duties done, as sinks the clay,
Free from its load, the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth conspire to say,
How blest the righteous when he dies."

In regard to the support of the Gospel, the Indians among whom we labored being generally very poor, there was little or nothing done in the way of taking up collections for the missionaries who were sent out among them. But we adopted the following plan:

We told them that while nothing was asked for the resident missionaries among them, yet they ought to feel a concern for those who were without the Gospel, and contribute of their means for the purpose of sending it hither, stating that we thought each one ought to give at least five cents monthly, and some of them ten cents. A sealed box was prepared, with a little opening just large enough for the deposit of their gifts, and placed in the hands of a member of the society who was reckoned as treasurer. The people were instructed to bring their offerings on the first Sunday of each month, when the box was always in readiness. At the end of the Conference year the "Treasurer Box"—for that is what we called it—was opened, and the money was counted, and the amount reported and credited to the church or society that gave it. The people gave with promptness and regularity. They seemed to think it was a privilege to give, and thus help to provide others with that Word of Life that had done so much for them. The amounts raised usually averaged from twenty to thirty dollars on each charge for the missionary cause, annually.

OUR NORTHWESTERN WORK.

Who can read the reports in this issue of the METHODIST by Brother Swift from Spokane District, by Bro. St. Clair, from Big Bend; Bros. Price from Helena, Goulder from Bozeman, Couey from Helena District, and other brethren from other parts of the field, and not be impressed with the importance of our work in the Northwest, and not rejoice at the wonderful prosperity that is attending the labors of our preachers throughout this vast field?

For several years the church at home has been gradually waking up to the importance of doing more for the West, though but little attention was given to that portion of it included in The Northwest. This writer remembers very well the time, and it was not a dozen of years ago either when some of those high in authority seriously entertained the thought of leaving the Northwest for others to cultivate and devoting their efforts principally to a more Southern clime. It was thought to be for the best, though there were a few who viewed it as differently, and prayed that this counsel might not prevail. Now, strange to tell, that portion of the field that was thought to be least promising is yielding the richest harvest of all, in proportion to the labor bestowed. The very mountains that were considered barren and impassible are resounding with the notes of prayer and praise by those who have been converted to God. The wilderness and the solitary places are being made glad, and the desert rejoices and blossoms as the rose. This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes. Man proposes, but God disposes. He works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. A brother pronounces this work phenomenal. An increase of from 20 to 50 per cent. in six months in the M. E. Church, South, right next to the British line and in the same latitude with the State of Maine, far north of Boston, is surely remarkable.

There are several ways in which this may be accounted for, a few of which we will mention.

1st. The increased provision made for this field by the Board of Missions last May. This was a publication to the world that our work here was no longer an experiment, but wos a fixture, and that the church at home proposed to take hold of it and prosecute it vigorously. It inspired confidence both in our preachers, our members and our friends in the field, and in the church at home. It provided for an increase of efficient laborers and gave assurance that they would be cared for, and that the fruit of their labors would be husbanded. It brought the entire work into closer sympathy where it could feel the thrill of the warm fresh life from the mother's great loving heart, which seemed to pulsate strongly through the wise counsels and tender, loving and hopeful words of Bishop Hendrix and Dr. J. C. Morris at the last sessions of our Northwestern Conferences.

2nd. The self-denying labors of consecrated men, with the co-operation of earnest and praying people, and all baptized by the Holy Spirit, is the chief factor in the work. Without this all the rest would be worse than vanity. How we were stirred by St. Clair's proposition to give up his own claim for assistance from the Board, and look to the people alone for his support, that another man might be added to the list of workers, and the people more fully supplied with the preached word. This has been done in Montana more than once. It is the spirit that will take this country, take any country, for Christ. We do not ignore the importance of making provision for the support of our preachers and their families, but so long as easy places and good salaries are the prominent factors in the mind, the preacher, likely, will be shorn of his strength. There must be men among us who say, come what will, survive or perish, sink or swim, live or die, by the help of God, this work has got to be sustained, carried forward. This is the spirit that has made the conquests for Methodism in the past and that will carry her banners to the uttermost parts of the earth. Thank God that we have got it among us in the Northwest, and we pray that it will never depart.

3rd. People who knew but little about us before, upon becoming better acquainted with our history and the principles and spirit of our church, when they see that, of a truth, God is with us, and that we are here to stay with them, they fall in love and become identified with us.

4th. There is another item that I wish to mention. The wonderful resources of our portion of the country, their extent and variety, giving employment to such a vast number of people, together with the mildness of our climate, which is modified by the warm currents from the Pacific ocean, and extend far into Montana, making this a most desirable region to dwell in, and the country, giving promise of such great development in the near future—all this has caused a wonderful influx of population, quickening everything into new life. Our church is mingling its life with that of the people and sharing in the general prosperity. It is a noteworthy fact, however, that a great proportion of our increase is by conversions from the world. We rejoice at this, for it shows that we preach a Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation.

It is well for the church at large to make a note of the promise of development that there is in the Northwest. For a long time it was that the great thoroughfare of the continent and of the world would be away South by Salt Lake and San Francisco. Hence the first Pacific railroad was built there. This was then considered a bleak, barren region. But now it is found that along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad there is less snow in winter in the mountains than there is farther south; there are deposits of mineral that are astonishing the world in extent and richness, and pastoral, and agricultural and lumbering resources that were not dreamed of a few years ago, together with a mild climate that is surprising to all who come. Puget Sound is one of the finest and most extensive harbors in the world, and besides it is right on a line with China and Japan, saving many hundred miles in the voyage from China, thus offering great inducements for the through traffic of the world. In a short time there will be three or four Pacific lines of railroad, belting our mountains with ribands of iron, and carrying the world's commerce right by our doors. Already the people are here by the hundreds of thousands, and still they come, from China and Japan, from the islands of the sea, from every country and clime, with every form of belief and practice under the shining sun. This vast population, in time, will become one of intelligence and enterprise and thrift. It is now in the formative period, taking on the type that will carry for many years in the future. The church that becomes domiciled in this mass of human life will wield a wonderful influence upon the generations to come. Now is our opportunity. The Macedonian cry comes up from cities and towns and country places all along the line from Eastern Montana to Puget Sound. "Come and help us. Why don't you send us preachers?" The echo answers back: Why? Would to God that it could be made to ring in every conscience in our great church. "Why?"

We believe in foreign missions, heart and soul, but we verily believe that the church should do more to meet the demands upon it in supplying the people of our own land with the Gospel and the means of grace. By planting our church firmly in the West we are helping to plant it in foreign lands, we are helping to convert the wealth of this land and turn it into service for God. Then, foreigners who come to our Western shores judge of Christianity by what they see of here. Hence the importance of having strong and well sustained churches with a heathy, robust Christian life along our Western and Northwestern frontier.

The Missionary Board of the M. E. Church, North, spends about four dollars in the home field to five in the foreign. We believe it would be better for both the home and foreign fields of our own church if at least one hundred thousand of the three hundred thousand dollars appropriated by our board were appropriated to our home fields, and largely to our Western frontier, for here the great battle is to be fought, is being fought now, that is to decide in a measure the future type of religion and of our civilization in this great country. Let us go up and possess the land, for we are able.

THOMPSON KEMPER.

We had expected a fuller account of the particulars of the last illness and decease of that venerable servant of God—Thompson Kemper, whose departure is chronicled by Brother Couey in another column. We cannot refrain from saying some things concerning the character and career of our departed Brother. We knew him long and we knew him well. He was a native of Kentucky, but married in Virginia, and afterwards emigrated to Missouri. At the out-set of the civil war he was merchandising in Doniphan County, Kansas. He was a harmless man, and sought to promote peace wherever he lived, but because his views did not fully harmonize with the majority of those around him he was ostracised, robbed of his goods and constrained to seek a home for his family under the friendly shadow of the great Rocky Mountains. He lived in Colorado for awhile, and moved with his family to Montana in 1871, settled in Missouri Valley, near where Townsend now stands, and afterward removed to Butte City, where his two sons, William and Simeon, had been fortunate in securing valuable real estate, where his last days were spent in peace and comfort, and from which home he so recently passed in peaceful triumph to the one beyond the tide.

Brother Kemper was raised up in the Baptist faith, but upon hearing the Methodist doctrine he accepted it most heartily, and joined the Methodist Church, of which he remained a consistent and devoted member until death. He believed strongly in the great principles held by the M. E. Church, South, and adhered to them through all the dark days when men were tried as by fire for so doing.

The church roll at Butte was not the only one in which Father Kemper's name stood first. We have heard the people and preachers in Kansas speak most kindly and tenderly of their association with him in church work there. He and his family formed the nucleus of a once prosperous church, the first that was ever organized in Missouri Valley. His house was the preacher's home, where he always found a hearty welcome by day or by night, a seat at the table and a place to lay his head, whether the home was in Kansas, in Colorado or in Montana. He loved the Church of God, always inquired how the work was progressing, and rejoiced at the conversion of souls and the prosperity of Zion. His name headed the list of lay-delegates to the first session of the Montana Conference, and he continued to be elected a member of that body as long as health and strength permitted his regular attendance. Our church in Montana owes much to the fidelity and liberality of Brother Kemper, and that of his devoted and faithful wife, the companion of his bosom through a long and eventful career, and to their family. There is scarcely a preacher of our church in Montana who has not sat at their table and had his faith strengthened and his soul refreshed as he worshiped at their home altar. Father Kemper was a modest, unpretentious man, but one who won the esteem and confidence of all. We never heard a word said against him. He was not demonstrative, but we rejoice to know that in his last hours his soul rested with child-like simplicity in the promises of God. He was gathered as a ripe shock of corn into the heavenly garner. He leaves a wife and three sons, William, Watson and Simeon. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from hence forth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Board of Missions.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Missions, as provided for in the Missionary Manual, will begin "on Friday after the first Wednesday in the month of May."

This year it will meet in Wilmington, N. C., May 8th.

It is desired that all the members of the Board should reach Wilmington by the evening of the 7th, to participate in the services for which our friends are preparing.

It Never Would Do.

After discussing the question of the admission of woman into the General Conference upon its merits, using the most powerful arguments that could be drawn from the Scriptures and from the nature of things—and they are strong—and fearing that the battle will still go against him, Dr. Buckley, of the New York Advocate, as a last resort, throws himself into the breach and sounds a note of warning in an article headed, "The Probable Consequences." After declaring that the "M. E. Church, South, is today, and has been for some years, making much greater progress numerically in the ratio of its membership than we," he says, "We are the same in doctrines, and with two or three exceptions, in usages"—he admits the difference between the two churches on the Episcopacy, which was one of the chief causes of the division in 1844.—That Church comes up to our borders in Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, Maryland and Missouri. It has many churches in California and on the Pacific Coast, and in Maryland and Virginia and West Virginia. Two of its most distinguished Bishops will hereafter reside on the Pacific Coast.

If we take a step which allies our Church with all the radical movements of the age concerning women it it will place a lever in the hands of that Church which will make our further progress among the whites of the South impossible, and greatly increasing the tendency of the Northerners removing there to join that Church. More than that, it will justify it in the most strenous efforts to prevent our progress there, and to extend itself in all the border States; and if it were to eliminate its sectional surname and advance northward it would have an issue which in the plane of argument could not be answered.

If it were to say: We adopted the principle of a division of territory, as far as compatible with existing interests, on the ground that we represented a common Methodism; but you have repudiated our common traditional interpretation of the Scriptures; you have adopted principles concerning women that we believe will revolutionize society and reconstruct it on infidel principles. We are, therefore, called upon to give those who would still be Methodist Episcopalians, and cannot remain with you, an opportunity as far as possible to do so."

Our firm conviction is that if that Church should take such a ground its position would be unanswerable, and that in the border States—and no one can tell how much further—it would make decided progress."

There is much truth in the above. Such a radical course as that threatened by the M. E. Church would naturally demand the presence of a Church holding to the correct Scriptural teaching and the time-honored principles of Episcopal Methodism. But we apprehend the measure will not prevail.

With deep sorrow we record the death of Rev. John E. Edwards, of the Virginia Conference, at Lynchburg, Va., the 31st of March. He had been a pastor in the Methodist Church for sixty consecutive years. He was a man of great activity and force of character. As a writer on all subjects, he was well-known throughout the Church. We never can forget his earnest speeches at the Centennial Conference in '84, and at the last General Conference in St. Louis.

Missoula District Conference.

The Missoula District Conference will convene in the M. E. Church, South, at Stevensville, on Thursday, the 14th of May, at 9:30 a. m. The opening sermon will be preached on Wednesday evening, May 13th, at 8:00 o'clock. All the members of the Quarterly Conference are members of the District Conference. The session will continue until Saturday, and our brethren from a distance will please come prepared to remain over Sunday. Let there be a general attendance of the people in and about Stevensville. The preachers will report their labors during the year, and subjects of vital importance will be discussed. A number of preachers are expected to be present. Prominence will be given to religious services. A cordial invitation is hereby extended to our brethren of the Helena District to attend and remain with us over Sunday. Let us pray for and expect a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Let all who expect to attend notify our pastor, Rev. J. B. Parnall, at Stevensville, so that entertainment will be provided. There will be ample accommodations for all. Let every body come. E. J. Stanley, P. E.

READ BY R. S. CLARK AT THE HELENA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Two facts noticeable in the history of all people are, that the highest and best interests of man are only secured to him when he himself is permanently settled, and these interests domiciled also, and thus made local and prominent. Local and special attention, it is seen through the ages of the past, are indispensably necessary for the security and development of the more important interests of the human race. The nomadic tribes of the human family have never, in any age of the world, made any advancement in an intelligent civilization. With such peoples no traces even of a semi-civilization are to be found. Heathenism and barbarism prevailed among them in their crude forms until they themselves became anchored to the soil, and thus give life a local and more special importance. Not until Israel became a people and were settled in the promised land, did the promise to Abraham, that his seed in all nations of the earth should be blessed, begin to assume religious importance in the social and practical conditions of human life. And we see that this people entered upon its distinguished career of enriching the religious thought and life of the world when the faith of Abraham, that appropriated to his spiritual needs the promise that "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," found expression in forms of divine worship in places that were provided and set apart therefor. The Ark of the Covenant and its tabernacle service, followed by the magnificent temple that adorned the summit of Mount Moriah, in the progressive history of this people, were powerful factors in developing in them the idea and life of Abraham's religion. Having thus become identified with God's Kingdom, they become His peculiar people to whom He committed His oracles, and gave His promises, and revealed His plan to save the world through His Son. The glory of God was poised above the tabernacle, and was seen above the cherubims where He could be approached in all the interests of His chosen people. And when His temple was built and dedicated to His service, His glory filled it, as it never filled any other house or place, for it was the glory of His reconciled presence among men. A throne of divine grace where audience might be had with Him in the wants of man. There was nothing in the Mosaic economy that contributed so largely to make Israel indissolubly one than did the temple and its divine service. In his exile the Jew did not forget the temple. Daniel, the prime minister of the Babylonian government, we see, opened his window toward Jerusalem where the temple of God's presence was, and prayed to Him. And, to-day, if this people had possession of Palestine, the first thing that would receive their united effort would be the re-building of the temple on Mount Moriah, where they could worship the God of their Fathers according to their ritual. We see that this civilization, the most intelligent, the most wealthy in means and appliances to meet human wants and develop human faculties, that the world has ever seen, and that had its practical institution with the Jews when they became possessed of the land of promise, where their religion became a domiciled institution; has come down through the ages blessing each successive generation where it has come, that have met the two conditions above mentioned, and them only. And it has come to us upon the same condition, and in the same ratio that we meet them, other things being equal, will its blessings be secured to us, as a people. The Pilgrim fathers when they reached this undeveloped country, built for themselves houses, as Solomon did, and then built God's house, and thus commenced with God's presence and blessings, to develop its vast resources in the best interests of our humanity. While the roving tribes of men that inhabited it, in great numbers, from shore to shore, and who saw nothing in it beyond its nature-provided means of sustenance, vanished before their advancing settlements like vapor before the rising sun. While it is true that this people, who were thus intrusted with the Christian civilization on this continent, did not always, in their advancements towards its western shore, build for themselves houses to live in, and then build for God a house; but there have been Nehemiahs at every point of their advance, who with true Israelitish zeal for the habitation of God among men pressed to the front, and built for Him houses where His worship could be had, and His blessings secured to the people. In more modern times the pioneer movement of this people, especially in the West, are characterized, in many instances, by the people building for themselves houses, and then building for the devil houses, (saloons) where he can carry on his work of human destruction in advance of counteracting agents. But the unconquerable zeal of the modern Nehemiahs, that has come down to us through this wonderful homogeneous system of God's grace to men, impels them to fight their way, if need be, to these advanced settlements, where God and His religion have not been domiciled among the people, as regenerating, developing, controlling and saving powers, and build for them houses where these interests may receive special attention. The churches of the land seeing the importance of this work at weak points, and on the frontier, have organized Church Extension Boards to look specially after these interests, helping those who are struggling in this work against odds too great for them to overcome. And we rejoice to know that the M. E. Church, South, is alive to this important interest. Her Board of Church Extension has become a power in her economy in establishing and advancing her cause.

THE BIBLE BETTER THAN PISTOLS.

"OLD DAVID" is an aged citizen of Western North Carolina. Fifteen years ago he determined to travel through the trackless wilds ef the great and sparsely-inhabited West. His route lay along the borders of Missouri and Nevada, infested at that time with more numerous clans of highway robbers than at present. He knew all this very well; and, although urged by his neighbors to procure a couple of revolvers to defend nimself, he took only his pocket Bible, and armed thus, set out on the perilous journey. He had passed some of the clans on the northern border of Missouri, and was nearing the resort of one of the most formidable ones, headed by a notorious desperado, Jim Stevens, when he met a gentleman, who by some extraordinary tact had escaped the vigilant eye of the robber captain. The first question that he propounded to old David was,—

"Are you armed?"

"Yes," was the aged Christian's reply, as he produced his pocket Bible.

The gentleman, who was almost weighed down with bowie-knives and pistols, laughed outright at what he considered the old man's folly, and, with considerable ridicule in his tone, remarked,—

"If that is all the weapon you have, you had hetter be saying your prayers. The den of Jim Stevens is about ten miles farther on, just where you will get by night, and he cares a little for Bibles as a rattlesnake."

They exchanged names, and each went his own way; the one surprised at the other's apparent folly and recklessness, the other undismayed, and his faith in the protecting power of his Bible undiminished.

Night had thrown her dark mantle around the earth, and the chilling blasts had begun to pierce the somewhat feeble frame of old David, when he descried a light far down in a glen a short distance from the road. He was sure that it proceeded from a robber-den, but he must have shelter, and, impelled by almost boundless faith, he directed his course thither. He halted when within a few paces of the door, and being coursely greeted by some uncouth, meanlooking men, was invited to alight. When he entered the humble habitation he saw significant looks pass between the immates, and each chuckled to himself, and he knew that he was at the head quarters of a road-committee, among a desperate, relentless, and murderous clan of banditti. Nothing daunted, he occupied the proffered seat. Having partaken of a rough meal, which they furnished him at his request, he began conversation, which was continued till far in the night, when it was interrupted by the return of the captain, Jim Stevens, and a couple of of his comrads in crime, from a plundering raid. Stevens, advancing within a few feet of him, asked, jeeringly,—

"Old man, aren't you afraid to travel in this section among the robbers, alone and unarmed?"

"No," was old David's bold and fearless reply, as he again produced his Bible, continuing, "This is my weapon of defence, I always read a chapter, and pray too, before I retire. I know you are robbers, but I shall read and pray here tonight, and you must join with me."

The roof of the shabby hut shook with loud, taunting peals of laughter at this expression of the old man but, nothing dismayed, he began to read. Gradually all became silent, and when he knelt to pray, every knee was bowed. That was a strange sight—murderers and plunderers of their fellow-men kneeling, and attentively listening to a prayer! Long and fervently the humble servant of God prayed; nor did their interest in the solemn scene and supplication abate. When he had finished, he was conducted to a hard pallet, where he slept the livelong night undisturbed, and even free from haunting fears.

He arose very early in the morning, and read and prayed before breakfast. They refused to receive aught for his entertainment during the night, and, instead, cordially thanked him for the interest which he had manifested in their behalf. Asking for them the light of divine grace and the purification of their hearts, he bade them adieu and departed. He pressed onward, strengthened in faith and the goodness of God.

At the next settlement he learned of the death of the gentleman that he had met on the road, who ridiculed his Bible. This incident confirmed him in his belief of the superiority of the Bible as a weapon of defence.

He prosecuted his journey successfully, and soon returned safely to his home, family, and friends. Often now he gathers around him his grandchildren and the juveniles of the neighborhood, and relates to them his adventures among the robbers. With his face animated, and his eyes glowing with superhuman light, he dwells upon the prayer scene in the banditti's hut, ecstatically exclaiming, "My Bible palsied their arms, unnerved their hearts, and bowed their knees." He always concluded his relation of the adventure with the solemnly-spoken exhortation, "Children you need not fear the most perilous dangers of life, providing you are armed with the Bible, and have an abiding faith in God's power of protection."

"Flowers sweet, O, tell us truly, did He rise, the Crucified?
From the sepelchure so gloomy, came
He forth, the Lord who died?
Tell us, if we know with surety; give to us a type and sign,
From a grave may rise the living, vivified by power divine.

Robed in light, in living beauty sway we in the gentle breeze,
From an earthen grave, once buried, in the light we found release,
Of the resurrection power, speak our perfumed petals sweet,
Of a risen Saviour telling, Easter's story we repeat."

Victory complete. No gleaming sword or glistening bayonet. No thundering cannon or bloody battlefield. And yet a fierce contest, out of which Heaven's fairest, the earth-born Son, though seemingly vanquished, came forth a Conquerer. Death lost its sting—the grave its victory.

The Lamp and the Light-House.

A Scotch fisherman, while out one night in his smack, was overtaken by a terrible storm He could not tell where he was, or how to find his way to the landing place. At length his son caught sight of a small light glimmering through the wild darkness. He set sail toward the light, and soon found himself right before his own cottage, which stood on a cliff above the sea.

When he got home he found that his little boy had set the lamp in an upper window, by whose light both father and brother had been saved from shipwreck.

Every stormy night afterward that same lamp was set in the window to guide other fisherman who might be out in the thick darkness. By and by it was determined to build a light-house on the cliff. And the big blazing burner grew out of the little boy's lamp.

A poor child in Philadelphia, the daughter of a very poor widow, died a year or two ago. During her long sickness her heart was full of peace and the sweet love of the Saviour.

Jnst before she died she put into the hands of her minister a small paper box that had contained some of her medicine. In the box were fifty-three cent pieces, which she had been saving up for a long time, and she had earned each piece by hard work. She said to her minister:

"After I am dead I want you to take this money and build with it a church for the poor people in the neighborhood."

The minister could not keep back his tears as the box was given to him; and I could not either, when I saw it last summer.

The minister took the box of coins and showed it to a rich lumber merchant, who never cared anything about religion. The merchant at once offered to give lumber for building the church. Other people who saw the box and heard its touching history gave money, and very soon the pretty mission church will be finished. The poor Christian child's lamp will grow into a large light-house to guide many souls to heaven.

No person can tell how much good may come from loving, yet apparently insignificant acts. The lamp they light, even if it is small, may grow into a light-house and shine long after they are dead.

LIKE CHRIST.

He who would be most like Christ must pay the cost. If a furnace is needed to purify and brighten you, do not shirk the furnace. Patience is an admirable grace; but it is not oftenest worn by those who walk on the sunny side of the street in silver slippers. It is usually the products of head winds and hard fights; of crosses carried and of steep hills climbed on the road to heaven. "The trial of your faith worketh patience." So it is with all the noblest traits of a robust, healthy and symmetrical character. No man is rocked into godliness in a hammock. Christ offers you no free ride to heaven in a cushioned parlor-car. John Bunyan sent his sturdy "Pilgrim" to the "Celestial City" on foot, and some pretty rough walking and hard conflicts did he encounter before the pearly portals welcomed him to the streets of flashing gold. His piety was self-denying, stalwart and uncomprising; he relished even the stiff severities of duty, and was never coddled with confectioneries. Self-indulgence is the besetting sin of the times; but if you long to be a strong, athletic Christian, you must count the cost. It will cost you the cutting up of old favorite sins by the root., and the cutting loose from entangling alliances, and some sharp set-tos with the tempter; it will cost you the submitting of your will to the will of Christ.

JOHN B. McFERRIN: A BIOGRAPHY

The demand for this work shows the hold of the old commoner of Southern Methodism upon the hearts of the people. The criticisms upon it, by the Methodist press, South and North, and from all sorts of persons, both inside and outside of Methodism, indicate that the author has succeeded in the difficult task of picturing the man as he was, and in pointing the lessons of his extraordinary career. The book is fascinating, stimulating, edifying, and remarkably cheap withal. 13mo. Cloth. 448 pages for only $1.

"I Must go to Willie."

During the late war there was a women in Maine who received a letter which ran thus: "Willie is sick; he is dying." The mother read the letter, and looked up to her husband, said: "Father, I must go to Willie." "No, wife; you cannot go," he replied. "You know there is a line of bayonets between you and Willie." She did what the Christian mother always does when her boy is in peril. She spread that letter before the Lord and prayed all night. Next morning she said, "Father, I must go to Willie. I must." "Well. wife," he said, "I do not know what will come of this, but of course, if you will go, there is the money." She came down here to Washington, and the man in the Executive Mansion, who had a heart as tender as a woman's, — Abraham Lincoln, — brushed away a tear as he wrote, and handing her a paper said, "Madam, that will take you to the enemy's line, but what will become of yov after you get there I cannot tell."

She took the paper and came down to the line and the picket; she handed him the pass, and he looked at it and at her, and said, "We don't take that thing here." "I know it," she said; "but Willie, my boy, is dying in Richmond, and I am going to him. Now shoot!" He did not shoot, but stood awed and hushed in the presence of a love that is more like God's than any other that surges in the human soul in its deathless unselfishness.

All that mother thought of was her boy. Smuggled through the lines, she went down to the hospital. The surgeon said to her, "Madam, you must be very careful; your boy will survive no excitement." She crept past cot after cot, and knelt at the foot of the one where her boy lay, and putting up her hands prayed in smothered tones: "O God, spare my boy." The sick man raised his white hands from under the sheet; the sound of his mother's voice had gone clear into the valley and shadow of death, where the soul of the young man was going out in its ebbing tide. Raising his head he said, "Mother, I knew you would come." That boy is a man to-day, saved by a mother's love.

It is the same deathless mother's love that has knocked at the doors of the schools through State legislatures, and is to-day knocking at the door of our national Capitol, asking that the boys may be saved. We women lay down at the cradle our youth, our beauty, our talents, anything, everything, to the little bit of humanity there. We cannot help it. It is God's providence for the child; and may it not likewise be God's providence for the nation that has roused the heart of women and called the deathless love of mother-tide to participate in this great movement? If we save the children to-day we shall have saved the nation to-morrow.—The Progressive Age.

The Other Life.

A story has come down to us of Philip de Nori, a saint of the sixteenth century.

A young man, a student in a famous Italian university, came rnnning to him one day with joyful face, to tell him of his hopes and aims for life He had entered the law school because of his wide reputation, and would spare no pains to get through his studies as soon as possible.

"Well," answered the saint, "when you have got through your course of study, what do you mean to do?"

"Then I shall take my doctor's degree," answered the young man.

"And then?" asked Philip.

"And then I shall have a number of difficult questions to manage, and catch people's notice by my eloquence, my learning and my acuteness, and gain a great reputation."

"And then?" repeated Philip.

"And then, why there can be no question but I shall be promoted to some high office, and shall make money and grow rich."

"And then,', reiterated Philip.

"And then, then, I shall be comfortably and honorably situated with wealth and dignity."

"And then?" persisted Philip.

"And then, then—then I shall die."

Here Philip raised his voice, "And what then?"

Whereupon the young man made no answer, but cast down his eyes and went away.

Right enough, surely, all such ambition and looking forward. Pity the young man before whose face there flames and flashes no high ideal, even for this passing life. But if it stop there, at the margin of this passing life; if the ideal of this life be not of such sort that it can be the ideal of the other too; if to the inevitable question, "What then?" for that other life, that majestic temple to which this life is but the meagre vestibule,, there be no other answer than that of careless, ambitious thoughtlessness; if all attention be given to this and nothing to that—ah, can there be denser and starker folly than to have no tangible hope or purpose concerning the immeasurable life that is to come?

Multitudes of men to-day are like this young man of the sixteenth century, over whom Philip de Neri's questions threw the shadow of approaching eternity; they are sedulously concerned about the present, making great plans for that, hoping great things for it, but are for the most part untouched with any noble thoughtfulness for the eternity to come.—Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt, in the Golden Rule.

Value of a Christian Conscience.

Every Christian father and mother who have ever heard the click of the latch, as it springs for the last time behind son or daughter going forth into the world, knows that the most blessed balm for the wounded heart is the assurance that the loved one carries the surest antidote against moral poison, that safeguard against moral contagion – a Christian conscience. Yet how many are left with the bitter thought that they have neglected to inculcate this principle. But you fathers and mothers, who yet have your little ones about you, see to it, before the heartaches come, which shall start a hitherto unopened fountain of tears, that those tears are sobbed of this bitterness.—Christian at Work.

EDITORIAL.

Brother P. M. Daniel, an active layman from Centenary Church, St. Louis, has removed with his family to Spokane, where he will engage in business. The entire household, six in number, united with the church by certificate, the first Sunday after their arrival at their new home. This is as it should be. Master Phoeion, who is about ten years of age, was one of the pages at the recent General Conference. His pleasant and familiar face away here amid the Rockies, brings up pleasant recollections. God bless all our Christian boys and keep them faithful to the end.

We are sorry to have no tidings from Bozeman Circuit for so long a time. Doubless Brother Warren is pressing the battle with his accustomed zeal, if health and strength admit. We would be glad to have a report from that broad and inviting field.

Brother Barnhart's report of "an organized dancing club converted into a prayer and class meeting," reminds us of the work of Peter Cartwright, under the blessing of God, in converting a ball room into a revival, and a prayer meeting where a society was organized, and which the western pioneer was famous throughout the church, This latter feat of gospel grace is equally as great, though perhaps not brought about in just the same way, and proves that God honors the faith and labors of his heroes by the banks of the Columbia as well as on the prairies of Illinois. We bless God for these most signal displays of divine power. Coming just at this time and throughout this region, to us, they have a wonderful significance. O, for a still greater enduement and divine power upon the church and ministry that the cause of our God may triumph gloriously all through this mountain land. Our engineer is bound to get there with his train. He's got help from the General Manager, or he never could have gotten over such a grade.

The Quarterly Review of the M. E. Church, South, for April, is a choice number. It contains articles on "Peter Akers," "William Morley Peenshon," "The Doctrine of Atonement," "The Equity of Divine Providence," "Satan in the School-House," "Blue Laws of Connecticut," "Intellectual Drift of the Century," and other subjects that are ably discussed. No preacher should be without this periodical.

Brother J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn., is one of the most active and efficient Sunday school workers of this day. He is doing a grand work in systematizing work in the M. E. Church, South. The annual report of the Sunday School Board of the Memphis Conference, gotten up by him, and published by the Sunday School Board of our church, for pocket use, is one of the neatest things of the kind we have ever seen. It contains the themes and golden texts for all the lessons of the international series for the year 1891, besides a world of other useful information for all Sunday School workers, all of which would occupy but a small space in your side pocket. Send for it.

The American Bible Society has been in existence 25 years. The issue of books the first year were 6,410 copies; and for the first ten years, 439,530 copies; while last year alone they amounted to 1,496,570. The income last year, all sources, amounted to $597,693.05. The whole number of books issued since its organization is 52 736,075 volumes. Those being published within the last eight years being issued in 27 languages. The society has now undertaken the grand work of supplying every child who can read with a copy of the whole Bible. Let us help in the gigantic gigantic undertaking.

At the International Sunday School Convention at Pittsburg, in 1890, there were reported from all the different countries of the world, 183,390 Sunday School. 17,716,212 scholars, and 19,715,781 teachers and scholars altogether.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate, North, looks at things down South through political glasses, and which are usually highly colored. After characterizing the execution of the Mafia assassins a bloody murder he declared it was the natural result of the political corruption of the South that kept the poor colored man from the ballot box, and urges it as an additional argument why the "Lodge Bill" should have been passed. What about the riot in Cincinnati and at the Haymarket in Chicago, several years ago; in Pennsylvania where men were recently shot down, and the lynching that recently took place over in Washington, in which the soldiers of the United States army, who are supposed to be the defenders of law, and models of order and discipline and of submission to authority, went to the jail and forcibly took from the hands of the officers of the law, a prisoner whom they shot to death. What do these occurrences, half a dozen in the North and West, to one in the South, (when it comes to sections) teach? To the sober-minded and unprejudiced, they simply show that these popular outbursts of indignation have no political or sectional significance, but are as likely to occur in one part of the country, and among one class of people as another. We do not endorse or commend, but deplore them, and equally deplore that state of blindness that can see nothing but evil on one side of an imaginary line extending east and west between Chicago and St. Louis.

We do appreciate the trials of those who have left the comforts of good homes, and the pleasure and satisfaction of association with old friends in populous communities where the the church is strong and prosperous, and who are thrown out into these new camps where everything is unorganized, and where months are passed without seeing a minister, or perhaps a member of one's own church. True, the world's people make these sacrifices, but for the hope of earthly gain, while the true minister comes only with the hope of doing good, and trusts God, through the means ordained for this purpose, for those things that are needful for this life. This is the divine plan. The people must have the Gospel. The command is "Go ye," and we rejoice that it is being responded to by so many brave hearts of both men and women throughout the church. Such faith and heroism will not go unrewarded. "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my sake and the Gospel's, but he shall receive a hundred fold in this time houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions, and in the world to come, eternal life." Mark 10 : 29-30. This is surely enough. Thank God, he always keeps his promises.

We earnestly invite the attention of every Steward, as well as of every member and friend of the church to read and carefully ponder the paragraph under the heading, "Are the Preachers Paid?" Dear friends, if you only knew what we know, if you only knew what some of the best men in this Northwest are actually suffering to-day, to supply you with the Gospel and the means of grace, to make this a desirable country for you to live in, and raise your children in, you surely would bestir yourself and divide up and not let one poor man and his family bear all the burden. The year is three-fourths gone. Whatever is done should be done quickly.

Mrs Stanley and the wee ones are spending a few weeks east of the mountains.

Mrs. J. Parnall supplies a column of excellent selections on temperance each week for the Northwest Tribune, published at Stevensville. She is active and efficient in whatever she undertakes.

Brother R. S. Clark sends us a subscriber and three advertising cards from business men at Great Falls, for our columns, and promises to do still more. He is making good his pledge made sometime ago.

It is a significant fact that those who have borne most of the burden, if such it might be called, in sustaining our paper in the past, are still most enthusiastic in its support. By united and persevering effort upon the part of all our friends it could soon be made a weekly, or a twelve-page semi-monthly. As it is, we hope to issue a twelve-page edition occasionally, but cannot promise it regularly. We expect to pay as we go.

We have on hand some select matter that we hoped to get in this issue, but it will have to lie over. Dr. Cunningham's contribution among the rest. We must give preference to correspondence from the field, for that is largely what our paper is for.

One good brother assures us that The Methodist contains more church news for its size that any paper he takes, and the "Old Richmond" is on the list too. We want to keep up our reputation, not for reputation's sake, however, we hope, and to this end we renew our request to our preachers and other workers everywhere to send us short, pithy reports from their fields. We need them, and must have them. Send us a card the 1st and 15th of each month.

Subscribers who do not get their paper will please notify us, and we will try and correct all mistakes.

ALONG THE LINE.

PALOUSE, WASHINGTON.

The Methodist is a bright and welcome visitor into many homes in the Palouse country.

In this manse its makes it fortnightly visits causing only the regret that it does not come weekly. Some of us unmethodistic Methodists wonder, however, how one man can find time to run a pastoral charge, a District, and a church paper, and make so good a paper. "Praise is cheap," some one will say. Well, let it be more common then. As Dr. Lafferty once said, "even the tired plow-horse likes to have the scanty rations of nubbins pieced out with kind words and currying."

I would rather lay my little garland upon the scanty board, or weary desk than upon the coffin of my brother.

May Stanley's "bow abide in strength, and may each silver thread (as it comes) in that flowing beard mark an epoch of advance in the work he loves so well!"

Palouse Circuit has not been blessed with such gracious revivals as have been realized on some other charges, but several protracted meetings have been held with encouraging results. The last one held was at Staley, commencing with our Third Quarterly meeting. Brother Swift preached for us twice on Sunday, but was not able to remain. His sermon on Sunday night was especially strong, earnest and effective. It did seem that it was almost imperative for him to remain, and follow it up with earnest efforts. Several urged him to do so, but I did not, knowing he could not stand the strain and might from two or three such efforts be laid up for months. Oh for a stronger body for the glowing spirit!

Bro. Terry, of Lewiston, came to my assistance a few days after Bro. Swift left, and remained with me over Sunday. Some interest was manifested, though we know of no conversions. Bro. Terry, in some respects, excels any man I ever saw. The last night of the meeting he captured a youngster of three years of age who was a regular infant terrible and whose roar would almost drown out Hornbuckle's impetuous oratory. Terry seized the youngster gently, but firmly, set him in a chair by his side on the platform, kept him in subjection, and even took him up and held him in his arms, all the while preaching connectedly and with vim. The boy seemed under a spell and did not resist or whimper. After awhile he eluded the vigilant preacher and escaped, but coming too near was recaptured and chaired; but finally escaped for good.

A man that can preach serenely and at the same time suppress such a boy, must possess a self-poise far beyond the average.

Our District Conference is to be held in Palouse, June 24–28 inclusive. Mr. Editor, come and meet with us there, and we will try to do something more than praise the Methodist.

Will not Bro. Waggener run down from Wallace and vist us? We would be most happy to see him.

The spring has been cold and backward. But little gardening has been done, but the season has been very favorable for putting in grain, and the prospect is for a large acreage and an abundant harvest.

The river is full of logs, the sawmills are busy, and the financial outlook is encouraging.

J. W. Compton.

DEER LODGE.

A postal card ordering a change in an address states: Church work seems to be prospering here. Splendid spiritual prayer meetings on Wednesday evenings, though not largely attended. Bro. Couey was with us lately and spoke a few words of encouragement. Brother and Sister Tabor like our town very much, and we all love them.

WHITEHALL.

A private note from this point contains the following: "There is nothing of interest from this side that would do to publish. The people are proud of our paper. Brother Stateler is looking better than I ever saw him—is getting stout and ruddy, but I don't think he will attend your District Conference. He won't leave his work for anything, nor allow anything to keep him from an appointment."

STEVENSVILLE.

Last Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock, I filled my regular monthly appointment at the Curlew Mine, a new mining camp, about five or six miles southwest of Stevensville, which bids fair to become in the near future, a prosperous place. Nearly one hundred men now find employment there. The ore, silver-lead, concentrated on the spot, and when placed on the market nets the company monthly, between $15,000 and $20,000 clear profit, a good showing for such an enterprise.

It is very gratifying to us to be able to state, that whilst Sunday work is practiced here as well as in other mining camps in Montana, yet no saloons are allowed on the grounds owned by the company, and attempts to establish one of these demoralizing institutions on adjacent lands were followed by the immediate dismissal from the mine of its patrons, a course that reflects great credit on the judgment and sagacity of the late Superintendent, Mr. Eph. Hackett, who is not himself, we believe, a total abstainer.

They have a capacious new school house here, in which it was our privilege last fall to preach the first gospel sermon that was heard in the camp. We chose the day and hour named above, for our appointment, first because our Sundays were already fully occupied, and next on account of the men quitting work an hour earlier than usual. The congregations are generally good and attentive.

On the occasion referred to we partly organized a Sunday School by electing a Superintendent, Secretary and Treasurer, leaving the perfecting of the organization till the following day when a still larger attendance of those interested would likely be present, as it was not generally known that we purposed organizing at that time.

Later—Had good congregations at Ambrose and Burnt Fork yesterday. Baptized three children at the latter place. Scattered a great many missionary leaflets, preparatory to preaching on the subject and taking up collections.

May 4.

LA GRAND, OREGON.

Dear readers of the Montana Methodist. The annual Camp Meeting of Grand Road Valley will be held one-half mile north of La Grand, in Prebstel's Grove, under the direction of La Grand and Moss Chapel, and Summerville charges. The attendance of everybody is desired, and all are cordially invited. Reduced rates on the U. P. R. R., have been promised and will no doubt be secured. Good water, good shade, and accommodations for those from abroad will be on the ground. The meetings will commence June 11th, and continue over the third Monday in June. The Fourth Quarterly Meeting of La Grand and Moss Chapel will be held at this time on the ground. One day will be devoted to Sunday School work, and those coming from abroad will come prepared to give an account of the Sunday School work in their vicinity. The history of Sunday Schools, giving the origin, rise and success of this auxiliary to the church, with an account of what Methodism is doing for the cause of Sunday Schools, will be given by an able speaker. After which practical Sunday School work will be discussed by delegates, or representatives from the Sunday Schools in Eastern Oregon and Washington.

The work of the Lord is prospering on my field of labor, twenty-two accessions to our church, one new class at Ladd Canyon, S. H., and one new Sunday School of forty-nine members at the same place—an organized dancing club converted and turned into a prayer and class meeting. Infidelity, skepticism, free thoughtism, and all the works and powers of darkness vanishing before the light of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. To him be all praise. [Amen again and again—Editor.] Pray for us.

Henry Barnhart.

GOOD CHEER FROM OREGON.

MR. EDITOR:—

Your paper comes regularly. I read it with great interest. It is a very efficient factor in your work. I hope you may see your way clear to publish weekly at $2, soon.

Our Northwestern territory is immense, and is rapidly developing, but it cannot measure up to its possibilities as a mere attachment. The church must help you in your struggle. You not only need a paper, but there should be a resident Bishop somewhere between you and us. We need also one first-class college. These are the things now to be sought for this Northwest.

God bless you,

D. Atkins.

Corvallis, Oregon.

SPOKANE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Spokane District Conference will meet at Palouse City, Wash., June 25th, at 9 o'clock a. m. The Conference is changed from Vollmer to Palouse City.

The opening sermon, Wednesday, June 24th, 7.30 p. m., by Rev. F. F. St. Clair, subject: "Depravity."

June 25th.—Preaching at 3 p. m. by Rev. W. S. Hornbuckle, subject: "Repentance."

Preaching at 7.30 by Rev. A. J. Skee, subject, "Justification by Faith."

June 26th.—Preaching at 3 p. m. by Rev. H. B. Terry, subject, "Regeneration."

Preaching at 7 30 by Rev. R. G. Isbell, subject: "Sanctification."

June 27th—Preaching at 3 p. m., by Rev. A. Anderson, subject: "Self-Denial for Christ."

Preaching at 7.30 by Rev. J. W. Compton, subject: "Conditions of Efficiency in Soul-Winning."

Saturday a. m., (27th), Sunday School Conference.

The following subjects will be discussed:

"The Importance of Consecration to Sunday School Work."

"Duty of Parents to Sunday Schools."

"How to start Sunday Schools in New Fields."

It is hoped every member and delegate will come prepared to make a clear and forceful ten-minute speech on each of the above subjects.

Brethren, you will give sermon's from God's Word, through your best thought, well digested, out of a rich experience, and with the power of the Holy Ghost, that our Conference may be a season of great grace and power.

The Conference wants accurate information. Have the facts ready in figures about anything pertaining to your charge. Let there be no guessing.

Let us come to this Conference expecting the Lord to be with us.

Reg. B. Swift, P. E

HELENA.

Rev. D. B. Price writes: "Our foundations are broadening and deepening all the while in this city.

BUTTE.

Dear Methodist: You did not note my "Bits" in your last number. Add to them that gas-lights and a new organ now decorate the church, and that 33 names have been added to our roll in as many weeks. All well and prosperous. Faithfully,

J.E. Squires, Sr.

We assure our "senior" brother that we are a bit too happy to get bits to overlook the "Bits" that he sends us. Not one has escaped our attention lately, that came to this office. "Butte Bits" are always welcome.

BOZEMAN.

Bro. Goulder writes: "My P. E. has been with me since Friday. It is a treat to have him to myself a whole week. Everything moves along smoothly on the Bozeman charge. Sister Spain has been quite sick.

Our Quarterly Meeting services were very pleasant. The preaching was fine."

EAST HELENA.

The out-look on this charge is more encouraging. Sunday Schools well attended, interest good. At public services, congregations good and increasing. We had the largest congregation at Clancy last Sunday evening that I have seen since I have been in Montana; house crowded, seats all filled and a number had to stand up. Attention good. Praise the Lord. [Amen. —Editor]

L. Bramble.

OAKSDALE.

From Bro. Swift, the P. E., we learn that the work is looking up at every point on this charge. The pastor, Rev. A. Y. Skee, is much beloved by his people, but has been greatly hindered in his work by family affliction, and a lack of support. Through his self-denying efforts a parsonage and other property has been secured to the church. It is a shame for such a man to be compelled to shove a plane for a living. We do trust that the people will rally to his support. Such men are needed in the field all the time. This charge is in a fine section of country, and is fifty miles in extent. It will need to be divided at the next Conference. The quarterly meeting services were attended by large and appreciative congregations. We shall expect to hear good reports from the hosts of Tennesseeans that are settling in that region.

BIG BEND.

This charge, the P. E. reports, is ahead of anything in the Spokane District, in the way of the general collections and pastor's support—in fact, almost everything. The church literature is being industriously circulated, the home altar is established in every Methodist family, and all the members testify and pray when called upon. Religion is the theme of conversation in the home, and uppermost in the thoughts and affection of the people. And this, too, in communities where there had been scarcely no preaching until a few months ago. Bro. St. Clair is universally and deservedly popular. He has literally worked himself down, and needs two months rest. There is a demand for at least two more men on this charge. The people are looking forward to the camp-meetings with great expectations. May they not be disappointed.

WALLACE.

Our quarterly meeting services were held at Wallace the 26th ult. There were about forty present in the morning, and one hundred and forty at night. We could ask for no better attention. The pastor reports a slight falling off in attendance, caused by a rail-road excursion on Sunday afternoons to the base ball grounds a few miles away. This is to be regretted. Brother Waggoner is very popular and doing a fine work, as we could see in our visits among the people. Ere this is in print he will have organized a society. Already a number had expressed their determination to join, and not a few others will doubtless come. The Sunday School is prospering. The best people of the town are joining in the good work. Ths pastor is now canvassing for subscriptions for the new church and parsonage, both of which are greatly needed. Twenty dollars a month for hall, and eighteen for house rent, is pretty steep, and will keep any preacher poor. What an argument for our church and parsonage extension work.

SPOKANE.

The pastor, Rev. R. G. Isbell, is growing in the esteem and affection of his people. The church is growing under his ministry. There were six valuable accessions—an entire family—from Centenary Church, St. Louis, Mo., recently, two prayer-meetings in progress, very interesting, and a number of persons seeking religion at their homes. The Sunday School doing well under Bro. Kreiden. Miss Della Dyer is organist. The work enlarges. Bro. Isbell hopes to establish at least one mission soon, and two or three could be organized if only a little money could be had to help build the needed houses. Revival services are now in progress at Hargrove Church, with a good prospect for success. The editor was greatly refreshed by his visits among the people and attendance at two services. It was good to be there.

HELENA CORRESPONDENCE.

D. B. PRICE.

"Send me some notes at once!" is the peremptory order of the Editor of the Methodist. Having promised to do so occasionally, there is no room for debate. I yield to the demand. No one should complain of a lack of material for notes or items of news in this busy and interesting West, but to this scribe there is nothing so near torture as writing for the papers. The weather is pleasant, health is good and vegetation is springing forth rapidly. All indications are that this will be a fine crop year. There is quite a revival in business in Helena just now. Some excitement over the coming, prospectively, of one or two new rail-roads into the city in the near future.

Another pioneer gone. Geo. W. Keeler, of this place, died at Alhambra Monday night. He came to Montana from Idaho in 1865. He was sixty-nine years of age and leaves a widow and three daughters.

In the recent city election of Helena it was clearly demonstrated, that boodle and hoodlums control the city government. It is said that the successful candidate on the night following visited seventy-five or eighty of the saloons and gambling houses and spent twelve or fifteen hundred dollars in treating the boys. He was elected by a handsome majority over a citizens ticket composed of men pledged to a decent and business-like administration of the city's affairs. In advance it was conceded that if this man who caters to the whiskey element was elected, the offices of city-marshall and fire-marshall would be filled by men totally unfit for the places. The office of city-marshall is a very important one to the good government and morals of the city. Immediately after the election it was ascertained that a man who is reputed to be the proprietor of a saloon and a house of prostitution, also a gambler, would be nominated by the mayor for the office of city-marshall. Our best citizens were indignant and the ministers felt it to be their duty to protest; hence they called a meeting, appointed a committee to wait upon the mayor. The meeting was unsatisfactory, then they addressed the following open letter to each member of the council.

"We, the ministers of the city, desire to ask you, as a member of the city council, to use your best endeavors to secure the defeat of any man for city marshal who is engaged in the business of liquor selling or gambling, or any business detrimental to the morals of this city. We ask this of you in the interest of good government and for the credit of the city. We also, respectfully urge you to do your utmost to secure the appointment of a man who is worthy to fill the important office of city marshal." This is signed by order and in behalf of the minister's meeting, by Rev. F. T. Webb, president; Rev. Emil Uhl, secretary; Rev. J. N. Smith, Rev. S. W. Byrd, Rev. T. J. M. May, Rev. F. D. Kelsey and Rev. Wm. Rollins.

But all this was of no avail as the following shows. Last Tuesday night when the city council met and the mayor made his nomination for city marshal, there was only one man who had the courage to oppose his confirmation, while two men of professional and business prominence were outspoken in favor of it in the following language:

"Alderman Steele took up the cudgel in Sim's favor. "While one of the most religious of citizens, I think the saloon a necessary evil," he said. "Take them all out of Helena and you will have the slowest town west of the Mississippi. The saloons pay a revenue to the city. They pay for their privileges, and I am not one to stand here and proscribe them in any way. I have been solicited by some of our most religious citizens to vote against this appointment, but I am here to support it."

Alderman Lissner said that if all the whiskey men were taken away, sent to Butte, grass would be soon growing in the streets of Helena. The poor farmers and the merchants could not pay all the taxes. "I have been drinking whiskey for 40 years," he said, "and look at me!"

The vote was then taken and resulted, twelve in favor of confirmation and two against. Then was some applause which was caught up by the crowd that packed the stairway and area, when it was known Sims had been confirmed.

This betrays a viciousness of moral sentiment that is alarming. How long are we to endure this? The number of lives destroyed annually by saloons, gambling-houses and houses of assignation in Montana is simply appalling. We must organize our forces, cry out against this evil and cease not our labors till we have gained the victory.

To-day, Brother and Sister Collet went to the Bitter Root Valley to look at a ranch, which they may purchase. The church here protests. They are exemplary in their piety and in their devotion to the church. We shall be very sorry to lose them. It is to be hoped that they will find it best to live in Helena still.

Our Zion makes haste slowly in this city, that is, we make no rapid strides forward as they do in many places in the East, but our foundasions are broadening and deepening all the while in this city. Our Methodism is the second in size in the whole family of Methodist churches of the world, and we are not apologizing for our presence in this country. Thank God we are enjoying an advance movement all along the line from lower California to Puget Sound.

This charge has had the services of other brethren than the pastor this year. Brethren Couey, Johnson, Cronin, Squires and Tabor have all ministered to this people. Couey is expository and logical; Johnson is methodistical and topical; Squires is hortatory and a veritable son of Thunder; Tabor is unctious, simple in manner as a child, and feeds the soul. These brethren would honor any field of labor. Transfers like Squires and Tabor we want and need. By the way, our brother "John Eli" of the Butte charge, thinks Montana is the greatest country on earth. There has been a recent "transfer" to his home, the first (of the sex) to come. By permission (of the mother I suppose) it is conceded that he is the very image of his father, and his name is John E. jr.

We are just entering upon the labors of the last quarter of this year. Brethren, let us buckle on armor anew and press the battle to the very gates of the enemy, and God grant that we may all come up to Conference with many trophies of victory to lay at our Master's feet.

THE GREAT COMMISSION.

An editorial in the Missionary Review contains the following strong and earnest words which are in such hearty accord with our own sentiments, that we have transcribed them for our columns. Would that we had space for more of the same sort.

"The duty and privilege of preaching was thus from the first, universal. All who had an ear, a voice, must say, "Come." To have excluded any from this simple part in heralding salvation would have been to shut up an inward fire, and the voice of a pent up flame would have burst forth in utterance, saying, "We cannot but speak the things that we have seen and heard."

Whatever marks of distinction may rightly exist between the ministry and membership of the church, they should never become lines of division in saving souls. Those who are set apart for the special office of leadership, are to project the advance movement, plan the campaign, and conduct the hosts; but who must do the fighting, but the bannered hosts who come after with the whole armor of God.

And so there is a sense in which every believer is a preacher, and every hearer a herald. The whole world is the audience, and not a soul is to be passed by, the whole church are the witnesses, and not a believer is to be tongue-tied with a ruined race about him. God's grace within him and a voice wherewith to make himself heard. To all, of every age and nation, pardon is to be proclaimed with its simple conditions: repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. By the works of our Lord the missionary office is laid upon the whole church until the whole world is evangelized. Not a man or woman or child can escape or evade the responsibility. Let this be really apprehended, and wherever God locates our sphere of service, we shall be found leading essentially the life of a missionary.

HOME MISSIONS.

The vital question in connection with Home Missions is the strategic. There are points in our borders which are to be—nay, already are the turning points of history; the pivots of destiny, the hinges of the future. They are to be the rallying points and the radiating points of our civilization. These populations will be massed, commerce will centralize, influence will focalize. Just these are the great strategic points, to seize and to hold which for Christ and the kingdom are vital to the success of this campaign of the ages.

A true government provides for the country governed. Its distribution of forces regards every imperiled point. Like Nehemiah, it is ready to mass all available forces at any critical point of assault. So must the church watch the weak or unde fended places in the wall, and there station strong and able men. The local churches may be weakest at these very strategies, unable, perhaps, unwilling to sustain such men as the situation demands. Just here it is that the Home Missionary Board must interpose and supply the deficiency, putting into the field a man able enough, influential, discerning enough to see and meet the emergency and command co-operation.—Missionary Review.

THE WEST.

From the eastern borders of Colorado to the Pacific, a homogenous population will dwell, a people with intelligence and thrift who will constitute the strongest and most prosperous part of the United States. They will not draw their inspiration and ideas from the East, but developing their own personal resources and those of the country they will make the proverb good, "Westward the Star of Empire takes its course." Being a conglomerate of all lands they will contain all the essential elements of every nation on earth, and will combine these elements in the development of a new and distinct type.

If in the process of development and crystalization Christianity predominates, the West will show the highest and finest type of civilization which has ever been attained; and the church which displays the greatest self-assertion, in the direction of that object now, will be the controlling religion of the future. Our church fills the description, and if we are true to ourselves, we will be the Methodism, aye, the Christianity of the West.

The above is an extract from a private letter written by one high in church authority in the church. We thought that our readers ought to have the benefit of its strong words and wholesome sentiments.

Annual Meeting Board of Church Extension.

The Annual Meeting of this Board has just been held, and the exhibit of the work is in every respect encouraging. Every member of the Board was present, except Bishops Wilson and Haygood, Rev. R. H. Parker and two lay-men, one of whom are absent from the state, and the other was sick.

The Reports of the Secretary and Treasurer show a gratifying state of our affairs in every part of our work, and the trial-balance made from the the books by our book-keeper, Miss Dora Scott, was counted worthy of special commendation by the committee to whom it was referred.

The figures giving a resume of the year's work are given in the published Abstract from which we learn that during the year the church has paid:

On general accouut of Church Extension $63,797.29. And on Loan Fund Account, $7.094.97.

The General and Conference Boards have helped this year 387 churches, paying them $82,729.42, showing an increase of 23 churches helped over last year.

Hon. C. S. Grubbs, after having been a member of this Board from its organization and having served its interests with marked efficiency, felt compelled to tender his resignation, which was accepted with a fitting resolution of respect, and Hon. J. H. Bowden of Louisville, Ky., was elected to fill the vacancy.

The Secretaries submitted to the Board a paper touching various interests of work, which was thoroughly discussed. In this connection a resolution was adopted to the effect that Church Extension work should be more distincly recognized as spiritual and missionary in its character. The following resolution was adopted, "That our people be requested to co-operate with the secretaries in an earnest effort to raise the cash capital of the Loan Funds to the sum of $100,000 during the present year.

The Conference Boards were requested to hold Anniversary and oth er public meetings in the interest of this work; and it was suggested that they be more systematic and discriminating in recommending applications for help. It was also resolved "That the aggregate donations appropriated by this Board at any Annual meeting should not exceed the actual receipts for that purpose during the year preceeding

On Sunday our pulpits were filled by the Bishops and visiting preachers of the Board, and Louisville enjoyed a feast of Gospel truth.

Special attention was called to the generous spirit of the Northwest Texas Conference in this work, which paid 110 per cent upon its assessment and made a subscription of $13.00 for special work in its bounds.

A resolution was adopted favoring large lots for our church buildings. This will weigh much in granting appropriations.

The Board adjourned on Saturday afternoon. The results of the meeting are in a large degree hopeful, and we begin a new year with a sense of genuine gratification at what has been done.

Wallace Notes.

The editor recently visited Wallace, Idaho, stopping over a day or two, in route, at Spokane, where he greatly enjoyed the company of Brother Isbell, the pastor Brother Swift, the P. E. of Spokane District, and many other good friends, of which trip he has many things to say, but cannot say them now.

Wallace is rapidly advancing. The lot that we were fortunate enough to secure last winter, is now worth double the price paid for it. New buildings are going up, and the future of the town, as the Metropolis of the Couerd' Alenes, seems to be decided. New mines are being discovered, and the older ones are increasing in richness, as greater depth is attained. Wallace now has a population of 1,500 people. We were disappointed at the delay in completing the new line from Missoula direct across the mountains to Wallace, which will reduce the distance to about 125 miles between the two points, and greatly benefit both sections in the way of trade. Sorry to learn that it will not be open for business much before August.

We were delighted with our day at "Eagle's Nest," as Brother Waggener humorously designates the cosy little home where the preacher lives, on the mountain side overlooking the town. (We notice, by the way, that the "eagle," after surveying the situation, prefers not to leave his eyrie that the writer selected before he arrived last winter.)

How we talked and talked, and walked (visiting among the people) and worshiped, and enjoyed sweet fellowship together during those few days that we were there. We bless God that such refined Christian homes are multiplying in the Northwest. Every one is a miniature church, and there is no telling whereunto the leaven thus being introduced into the lump will grow.

We found the people in hearty sympathy with our proposed church building enterprise.

Our old friend, N. R. Penny, is still having a good run of custom at the Idaho House. We greatly appreciate the kindness and activity of Miss Maggie Penny, assisted by other worthy ladies, in attentions to the pastor and his family. Such kindness is not soon forgotten.

Our friends, the Dunn Bros., seem to be succeeding well with their paper, the Couerd' Alene Miner, a newsy and spicy periodical that represents ably and faithfully the interests of the growing city. Mr. J. M. Harris, who is an old Virginian, is succeeding finely in the real estate business. See his card in another column. Our friend, Brother Helm, master mechanic in the U. P. Railroad shops, is kept busy repairing broken locomotives and keeping things in running order on the road. Sister Helm is still visiting friends in California. We were glad to see that Mrs. Judge Angel, a Methodist lady, had returned from a visit east. It was a real pleasure to enjoy the hospitality and spend an evening with our particular friends.

Geo. Fuller and his excellent Methodist wife, the first Christian family that we visited in Wallace last fall, and at whose table we ate our first meal taken at a private house there.

Both at Wallace and Spokane, we heard kind words spoken of the MONTANA METHODIST, and received quite a list of new names. We thank God and take courage.

Bishop Haygood, in Nashville Advocate.

"Italian colonies"— what place have the people of the United States for Italians or other foreign colonies? Every such colony, whether in New Orleans or Chicago, in Galveston or Boston, is a plague-spot and menace to our peace. If we give citizenship to ill-taught and ignorant foreigners, we want American citizens, not Italian citizens: if we give protection to the oppressed of the Old World, we must have decent behavior. An asylum should not be turned into a refuge for banditti. We have been too free with our inheritance. History shows no such prodigality. God only knows what the outcome will be. Such people as these Sicilians have no business here.

Are Preachers Paid?

We are glad to see that even the secular papers are interested in the matter of paying the preachers. The Statesville Landmark (it may be getting ready to be "the organ"), of last week says:

It is getting along toward the end of the calendar year. The church year of one of the leading denominations of our State has just closed, and that of another one is about closing. Have the preachers been paid up? They are promised but pittance and if they are paid every cent of it, they are still on short commons. It is a scandal to their charges if the beggarly sums pledged them are not paid. We mention this matter because at this period, when so many strolling ministers are doing so well in a worldly way, we wouldn't have these humbler, every-day men of God forgotten. They are with us from year to year and are our every-day friends: they baptize our children, bury our dead, comfort us in our affliction, and from Sunday to Sunday point out the way of life. They are the bulwarks of society; they hold our civilization together. Their influence is continuously with us for good, and while the birds of passage come occasionally and turn the world upside down, we owe the preservation of our dearest interests, temporal as well as spiritual, to those unpretending ministers who, like the balance of the poor, are always with us. Let them not be forgotten in our giving.

Decease of Dr. R. Boyns.

It is with profound sorrow that we chronicle the decease of our friend and brother, and former co laborer, Rev. Dr. Richard Boyns, pastor of our church at Oakland, California, which occurred on Wednesday night, the 8th of April, 1891, of failure of the heart. He retired to rest at night, fell into a soft sleep to awake no more on earth.

He was born at St. Just, in Penwith, Cornwall, England, June 4th, 1831. He become a local preacher in the Wesleyan Methodist Church about 1850, in which relation he was very active and prominent until coming to America in 1883, when he became acquainted with some of our leading men and united with the M. E. Church, South. He preached to large and delightful audiences in our leading pulpits, both in Richmond and New Orleans. When in the latter city we heard Dr. (now Bishop) Galleway, relate the manner of his introduction to the people there, and how, by his eloquence, his simplicity and spirituality, he carried everything before him. The Dr. had Brother Boyns preach for him first to the convicts at the penitentiary. Some members of the leading city church were there, and, after hearing him, besought that these earnest and eloquent words should be preached to them also. The result was that the audience was electrified, the victory complete. The Bishop spoke in particular of a sermon on Prayer and of the beauty and force of the illustrations with which it abounded, one especially, in which the mediatorial work of our Savior was set forth by the mother taking the weeds out of her little daughter's bouquet before she presented it to her father. No one who overheard it will forget it. He preached the same sermon at our conference with telling effect.

Brother Boyns came to Montana with Bishop Granberry in 1874, and remained in charge of our church at Butte City as a supply for three months, his regular station in the Pacific Conference. At the session of the Conference at Stevensville and in all the pulpits that he filled in Butte, the people were delighted and edified under his ministry. We heard him often but never listened to an inferior discourse from his lips. In the social circle he was genial and captivating. Of a nervous, sanguine temperament, he seemed to carry life and sunshine wherever he went. His recent letter in the METHODIST,

A Call to the Church by the Flathead Indians.

BY L. B. STATELER.

While speaking of mission work among the Indians, I will relate the following:

In the year 1831, the Flathead Indians, while going through their religious ceremonies at their home, which was way beyond the Rocky Mountains, a white man, who was a trapper, on witnessing their performances, said to them that their ceremonies, instead of pleasing the Great Spirit, must be offensive to him. They then inquired of him how the white man worshipped the Great Spirit.

He gave them such information as he had at command, which only made them the more solicitous in regard to the matter, which resulted in the calling of a general council to consider how they might get the desired information. The conclusion arrived at was that they would send a delegation away to St. Louis to see Governor Clark, who in company with Captain Lewis, had at one time (1804) been sent by the government to explore the headwaters of the Missouri and Columbia Rivers, and had passed through their country en route to the Pacific Coast.

They accordingly outfitted five of their principal men, and with their ponies they started on their perilous undertaking, passing through hostile tribes almost the entire journey, a distance of 2,000 or 2,500 miles.

They arrived in St. Louis and spent the winter of 1832-3, at that place.

Having obtained what information they could, of the kind sought, in the spring of 1833 the three remaining ones—two having died during the winter—set their faces towards their distant home in the far Northwest. Whether they ever arrived there or not we never knew. That year I was traveling the Bowling Green Circuit in the Missouri Conference, and the information that I obtained concerning this matter was direct and positive, and is fresh in my memory today.

Mr. William Walker, an educated and intelligent man, belonging to the Wyandotte nation, then residing at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, having been sent by his nation to look for a home for the Wyandottes in what was known as the Platte country, in the western part of Missouri, was now returning and was at the Indian Commissioner's office in St. Louis and learned all the facts that have been stated.

Mr. Walker wrote a letter to the "Christian Advocate and Journal," published at New York, in which he gave a most thrilling account of the coming of the Flathead Indians from their wilderness home in the West, and of their Macedonian call for help. The letter was published, and at its close the editor asked, "Who will go?"

It greatly stirred my heart, and after much prayer and with many tears, I responded in a letter, saying, "Here am I, send me! I am already more than a thousand miles on the way." However, I was not sent, but others were.

That incident of those Indians coming so far, hazarding their lives in their call for help, caused a thrill throughout the church and did more to bring money into the treasury for Indian Mission Work than forty collectors could have done. It literally poured in from every quarter, and almost every contribution was labelled, "For Flathead Mission."

In the spring of 1834 there were two men, Revs. Jason Lee and Dan'l Lee—uncle and nephew—and a third brother in Illinois, named Frost, who were chosen by the Board to go to the Northwest. They started in the spring, making their way by stage and steamer to Independence, Mo., the outfitting point for traders operating in the Rocky Mountains. Here they were joined by representatives of several churches, who were going upon the same mission. There were three Methodists, two Presbyterians, and two or more Roman Catholic priests. They all had to go in one company with the traders, thus making a force sufficiently strong for self-defense should they be attacked by hostile Indians.

It was then believed that there was but one month in the year during which the great Rocky Mountain range could be crossed, and that was the month of July. The company proceeded together to the great Salt Lake, and it being difficult to ascertain how to reach the Flathead country, after securing what information they could, they divided into two or three companies, the Methodists pushing on towards the Columbia river. The Presbyterians landed on Clearwater, a tributary of the Snake river. The Methodist missionaries went on, and having reached the Columbia followed on down until they came to the mouth of the Williamette, eighty miles from the Pacific Coast.

They followed up that stream for forty miles and located at a beautiful place, a central point, and called it Salem. It retains its name to this day, and is now the capitol of the State of Oregon.

The Presbyterians located among the Nez Perees, where they have been successful and continue unto this day. They also established missions among other tribes.

The Methodists were several times reinforced, a number of missionaries going by ship around Cape Horn, which required many months to make the journey. Among the latter were young ladies who went as teachers, and some of whom afterwards became the wives of the missionaries who had first gone out and who were single men.

I want to mention an incident or two which will give the reader an idea of the severe labors of these worthy brethren, and the sore afflictions through which they passed. After the arrival of the first reinforcements sent by ship, and the marriage of the single men, it was thought best to send an agent in the person of Jason Lee, across the plains to the states and thence to New York.

Bro. Lee accordingly made the trip, traveling on horseback with pack animals, in company with trappers and frontiersmen, and in the summer of 1838 he arrived at our missions just east of Kansas City. At that time I was laboring at the Delaware mission.

Bro. Lee tarried a few days to recover from the fatigue of his long journey. He had been there but two days when a messenger arrived from his far distant home in Oregon, having been sent by his brethren, and forcing his way through the wild tribes, bringing letters containing the sad news of the death of Bro. Lee's wife and infant child. Crushed in spirit and filled with sorrow, he bade adieu to the brethren and continued his lonely journey eastward.

Having represented the wants of the work in Oregon before the Missionary Board, he started back again, taking reinforcements with him, and going by ship around Cape Horn. The company arrived at their destination in due time.

The Greatest Thing in the World.

THIS is a phrase that will stick—a happy expression of a supreme truth. It is a great thing to discover that love is the substance of things. It is the very life of God. "No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us." God's heart is an everlasting throb of love. The apostle intimates that the love we have to one another in Him is often an alphabet by which we may understand His love. The touch of a human heart sometimes breaks up the fountains of the great deep, and enables us to let in the love of God. Many of us can easily remember how through some beloved one our heart was opened to understand the greater heart through which all his or her tenderness came. We remember seeing once a great, strong intellect break down in a moment and bend to receive the fullness of the Holy Spirit, just through the break-down of a brother who was praying for the hard and intellectual one, and who just cried out and threw himself into his arms, and that one act seemed to break up the flinty soil and open all his being to the love of God. We remember once trying to teach a poor, sad woman the love of Jesus. With a stony face she looked into our eyes, and said, "I do not understand you. I never had any love. I do not know what the word means. I have always been treated harshly, and I do not love anybody." We saw it was no use to speak to her in the language of abstract or spiritual truth, and so we just got a few friends to love her for a while, and express their love in a tangible form, and at last one day she said to us, "I can understand you now. I begin to know what love means."

The human had led up to the Divine. Let us thank God for the sacred ties that spell out His larger name; but let us not rest in them, but always rise from them to Him, and then we shall find them perennial channels of holy tides, kept pure by ever pouring on to the great ocean where they all converge in the bosom of God.

IT IS a profitable act to retire for a few moments of earnest private prayer immediately before going to any service in the house of God. This is the secret of getting the greatest good from our worship.

—o—

Rest is not quitting the busy career;
Rest is the fitting of self to its sphere.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES.

The first session of the Missoula District Conference was held at the M. E. Church, South, in Stevensville, Montana, commencing May 14, 1891. The opening sermon was preached on the previous evening by Rev. W. O. Waggener to a good audience of attentive and delighted hearers. The text was, "Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan and take thence every man a beam."—2 Kings, vi:3. The importance and results of co-operation in Christian effort were lucidly and eloquently set forth. All the preachers of the District but one—Rev. E. L. Lee—and several of the laymen were present at the opening of the business session at 9 o'clock a. m. There were present as visitors Rev. A. C. Couey, P. E., of Helena District; D. B. Price, of Helena, and J. E. Squires, of Butte City, also Rev. J. McAllister, pastor of the M. E. Church, North, at Stevensville, and Rev. Rickman, of the Baptist Church at the same place.

Brother Couey opened the Conference with devotional exercises, which continued about an hour, in which nearly all present participated, and which were very impressive.

J. B. Parnall was elected Secretary.

The hours of meeting and adjournment were fixed at 9 and 11 a. m., and at 3 and 5 p. m. of each day, with regular preaching services commencing at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

The reports of the preachers showed the work in the District to be in a hopeful condition. Several new men are needed to meet the demands of our increasing population. The various interests of the church were inquired into and reported upon. Pastoral visiting, Sunday Schools, family worship, temperance, finance, education, etc., were discussed with much profit, especially that of "union" versus denominational Sunday Schools.

Rev. W. O. Waggener read a splendid paper on "The Mission of Methodism to the Masses," which by vote of the Conference will, in a subsequent issue, appear in these columns. Brother Hortenberry read a well prepared paper ou the temperance question, while Brother Flowers gave a talk on the witness of the Spirit. Two other papers (one by the editor) were laid over till next year.

M. D. Hortonberry, J. S. Robertson, R. S. Fowler and H. B. Bell were elected lay delegates to the next Annual Conference. All are expected to attend, hence there are no alternates.

Stevensville was fixed as the place of holding the next session.

The Conference finished its work in two days. The session was perfectly harmonious, and the fellowship of the preachers and members most delightful and refreshing. Our visiting brethren did all of the preaching, which was of a very high order. Their presence added greatly to the interest and success of the occasion. The absence of Brother Lee, whose financial condition prevented his coming, was greatly regretted. It was also a great disappointment not to have Brother Waggener present until after Sunday. He was compelled to return to his charge on Friday. It would seem that only one day's attendance would hardly justify the expense and fatigue of a trip of four hundred miles and return. But he declared himself well paid. His presence and labors were an inspiration to us all.

The MONTANA METHODIST was heartily endorsed by the Conference, and the brethren pledged themselves, of their own free will and accord, to do more for its circulation and support. We thank them for this, and trust that they won't forget. There is often a great temptation to overlook resolutions passed at Conferences. We shall look for a number of renewals and new subscriptions soon. Let them come.

Our District Conference appears small compared with some others within the bounds of the great Southern Methodist Church. But it was as large as was the entire Montana Conference when Brother Couey first came to Butte City, a little more than four years ago. Now the Helena District alone numbers ten organized charges, and is in great need of four or five new men to organize new fields that are being developed within its bounds, while at least two or three more men could be used with profit within our own bounds. We have long since learned not to depise the day of small things.

"There are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit, and there are differences of administration, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." The truth of this beautiful passage was most fittingly illustrated in the various orders of talent represented by the ministers in attendance at the District Conference, in the harmony that prevailed, in the unity of sentiment in regard to the great object of all Christian effort —and in the way that this is to be accomplished—by the baptism of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

Brother Price shows the effect of the sad stroke that recently came to him in the death of his father. But the fire only makes the pure gold shine all the brighter. There was a mellowness and pathos about him that gave additional interest and power to his earnest and eloquent words. His lips quivered with emotion, and many hearts thrilled responsively as he read from Revelations of "the new Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven," and spoke of the beauty and glory of that kingdom where "God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and where there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain." His sermon Thursday night on the character of Jacob will not soon be forgotten.

Rev. J. E. Squires is the sweet singer of our Israel in Montana. He is the embodiment of earnestness and simplicity and affability, and is eminently successful in Sunday School and evangelistic work. He will make friends and do good wherever he goes. He gave the finest, simplest, most natural and forcible exposition of the parable of the prodigal son that the writer has ever listened to. How unconverted men can resist such appeals is indeed a mystery!

Rev. A. C. Couey had been in Bitter Root Valley before, where he had made many friends who gave him, as well as our other visiting brethren, a hearty welcome. But it seemed to us that this time he surpassed all his former pulpit efforts. His missionary sermon on Sunday morning was one of the finest we ever heard anywhere. It had breadth and height, and depth and simplicity, and its delivery was attended with an earnestness and unction that gave it great force and made an impression on the large audience present that will long be remembered. The voluntary collection that followed amounted to sixty-five dollars, in cash and subscriptions. The report he gave of the work on his district greatly encouraged and refreshed us. He is the right man in the right place. May success attend him wherever he goes.

Brother Waggener had not met any of our preachers, except this writer, and in fact none of the members of our Church in Montana Conference, but those he had received in his charge, prior to the District Conference. The pleasure of the meeting appeared to be mutual. After four months of isolation, where one is closely hemmed in by towering mountains, we can readily understand how a Methodist preacher of Waggener's make-up would enjoy getting out into a broad beautiful valley like Bitter Root, and meeting with his brethren. He is well rounded physically, intellectually, socially, religiously; has a florid complexion, smooth round face, hair cut short; is a close thinker, ready and rapid in his utterance. He has a wonderful flow of language; is full of pathos and rivits the attention and oters and captivates the hearts of his audience. His short stsy at Stevensville only created a desire upon the part of both preachers and people to see and hear more of him. May his talents be wonderfully blessed of God in the conversion of souls and the upbuilding of the kingdom of our God in the midst of these mountains.

Brother and Sister Parnall showed their usual thoughtfulness and good taste in providing for the entertainment of the Conference and in contributing to the welfare and comfort of all. This, too, in addition to the duties of secretary, performed by Brother P., and to the fact that Sister Parnall's health was not the best. Our visitors were lavish in the compliments they paid to the cozy preacher's home at Stevensville that stands hard by the church, with its shade and fruit trees, its blue grass yard and shrubbery all so tastefully arranged, and all possessing such an air of comfort and such a home-like appearance.

Rev. L. W. Flowers, though advancing in years, and living three miles from town, and busy with affairs, supporting himself as he has done largely for several years past, while on the supernumerary list, attended every session and took an active interest in the proceedings, while Sister Flowers, his wife, who is far advanced in life, was present at nearly every service. Thank God for the faith and devotion of our mothers in Israel.

Brother M. D. Hortonberry, a local preacher, though busy at his trade, dropped everything, and with his good wife, gave himself to the entertainment of and attendance upon the sessions of the Conference, taking an active interst in all its proceedings. Would that there were more of such enthusiasm among us. It was common among our fathers.

We were pleased to meet Brother Isaac Patty at Stevensville, for many years a local preacher and elder in our church. He was ordained in California by Bishop Keener, and was once quite active in the work, supplying various charges, and helping in some revival meetings of great power, particularly the one on the Santa Clara Circuit where there were about fifty conversions. He still feels a great interest in the work, though now unable to do much service. We are glad that Sister Patty is recovering from the severe and protracted affliction through which she has recently passed. She is a devout Christian lady. Her work is not yet completed. She is ready to pass over in triumph when the Master calls.

About the only thing that marred our enjoyment of the District Conference was the absence of so many of our people from the sessions. They missed a rare treat. These occasions are largely for the discussion of questions in which the members of the church are directly interested, and it is a great misfortune when they cannot avail themselves of the rare opportunities recently offered to our people in and around Stevensville, some of the best men of the church coming hundreds of miles at their own expense, amounting in one case to nearly fifty dollars to serve the church. Co-operation of the lay-members with the ministers is essential to the success of the Gospel. A day or so taken from the shop, the store, the field, or the home, now and then, and devoted to the service of God will bring vast compensation. God is the best paymaster in the universe. In proportion as we forsake houses and lands for His sake and the Gospel's, we find them again in this world, and in the world to come eternal life. What more could be desired?

The children's service at Stevensville was one of the most delightful occasions of the kind that we have attended for a long time. The meeting was addressed by Parnall, Stanley and Couey. The latter was quite felicitous in his presentation of the truth to the minds and hearts of the young auditors, quite a number of whom came forward and gave their little hands in token of their desire to give their hearts to Jesus. It was a melting time. Thank God for a Gospel that includes little children and that they understand, and for a Savior who has said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."

The personel of our District Conference, including the visitors, of course, would compare favorably with any body or association of men of the same size and engaged in the same kind of work that we remember to have come upon anywhere in the West. It would do honor to any church. The preaching was far above average. It was all first-class, and made a most favorable impression upon the large audiences present at the public services. We thank God for such men as He is sending in answer to our prayers to help occupy these fields and possess this land.

Although our Conference was so small in numbers, yet our Virginia preacher declared it to be one of the most delightful and refreshing in its associations that he had ever attended. This is natural. Neither our efficiency nor our happiness in this world depends upon numbers, if we are in the line of duty. The Lord said, "My presence shall go with thee," the Master said, "Lo, I am with thee always," and John Wesley shouted, "The best of all is, God is with us." The trials of the frontier life have many compensations. They make the promise sweet and intensify the joy of Christian fellowship as fellow sentinals on the outposts meet and hold sweet counsel together, even though it be for only a day or two during a whole year. A few of us had almost a monopoly of such blessings for a long time. We are glad that others are coming to share them, and especially that they appreciate them.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Brother Warren has a fine Sunday School at Middle Creek—sixty scholars; also another at Shield's River, a point across the mountain eastward, which the pastor has visited and where he held a profitable service. He is preparing to organize at Belgrade. There are about 100 Sunday School scholars on the charge, with promise of a greater number. About 25 members have been added to the church since Conference. The work is doing well financially, and is in a better condition than ever before. There is a fine prospect for development at various points.

WILLOW CREEK.

There are three Sunday Schools on the charge, one at Willow Creek, one at South Boulder, and one at Harrison—about 100 scholars in all. Bro. Cockrill is just doing good, solid work. So reports the P. E.

EAST HELENA.

The quarterly meeting services were very profitable. The Presiding Elder assisted in taking the Conference Collections ou Sunday night. The charge is improving. People taking more interest in the pastor, and some excellent families are becoming enlisted in church work. The pastor holds children's meetings on Saturday evenings, which are very profitable. There is good prospect of a parsonage being secured, and the pastor is much encouraged.

HELENA.

Brother Price reports good services in his church. Brother and Sister Clark are back at their old home, the latter in good health, and both more hopeful of Southern Methodism in Montana, since their trip to the southwest, than ever before. We rejoice at this, for they are a host in whatever they undertake, whether entertaining ministers in their elegant home, helping in local church work, or aiding in church and parsonage extension in distant fields.

DEER LODGE.

Brother Squires is engaged to assist the pastor here in a protracted effort. Mr. Larabee has kindly donated two lots, 60x130 feet, in a most desirable part of the city as a site for the District parsonage, which it is expected will be located at this place. Bro. Coney expects to commence it soon. We trust that our frienes will help liberally in this good work. It will surely be a new departure to have a home for a presiding elder, owned by our church in Montana.

STEVENSVILLE.

Large audiences and impressive services in connection with the District Conference, two valuable accessions, one bright conversion, our people encouraged, and our cause greatly strengthened. The largest missionary collection in the history of the charge, amounting to sixty-five dollars, at Stevensville. Brother Parnall is happy.

DEMERSVILLE.

Brother Lee writes: The church has been painted with two coats. It improves its appearance very much. We hope to have it plastered in a few weeks. The ladies have bought an organ. We still have an encouraging outlook; good congregations, a flourishing Sunday School and an interesting prayer meeting. We shall make an effort to dedicate before Conference. So, in making arrangements with the Bishop, count in Demersville as one of the points to be visited. I feel very grateful to Mr. Clifford for the practical interest that he is manifesting in our church work. This leaves us all well.

SPOKANE FALLS.

Rev. W. O. Waggener, of Wallace, assisted the pastor, Bro. Isbell, for several days in his meeting. At last accounts there had been twelve or thirteen conversions, and the meeting still going on.

WALLACE.

The pastor, Bro. Waggener, was sick about a week, which interfered somewhat with his church work. Four persons have united with the church and seven others have sent for their letters for the purpose of jolning here. 193 persons present at the last service reported. The Sunday School is growing in numbers and in interest—now numbers about 60—and a greater interest manifested in religion than ever before. The outlook is encouraging.

BUTTE CITY.

Brother Squires, the pastor, is striving to realize his ideal of a church in which there is a constant revival. The invitation is given, and there are either accessions to the church or penitents at the altar at every Sunday's service. It is only a question of time when the present house will not hold the audience.

HERE AND THERE.

In a private letter Bishop Hendrix writes from Kansas City: "I returned last night from Wilmington, N. C., and herewith send you plan of visitation for 1891–2. As you will see Bishop Key comes to you. This is in accordance with the wish that all our Bishops become familiar with the needs and prospects of the Northwest, so as the better to present your claims in the older Conferences in securing men and supplies. He expects to take his wife with him and give some two or three months to the three Conferences. He will leave about the last of June or the first of July."

We welcome Bishop Key to the Northwest. We have heard something of his evangelistic spirit, and of his soul-stirring sermons. May he come in the fullness of the blessings of the Gospel upon his mission confirming the churches."

We publish elsewhere the plan of Episcopal visitations. It will be seen that the Montana Conference, which will be held at Helena, meets the 29th of July. It comes a little earlier than usual, and is the first to be held, except the Brazil. How soon the year will close. How little has been accomplished. We hope that every lay-delegate elected will make it a point to be there.

Rev. Henry Stanley, with whom some of our readers are acquainted, writes from Circleville, Kansas: "Our Circleville banker wants you to send him the "Montana Methodist." He has seen a few copies and speaks in high terms of it. If times were not quite so hard I could send you quite a number of names. Every one that I have heard speak of the paper say it is one of the brightest, and newsiest little papers that they have seen. I am so glad that it is doing so well. We have the best prospect for winter wheat that I have ever seen in the state. Plenty of rain, grass good, stock doing well, a good prospect for apples, peaches and fruit of all kinds."

The committee appointed to select the place of holding the next General Conference, have fixed upon Memphis, Tennessee.

Rev. M. B. Chapman takes the place of Rev. J. W. Lawrance, as associate editor of the "St. Louis Advocate." We are sorry to lose Bro. Lawrance, but rejoice that our old friend has been chosen to fill the place. He wields the pen of a ready and a charming writer.

The "Arkansas Methodist" was the first to bring us the plan of Episcopal Visitations; and the list of appropriations. Brother Bennett is wide-awake.

We had the pleasure recently of attending the Sunday School at Grantsdale. The Superintendent, Brother Shearer, is modest and unassuming in his manner, but a true Christian, and is assisted by a corps of earnest and efficient teachers. The music is led by Miss Haunson, and tne singing is just splendid. A genuine enthusiasm prevails and the school moves right along, for the people—old and young,"have a mind to work."

Not long ago we made a flying trip to Butte City. While at the parsonage that faithful pastor and zealous worker, Rev. J. E. Squires, in giving an account of his work, went over the church-roll calling the name and giving a bit of personal history of each of the thirty-three persons who have been added to it since last Conference. It was intensely interesting. He knew where they all lived, where they came from and something of the religious history and status of each one. As we witnessed his solicitude for each one of his flock, we could not help thinking of the words, "And he called his own sheep by name and leadeth them out," and again, "I am the good shepherd and know my sheep and am known of mine."

Will not our friends who are in arrears, kindly send us a dollar for the "Methodist." Please try to get an additional name and dollar to keep it company. While so many from every quarter are speaking kind words for the paper let us do all we can to extend its circulation and increase its usefulness. New subscribers are coming in from the East and from the West. Keep the good work moving.

If all goes well the next paper will have something to say about the famous Big Bend country in Washington, and more concerning our church work in that region.

FROM MUSSELSHELL VALLEY.

Brother W. S. McMurry, who is a brother of Rev. W. W. McMurry, of the Mo. Conference, writes from Martinsdale:

I have received two copies of your paper and am well pleased with them. They gave me a great deal of information about Southern Methodism in Montana. I have always felt a great interest in the success of our church in Montana, as there are so many Missourians here. I think at least two-thirds of the people in this part of the country are Missourians. So far as I know, there are about seven (7) Southern Methodists, in this (Musselshell) Valley. We are 30 miles east of White Sulphur Springs. Have been here six months, and there has been no preaching nearer than the Springs. The people don't seem to care for anything only to make money. Some of them are rich already.

We expect soon to move into the Judith Basin. When I was but a youth, I recollect that Brother Stateler used to preach at my father's house, as there was not any church-house in that country then. It was about the year 1837, on the Shelbyville circuit, Missouri Conference. Oh, how I would love to see the dear old man. I send you one dollar for the "Methodist." Would love so much for you to come and see and preach for us, but I know your hands are full." [We would take great pleasure in a visit over there if it were possible to get away.—Editor.]

FROM TODD'S CHAPEL, MO.

Dear Brother Stanley:—

We are receiving the "Montana Methodist" regularly every two weeks. I am glad that you are making a live paper. We like it very much. I send you a dollar to pay for it one year. My youngest daughter, Fannie,is at home in bad health, not able to sit up. She is a Baptist, but reads your paper regularly and gave me 50 cents to help pay for it. [That speaks well for her taste! We know of other good Baptists who do likewise.—Editor.] I am glad in my heart that the blessed cause of God and Methodism is succeeding so well out in Montana and the West, and all over the Southern Conferences. It does my soul good, and I feel thankful to our blessed Lord for blessing the church of our choice so greatly. Oh, that the piety and consecration of her ministry and membership may be increased a thousand fold, that the Lord may smile on us and keep us in the good way to the end of time. May God bless you in Montana.

Tell Brother Henry Stanley that we still keep up the old chapel (which he built with his own hands when a young man and before he was converted). We had a good meeting which lasted four weeks in February and March; 25 additions to the church, and some good material, I hope. We have a prosperous Sunday School, which kept going all the winter, for the first time. I hope it will continue. We have a faithful Superintendent, who lives near the church. I am getting feeble and cannot attend to it as I used to do. Am 71 years old, but am able to attend all the quarterly meetings and Sunday School every Sunday. I still keep up the frame around the little graves near the Chapel.

P. T. S.

The above is from one of the best and purest Christian men that it was ever our privilege to meet, and whom we have known from our childhood. If there were more such, the cause of religion would prosper more at home and abroad, for it would have material as well as spiritual force,with which to make its conquests. Thank God for the presence in this world, of men whose consecrated and consistant lives and triumphant faith, are an inspiration and a blessing. They stand as lights along the shore to guide us to the portals of glory, where we trust our brother shall have a triumphant entrance, and a "welcome home" when his work on earth is done.—Editor.

No Place For Christians.

The Philadelphia annual Conference of the M. E. Church, which closed its sessions in Philadelphia Tuesday, adopted, among other strong resolutions against the license system, the following: Apr. 1891.

"That it is our solemn conviction that the time has fully come, in the great fight for Prohibition, when all good citizens, and especially all Christians, should in every way withhold their support from all organizations that favor the licensing of the liquor traffic, and recognizing its prohibition as the most momentous issue now before the country. They should lay aside all minor considerations and band themselves together as one great national organization, by whatever name called, which shall have for its supreme object the total and perpetual destruction of the traffic in intoxicating drink,"—Ex.

We Must Have a College.

The District Conference at Stevensville memorialized the Annual Conference to take steps looking to the early establishment of a college or a school of high grade in Montana. It is high time that we were doing something along this line. We have been answering that thirteeenth question in the Discipline, "What is doing for the cause of education"? in the negative long enough. We have long been thinking, and talking, and waiting for something to turn up. It is time to go to work and turn up something. It is as much our duty to educate our children and "train them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" as it is to preach the Gospel and build churches and parsonages. It is more so, "for if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." We must "show piety at home" before we can hope to command the confidence and respect of those abroad. We are guilty concerning those whom God has put under our care to train for Him. We might as well send them from our door without food and clothing as without moral and religious training, and it would be as consistent to ask our neighbors to furnish the one and the other, while the child would fare about the same in either case, so far as his relation to us would be concerned.

If we do not provide means for the culture of our young people, we forfeit in a measure their confidence and respect, and to send them to other schools is to open the way for their alienation from us. To send them away from the State to our church elsewhere is expensive and otherwise unsatisfactory. Scores of young people have grown up here in Montana who might have been educated by us and their talents would now be devoted to the advancement of our cause, who are in other branches of the church, or not in any. It is becoming a serious question with our preachers and not a few of our lay men who have families growing up in Montana, "What shall we do with our children, where can they be properly educated"? Many are not willing to send to the public schools, which in some cases are schools of vice. Besides, they do not usually furnish the higher training that is sought. To send them away is impossible. We think that a school under the control of the M. E. Church, South, in Montana is a necessity, and the time has come to strike for it. Our occupancy of this field is no longer an experiment, but is now a fixed fact. We are anchored to the soil, and are here to stay. A church-school will contribute as much to our permanence and prosperity as anything we could establish. We cannot do our work without it. The money is here to build and endow it. Our citizens are public spirited and believe in education, but they will not tender their money until we make a beginning, put something in sight, show them that we mean business and are worthy of their confidence. Let our people and our friends whom the Lord has blessed with wealth and who are expecting to leave it for a good cause when they go hence, consider the claims that God has upon them for this work right now, and make a free will offering to the Lord at once The share that the lawyers will get of the Davis estate just because the deceased neglected to make a will, would endow a college that would have educated thousands of Montana's sons and daughters and have been a monument to perpetuate the founder's name for generations to come. As it is, the vast estate, the hoarding of a lifetime, becomes a bone of contention, a curse instead of a blessing. How many will profit by this sad example?

Let our preachers agitate this subject, let our people talk about it and pray over it, have a mind to work and commence the work at once. "Let us rise up and build."

How I wish, sometimes, that I had millions! I believe if our people were properly appealed to they would respond, and this work which is so badly needed would be done.

The Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, met in Wilmington, N. C., the 8th of May 1891.

On account of the straitened financial condition of the Board and the great expense of a trip from Montana and California to Wilmington, at the suggestion of the Bishops having charge of the Western Conferences the members from the West did not attend the meeting of the Board.

The state of the Missionary Treasury was alarming, there being a debt of $118,000 that had accrued during the past year. At its last meeting the Board counted on an increase in the collections, whereas, on account of the financial pressure in the business world, there had been a falling off. The banks are much more strict in the securities to be given, and it will require great care and good management to carry the Board through the summer when but little money is coming in. The appropriations for the ensuing year are $260,000—$62,000 less than last year. This not only prevents advance, but necessitates retrenchment. Bishop Hendrix writes, "Montana gets $4,000, following the reduction made in all those cases." Our appropriation last year was $6,000—$2,000 this year. The reduction is not on account of a lack of interest or confidence in our work, but because the money was not on hand to appropriate. The reduction in our appropriation was about the same as in other home fields, except Denver and New Mexico, where there is but little change from last year. The Columbia Conference gets $4,000, and East Columbia $3,500. The assessments are the same as last year—$400 to the Montana Conference.

The Board resolved from hence forth to confine the aggregate of its appropriations each year to that of the collections for the previous year. t had to do this in order to get cred it from the banks in paying its drafts.

In order to provide against a danger that this paper once called attention to, the Board decided that the calls for new missionaries shall be limited to the number for which the Board at its annual meeting shall make either "absolute" or "special" appropriations; also that under this head no missionaries shall be sent out until the money is in the hands of the treasurer, or satisfactory assurance given that it will be paid. This is wise.

The next meeting of the Board will be held in Nashville, Tenn.

That our readers may see something of the demands of our mission work, and how far short we come of meeting their demands at present, append the following table, showing the amonnts "asked for" in the first columun, and in the second the amount granted to the various fields where we have missions:

Brazil,	$49,530	$27,730
Central Mexico,	93,732	40,114
China,	40,950	33,060
Japan,	90,955	35,965
Mexican Border,	25,856	21,735
Northwest Mexico,	55,933	17,834
Indian,	30,728	20,000
German in Texas,	6,475	2,755
Ger. in Miss. and La.,	1,550	1,000
Columbia,	10,150	4,000
East Columbia,	——	2,500
Pacific,	15,550	3,600
Los Angeles,	12,250	4,800
Denver,	17,150	6,500
New Mexico,	13,000	5,200
Montana,	9.250	4,000
Western.	7,460	2,000
Northwest Texas,	1,750	1,000
West Texas,	1,200	900
Florida and Cuban,	7,160	2,500
West Virginia,	3,275	1,162
Offices, etc.,	20,000	17,000

What an incentive to every member and friend of our church to do all in his power to help send the Gospel into these expanding and whitining fields.

——o——

Notes.

While we have no word of censure for our brethren, the members of the Board of Missions, who are honest, conscientious God-fearing men, yet we cannot avoid the belief that they have erred in the appropriations made to the conferences here in the Northwest. True, the funds were short, and the appropriations of last year had to be scaled, but why not let the scaling be proportionate? Why give Brazil, Denver and New Mexico and the other fields almost the same as last year and cut our already small appropriation down one third or one half? The missionaries sent to some of the foreign fields in response to special appeals and special collections will off-set the apparent retrenchment in those fields.

Already we have been wondering how some of our brethren here in the Northwest would get through to the end of the present year. Now the wonder is increased as to what will become of them next year if they continue in the field, with only half the present support given them and their families. Did some of our leading men know what we know of the hardship and privation that has been and is being experienced by as true men as the sun shines upon, in order to sustain our cause and open up a highway for our God through these mountains and valleys, they would surely devise more liberal things for them. It is a great mystery to us how the East Columbia Conference will possibly meet the growing demands upon it in such a promising and rapidly developing field, and support even the men it now has with the insignificant sum of $2,500. The day of miracles of this kind, however, is not past. Because men are willing to spend the strength of their lives for the upbuilding of the church and live on the wind is no reason why they should be required to do it. It ought not so to be.

But this is no new thing under the sun. We have been disappointed, and in straits before, here in Montana. We are not discouraged, and do not think of giving up, or even drawing in our lines, although we may not be able to expand either East or West as we hoped to do. The impetus that our work has gained the past year will help to carry it forward and tide us over the "narrows," to where there is good sailing again. The fact is, we must have another thousand dollars from some source to add to that appropriated by the Board, even if we have to press one of our Secretaries, good Doctor Morrison, into service, and have him take up "special collections" for this purpose. The West surely has some claim upon his brilliant talents, and we can use him this fall as well as any time. We hope he will come to our Conference where he has strong friends who will give him a cordial welcome and all the hard work he is able to do. In the meantime let our brethren keep heart. Be strong and of good courage, and press the battle to the gates. The best of all, God is with us. He is able to overrule these things for our good and His glory. Who knows but He will put it into the hearts of our people to be more liberal with their means, and more ready to co-operate in all our work. Let us direct our efforts along this line, pray to Him for direction trust in Him for help and go forward to victory. A few sermons like that preached by Brother Couey at Stevensville, if they could be heard by the people, ought soon to bring several of our charges well nigh the point of self support, which would release a goodly sum for use in the regions beyond.

OBITUARIES.

DIED, Jan. 23, 1891, age 7 yrs., 1 mo., Willie J. Lump, son of Jacob and Addie May Lump. Little Willie suffered intensely during his brief sickness, and from tender pity the Angels soon came, and bore his little spirit to the God that gave it. The writer preached at his funeral to a large congregation of neighbors and sorrowing friends and loved ones, from 2 Samuel, 12:23. He was the pride of his parents' heart, and often anticipated their wishes, and gladly did them loving service.

He heard us preach one night, and the Spirit of God seemed to work powerfully with him, and he wept as if heart broken during the preaching.

Weep not, dear parents. God wanted the bud to be transplanted to fairer climes, where Heaven's breezes might gently blow upon it, and open its petals to shine through all the ages of a beeutiful eternity. He is calling from across the waters, "Come this Way"! Be true to God and you shall one day meet Him where parting is no more.

FRED. ST. CLAIR.

Fair View, Wash., May 11, 1891.

DIED, March 5, 1891, Clara Jane, infant daughter of Charley and Keziah Hermon, age 6 mos. and 7 days.

Death is but the gate of life. Little Clara is singing the song of redemption among thousands of children in the glory World now. Heaven seems nearer, as one by one the buds of earth are carried there to make it sweeter and brighter for their coming. Weep not, dear parents. "She is not dead but sleepeth." She seemed a cherub, who had lost her way, and wandered hither, so her stay was short, and it was most meet that she should be no delver in earth's clod, or need to pause and cleanse her feet to stand before her God. O, best Word–Evermore.

F. F. ST. CLAIR, Pastor.

MRS. MAGGIE CRUM, daughter of Elijah Chaffin, departed this life at her home near Grantsdale, the 6th of May, 1891. She was born near Corvallis, Montana, in 1871. She was a consistent member of the Church of the Disciples, was blessed with a cheerful disposition, and the friend of all who knew her. We tender our spmpathies to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

From Fayette, Mo.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST:

We are truly happy to know that "the Lord was ha' thinkin' o' you," and that your life was spared, through His merciful providence, in that frightful stage race near Ravalla "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; * * *, though he fall he shall not be utterly cast down, for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand," Ps. 37: 23, 24. God bless you more and more and make your life, if possible, thousand times more useful in His vineyard.

We have had a good year on our—Fayette Circuit, so far; and are hoping, praying, trusting, working for grander success.

We have had some good revivals, and have received about forty souls into the church since conference. Our finances are up to date, and all our collections paid in full ro provided far.

We have some as grand good men on this work, as any work I ever served.

Ten precious souls have been transfered to the Church triumphant. They went home shouting the praises of Him who had "brused" satan under their feet and give them "victory over the last enemy." These Methodists die well.

So it ever has been, and so may it ever be while Christ the Redeemer has people in the World.

We have helped other preachers, and witnessed some good revivals on other charges. There are two grand men here who started for China and Japan, soon to reinforce our noble corps of missionaries there.

One of them—Rev. Parks—will be supported by the S. S. at Fayette, and the other - Rev. Davis—will be supported by the S. S. of St. John's Church, St. Louis. This is as it ought to be. Each good Sunday School throughout the connection ought to have a missionary in the field; and when one is not able to support a missionary two or more schools aught to combine and send a missionary into the Foreign field. Query: Why is it so hard to get the Missionary Board to accept and approve a man who offers himself for the foreign work?

The Board says: "When the money is in the Treasury to send you, then we will consider your case."

Has the great head of the Church made a mistake? We have prayed Him to send out laborers into His vineyard.

Here they come, as good and as pure as earth affords, knocking at the door of the church to be sent as embassadors of the King of Kings to foreign and heathen lands.

"The Montana Methodist"

But while He has called these grand men, the blessed Saviour has forgotten to touch the hearts and pocket-books of the Church, and, lo! there is no money in the Treasury to send them! Somebody has made a mistake; we in praying or Christ in sending.

Would it not be more in accord with our Holy Christianity if the board would walk a little by faith?

Would it not be more honoring to Christ, and more like men of faith, when a good man knocks at the door of the Church, for the Board to pass upon and accept him, if he be a suitable man, and say: "We will send you, for He who, in response to the earnest cry of the Church, has put it into your heart to give your life to this work will also devise means by which you shall be sustained?"

I believe that there is always enough consecrated wealth in the Church to send any man whom Christ calls to the mission work.

The trouble has been to get the board to pass on, accept and give us the man. Fayette Sunday School has been ready for some years to send a man, and they thought at one time they had the man, but the board would not pass on him. Let the board give us the men, consecrated and true, and we will soon find the money to send a missionary to any part of the World Christ wants him.

Central College is doing a grand work; but is needing $100,000 or $200,000 to put up new buildings and fully equip the College for efficient work and future success.

——o——

A Lady Among Savages.

It is a queer sensation, to those not used to it, to be the centre of attraction to hundreds of people, to be surrounded by a sea of faces, and all staring hard at you with different expressions of wonder, curiosity and amusement. But then I was the first white woman that the Duallas of the Cameroons River, West Africa, had ever seen, and so it was no wonder that they were astonished at my appearance in their village.

Everybody left off their different occupations and followed us wherever we went, shouting and laughing, and all struggling to get near me. Crowds of them ran on in front, and then, turning round to stare for a few seconds, would rush on again to keep up with us.

But my embarrassment at being the cause of such excitement soon wore off, for I in my turn had much to see and wonder at in a West African village. The people were about the same height as Europeans, their skin very dark and sometimes nearly black. Neither men nor women wore anything but a waist-cloth, which in the case of chiefs was of a rich material and bright color. Most of the people were tattooed, especially the young girls, whose cheeks, noses, and foreheads were strongly marked, and thought very beautiful.

The most fashionable of these girls wore their hair (which was crisp and wooly) cut into the shape of circles culminating at the top of the head, and between each two of the rows were bright-colored beads and brass ornaments. Huge brass pins were stuck into the wool behind the ears. They also wore very long and large brass ear-rings, and quantities of colored beads around the neck and wrists.

The streets were straight and spotlessly clean, and the little bamboo houses with palm-thatched roofs on either sides the road were very neat and pretty; and here and there were lovely palm-trees and huge cotton-woods.

"The families cook and eat under these trees," said Mr. A——, who acted as our guide, "for you see the houses have neither windows nor fireplaces. Just peep in here, and you will see the only furniture is the bamboo bed and these few stools and calabashes."

Just then a slim, good-looking girl broke through the crowd, and rushing up to Mr. A——, seized hold of his arm and began talking very fast and earnestly, as if begging some favor.

"Who is that girl; and do tell me what she wants," I asked.

"She says her mother is very ill, and she wants me to make her well. The Duallas have a horribly cruel custom with their sick: if the patient does not get well in a week or two he or she is taken out in the bush about four or five miles from the town, placed upon a rude bamboo bedstead, and left utterly alone, a woman coming once a day to give the patient food and water, and to light a fire. The poor wretch of course soon dies of fright at being left to the mercy of the wild beasts, whose growls and yells alone break the monotony of the long dreary night. But the Baptist missionaries have nearly got the people to do away with this wicked custom, and the more horrible one of beating to death the unfortunate person who is said by the n'gambi man (fortune-teller) to have bewitched the sick person. The Duallas have some sentiment in them, for they bury the dead under the houses which they occupied when alive, and they would think it most cruel and unfeeling to cast the deceased out of their homes."

A large, fat, important-looking man, with striped waist-cloth, now came up to us, and asked us if we should like to see a dance. He possessed four European chairs (for he was a great chief), and we sat down under the shade of a beautiful cotton-wood, and the dance began.

A ring was formed of boys of all sizes, who, with their elbows drawn close to their sides, walkedy slowly round, twitching every muscle of the body, while the women and girls, forming an outer ring, stood around clapping their hands to a sort of measure. This dance was curious but neither beautiful nor inspiriting.

We were next shown a big wooden drum, which Mr. A——called the Dualla telephone, and he explained to us how, by different ways of beating it, a conversation could be carried on by natives two miles apart.

Just as we were about to go, Mr. A——motioned to me to look at two girls standing close by, one of whom was doing something to the other's eye with what looked like a bodkin.

"She is taking out an eyelash." laughed he. "Have you not noticed that none of the Duallas have eyelashes? They think they destroy the sight, so they pluck out the hairs as soon as they grow."

Crowds of people followed us to the river, and I found it very mortifying to my dignity to be snatched up and carried to the boat like a baby. Two other boatman took Mr. Ker and Mr. A——on their backs and carried them also on board, for to say nothing of the crocodiles, a chill in West Africa means fever, and we had had too much of that.

The natives, however, came wading out by dozens, struggling to get the last shake of my hand, with the flattering compliment: "Now that we have seen the white woman we can die contented."

THE LIBRARY.

Every Sunday School library ought to be a great educational force working in harmony with the other departments of the Sunday School. It should aim at the conversion and edification of the scholars. The librarian, therefore, should be one of the most competent persons in the school. He should be thoroughly in sympathy with its objects. He should be heartily sustained in all legitimate efforts to do his work effectively.

The books which children read exert untold influence over them. It is to be feared that this fact is not properly appreciated by Sunday School Boards and Library Committees.

We are glad that the public libraries of the country are giving much attention just now to the reading of the young. Those who have the selection of libraries for our Sunday Schools ought to do likewise.—S. S. Journal.

——o——

Work will not Hurt.

Remember, my son, you have to work, whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around, you will see that the men who are most able to live the rest of their days without work, are men who worked the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with over-work. They die sometimes, but it's because they quit work at 6:00 p. m., and don't go home until 2:00 a. m. It is the interval that kills my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, and gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday.

I'll Go It.

I recollect a striking case of conversion among the great mill-owners. I had been told of one of them that was a very miserly man. He had a great thirst for riches, and had been spoken of as a very hopeless case. The revival had reached a large number of that class of men; but this man had seemed to stand out, and his worldly-mindedness and his miserly spirit had seemed to eat him up. But contrary to my expectations, and to the expectations of others, he in his turn called on me. I invited him to my home, and had a very serious conversation with him. He acknowledged to me that he had been a great miser; and that he had once said to God, that if he would give him another hundred thousand pounds, he would be willing to be eternally damned. I was very much shocked at this; but could see clearly that he was terribly convicted of the sinfulness of that state of mind.

I then repeated to him a part of the sixth chapter of Matthew, where Christ warns men against laying up treasure on earth, and recommends them to lay up treasure in heaven. I finally came to that verse: "But seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." He leaned oward me, and appeared to be as much interested as if it were all new to him. When I repeated to him this verse, he said to me, with the utmost earnestness, "Do you believe that?" I said, "Be sure I believe it. It is the word of God." "Well then," said he, "I'll go it;" and sprang upon his feet in the utmost excitement. "If that is true," said he, "I will give up all to Christ at once." He knelt immediately down, and I presented his case to God in prayer, and he seemed to break down like a child. From that time he appeared to be a very different man. His miserly feelings all seemed to melt away. He took hold of that work like a man in earnest, and went and hired, at his own cost, a city missionary, and set him to work to win souls for Christ.—Finney.

He was Tired of the Rope.

We were at the foot of Mt. Blanc, in the village of Chamouni. A sad thing happened the day before we reached the village. A young physician, of Boston, had determined to reach the heights of Mount Blanc. He accomplished the feat, and the little village was illumined in his honor; the flag was flying from the little hut on the mountain side—that all who have visited Charmouni well remember—that told of his victory. But after he had ascended and descended in safety, as far as the hut, he wanted then to be relieved from his guide; he wanted to be free from the rope, and he insisted that he could go alone. The guide remonstrated with him, told him it was not safe, but he was tired of the rope and declared he would be free of it. The guide had to yield. The young man had only gone a short distance when his foot slipped on the ice and he could not stop himself from sliding down the inclined icy steeps. The rope was gone so the guide could not hold him or pull him back. And out on a shelving piece of ice lay the dead body of the young physician, as it was pointed out to me. The bells had been rung, the village illuminated in honor of his success, but, alas, in a fatal moment he refused to be guided, he was tired of the rope.

Do we not get tired of the rope? God's providences hold us, restrain us and we get tired sometimes. We need a guide, and shall till the dangerous paths are over. Never get disengaged from your Guide; let your prayer be "Lead Thou me on," and sometime the bells of heaven will ring that you are safe at home!—

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—Words utterly fail to express the joy that thrilled our hearts as we crossed over the line, first set foot on Oregon soil and greeted our brethren beloved, of the Pendleton District, as they were in Conference session at Ingall's Chapel, on the 29th of May. It was pleasant to behold the great and famous Walla Walla Valley, with its beautiful city embowered in shade trees; its gardens, orchards, vineyards, and almost boundless fields of waving grain, but it was nothing to compare with the emotions that stirred our heart as we entered the chapel and looked into the faces of the heroic men who are endeavoring to possess this fair domain for the Lord Jesus Christ. Heart answered to heart. The joy was mutual. We represented the work "on the tops of the mountains," in the midst of the Rockies, while their borders extended to the Cascades, and some of them had been raised up on the Pacific coast and had seen service in California and western Oregon. How glad we were to hear their reports, learn of their trials and their triumphs, and catch their spirit as they came fresh from victorious fields. They gave us a right royal welcome. We are better and stronger since mingling our prayers, our tears and our songs with theirs. The Lord of Hosts is with us. Brethren, let us joyfully stand on the borders of our Land, for Jesus Christ, our Father's Son, bids us undismayed go on.

—Something has been said in some of our papers about "Cowboy Conferences." Well, we wonder what they will say when we tell them that we have a converted "cowboy" preacher here in the Northwest? Rev. F. C. Adkins tells us that he rode the range for twelve years, when he was converted under the ministry of Brother R. B Crego, and is now one of the most earnest and successful young preachers in the East Columbia Conference. He has had many seals to his ministry this year.

—We were pleased to hear of the success that attends the labors of Rev. Michael Larkin, who has had a most difficult field, but has proven true and faithful. When a boy is compelled to leave home for the sake of his religion, as was our Brother when he was converted, his father being a Roman Catholic, it shows there is good material in him. Thanks be unto God for the promises and the conscious presence of one who sticketh closer than a brother; who has said that though all men, even fathers and mothers, should forsake us He will never leave nor forsake. His promises are, yea and amen.

—Rev. E. G. Michael presided over the Conference with entire satisfaction. He is blessed with a well-balanced brain, is not without wit, is true to Methodism and to the preachers under him, and pleasant and entertaining in his manner. No wonder he is universally beloved. How we were "filled with his company" during the short time that we were together. He told us more about our work in Oregon than we ever knew before.

—Twice we have now been entertained by Brother P. M. Bell, though he is a bachelor. Well, he knows how to suit the tastes of his guests and to make them feel at home. We are pleased to know that his zeal for the Master is not without good results.

—Rev. G. H. Gibbs preached a thoughtful and impressive sermon on the nature, importance and result of a closer and better acquaintance with God. His style is conversational. He engages the attention of the children, and instructs and edifies the grown people as well. He has done a fine work at Dayton.

—Though afflicted in body, our Brother Crego prospers in things spiritual. He is "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," sings and shouts along the journey, and is "happy all the day." No wonder that God blesses his ministry and gives him souls for his hire.

—It was a treat to spend a night with Brother Howard and hear him tell of the work along the Pacific Coast and of brethren whom we knew in other places and who are now in that field. We laid awake till the wee small hours, when tired nature was compelled to seek its sweet restorer. Bro. H. is a "wise master-builder that needeth not to be ashamed." His work speaks for itself.

—Our Converted engineer, Rev. Henry Barnhart, comes to Conference flushed with victory and full of faith and zeal for the Master. This has been the happiest year of his life. He watches and prays—for opportunities to talk to people about their souls and to encourage them to seek the Lord. It was a joy to behold him leading several young persons to the altar and then rejoicing when they were converted. He is bound to have passengers on the Gospel train that he conducts.

—It is interesting and amazing, yea, inspiring, to behold the displays of divine grace as manifested in the diversity of character found among our workers in the Pendleton District. Not only is there a converted cowboy and a locomotive engineer, but while over there we met up with a converted sailor, in the person of Rev. J. B. Chamberlain, whose experience thrills us beyond that of any man we have met in many a day. He was born in Rochester, N. Y., went to sea when a boy and made his home on the waves, sailing over every ocean and into almost every port in the known world. The Spirit of God got hold of him and he was converted while at sea away out in the Indian Ocean. He was the chief mate; he commenced at once to hold meetings with the sailors, and was pronounced crazy by his captain. Nine of his companions were converted, and when we reached port at Boston, they all marched up to the sailor's bethel and were baptized and received into the church. When the war broke out he owned a third interest in three vessels, which were destroyed by the famous Alabama, and all their value lost. He joined our church at Fresno, California, in 1871, was licensed to preach in '78 in Oregon, joined the Conference, but on account of getting his limb badly broken which disabled him for a long time he refused to be admitted into full connection. He is now a local elder, is sixty-five years old, and preaches with remarkable eloquence and power. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him. He has been in the heart of heathendom, seen men kill and eat one another, and narrowly escaped the same fate himself, and has been present and watched the transforming power of the Gospel of Christ as witnessed in the character and life and civilization of those people. He is strong in body and mind, and in faith and the Holy Spirit. Many have been converted under his ministry. It was quite fitting that he should be a delegate to the next Annual Conference. He says that his anchor is cast within the vail, and he expects one day that his barque will round the headlands of the better world and make the port of heaven in safety. Glory be to God for such an experience and for such a hope, one that is an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast. May the Lord make our brother abundantly during the remainder of his days upon earth.

—We greatly enjoyed the company of Brother D. M. Jesse, who carried us from Walla Walla out to the chapel in his buggy. He is one of the pillars in the church there. He entertained Marvin and all our Bishops and leading men who have passed that way since his day.

—It was a pleasure to meet our Brother M. R. Hanger again, though we were sorry to see him suffering with his eyes. He is devoted to the church of his choice and rejoices in his prosperity.

—Bro. I. J. Saunders, a layman from Eagle Valley, made a most stirring appeal in behalf of the church in his valley. He went there when there was no organized religious influence, and feels the need of religion. He needs and must have help from the Board for the church building there. We doubt not that he will get it. Let application be made in the regular way.

—Brother W. A. Kirk has shown great fidelity to our cause and much efficiency by carrying on a good Sunday School at Heppner under discouraging circumstances. After all, it is a privilege and an honor to bear burdens, if such we may call it, for the Master. We would be very uncomfortable if they were all taken off and we were left without anything to do.

—What about a local preacher who has not preached a sermon for eleven years, and who would make an efficient Sunday School Superintendent, but will not act, and in consequence there is no Sunday School at that point? Well, there is something wrong. There should either be more preaching and some Sunday School work or one preacher less in the church. It is a positive sin for a man to accept a trust from which he receives his living, and then to knowingly speak or act in a way as to discourage or hinder the success of the enterprise that he engages and is expected to build up. If he cannot conscientiously keep his engagement, let him give place to another who has more faith and greater efficiency in that line of work.

—If our lay members, as a rule, had more of the enthusiasm and the spirit of liberality and willingnets to make sacrifice for the cause of religion that is possessed by many of our preachers the work of the Lord would prosper more than it does. And why not? What right has one part of God's people to hoard wealth and live in luxury while others are starving, the cause of the Master is languishing and souls are perishing? Oh, brother, "there's another man, there's another man" in that old stranded wreck from which you were rescued by the life boat of the Gospel. How can you be at ease until you have done all in your power to save him? God calls you to "go or send," and that right now.

ALONG THE LINE.

The following notes were gathered by the editor from the verbal reports of the various charges on the Pendleton District, as given in by the preachers and laymen in attendance at the District Conference.

POMEROY.

Rev. Michael Lurkin, pastor: There are some things favorable, some otherwise, on this charge. There have been four or five conversions. One church built. At Covella we have large congregations, and a revival spirit prevails. A lot paid for, worth $150, and $800 subscribed towards a church building: In a great portion of the country adjacent the people are without preaching, and desire our ministry. Not much doing in Sunday School work and not much for support of the ministry. Only $25 paid in thus far.

DAYTON.

G. H. Gibbs: We have the nicest church in Dayton, built this year, cost $3,600. Eighteen members received this year, congregations tolerably good, church in fair condition spiritually. Two Sunday Schools, 1 with 120 scholars in Dayton, 1 with 33 scholars in the country; $75 raised for Sunday Schools. The Conf. collections are well up, pastor's salary more than half paid—will be paid in full. There is a gradual growth. The church is in better condition than it has ever been before, spiritually, financially—every way. There is a fair attendance at prayer-meetings. It should be made a station. There is good material for us in the country adjacent.

WALLA WALLA.

P. M. Bell: Nine members have been received this year, and $374 raised for church purposes. The financial plan is that of assessment. Pastor's salary will be paid in full. Part of the members very spiritual, part are cold. Upon the whole, they are about on an average. There is one Sunday School with about 60 scholars. There are two appointments, one of which is at Ingall's chapel, in the midst of some of the richest country in the world, and some excellent people. The work is too much for one man, and should be divided. Another church will likely be built in an adjacent community. There are some noble Christian people in this charge. We have a good church and parsonage in Walla Walla.

HEPPNER.

Brother Charles Kirk is supplying this charge. Our church is not strong in the town of Heppner, though we have a good church there. We must have a station preacher, who can devote his entire time to the one point. Circuit is forty-five miles in extent. Seven appointments, with work enough, if all the places were occupied, for three preachers. One Sunday School in town with an attendance of 80. Two other schools in the country with 35 scholars each, and doing well. The spiritual condition in the country places is good. A majority of our people have family worship. There is not much financial system. A few persons do most of the paying. We have the sympathy of the public. There is a wide field outside of Heppner. There is no preacher in the country lying south. It ought to be occupied.

LA GRANDE.

Henry Barnhart: The situation is serious! There is a battle going on and it is hot! When he went there he found all the churches occupied and no place to preach in the town, but we have now an appointment there, hold prayer-meetings, which are increasing in size and in interest. The houses are getting too small. We have bought three lots that are worth $400, and they are paid for. They are well located and the outlook is very promising. Have commenced a subscription for a church building. At Moss Chapel we have a church worth $2,000, and a parsonage worth $500, a Sunday School with 80 in attendance. Heard the Macedonian call from Ladd's canyon, and went over. We gained a great victory; had 12 accessions, and now instead of a dancing club we have prayer and class-meetings that are well attended. The people are intelligent, and the prospect is bright for a large class. At Moss Chapel there is family worship in every household among our people. The subscription plan is observed in finances. Salary of P. E. and P. C. about half paid. There is fear that the collections will not be full. We greatly need a parsonage at La Grande, so that the preacher could be right among the people. The pastor is full of hope. La Grande is growing, and we must have a church and Sunday School right in the midst of the increasing population. Brethren, don't be afraid of the towns. The people there need our service, and will welcome us.

PENDLETON.

M. V. Howard: Three preaching places, three Sunday Schools, 90 scholars in attendance at Pendleton, and 46 at Juniper. One just organized at Foster with 30 scholars. Eight have joined the church from the Sunday School at Pendleton. Such results are had in view: 36 have been added to the church at Pendleton, 3 at Juniper and 10 at Foster—a new point. Trying to follow the discipline in finances. The Church Conference arranged for payments to be made monthly. Preacher's salary, and also the collections in arrears at present. The latter will be full. Preached on Missions and took a subscription of $35. Some of the people have family prayers, some do not. Prayer and class-meetings very well attended. Have an Epworth League with 35 members. The young people are reading the literature recommended, which is very interesting and profitable. The Presiding Elder states that Bro. H. has been at Pendleton two years. Nothing there when he came. Now we have a church of 100 members, a church building worth $3,000, with the parsonage included. It has been a signal victory.

EAGLE VALLEY.

R. B. Crego: This is a new charge, but when the pastor went there he found some noble, true brethren. With sickness and many infirmities and hindrances he had tried to meet the emergency. The people are from Tennessee, Georgia, Texas, Mississippi, Missouri, Scotland, Canada—almost everywhere. Commenced a meeting. Sometimes there were half a dozen out, sometimes more. There was great prejudice at first, but it began to abate. Brother Michael came to hold Quarterly Meeting. God had already blessed some, 11 more were added. Brother Yoakum came and helped; and there were 14 more accessions. The people now said, "We must have a church." A mass meeting called, a place has been selected, the ground donated, a Missourian started the subscription and we now have about $900 subscribed.

We greatly need help from the Board, and must have it if we secure the house. The valley is 3x9 miles in extent, and is very productive. It has a population of about 450—65 families—and is adjacent to a rich mining district. Pine Valley is 12 miles away, is 6x13 miles in extent, "the home of Alfalfa," about 700 people; a promising mining camp 7 miles away where $4,000,000 have been expended, and not a church! Sparta is 12 miles from Eagle Valley, where we have just made a start. There are other places that might be occupied. The whole country is full of mineral. The famous "Seven Devils" district is near here. Ten children have been baptized. Pastor's salary is away behind. Conference collections have been pledged, and will be full. The people want the District Conference next year, and will convey the members from the railroad, which is 45 miles. There is one Sunday School with 52 scholars, 5 regular appointments, most of them semi-monthly. With a little help now we can plant our church permanently in one of the richest sections of country in the world, and we must not let the opportunity pass.

BOISE VALLEY.

The pastor, Brother Eagle, a local preacher who is supplying this charge, could not attend the Conference which was 400 miles from his charge. The Presiding Elder reported the work. The field is new. Father Newton had preached there in early times. Rev. Grandison Curtiss was appointed to the charge many years ago, but was called home to heaven before he could get there. Brother Eagle went there last fall. He had no members to start with, but he had courage, and went to work. Organized at the first Quarterly meeting with 14 members. Another meeting was held at which 55 were converted, many of whom were added to our church. Two societies now. When the church was organized half the members were women, but they were plucky, and went to work. The pastor's salary is $400, and P. E's. $50, the latter just enough to pay travelling expenses. It is pretty well paid up. There are 2 Sunday Schools, one with 25 and the other with 45 scholars. There is a large stretch of rich country that is rapidly settling up—room for a presiding elder's district. Boise City has 5,000 people, and is the capital of Idaho. We ought by all means to have a man there, and at least three more in the country adjacent. There is a good opportunity for us. The country was once a sage brush plain, and a year ago could be bought for $5 an acre. Under irrigation it now produces peaches, prunes, apples, cherries and the finest of alfalfa, and and is now worth from $40 to $100 per acre. We ought to occupy it at once. The demand is pressing.

BAKER CITY.

In the absence of the pastor, D. W. Yoakum, the presiding elder represented the charge. Baker City numbers about 3,000 souls, is at the head of Powder River valley, and is the commercial center of all that region. We have but few members and only a monthly appointment here. It is a good field for us if we could keep a man there all the time. Have a good strong membership at Wingville. Twenty-two have been added this year. No Sunday School, because can get no one to take charge of it. Finances on the charge are well up. The subscription plan prevails here.

SUMMERVILLE.

—Rev. H. T. Burger, the preacher in charge, was not present, and the work was represented by the presiding elder. This is an old work. There have been 23 accessions to the church this year, and some good material. One Sunday School, 45 scholars, in a flourishing condition. Spiritual condition of the charge fair. Summerville numbers 400 or 500 people, Elgin about 800 and growing rapidly. Protracted meetings have been held at three points, and were spiritual and successful. There is little or no financial system, and but little is doing for ministerial support. The presiding elder has not received enough to pay his travelling expenses to and from the charge. It is a good country, and the people are well able, but system and effort are necessary to success.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter From Dayton.

Dear Brother Stanley :—

At each visit of your paper I feel moved to write you, not for publication, but to cultivate our acquaintance. It also sends me back in pleasant memory to scenes of one year ago and the pleasant associations while we were together at St. Louis. A few months ago I passed through your state. I thought much of your labors, travels and anxieties, and of the wonderful possibilities of your great country. When I arrived in St. Louis I went around to old Centenary. But how changed the scene. With all her splendid service, her elegant music, her large congre gations, yet I could but feel sad. Where were the faces I had met there only a few months previous? And yet it was a pleasure to know that they were scattered on the earth attending to their Master's business. A few of them have answered to the final roll-call, have rounded the headlands of the eternal world, and are basking on the sunny shores of the "Sweet-Bye-and-Bye," while we are permitted to remain for a season. God grant that we may use and not abuse our opportunities.

Our Annual Conference convenes here at Dayton the 12th of August next, and of course you will be here. We expect you,and you must not disappoint us. I take pleasure in tendering you the hospitalities of our humble home.

[Thank you, Brother H. We will be glad to accept your kind invitation if we are fortunate enough to get to Dayton.—Editor.]

So far as I know, the work has prospered all over our District. Our class at Dayton continues to increase in numbers. May we be a strong and valiant little band for the Master. All the preachers of the Pendleton District appear to be in good trim. Our Barnhart has his train on the up-grade and promises to make a splendid landing at the Grand Central Depot. May heaven's richest blessings attend the editor of the METHODIST. M. R. HANGER.

A Chinaman's Letter.

The following was written by a Chinese pupil to his teacher who is a member of our church in Spokane. It is verbatim as handed to us, and shows something of the work that is being done along this line by many hundreds of Christian men and women in the West and Northwest, of which little notice is taken, but which may result as grandly in the end,as much of that which is costing the church many thousands of dollars :

My Dear Teacher:—

I thought I write you a letter. I am so glad you teach me how to write, and teach me the grammer. I study so hard, but it makes me feel like crazy to understand. My spiritual life is better to-day. Sometimes I feel like hopeless, but day by day I pray to Jesus to help. When He blesses my spirit I feel moore like comfortable. In the Y.M.C.A. I lost my umbrella. Then I have to leave a writing on the table to tell the population to steal no anything what don't belong to the population. I told them to try be better man. I write some moore to you agin when I got time. I like you to teach me of Jesus Christ more when I come to school. JOHN A. LOM.

How It Was Done.

Brother Stanley:—In reading the MONTANA METHODIST, I see accounts of a great many joining the church, and of their being converted,but don't remember reading an accoutt of how they were converted. So being about the oldest female member in the Montana Conf., I thought I would tell how I was converted and how I reached a higher state of grace. I was at a camp-meeting and there was a call for mourners, and as I had belonged to the church for two or three years, I thought it would not look well for me to to go up as a mourner. But my pastor, Rev. Benjamin F. Drake, insisted and told of a person being converted by praying aloud. So I went, and thought I would try it, (I would scarcely be heard anyway, as there were so many singing, and so many amens); and sure enough as soon as I commenced praying aloud the Spirit of God came down upon me and I was made to rejoice in a Savior's love, and instead of being a mourner I was around in the altar trying to encourage others.

About seven years after I was converted, my mind was greatly exercised about my soul's salvation. I hardly knew whether I was a child of God or not. After much prayer and reading the Scriptures I realized that I was a child of God; but a very little and imperfect one, and I gave myself wholly to the Lord. It was at least six months after this before I realized that I was on the high way of holiness. But then such joy! It seemed that I was so near heaven that I could hear the the angels singing; for months I lived in such ecstacies.I made an open profession of my faith, and since the spring of 1861 I have had the abiding evidence of my acceptance with God.

Now, Bro. Stanley, I write this bit of experience. If it will be of any use, all right; if not, I will not be offended if I do not see it in the MONTANA METHODIST.

HOW THE BATTLE IS GOING.

BIG BEND CAMP-MEETING.

The editor expected to attend this meeting, but Providence led him in another direction. We believe it was for the best. On our return from Walla Walla, while waiting at Spokane for the east-bound train on Monday night we hastened to the parsonage where we gathered the following brief notes from Rev. R. G. Isbell, who had just returned from the camp-ground flushed with victory.

The meeting was held near Creston Station, on the Central Wash. R. R. sixty-eight miles west of Spokane. It was every way a success. Every service was a profitable one. The preachers present were: R. G. Isbell, R.B. Swift, A. Y. Skee, W. S. Hornbuckle,F. F. St. Clair, of our church, and A. B. Coates, of the Presbyterian Church. The services at first were somewhat interfered with by the rain, but it cleared off, and after that there was a large attendance, reaching on Sunday about 500 or 600. There were not many tents. The people came in wagons, and would spend the day on the ground and return home, though a few remained over night, camping in their wagons.

The last night of the meeting between 50 and 100 testified that the meeting had been a blessing to them. Not a few shouted the praises of God. There were a number of conversions, and the church was greatly revived. A deep seriousness pervaded the large audience, and many gave their hand in token of their desire to be Christians. One thing that impressed us was the bright, clear testimonies that were given.

The preaching was simple, and earnest, and in demonstration of the Spirit. Brother Swift's sermons, especially, gave great satisfaction, and Brother Skee also won many laurels, by the depth and spiritual power of his discourses. He is a devout man and a promising preacher.

The meeting was held under an arbor in the border of a pine forest, where the trees were somewhat scattering. The people were not troubled about horse feed, as they picketed or turned their horses out, with hobbles to graze on the adjacent prairie that was covered with nutritious wild grass in greatest abundance. A fine stream of water flowed near by, which supplied the tables of the campers with abundance of the choicest fish. It is a delightful place for a camp-ground, and ought to be secured to the church permanently for this purpose.

The collection on Sunday paid the expenses of the visiting preachers, with something left for the regular pastor. Brother St. Clair deserves great credit for his energy and good management in making the occasion such a marked success. He was aided by a corps of earnest workers, among whom are Brother Edinburg and his good wife, and Brother and Sister Gebbart and others who are "given to hospitality," and contributed in a substantial way to the welfare of the visitors. Everybody was well fed, everything passed off pleasantly and smoothly, and our cause was greatly strengthened by the camp-meeting in the Big Bend country.

SPOKANE.

Dear Brother Stanley:—

Our meeting was cut short by the illness of myself and wife and for want of help. However, we had several conversions and a number of accessions. Others will join soon, I think. Eight children baptized. Another Brother Daniel from St. Louis, a brother to P. M. Daniel, with his family are here with letters and will unite with us soon. Our people were so glad you gave us the two sermons. Brother J. W. Compton gave us one good sermon. Brother W. O. Waggener gave us four excellent sermons. O, that some one could have staid with us!

Sincerely, R. G. ISBELL.

From another source we learn that Children's Day at Spokane was observed faithfully. There was a large attendance. A goodly number of the children and young people took part. There was good music and a splendid collection. The Children did their part remarkably well. The occasion was a decided success. Brother George Dyer is the Superintendent now. He is very active, and the school is increasing very rapidly.

[Brother D., when he was a small boy, his parents were members of the church on our first circuit, away back on Blue River, in Kansas. We rejoice that the promising boy is developing into such a useful man and successful worker in the Lord's vineyard. May he go from strength to strength. Would that all the boys that we furnished with catechisms in days gone by were doing as well.—EDITOR.]

FLATHEAD VALLEY.

I want you to make arrangements for Bishop Key to come and dedicate our church before Conference. There will not be much indebtedness, not so much but that we can easily raise it at the dedication service. Everything is moving along smoothly in church work. Congregations still good at Demersville. One addition last Sunday at the regular service. They are calling for me across the river at Fairview. I have promised to preach for them the fifth Sunday. They have had no service there this year.

POTLATCH CIRCUIT.

Editor Methodist:—Our third quarterly conference was announced for Vollmer, a new and hard town where the devil came just ahead of the railroad crew with his implements of death on a pack horse, and there in an old building very much dilapidated, on a sawdust pile, he dealt out death and destruction to the scores of human souls already on their march to the regions of the lost. How my heart bleeds for these poor victims.

Well, we have made our rounds, and have tried by the help of God to push the battle to the very gates. If I were to use a common phrase I would say that Potlatch circuit is on a boom. There have been two new societies organized this year.

This charge has eight appointments, fifty is miles in extent, and there is country enough adjacent for a Presiding Elder's district. There have been fifty accessions and twenty-five conversions, and eighteen baptisms the present year. One new church building in progress at Leland which is to cost $800. Three Sunday Schools with a total of about one hundred scholars. Prayer and class meetings well attended--the finest I ever saw. Salary of the pastor is $400, about half paid. The circuit must be divided next year, and we will have to change the name. I don't think the present one suits very well. From my heart I accede to Brother St. Clair's proposition. How our work is suffering for lack of men! Why should we not be willing to do that much for the sake of our Zion in this great Northwest?

THAT COLLEGE.

Do not forget nor neglect to talk and work up that college enterprise to which we called attention in our last issue. We are in earnest about it, and we want every member and friend of the church to be of the same mind. It is one of the necessities of the hour. You may think it looks dark, but the way will never open until we make the start. The Children of Israel had to "go forward" before the Lord divided the Red Sea for them. At Jordan the soles of the feet of the priests had to rest in the waters of Jordan before the Lord interposed and caused them "to stand upon a heap," and the people to pass over. There must be faith and determined effort. We will need at least $100,000 to insure the success of the enterprise. We don't want a mere makeshift of an institution. We must aim high to hit the mark--ask, and plan largely if we would receive largely. The money is in the country in great abundance, and God who has blessed the people with it will incline them to put it at our disposal to use for the cause of higher Christian education when we develop faith and courage and grace enough to use it aright. Now, while the country is new and the need of such work is beginning to be felt, is the time for us to lay the foundation and establish an institution of learning that will help to give type to our civilization and mould the characters of young men and women in this growing country for generations yet to come. Who will start the ball to rolling? Who will help in this grand work? We shall say more on this subject again.

——o——

HERE AND THERE.

—At this writing Rev. L. B. Stateler is gratifying his many warm friends in Bitter Root Valley by visiting among them and preaching to them so far as he is able. There is no man so popular among our people here as our venerable pioneer and father in Israel.

—Mr. Zeb Harris, of Stevensville, died recently after a short illness. He was the first man this writer became acquainted with on his visit to Missoula County in 1877, when he shared a mess of fresh trout with us at the table of the Kennedy Hotel. If he ever refused us a favor or did us an unkindness we do not remember it.

—We were fortunate enough to meet up with Prof. Payne on the cars as we returned from Walla Walla to Spokane. He is superintendent of the public schools in Dayton, a zealous member of our church and superintendent of our Sunday School there. He is greatly interested in education, also in Sunday School work, and successful in whatever he undertakes. We need many more just such men at the head of our public schools and in all our congregations.

—We have much more to say about our trip to the West, but cannot for lack of space say it now. We were at Walla Walla just in strawberry time. They were shipping them by the car load. We never saw such great quantities of this delicious fruit packed together before.

—It is said that people are rushing into Washington and Idaho more than into Montana just now. This is thought to be one reason why our church is building up faster in portions of that country than here. Well, there will be a reaction some day. Montana is a much better country than many are aware of. The cold is not half so severe as they imagine. People right from Georgia and Alabama declare that they suffer no more with cold here, as a rule, than they did in the South. We have rich mines, fertile soil, a heathful and exhilarating atmosphere. Do not locate permanently in the West until you have visited this "country of the mountains."

—We have fallen upon a plan by which a goodly portion of the amount scaled from our missionary appropriations can be made up and our work sustained. Let the Conference Board undertake to raise at least $1,000 for "Home Missions." Divide it among the charges; let the preachers arrange to hold missionary mass-meetings at every appointment, secure the services of good speakers, make a grand rally, awaken enthusiasm, and the money can be raised with ease. We believe it will be. The exercise will be healthful and inspiring to the church. Let us begin to plan for it now, even before Conference.

—June is the prettiest month in all the year in Montana, and as we look upon our fruitful fields, lovely landscapes, clear, sparkling streams, our grand snow-capped mountains, and breathe the pure invigorating air, often loaded with the fragrance of the wild flowers that line our streams and carpet our prairies, we are tempted to think we have in Montana the grandest country that the sun shines upon.

—Brother, don't forget that dollar that is due on your subscription to the MONTANA METHODIST. It will soon be pay day, and we will need all we can get. The printer must have his money. Please send right away to Corvallis, Montana.

—We were surprised to see such a draught prevailing at Walla Walla. The wheat crop—especially late wheat will be cut short on account of it. We are having delightful rains throughout Montana just now, and the crop prospect is very fine.

—Rev. H. W. Currin has removed from Boulder to Radersburg for the summer. He will be greatly missed by the Sunday School there, though we trust that it is strong enough to get along without him during his absence.

—We have an excellent communication from Dr. Samuel Rodgers, one of our leading ministers in Baltimore, Md. It came too late for insertion this week.

FROM THE CHURCHES.

BOZEMAN.

Rev. W. T. Goulder: Everything moves along nicely, smoothly and pleasantly.

STEVENSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall sends a subscriber for the METHODIST, and adds: Had a crowded house at Fair Play, and also a good congregation at Curlew. Brother Stateler preached at Stevensville yesterday morning. He gave them a genuine Methodist sermon, plain truths, red hot, so I hear.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Doar Brother Stanley:—

You express regrets because you have not heard from Bozeman Circuit. I, of course, have been very busy, as you predicted. I preach two or three times every Sunday. My congregations on this charge were never so good as now. Our membership has been more than doubled this year, and there are more to follow. In addition to my own regular work I have crossed the range east of us and established two appointments in good settlements on Shield's River. These people I found destitute of the Gospel, they having not had a sermon for many years. Beyond these appointments, up towards White Sulphur Springs and Castle are several good communities asking for the preached Gospel. And still east of Shield's River on the Musselshell there are several large communities without the Gospel, also along down the Yellowstone are numerous towns and settlements calling for our church to enter. We must occupy more of eastern Montana. Christ died for these people and they must have the Gospel.

I have moved to Central Park that I might be nearer my work, and to avoid rents. B. E. H. WARREN.

The editor appreciates the zeal that Brother Warren manifests for the new and inviting fields to which he alludes. We have looked toward that region with great solicitude for years, and we do trust that the Lord will ere long open the way for us us to answer those Macedonian calls and enter the needy fields that are opening in almost every direction. What a responsibility is being laid upon the church at large. Will she heed these calls and say, "Let us go up and possess the land, for we are able"? or will she by refusing to do so acknowledge her weakness before the world?

——o——

HELENA DISTRICT NOTES.

A. C. COUEY.

Since being with you, Mr. Editor, in the Missoula District Conference, I have spent several days at home in Deer Lodge, where I began the fourth round of Quarterly Conference. We only held the religious services of the Conference, having preaching Thursday and Friday evenings and the usual Sabbath services and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Will hold the business session of the Conference later for good reasons, in the matter of securing fuller reports.

Brother Tabor and his good wife have had a very good quarter's work. The interests of the church are kept to the front line. The monies for the Annual Conference collections are nearly all paid in. A protracted meeting of good interest is now in progress, commencing from the date of the Quarterly Conference. Bro. Squires is down from Butte doing good work. Last night the house was nearly filled. By Sabbath room will be at a premium, judging from the number attending at this early stage in the meeting. The Lord give us a gracious time. Two persons have united with the church, a young lady by profession of faith, a young man by letter.

THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE.

I have been quite busy in securing further subscriptions this week. Bro. Wm. A. Hensley and I made quite a successful canvass of Deer Lodge. We will likely let the contract for the building before the 10th of June. We hope to have the house completed by the Annual Conference—not later than Aug. 10. If the District at large were as liberal in the enterprise asDeerLodge,we would have no trouble whatever. So we may now say, the probabilities are quite favorable for having a house for the P. E's family another Conference year. We will have to borrow a few hundred dollars—maybe three or four hundred. Should we do this and have to pay 1 per cent. interest it will be a great saving to the elder's pocket. The question is, will he continue to pay $15 or $20 per month for rent, or $3 or $4 in the way of interest. Common sense says, choose the latter alternative. Besides, we will have a home. If possible I will avoid borrowing altogether—but times are just now so close we may not be able to do otherwise.

Our appropriations this year to last, stand as 2 to 3. We have shared the decrease about as other very needy fields. I am greatly disappointed in the happy expectation of entering some NEW GROUND blazed out this year. We will do the best we can. I will not utter a word of complaint. I verily believe the best was done for us that could be, by our dear Bishop Hendrix, who represented Montana and other Conferences before the Board of Missions.

CAMP MEETING.

When I was with Bro. Warren he and his official members were talking campmeeting on the Bozeman Circuit, to embrace the 4th Quarterly Conference July 19th. If the matter is natured we will try to have Bishop Key with us and a number of the brethren of the Conference. Bro Warren will notify you in due time. The work goes on well at all points heard from since seeing you.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

I think throughout the District the brethren gave "Children's Day" special attention. This has evidently grown out of the increased interest in Sunday School work during the year. Happy for us when we have learned that right here is the solution of the church for the future—saving the children.

Pendleton District Conference.

The first session of the District Conference of Pendleton District, East Columbia Conferences convened at Ingall's Chapel, on Walla Walla Charge, seven miles south of Walla Walla, Washington, on Thursday, the 28th of May, 1891, at 2 o'clock, p. m., and was opened with the usual religious services conducted by Rev. E. G. Michael, the presiding elder.

The chapel is in the midst of the famous Walla Walla Valley, and is just across the line in Oregon. The building is new, was commenced last year under the superintendence of Bro. Haggard, and will be neat and commodious when completed.

There were present at the session, Revs. E. G, Michael, M. V. Howard, P. M. Bell, R. B. Crego, Michael Larkin; Henry Barnhart, Charles Kirk, F. C. Adkins, G. J. Gibbs, J. B. Chamberlain, S. Ferguson and R. E. Earl. The following laymen also took part in the proceedings from time to time: M. R. Hanger, D. M. Jesse, Peter Gerking, D. J. Saunders, F. M. Dyer, Nathan Evans, J. S. Phillips and W. A. Kirk. They were from different charges throughout the District, and manifested a lively interest in the work of the Conference. E. J. Stanley, of the Montana Conference, was present as a visitor. V. Howard was secretary and G. H. Gibbs assistant.

Committees were appointed on Spiritual State of the Church, Sunday Schools, Finance, Books and Periodicals, Missions, Education and District Conference Records.

Great prominence was given to religious services. An hour at the opening of each session—8 a.m. and 2 p. m.—was given to devotional services—prayer and experience-meetings—besides regular preaching at 11 o'clock a. m. and 8. p. m., and the discussion of vital questions, such as Sunday Schools and Missions, during the regular sessions. The sessions were well attended by the people in the community, and by some of our members who had come from quite a distance, from adjacent charges to be there. Brotherly love and harmony prevailed.

The reports of the preachers showed remarkable prosperity throughout the District. Almost every charge had been blessed with a revival at which there had been conversions and accessions to the church.

There have been 270 accessions to the church since the Annual Conference, while the number of conversions is considerably in excess of this. A revival spirit prevails. Attendance on public worship and at the prayer and class-meetings is generally good. A large per cent. of our people hold family worship, and believe in the old-fashioned Holy Ghost religion.

There is quite an increased interest in Sunday School work. The reports showed 17 Sunday Schools and 937 scholars, being an increase of 9 schools and 459 scholars since the Annual Conference. This is surely a very gratifying report, and shows that our ministry is caring for the lambs of the flock.

One church, a beautiful structure at Dayton, has been built and completed at a cost of $3,600. Another one built and so far completed as to be used, at a cost of $1,600, without help from the Board, and another, (the one where the Conference was held), and was commenced but not reported last year, has been completed so as to be used, at a cost of $1,200. There are now twelve and one-half church buildings in the District, and a great need for more, if only a little assistance could be obtained. We hope the brethren will finish and furnish them all and secure the missing "half."

There is an increasing demand for a pure Gospel and a consecrated ministry, and our preachers have more calls for their services than they can possibly answer at present. Nearly all of the charges ought to be divided, and there is plenty of work for a half dozen or more men in the District right now.

There is a High School at Weston, under the care of our church, and which, with efficient management and by proper co-operation upon the part of our people, it is thought, could be made a success. The brethren must look after this.

The reports showed that the finances of the District, especially the salaries of the preachers, which have not been half paid although the year is three-fourths gone, are sadly in arrears. Surely it is true that our preachers do more work for less pay than any other class of men in the land. There must be more system and greater liberality among our people at this point if we remain guiltless and realize the full measure of our success. Paying is as essential as praying. It is in this way that prayer is made effective. God loves a cheerful giver.

The following were elected lay delegates to the ensuing Annual Conference: Rev. J. B. Chamberlain, D. M. Jesse, W. A. Kirk, D. J. Saunders; Alternates, J. J. Atkins, Nathan Evans.

DISCUSSIONS.

The "Relation of the Sunday School to the Church" was ably discussed by G. H. Gibbs, followed by others. M. V. Howard gave a very pointed and suggestive talk on "The relation of the pastor to the Sunday School," in which it was very clearly shown that the preacher is pastor over the Sunday School as well as the rest of the church, and has duties in it, that he cannot neglect without loss both to himself and to the church. Brother Michael led in a very interesting discussion of the question, "How to awaken a greater interest in missions on the part of our members?"

THE RELIGIOUS SERVICES

were times of great spiritual refreshing. Tney were conducted by both laymen and ministers. Brothers Larkin, Adkins, Crego, Chamberlain, Barnhart, Gibbs and Howard did most of the preaching, which was evangelical and spiritual, and good to the use of edifying. The prayer and experience meetings were among the best we ever attended. The Lord was present in mighty power confirming the hearts of believers, encouraging his ministers and awakening and converting sinners. Religious fervor was carried into the business sessions, where hearty amens and glad hallelujahs were not uncommon. What an inspiration it is to hear fathers and mothers with glowing faces tell of God's goodness, of the Savior's love, of the witnessing spirit, and of their solicitude for the salvation of their children and for the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom. Every service was a spiritual one. The love-feast on Sunday morning will never be forgotten. Several persons shouted aloud the praise of God. The communion service was delightfully sweet and solemn. At the altar exercises on Sunday night after Brother Howard's earnest and effective sermon, there was a wonderful manifestation of divine power. Twelve penitents came forward, four of whom were converted, while the vast multitude that thronged the large church was awed and thrilled with a sense of the presence of God. The songs, the prayers, the exhortations and the hearty amens all had the old time ring. There was to be another session on Monday to complete the business. The services were to be continued for several days. The place for holding the next District Conference was not fixed before we took our departure on Monday morning. We greatly desired to protract our visit, but duty called us elsewhere and we had to obey.

ERRATA.

In making up the last issue of our paper, by some hook or crook Brother Bones' name, together with the paragraph of his letter from Fayette, Mo., became detached from its proper place and was appended to our editorial which was headed "We must have a College." And we were given credit for Brother Bone's letter. We beg pardon, and hope it will not occur again.

Brother Warren writes that arrangments have been made for a camp-meeting in July. We would be glad to accept his kind invition if it were possible, but that will be busy time for us.

MISSIONARY THOUGHTS.

The experience of Paul at Ephesus is often recalled by missionaries. Dr. Chamberlain, of India, tells of his entrance upon the work in a city of the kingdom of Hyderabad. What was done there may be done everywhere. "The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation."

"Does this Bible quell opposition? It is quick and powerful. I would I could take you to a scene in that same kingdom of Hyderabad that I witnessed fourteen years ago. There in a city, a walled town of eighteen thousand inhabitants, the people had risen in a mob to drive us out because we tried to speak of another God than theirs. We had gone to the market-place, and I had endeavored to preach to them of Christ and his salvation, but they would not hear. They ordered us to leave the city at once; but I had declined to leave until I had delivered to them my message. The throng was filling the streets. They told me if I tried to utter another word I should be killed. There was no rescue; they would have the city gates closed, and there should never any news go forth of what was done. I had seen them tear up the paving stones and fill their arms with them to be ready, and one was saying to another, 'You throw the first stone, and I will throw the next.' By an artifice which I need not stop to detail, I succeeded in getting permission to tell them a story before they stoned me, and then they might stone me if they wished. I told them the story of all stories—of the love of the Divine Father that had made us of one blood, 'who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' I told them the story of the birth in the manger at Bethlehem, of that wonderful childhood, of that marvellous life, of those miraculous deeds, of the gracious words that he spake. I told them the story of the cross, and pictured in the graphic words that the Master gave me that day the story of our Saviour nailed upon the cross for them, for me, and for all the world, when he cried in agony, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' When I told them that, I saw the men go and throw their stones in the street and come back, and down the cheeks of the very men that had been clamoring the loudest for my blood I saw the tears running and dropping off upon the stones that they had torn up; and when I had finished the story and told them how he had been laid in the grave, and after three days had come forth triumphant and had ascended again to heaven, and that there he ever lives to make intercession for them, for us, and for all the world, and that through His mercy every one of them there assembled could obtain remission of sin and eternal life. I told them then that I had finished my story and that they might stone me now; but no, they did not want to stone me now. They came forward and bought eighty copies of the Scriptures and gospels and tracts, and paid the money for them, for they wanted to know more of that wonderful Saviour of whom I had told them.—

Rules for Holy Living.

"1. Do nothing but according to the teachings of the New Testament.

2. Of our own accord show mercy; afford succor to such as are in distress, food and clothing to such as are in want.

3. Restrain passion, be eminent for fidelity, a minister of peace.

4. Exercise piety toward God, observe justice toward men.

5. Do no harm to anyone either of your own accord, or by the command of others. Hate the wickedness of the wicked, assist the religious.

6. Be a perpetual lover of truth, and propose to yourself to reprove those that tell lies.

7. Keep your hand clean from theft, and your soul from unlawful gains."

Editorial.

RELIGION IN THE HOME.

There is too much of a tendency to divorce religion from the home and fireside and from the affairs of every day life. The older people go to church where the minister reads the Scriptures, prays, preaches, and the choir sings; the younger ones are sent to the Sunday School where the lesson papers and the picture cards are distributed, the lively choruses are sung, the rewards offered, and a short time spent in reading the printed questions and reciting the answers, which are also printed. The leagues, sociables, and society meetings are also well patronized, the minister supported, it may be, and the external and material interests of the church looked after; while in many homes there is no family altar, no habitual reading of the Bible, no hymn of praise sung, and the conversation is about all else than spiritual and eternal things until the idea begins to prevail that religion is something that belongs to the church services alone, and the home to social enjoyment and secular business.

This ought not so to be. The home is the seat of life. Here the children are born and reared, and the characters are moulded, in a large degree, that will decide their future destiny. Here is the soil where true religion takes root, and grow and blossoms, and brings forth its choicest fruit. As religion is in the homes of our people so it will be in the church, for the church is but the home on a larger scale—a number of homes associated together and bound by "dear uniting ties" into "one family of the living God." The stream will not rise higher than its source. If there is no voice of prayer and praise, no habitual gathering of parents and children and friends, and calling upon God around the hearth stone together, no interest, and freedom, and joy felt in talking of Christian doctrine and experience, of God's goodness and mercy to us, no expressing our hopes of heaven while we are together at home, how can we take delight in such things or awaken an interest in the minds and hearts of others, away from home? We must carry the fire in our own breasts continually if we would have our hearts "strangely warmed," and help to warm the hearts of our neighbors. It was the wise virgins who had their vessels filled with oil that slumbered and slept—took needed rest—while the bride-groom tarried, and who were ready, and went into the marriage supper, while the foolish virgins who neglected the home supply and sought to get in at the expense of others were too late and heard the fearful word, "Depart." Our Savior's life and ministry, while upon earth, was interwoven into the home life of the people of Judea. Here some of his grandest works were performed, and utterance given to some of his greatest doctrines and most precious promises. How we love to think of him at the house of Zacheus, at the home of Lazarus, Martha and Mary, at the Pharisee's house where Mary broke the alabaster box and gained eternal renown for herself and in the homes of the poor and lowly where the common people heard him gladly. No wonder the two disciples "constrained him" to come in and tarry with them at Emmaus. What holy companionshsip! How amply they were repaid! Shall we be less interested in securing his presence and blessing in our homes to-day? No, no, a thousand times no!

We know a family where the conversion of one of the children is an event that attracts as much attention, and is hailed with as much delight and joy by the inmates of the home, as that of a birth or a wedding. In fact it is both of these—a birth into the family and kingdom of God, and a marriage to the Lord Jesus Christ, bringing the highest honors, the purest joys and an inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away. What mother would not pray and crave such blessings for her child?

To this day we love to think of a dear, grand Christian woman, long since gone to heaven, as she sat by the hearth stone in the old arm chair and would frequently drop the large testament or a religious book from which she would be reading, in her lap, clasp her hands and with a face like that of an angel give audible expression to the feelings that burned within her heart. It was no uncommon thing for her to praise God aloud in her home. And how our boyish heart was more than once awed into reverence by the subdued and supplicating tones that came from a mother's chamber as the shadows of eve would gather around our cottage home. We could but tread softly, for we felt that God was there, and the ground whereon we stood was holy ground. What a heavenly light would shine about her face as she would come forth from those holy communings. Who can tell the far-reaching influence and power of a mother's prayer?

We have known a young man to go home from a revival meeting where he was converted, and at the hour of midnight wake up father and mother and all the family and turn the place into a very bethel, and many others whose hearts were thrilled with holy delight. It appeared that every act they performed was a religious act, and whatsoever they did, whether eating or drinking, was for the glory of God. These were the days of the Son of Man! This is the kind of religion that will save our children, convert our neighbors, supply our pulpits with preachers from our midst and send them out into the whitening fields, that will protect our Sabbaths, overthrow the saloons, overturn satan's kingdom and build up the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ upon the ruins thereof, and this alone. Let us pray and work for a revival of religion, pure and undefiled, in every home in Montana and throughout this great Northwest. Amen.

Notes.

—Is it not as great a wrong to take advantage of, or cheat a company or or corporation as an individual? And is not the passenger who knowingly though secretly procures a ride for one half or two thirds the regular fare really and morally as culpable as the one who pockets the money and gives no account of it? It is not so much a question as to whether the company can stand it as whether the individual can.

—While the man of God is commanded to reprove and to rebuke, yet it is equally his duty to "be gentle" and do it with all long suffering and doctrine." The spirit of God reproves the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment, and yet we are told that "the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith." If this kind of fruit does not follow our sowing we had better look to our commission and the quality of the seed.

—Mr. John Robinson and Miss Lois Ferguson were married at the residence of the bride's parents in Bozeman, Montana, June 10, 1891, Rev. W. T. Goulder officiating. The young couple have our best wishes.

—A brother sends an additional subscriber (he has sent a number before) and adds in a private note: This puts a church paper into nearly every family in this neighborhood; and what few do not take a paper signify their intention to take one or more in the near future. I consider it the best work a pastor can do on a circuit—that is, the most permanent and satisfactory. We preach at some points once a month; these silent monitors, about three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. We cannot have an intelligent membership without them. They are a powerful leaven, and subserve the best interests of our people by giving them, in epigrammatic form, information in regard to the church, their duty and obligation concerning matters about which the pastor might feel a delicacy in speaking.

—The State Convention of the Montana Sunday School Association was held at Bozeman June 23–25. The printed program presented a tempting bill of fare. We greatly desired to be present, but other arrangements prevented.

—A large and very strong dam has been put in the Bitter Root river right opposite the town of Hamilton, making a pond into which 20,000,000 feet of logs have been run from the extensive pine forests up the river. It is expected that a large saw-mill, planer, and other machinery will be located at this point before long. Should the contemplated road be built from Anaconda across the mountains to this point, the town of Hamilton will become a place of some importance.

—A bridge will be built across the Bitter Root river opposite (West of) the town of Corvallis, this summer. It is much needed, and will bring us about two miles nearer the depot, which is now nearly four miles from town.

—Rain is abundant, and there never was a better prospect for large a crop throughout Montana as now.

—o—

—The migrating season has opened and many pastors are on the wing.

—No man lives who does not need a Saviour.

A foolish son is a grief to his father.

—Vassar College has settled with the next of kin of John Guy Vassar, by paying them $146,000 out of $650,000 bequeathed to the college by Vassar.

—Rev. Henry Stanley writes in a private letter from Circleville, Kansas: I am so glad that Bishop Key is coming to Montana. I think he is one of the best men I ever saw. I will never forget his talk just before the adjournment of the Western Conference last fall. One of our preachers came to me and said: "I will never be afraid to risk myself in Bishop Key's hands."

How I would like to be at your conference and see and hear, and shake the hands of all the preachers of the Montana Conference. I feel as if it would be one of the richest treats of my life.

—Mr. W. J. Penrose, editor of "The Butte Mining Journal," was assassinated near his home in Butte City, just after midnight, on the 11th of June. It was a most cowardly and dastardly deed, and the entire state has been shocked by it. Mr. Penrose was a self-made man, positive and outspoken, though possessed of a warm and tender heart. He had strong friends and bitter enemies. Every effort possible will be put forth to bring his murderers to justice. The plot was well and deeply laid.

—We acknowledgewith much pleasure the receipt of the First Annual Report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Montana, for the year ending August 31st, 1890, with compliments of John Gannon, Superintendent. It is late in coming, but is well gotten up in every way and full of useful information touching our public schools. Out of the 16 County Superintendents, all are ladies but three. Thirty-six school houses have been built the past year; and 117 teachers added to the corps. Greater care is being used in the selection of teachers. The number of children enrolled in the state between 5 and 21 years of age is 27,821; number enrolled in the public schools, 16,980, average daily attendance at public schools, 10,596 09; enrolled in private schools, 1,260; total enrollment in public and private schools, 18,240. There are 361 school districts; 531 school teachers, and 355 school houses, of which 173 are log, 139 are frame, 36 are brick, 2 are stone, and 5 adobe. We have a compulsory school law, but it is practically a dead letter, as thirty-three and one-half per cent. of the children do not attend school. Perhaps many of them are located far away from where there is a school house.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly, after a full discussion of the case, sat down upon Dr. Briggs by a vote of 440 to 60, disapproving of his appointment to the chair of Biblical Theology in Union Seminary. This shows that that grand body of men will "have no fooling about as vital a thing as the truth, the value, the authority, the inspiration of the Scriptures and due veneration for them." He has been indicted for heresy in his Presbytery in New York, and will be tried in due time.

—PhillipsBrooks has been confirmed as Bishop in the Diocese of Massachusetts. We rejoice that this noble man is thus honored by his church.

—Mr. Logan D. Dameron, who was for 20 years or more the publisher of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, and who contributed so largely by his management to making it the great paper that it is, died at Lexington, Mo. the 23d, of May, in his 63rd year.

—Dr. D.C. Kelly, of Tennesee, has been elected President of Pacific Methodist College and promises acceptance on condition that an endowment of $100,000 is raised for the college. Why cannot the Doctor go and help raise it, as grand old Dr. William A. Smith came from Virginia to Missouri and helped to raise a $100,000 endowment for Central College? That would be more like it.

—We rejoice to learn that our College at Corvallis, Oregon, has been successful in the suit that was pending, and trust that it will yet accomplish a grand work in Oregon. In the meantime do not forget to agitate the question of our College enterprise in Montana. There are men who are waiting to help us when we are ready for action, many of them, we trust.

—Our readers will appreciate the "Baltimore Letter." It is from one of the best men in our great church. He represents our work in the extreme Northeast. What sweet Christian fellowship we enjoyed together a year ago. Our Brother reads the Montana Methodist, and we wanted our readers to feel the throbbings of his great big heart.

—Bishop Key is now in the bounds of the East Columbia Conference, and will then come to us from the West and return the same way. Our brethren must not monopolize him nor work him too hard. We shall insist on at least four Sundays of his valuable time being spent in Montana.

—We greatly appreciate the efforts of those preachers and other friends who are careful to solicit and send us subscribers for the Methodist. Brethren, remember your promise, and don't overlook the importance of this work. — If those friends who are in arrears would kindly send us the amount due, it would greatly assist in our work. It means only a dollar or two out of your pocket, but would put several hundred dollars into the treasury of the Methodist.

—Remember, in taking up the Conference collections, that every dollar of the assessment that you fail to get will either have to be collected and paid by some one else; upon whom the burden will fall just as heavy or heavier than upon you, or the church will be deprived of it altogether, which will greatly hinder and cripple its work, and entail undue hardship and suffering upon its servants. Instance the shortage in the missionary collections and appropriations this year. Do your best.

—"Misery loves company." It is surely some relief to us poor mortals away in the wilderness to hear such men as Dr. Hoss, editor of the great official at Nashville, complaining of troubles at the hands of the type-setters. Pray what would he do if he were two thousand miles from the printer and could never see his proof until it appears in his paper? "In the meantime, we pray our printers and proof-reader, and also our readers, to be merciful and charitable toward us. We are between two fires and get wonderfully cut up sometimes, but endure it with the best grace possible, and still hope that it will be better further on.

From The Churches.

STEVENSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall: We have just returned from Victor where we went on Saturday to hear Bro. Stateler preach. Had a grand time Sunday morning, large congregation, house nearly full. Bro. Stateler gave us an earnest, practical sermon on the "Power of Godliness vs The Form." A gracious influence prevailed. Three responded to the pastor's appeal at the close to join the church. After a short altar service I called for a collection of $48, ($25 for insurance and $23 on a debt) in memory of the visit of our venerable preacher—a "pillar" representing the event. In a short time the whole of the amount was provided for, and with glad and happy hearts we dispersed after heartily singing the doxology.

DEER LODGE.

S. B. Tabor: Children's Day in Deer Lodge was a joyful day to old and young. The ladies had the church nicely decorated. The flowers, the songs of the birds, the happy faces and cheerful voices of the children were a real inspiration to every heart; but best of all the conscious presence of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me." At night the aisles were crowded to hear the songs and recitations of the children, and many expressed themselves as being delighted with the services.

The above note from the pastor came too late for insertion in last paper. But the following bulletin is fresh from the field of battle, and sounds the note of victory along the line:

Dear Bro. Stanley:—

Knowing you will be delighted to hear of our work, I take pleasure in telling you that Bro. Squires has assisted in a most successful meeting here the past two weeks.

Through his earnest singing, praying, and exhorting, eleven were taken into the church, and a number of others have manifested much interest and asked for the prayers of God's people.

The meetings would have continued but for the commencement exercises of the "College of Montana." All wished to attend those, and we have been treated to excellent discourses, orations, essays and music.

Friday evening, the 5th, the young people met and organized an Epworth League. We began with nineteen members and now have twenty-one. All seem much interested, and we hope the work will grow.

Our Sunday School is growing, and our prayer-meetings are very interesting.

Bro. Tabor will begin a series of discourses Sabbath evening on the "Prodigal Son." His first subject will be "The Leaving Home."

M. H. E.

BOZEMAN.

Rev. W. T. Goulder informs us that everything is moving along nicely on his charge, but that he is crowded with work. Pray tell us what Methodist itinerant is not.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.

P. M. Bell: Our meeting still continues. We have had ten accessions as a result. We expect to continue next week. Pray for us.

HELENA.

Brother Price writes: Brother Couey was with us Sunday and preached two excellent sermons, but the congregations were small because of the mud and rain. He preached again last night, and at the close of the sermon held the fourth quarterly conference. The reports showed that the charge is in a hopeful condition. Finances in arrears, but the stewards promise a full report by Conference.

The Stewards for the ensuing year are: A. G. Clarke, C. A. Blackburn, W. R. Smith, J. G. Jones, G. H. Carrow. Trustees, A. G. Clarke, N. G. Bryson, S. C. Ashby, C. A. Blackburn, W. R. Smith, J. G. Jones, Joseph Rummans.

District Steward—S. K. West.

All hands at work for our Children's Day service next Sunday.

TOWNSEND.

Rev. R. S. Clark, in a note that was overlooked at the time it came, says that the people at Rock Creek Basin, are preparing to build a school house which will provide a much better place for worship. The people at that point usually turn out well. The prospect is fine in all that region for abundant crops this year.

CORVALLIS.

Rev. L. B. Stateler preached to a large and delightful audience at this place on the 14th inst. Through the courtesy of Brother J. Seaton, the pastor of the Disciple's, Church, who is a Christian gentleman, we occupied their house of worship. At the close of the morning sermon, our dear little Marvin Stateler was consecrated to God by baptism, performed by our venerable father in Israel, after which we joined in celebrating the Lord's Supper. The writer preached in the afternoon. The services of the day were greatly edifying and profitable. The subject in the morning was "The Living Water," John 4 : 13-14. It was a subject of common remark, how clearly and forcibly Brother Stateler presented the great truths relating to personal and experimental religion. This appears to be his theme wherever he goes. His visit to Corvallis and various other points in the valley brought fresh inspiration and joy to many hearts and homes, and will long be remembered. He has returned to his charge at Whitehall.

DEMERSVILLE.

Brother Lee has recently preached to a full house, had a good service, and organized a Sunday School at Fairview. The church at Demersvilie is being plastered, which interferes with the regular services for one or two Sundays. The town is growing and the pastor is hopeful.

REVISING THE CREED.

Our Presbyterian brethren are having quite a time revising their creed. A year ago a committee was appointed to undertake the work, but was hampered with instructions not to interfere with certain doctrines set forth in it, and which really were the cause of the clamor for a change. The committee has reported, and the report will now be sent down to the Presbyteries for criticism and adoption or rejection. The principal trouble is found in that portion relating to the decrees. How to retain the old doctrines, commonly known as fore-ordination and election, and make it less offensive to modern eyes and ears appears to be the point aimed at. The pill is too strong and rough for modern throats and must be sugar coated. To our mind this is about all the change that is made in the article that treats on this point, which reads as follows:

"The rest of mankind, God was pleased according to the unsearchable counsel of his own will, whereby he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth, not to elect unto everlasting life, but to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin, to the praise of his glorious justice; yet so as thereby neither is any limitation put upon the offer of salvation to all upon condition of faith in Christ; nor is restraint laid upon the freedom of any one to hinder his acceptance of this offer."

The first part is the old one in substance and the last is simply a denial of what Arminians have charged as the logical result of the first. The new creed, instead of saying "elect infants" dying are saved, says "all infants" dying are saved.

A new chapter is added on the Holy Spirit and another on the universal offer of the Gospel. Speaking of these and of the subject in general the Nashville Advocate says:

"These are long compared with the other sections, and are interlarded with exhaustive proof texts from the Scriptures, and serve the purpose of the vines and flowers which cover our rockeries; they hide and adorn the rough rockiness, but neither remove nor change. One of the members of the Assembly aptly, but not elegantly, declared the revision to be "an attempt to rig out a damnation coat with a gospel tail." The committee announce its purpose to be "to bridge over the gulf that appears to lie between the spirit of the Confession and that of our Church in these latter days, and to relieve, as far as practicable, the presentation of our standards of God's sovereignty with the rays of his love." The committee seem to feel the gravity and delicacy of the situation, and are enthralled by it; they strike off some jagged points, but leave the rock of offense unchanged. They say the same thing in softer strains, and divert by an effusive statement of popular terms. This is a singular condition of things, the revolt of the popular sentiment of a Church against its Creed, its history, its literature, and life; for whatever Presbyterianism has of these they are bound up with its creed."

The end is not yet. There will be disturbance as long as the cause remain in the system. We trust, however, that the matter will be adjusted, and that this grand army of God's people will go forward in their work of saving men.

THAT "LIVELY RIDE" — THE SEQUEL.

Rev. J. B. Parnall writes :

I think I placed you under a lasting debt of gratitude yesterday, for I married the man who a short time ago gave you such an exciting ride whilst returning from Demersville. The "Tribune" of tomorrow will contain the following in brief: "Married—Wednesday evening, June 10th, at the Weisenflue Ranch, Mr. Milton Bradshaw, of Revalli, to Miss Mattie Anderson, of Stevensville, Rev. J. B. Parnall officiating."

It was quite an accident that I found out the bridegroom's connection with your lively ride. He says he wanted to get you to marry him, but could not tell just where to find you. He subscribed for the "MONTANA METHODIST," however, for which he paid me one dollar; says that he goes back to his former post, and that next time you pass that way he will take better care of you and give you a free ride in the bargain.

The above is good news all around. It is a poor wind that blows nobody some good. We believed that our deliverance was providential on that eventful day. Why may not still greater good result? Many thanks to Bro. Parnall. He is a good substitute. Much joy to the happy pair. Hope they will read the "METHODIST." May our young friend ever remain by the side and be faithful to the new passenger that he has taken, over the rough places as well as over the smooth, hold a tight rein over the fiery steeds that may seek to dash them to ruin, and together may they have a safe journey through life and a happy arrival at the great Home Station at the end of the line.

If we should be so fortunate as to get a free ride we hope it wont be so fast, and we don't believe it will, if the same driver holds the "strings."

IMPORTANT.

The brethren who intend favoring us with the presence of their wives during the session of the Annual Conference at Helena, will kindly notify me. If you expect entertainment for them attend to this promptly.

HOPE.

That to which we now refer is a town of this name, located on the main line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, 173 miles north of west of Missoula, and on the north shore of Lake Pend d'Oreille (pronounced pon-de-ray). It is at the western end of the Rocky Mountain division, and the eastern end of the Idaho division, and the place where the westbound passenger sets his watch back one hour. It is about 20 miles west of the State line in Idaho, and only 40 miles or so from the British Possessions. It numbers about 500 or 600 people, who are almost entirely supported by the railroad company. There is just barely room for the railroad tracks and buildings between the mountain and the lake. The residences and business houses are built on terraces on the steep mountain side, and are reached by successive flights of steps one above the other, at an angle of 45 degrees or more.

The mountain rises quite abruptly to a height of 4,000 or 5,000 feet, the summit of which cannot be reached without a journey of six or seven miles. But the view from the lofty elevation is rich with compensations, taking in the lake and other mountain ranges one hundred miles away.

The lake is shaped like the human ear, has a shore line of 250 miles, while if a line were stretched across it directly from northwest to southeast the greatest length would not exceed forty miles. The scenery is the finest of the kind that I have seen in the Northwest. Its bosom is dotted with islands, its shores indented with bays and inlets and studded with bold promontories that rise at one place, Granite Point, to a perpendicular height of 735 feet, while wooded hills and jagged, snow-capped mountain peaks tower up against the sky in the distance. The view of the lake from town is like looking into a kaleidoscope. The scene shifts every day and every hour of the day, the emerald tinted water now reflecting the blue sky and the fleecy clouds in its pure crystal depths, reminding you of the richest silver papestry, or photographing the adjacents mountains with their varigated foliage, or duplicating the golden glories of a gorgeous sunset, reminding you of the "sea of glass mingled with fire." Now it is gently ruffled and presents a sea of diamonds, while it bears upon its bosom countless crafts containing happy voyagers, and now it is lashed into fury by the raging storm and threatens with destructions any boat that might venture from the shore. We had a good view of it by moonlight. The scene was indiscribably beautiful. There are two small steamers on the lake.

There is one island right in front of the town, a mile from shore, one-fourth by three-fourths of a mile in extent. It contains 120 acres, and the surface is gently undulating and covered with timber. It is owned by Gen. Warren, of Butte, who has a fine summer residence near the west end. It is a delightful place to spend the summer. In company with our friend, Brother J. Withnell, we rowed over to the island in a skiff that he owns. It was a charming trip—a novel experience. The day was perfect. The air was balmy and along the shore it was perfumed with the fragrance of the first roses of summer. We had a pleasant visit on the island at the residence of a Mr. Pease, though our hands have hardly yet recovered from the blisters caused by the oars and our awkardness in using them.

We preached on Sunday morning and night to large and attentive audiences, and attended Sunday School in the afternoon. Mrs. E. A. Crandall is the worthy Superintendent. She had a corps of noble assistants in the good work. The Congregationalists have organized a church, and expect to build soon.

We were most hospitably entertained at the home of our good Canadian friends, Mr. J. McAchran and family, at whose house we were made to feel perfectly at home, and whose kindness we cannot forget. We will long remember the good people who live in Hope, and trust that they may ever possess and cherish that hope which is "an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast and which entereth into that within the vail."

THAT "WAIL."

Something akin to a wail, comes sounding down from Montana; in regard to the now well known action of our Board of Missions at Wilmington. Bro. Stanley, we can weep with you, but we are glad to find you still determined, and hope that you will never surrender. It seems to me that you get things a little mixed, when you put the Denver Conference among those receiving almost the same appropriation as they did last year. We had been thinking that there was a cut of about one-third. I wish you would, in some way, convince us that our calculation is wrong. "O wad som power the giftie gi' us; to see oursels, as Brother Stanley sees us."—Rocky Mountain Methodist.

The "wail" that Brother Needham speaks of is in this utterance: "The reduction in our (Montana Conference) appropriation is about the same as in other home fields except Denver and New Mexico, where there is but little change from last year."

Let us see. Last year, according to the annual report, page 195, Denver Conference and New Mexico received $13,000; Montana Conference, $6,000. This year the Denver Conference gets $6,500; the New Mexico $5,200; Montana, $4,000. Thus it will be seen that Denver and New Mexico together get $11,700, or within $1.300 of what they received last year—only $650 each, if divided equally between them, while Montana falls short $2,000. The reduction is one-tenth against one third There is the glass, Brother, just look in.

We did not know the exact amount received by the Denver Conference alone last year, as the appropriation was made to Denver and New Mexico together, though we supposed of course, that it was about the same in proportion to New Mexico as this year—and so counted the two fields together. If the Denver Conference received $9,000 last year it would appear that it got more than its share then, or less than its share this year, though of that we have nothing to say.

It will be remembered that years ago when the Denver Conference included the work in Montana that the missionary appropriations were usually divided equally between the two fields, and for sometime after the Montana Conference was organized the two Conferences—Montana and Denver—shared about the same in the assistance received from the Board. Then, all at once, the Board increased the appropriation to Denver from one or two thousand to eight or ten thousand dollars annually, while year after year the small sum of one thousand dollars was all that Montana received. The result was that the work in the Denver Conference took a wonderful bound forward, and the church at home was wondering why no more progress was made in Montana! After so long a time there was a slight increase from one thousand to three thousand dollars to Montana, and there was a great advance made. Last year in our plea before the Board we tried to explain this, and begged that our work here should first be put on something like an equal footing with other similar fields, and then it would share equally with them in the "scaling," or in the increase of the appropriations as the case might require. The effort was successful in a measure. Our appropriation was doubled, and a mighty impetus was given to Southern Methodism in Montana. We felt that justice was being done us at last, and we rejoiced and took courage.

We expected a reduction in the appropriations this year—could not well see any other alternative—but supposed that it would affect all the fields alike, and when we saw that it did not we were a little disappointed, and could not help speaking out in meeting. What our Brother calls a "wail" is simply a plea for justice. We are not "mixed" in the least. While we appreciate and heartily reciprocate the kind words of our confrere, we are not at all discouraged; and as to surrendering, we not only have no thought of such a thing, but possess a natural aversion for the use of the word. Our Methodism is being firmly and permanently established in this great Northwest. We trust that the same is true of our work in Colorado and New Mexico.

BALTIMORE LETTER.

It was only last evening that I received your very kind note in which you say, "Would be glad to receive a few words of cheer for our readers from your pen. They would be greatly appreciated and do us good." If these things are so what remains but to send you a "few words." Your request cannot be put lightly aside.

You and your people must be depressed when you read that less than one-half the sum asked for from the Board of Missions was appropriated. But what could have been done more than was done? The treasury in debt, and experience not justifying the Board in making larger appropriations in faith that the church would furnish the money to pay them· nothing remained but to appropriate the sum which would probably be paid, and so the whole of absolute appropriations was less than one-half the total asked for the several missions. If you could have been in Wilmington you would have felt constrained to make an urgent appeal in behalf of the Northwest; and then, after all, you would probably have said, "I must submit to the inevitable and take what the church will pay." One cent a week from all members of the church would meet all present demands of our missions; but this inconsiderable amount has been withheld. Many of our people are rich towards themselves, but are not rich toward God. Ten times as much is spent by many, in one way of self indulgence as is given for the extension of our Lord's kingdom in an entire year. It will not always be so; the conscience of the church will be enlightened and made quick; otherwise I fear the Lord will show that He has a controversy with His people. Many Christians have become infected with the mania for speculation. They have little to give, for the reason that all they have or can borrow is invested in town lots, mining enterprises and what not.

They do not heed the divine charge, 1 Timothy vi:17-19, and they despise the divine warning, 1 Timothy vi:9-10. But God's word stands fast. I can only trust that in this day of your straitness God will undertake for you, and raise friends from among the seven thousand who have not bowed to Baal.

Our Conference met in Roanoke, Va., March last, Bishop Hendrix presiding. His work both in the Conference and cabinet was eminently satisfactory. I say this advisedly. Why should not a temperate word of approval be given to our chief men when the facts justify commendation? Are they so high as to be above the reach or need of sympathy? Have they no periods of depression which might be in a degree relieved by a token of appreciation? But "slobbering" with indiscrimination, over men in high places is an offence to be condemned by the judges.

It occurs to me to mention that I have many times heard men say, the bishops, with only six or eight Conferences to hold, have an easy time—long intervals for rest and pleasure. Those who say these things, don't know, that's all of it. Let any one apply to a bishop for special service. He will find that already engagements have been made for months.

A bishop recently returned from a a tour of mission inspection and other episcopal work. He had scarcely reached home when applications for service were made. His engagements have left him almost without an interval for rest. Preaching Sunday after Sunday, missionary addresses, church dedications, District Conference a thousand miles from home, and this to be succeeded by other thousands of miles of travel and still other work. I believe no men in our ministry have more care and more labor than our chief superintendents.—[That is true, Editor.]

The long looked for decision of the bishops has been published. Their desire has been made in the most unprejudiced way. To me it seems right. I noticed comments in one of our papers in which reference was made to this decision at one point a placabs. This word, however, was not used; but I have given the sense. Would it be too much to ask that credit for honesty should be given to these men of God? In character and courage they will, as a whole, compare with any in our ministry.

Our church in Baltimore is not strong in numbers or in wealth. I am thankful I can say, the outlook is more hopeful now than at any time in recent years. There is a happy adaptation of men to the work; the hopefulness of our people is greater; and already, though only two months have passed since adjournment of conference, there has been an addition of fifty members to one of our city churches. Of this number thirty were by profession of faith; the fruit of revivals.

Perhaps in your far away home the name of Brother T. J. McGruder is unknown. I am quite sure he is remembered by you.—[We have known of him and esteemed him highly for his works' sake for a long time.—Editor.] He has been one of the most useful laymen that I have known; pre-eminent in Sunday School work; liberal in the extreme, if this be possible; of remarkable gifts in planning and organizing work; a man of singular influence with men, a sweet singer, devoted to all church work.

Of him I must write, that it has been evident for a year past that his vigor was abating; and now he is quite disabled, suffers great pain and is confined to the narrow limits of home. It is feared that his health will not be restored. We do not see how the places of such men can be filled; it is not necessary that we should so long as we are assured that God has written His church on the palms of His hands. His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. He will establish it, even to the ends of the earth, and though some workmen fail, He knows where others are and will in due time call and qualify them for their work. You asked for a few words, and I have written many; if too many I shall regret it.

You have my best wishes for your personal properity, for the success of the cause of the Redeemer among you, and for the usefulness of the "MONTANA METHODIST."

I am your friend and brother,

SAMUEL RODGERS.

A REVIVAL OF HOLINESS.

Within the past four or five years considerable discussion, through the medium of our church papers and otherwise, has taken place on the subject of Holiness, whether or not the full experience of it is a second work of grace distinct in point of time and consciousness of realization from regeneration; some able disputants contending for, and others against. In the heat of the controversy things were said and done, on both sides, which notwithstanding the different theories held as to the "remains of the carnal mind after conversion," plainly showed that, if converted (which no one disputed), from the hearts of some of the disputants—[on both sides, too.—Editor] all carnality had not been excluded, or at any rate the "perfect love" manifested was of a different stamp from that represented in the Scriptures. Whilst deprecating these fiery ebullitions, we nevertheless at the time rejoiced that the attention of the church was thus being more fully called to this cardinal doctrine of Methodism, believing that truth is so powerful that in the end it would prevail, no matter which side might for the present seem to be victorious.

As a church, Methodists place great value, and rightly too, on personal experience and testimony, as proof of the truth of any particular doctrine supposed to be taught in Scripture, and in this both the wisdom and the strength of its theological structure appear. On the fundamental doctrines of justification by faith, regeneration, and the witness of the Spirit, its position is thus found to be impregnable—a veritable Giberalter of strength—because on these points, both the teachings of scripture and the experience of intelligent believers are found to be in perfect accord. So that when we read in the Word of God that justification is by faith, that we must be born again, and that the Spirit bears witness to our spirits as to this change, and then a credible witness testifies that after submitting himself to certain mortifying religious exercises, such as repentance, prayer and acts of faith, he found his heart "strangely warmed," and the whole attitude and emotion of his soul changed, toward both God and man, thereby affording peace, love and joy, a new power over self and sin, and assurance that he is a child of God; we have no right to doubt the fact of that man's having experienced a real change of heart, especially if his after life correspond thereto. And when we find this experience repeated and multiplied in the lives of scores, hundreds and thousands of others, in fact taking place invariably when the proper conditions are met, then we consider the truth of these doctrines irrefutably established.

Has not the force of this method of proof been too little regarded in the discussion of the doctrine of Holiness? The Word of God commands, "Be ye holy." Paul prays for the Thessalonian Church, "and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, etc.," implying, as we understand it, that although converted they were as Christians not yet "wholly sanctified," else why the petition? Now the concurrent testimony of a great host of living witnesses, not to mention the large numbers of those who "being dead yet speak," is to the effect that after clearly and definitely experiencing a change of heart, and living in the increasing enjoyment of the witness of the Spirit to that blessed work of grace, for a shorter or longer period, they have, incited thereto by such scriptures as those just quoted, earnestly sought, by full consecration, faith and prayer, the greater blessing of Holiness or "entire sanctification," and that in answer to their importunate supplications, they have realized an experience of God's grace and love so much deeper, fuller, and richer than anything enjoyed before that some have denominated it a "second conversion;" and from that time forward they have been enabled to walk on a higher plane of Christian living in which self and sin have been completely kept under by the indwelling Christ, their peace has flowed like a river, their joys have been wonderfully augmented, they have felt nothing but love to God and man dwelling in their hearts, and an increased power of service has been imparted. Now, a large number of incontrovertible testimonies such as these (the holy lives of the witnesses corresponding), being adduced on this point, how can a fair-minded Christian, especially a Methodist, confidently assert the truth of his theorizings, however, logical they may seem, against evidence so clear and practical as this?

We contend that the only real solution of this so-called "Problem of Methodism" is along the line of experience. "Then shall we know if we follow on to know the Lord."

We rejoice to believe that the number and influence of the witnesses to the truth of this blessed doctrine is rapidly increasing, (may this speedily be true of Montana as well as elsewhere in our Zion!) especially amongst the ministry—an augury of better days to come, even the "days of the son of man," when, sitting as a refiner, he shall first purify the "sons of Levi," (Mal. 3:3), the preachers first. With such noble consecrated leaders along this line as Bishop Key, Drs. Bounds, of the Nashville Advocate, and Carradine, of Centenary Church, St. Louis, and quite recently Palmore, of the St. Louis Advocate, and numbers of others that might be mentioned, the cause will not fail for lack of able advocates. Moreover, this leaven of truth having been by the Holy Spirit deposited in the lump of the church, will most assuredly work till the whole is leavened. For "Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it, with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish."

Will not all the readers of this, irrespective of what may be their particular views on the subject, unite with us in praying that the forthcoming visit of Bishop Key may result in a genuine revival in our midst of that which all must agree, is the beauty, life and strength of the church namely, "Personal Holiness."

THE PACIFIC COAST MISSIONS.

L. B. STATELER.

On our return from the East with re-inforcements, Brother Lee renewed his efforts in mission work among the Indians with great hopefulness and courage. Missions were established at various points throughout the country, particularly at the Dalles, where vast numbers of Indians collected, and where they subsisted largely upon fish taken from the Columbia river.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has a able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER.

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY. and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list

Camp-meetings were held and great numbers of them—almost entire tribes—announced their adherance to the Christian faith and were baptized. So exultant was Lee over these wonderful ingatherings that he wrote to the Board the glad news, "A nation is literally born in a day." It is doubtful as to the depth and genuineness of their professed conversion. The work, however, was prosecuted vigorously, and Lee and his companions in labor were hopeful of the conversion of all the tribes on the Pacific coast.

After advising with his brethren, Lee concluded to establish a great central school, something after the plan of the Manual Labor School that we had near Westport, Mo. They hoped to make a success of their work by taking the children from their parents where they would have more control over them and instruct them in the practical duties of life. In order to have such an institution they built a mill on a neighboring stream for the purpose of grinding grain and making flour for bread, and also made other improvements, and thus the work of education among the Indians in Oregon was begun and carried on. This was where Salem now stands.

At this time there were very few cattle in that country, and they sent away to California for cattle, that they might have milk and butter and beef. They had to drive them some six or seven hundred miles.

Considerable time elapsed after this central school was established. Owing to the great distance from headquarters at New York, and the difficulty and uncertainty of getting communications, which had to go away round Cape Horn by sea, or be sent across the continent through the great wilderness by special messengers, for quite a time no word was received by the Board from the mission at Salem, and none came to the mission from the Board, which state of things caused no little embarrassment all around. It was thought best for Brother Lee to take a ship and go to New York and present the claims of the mission before the Board in person.

Previous to his starting on his long journey, death had invaded his little household again. His second wife had fallen under the hand of death, and was laid by the side of his first wife and child, leaving with the disconsolate father a little infant daughter. This child he placed under the care of Gustavus Hines and wife. He bade them all adieu and sailed again on the long voyage around the Horn for New York. It was remarkable that while Lee was sailing eastward an agent that had been sent out by the Board to inspect the missions was sailing westward. They passed each other upon the high seas without knowing it. The agent was Brother Paddock, of the Genesee Conference. He was invested with full authority to continue or discontinue the missions on the Pacific coast, just as in his judgment was deemed best.

Brother Lee arrived in New York and pleaded for a continuance of the mission, and begged for their assistance, with which to continue his school and carry on his work. A remarkable providence appears to have been manifest in the matter. The Board would not take action until some further information touching the matter could be received from the agent. In the meantime Lee visited the home of his childhood, fell sick and died, closing his labors, and was buried near the home of his youth.

Paddock, having arrived on the field in Oregon, determined to close out most of the missions, which he did against the earnest and united remonstrance of the missionaries. Most of them resigned their places and, I think, settled in Oregon. The cattle and horses and the mission property was all sold at a nominal price to the highest bidder. Thus abruptly terminated our missionary labors among the Indians in that far away field, and the whites began to pour in and occupy the country.

Brother and Sister Hines, with their little adopted daughter sailed around to New York, and remained there for some years when they were sent again as missionaries to the section of country, this time not to the Indians, but to the whites who had settled there. They outfitted near our mission stations in Kansas, from whence they launched forth on their journey, travelling overland with wagons and pack-animals, to their distant field two thousand miles away. They had with them their little adopted daughter, Brother Jason Lee's child, then about eight or ten years old.

In 1867 I visited the coast, went to Salem, and passed by the cemetery where sleeps the dust of those two devoted women who, with others, strove and gave their lives to try to teach those benighted Indians. The little girl was now grown, educated, married to a worthy man and was a teacher, not in her father's school of Indian children, but in a school for white youths in the same locality. How mysterious are the workings of providence. Brother and Sister Hines labored for years in the itinerant work until they grew old and were worn out in it, and ere this, I reckon, they have ceased their labors on earth and gone to their reward on high.

Power of Prayer.

There is a mightiness in prayer. George Muller prayed a company of poor boys together, and then he prayed up an asylum in which they might be sheltered. He turned his face toward Edinburgh and prayed, and there came a thousand pounds. He turned his face toward London and prayed, and there came a thousand pounds. He turned his face toward Dublin and prayed, and there came a thousand pounds. The breath of Elijah's prayer blew all the clouds together, and it rained. Prayer, in Daniel's time, walked the cave as a lion-tamer. We have all yet to try the full power of prayer. The time will come when the American Church and the English Church, and all the Churches, will pray with their faces toward the West, and all the prairies and inland cities will surrender to God, and will pray with their faces toward the sea, and all the islands and ships will become Christian. Parents who have wayward sons will get down on their knees and say, 'Lord, send my boy home," and the boy in Canton shall get right up from the gaming-table, and go down to the docks to find out which ship starts first for America or Britain. Not one of us knows yet fully how to pray. All we have done as yet has been pottering, and guessing, and experimenting. A boy gets hold of his father's saw and hammer, and tries to make something; but it is a poor affair that he makes. The father comes and takes the same saw and hammer, and builds the house or the ship. In the childhood of our Christian faith we make but poor work with these weapons of prayer; but when we come to the stature of men in Christ, then, under these implements, the temple of God will rise, and the world's redemption will be launched. God cares not for the length of our prayers, or the number of our prayers, or the beauty of our prayers, or the place of our prayers; but it is the faith in them that tells. Believing prayer soars higher than the lark ever sang; plunges deeper than diving bell ever sank; darts quicker than lightning ever flashed.—T. De Witt Talmage,

THE RELIGION OF YOUTH HAS THE BEST CHANCE TO reach and mold character. After "the evil days come," religion is a refuge from the 'fears' that are "in the way." The early religion which remembers the Creator in the days of youth, mingles filial affection and loving reverence towards God with the delights and hope of life. It blossoms with the first thoughts, and grows with the whole inner growth of the man. The religion which comes when desire has lost its sharpness, and fears are in the way, may be fruitful, but it is not apt to be so. There is too little vital sap in it; there is too much fear in it. The early piety must needs be more manly, more alive withd esire, more kindled with earnestness. Thisis why the "boy preacher" is always a success. The unwithered freshness of the spirit touched by divine influence reaches and quickens the coldest heart. Our religion should begin i youth to yield the best fruits in us an by us. Welcome the children to th altars of our Churches. Use their gift in the services of the Lord's house.

Repentance.

Calls to repentance come in the thunder's roar, in the lightning's flash, from the shining stars, from the rolling earth, from the fading flower, from the church-yard stones, from the funeral train. They come on every birthday, on every sick day, with every sorrow, with every mercy, persistently calling "repent!" The Emperor Sigismond, having made promises of amendment in a fit of sickness, asked the Archbishop of Cologne how he might know if his repentance was sincere. He answered, "If you are careful to perform in health as you are forward to promise in sickness."

"I am a Son of God; I Would Not Steal!"

HENRY M. STANLEY tells that once, in the heart of dark Africa, a native was dragged before him by some of his followers for stealing a gun. Stanley looked at the gun; It clearly belonged to his expedition. The poor man who had it was frightened at the mention of Stanley's name, and could hardly find his voice or say a word, only, "I am a son of God, I would not steal!" This he repeated again and again. It was all he could say.

Stanley was interested, and it dawned on him that this man was probably one of the converts of some of the missionaries laboring in that region, and he accordingly gave him the gun, and allowed him to go, while they pursued their way.

At the next station where they stood they found the gun waiting for them. It appeared that thegun had probably been lost. This man had found it, and when he was set free he at once went with it to the missionary for instructions, and by his directions it was sent where Stanley would get it.

But what a light would have touched that darkened son of Africa, who, though brought up in all vileness and theft and sin, had come to realize the glorious dignity of a divine paternity, and say, "I AM A SON OF GOD; I WOULD NOT STEAL!"

Followers of Jesus must forsake the fondest ties when their Master calls to His work. Followers of Jesus must show decision and determination in their loyalty to the cause. When William Burns offered himself as a missionary to India, he was asked, "When will you be ready to go?" "Tomorrow." "But how will you inform your parents, and bid them farewell?" "I will write to them." As he stood on the deck of the vessel, he held his Bible on high above his head, and his upraised Bible was the last object seen as the ship sailed away.

Notes

—The present number of the METHODIST is made up largely while the editor is in transit. Our mail from Corvallis did not come up with us in time, which will account for the absence of matter, that otherwise would have appeared.

—This is written at the home of Rev. W. O. Waggener in Wallace, Idaho, where the thermometer indicates nearly one hundred in the shade. The town is in holiday attire. Brother W. is pressing the battle, has a fine Sunday School, a good congregation, and is hopeful.

—The brothren at Palouse gave us a list of 71 new names for the mailing list of the MONTANA METHODIST.

—Don't forget to send that dollar that you owe for the METHODIST, and please try to get another to send with it. Will not the preachers send us lists of subscribers?

—o—

PALOUSE POINTERS.

—Rev. R. B. Swift was eminently successful in the presidency of his first District Conference. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his brethren and the people generally. Would that his health were fully restored that he might devote the strength of his consecrated gifts to the cause he loves so well.

—It was a pleasure to meet with Rev. H. B. Terry, the latest "transfer" to this Conference, who has been so successful in organizing the work about Lewiston. He preaches well and thrills you with his Gospel songs. He brought a good delegation from his distant charge. May he be greatly useful in the Northwest.

—Brother St. Clair shows the effect of arduous labor during the long winter campaign. But his soul is still on fire, and he longs for the fall and winter months to return when he can resume regular protracted meeting services. He expects to give his life to the work in this country.

—We enjoyed our visit to the home of Brother Compton. He is popular at home, and a tower of strength in his Conference. If it is the Lord's will, may the little boy that so recently came to bless their home, some day be ready to take the father's place in the itinerant ranks.

—Brother Hornbuckle seems to grow stronger in soul and body on the hard and successful work that he has been doing for the Master this year. May his bow ever abide in strength.

—We were not a little surprised to find brother Albert Anderson, once a member of our church at Stevensville, Montana, now a full fledged local preacher, and in charge of Colfax Circuit. His sermon on self-denial made a fine impression. May every member of that large and interesting family of children be lovers of the Lord Jesus Christ.

—While at Palouse we roomed with Brother T. E. Kirkpatrick, a faithful and useful local preacher, who serves the Ruby Creek Charge. Our host and hostess were Brother M. W. Johnson and wife, who are devout Christians and members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, which has an organization here. The delightful entertainment of that Christian home will not soon be forgotten.

—Brother Skee's sermon on Justification by Faith excited not a little favorable comment. It was this zealous worker who in one of the devotional meetings stirred our heart by saying, "If somebody's boy had not left his home and friends and come to this Northwest, I would now be on the way to hell!" How can our preachers complain of hardships or stop to confer with flesh and blood in the presence of such testimonies as this?

—R. G. Isbell preached a strong sermon on Sanctification. It was characterized by such a consecrated and truly Christ-like spirit as to make a most favorable and lasting impression upon the large and attentive audience. Brother Isbell is a close reasoner, a good preacher, a strong man; and if health and strength permit will make his mark in the Northwest. So mote it be.

—While the report on missions was under discussion a number of the preachers expressed their readiness to give up all claim upon the missionary appropriations that the number of laborers might be doubled. At this, brother Banks, a layman, remarked, "The laymen must hold up the hands of the preachers while they are doing this."

Brother Crowe: "If the preachers are willing to double their work, we must double ours. I am willing to double my contributions this year."

Brother Priest: "If the preachers and laymen both double their work, I believe the Lord will double his."

—Here is the way out of our dilemma. If the preachers and laymen co-operate in self sacrificing zeal for God's cause, the Lord will pour out such a blessing that there shall not be room to contain it. If all the members of the church throughout the District could have been present that morning, we believe they would have been baptized with the same spirit of self-denial. Let our preachers hold meetings at every appointment, and bring these facts before them, that the contagion may become universal.

—We are rejoiced beyond measure at meeting with our old-time friend, Brother John S. Randolph, a lay delegate to the District Conference. His home was the first one that we ever entered on our first pastoral charge on the Western frontier of Kansas, in 1867. We renewed our youth as we spent a day at his cozy cottage embowered in mazes of fragrant flowers and bearing fruit trees. How we sang, and prayed, and wept and rejoiced together with that refined Christian family. Many changes have taken place in twenty-four years, but God has been gracious to our brother and his noble wife and family. His house, as of old, is the preachers' home. May each member of that happy circle have a place in the home "over there."

—What delightful entertainment we found at the home of brother W. B. Gray, a local preacher at Palouse. Religion is a reality in that household.

—Brother Mounce, a substantial farmer, who united with our church near Lewiston the present year, with his two colleagues, drove 85 miles to attend the District Conference. Our heart was stirred by his earnest plea for a preacher to be sent to Craig Mountain.

—Brother Priest is one of our most enthusiastic laymen. He drove 175 miles, and came at heavy expense to attend the Conference. Such a spirit of sacrifice and devotion to the cause of Christ upon the part of laymen is bound to tell upon the future of our cause in the Northwest. Would that it could be universal. "Like priest, like people." Let us preachers wake up!

—We expected to meet Bishop Key at Palouse and arrange for his tour of visitation through Montana, but he was kept away by the severe illness of his wife. This was a great disappointment. Up to this writing nothing further has been heard from him. We trust that the affliction will be light and of short duration.

—The wonderful Palouse country sets in about 30 miles south of Spokane, is about 80 miles in extent southward, and about 30 wide east and west. It lies along the western base of the Coeur D'Alene mountains, and is mostly a rolling prairie country, with very fertile soil. The cultivated portion is one vast grain field, principally wheat. The average production is about 25 or 30 bushels per acre. Oats and barley also do well. Portions of the country are liable to frost. Irrigation is not practiced. We noticed some fine young orchards. The present grain crop looks well. Wheat is selling at 60 cents per bushel, and buyers are offering to contract the growing crop for the same. We would like to say much about the country, but have not space so say it now.

—Palouse City is a pretty little town of 1200 inhabitants, located on the Palouse river, 68 miles south of Spokane and a little east. Lumbering is the principal industry. There are three large sawmills here. The logs are floated down the river from the mountains. There are some groves of timber about the place, though a friend told us that some settlers west of there had to go thirty miles for a load of poles. The town is growing. There are three or four Protestant churches in the place, and others will be built soon. We greatly enjoyed our short visit among the people there.

ALONG THE LINE.

SPOKANE DISTRICT.

The following notes were gathered from the reports made at the recent District Conference:

SPOKANE STATION.

R. G. Isbell:—We have 78 members in all, 2 local preachers, 33 additions this year, a goodly portion by profession of faith, and 27 church papers taken. The envelope system has been adopted for collections. Amount, per member, required to pay all assessment, $12.18. Most of our people have their children baptized. Spiritual condition fair. A new mission should be established, embracing Trent, Mica, and two other places near Spokane. We have a good lot with neat brick church, basement half size (but not completed), heated with furnace, valued at $12,000, and other property valued at $8,000. A good Sunday School, a woman's weekly prayer meeting. Church in better condition than ever before. Need a wide-sweeping revival of religion. J. W. Compton is more than rejoiced at the glorious results that have been realized within the last twelve years in this great and growing city of 25,000 people.

POTLATCH.

W. S. Hornbuckle:—113 members, 57 additions this year, 27 heads of families, one-half of whom hold family prayer. One church building valued at $1,000, another soon to be completed. Stewards' plan to get as little as possible at first of year and end with the same! $160 raised for pastor's support; 30 church papers taken; sold one and one-half dozen disciplines. The work should be divided. Sacraments duly administered. Spiritual state of the church tolerable good. Brother Gray reports splendid prayer meetings on the work. Brother Compton commented on the wonderful growth of the work. Bro. Terry says the future possibilities of this field are great.

OAKDALE.

A. Y. Skee:—Some advancements made this year, 68 members in all, 12 added this year. Preach to about 485 people. Our people attend services well. No prayer meetings and no Sunday Schools of our own. We have a parsonage valued at $700. Another lot, but not paid for. Four small towns on the charge. Had a gracious meeting at Pine City. All working harmoniously. They are spiritual, and 75 per cent. hold family worship. No financial system, and finances behind. About two-thirds of the Conference collections will be raised. No church building on the charge yet.

PALOUSE AND MOSCOW.

J. W. Compton:—We are building this year; I trust we are laying a good foundation. Assessed for P. C. $300; paid thus far, $270. Charge doing well on this line. No special financial system. About fifty per cent. of collections subscribed and paid. Trust we will come up in full. Have bought a lot with a house on it for $650. Have a subscription started for a church at Palouse, and also an appropriation from the Board. Hope to build a church soon. Members mostly very spiritual. A majority hold family worship. We have one Sunday School. Prayer meeting services are increasing in interest. Seven or eight persons have been added to the church this year. There is a great need of mission work in points adjoining to this charge. A large majority of our members take religious papers.

RUBY CREEK.

T. E. Kirkpatrick:—Have labored under many disadvantages. I was compelled to do manual labor to support my family. One class has been transferred to Potlatch Circuit. There is a large, unoccupied field near me.

Brother Compton:—The work needs a man who can give his undived attention to it. We must carry them the Gospel. Bro. Hornbuckle says that Bro. Kirkpatrick has been sowing seed which is bringing forth fruit for the Master's kingdon. Bro. Skee:—I know what it means when Bro. K. says he has to work for a living.

BIG BEND.

F. F. St. Clair:—Our circuit is in a fine condition, spiritually, and a large proportion of the membership give unmistakable evidence of knowing in whom they believe. They not only testify in public when called upon, but over ninety per cent. have family worship, take our church papers, constantly attend upon the ordinances of the church, and our social meetings are unusally well attended. It is common to see as many at class meetings as at regular worship. We preached to about 250 persons each month. Have 5 splendid Sunday Schools with about 150 members enrolled, and an average attendance of 120. Our own literature and hymn books used exclusively. We have a "financial system," or a "financial agent" on the circuit. Bro. William Priest, who visits, each point, talks the matter up and lets the people assess themselves for the pastor's support. The contributions to date for church purposes, average $2.75 per member. All assessments are paid in full, and some running over. We have 86 members, have baptized 14 infants, $400 collected for all purposes. Assessed for pastor, $200; collected to date, $150.

COLFAX.

Albert Anderson, P. C.:—Five appointments on this charge. The boundary is indefinite. A majority of the members are spiritual. A great field for missionary work for our church in the bounds of this extensive charge. Financial system is quite defective. Collections partly raised by private solicitation. The preacher thought we should concentrate our forces more. Raised for pastor's support, $56.62. Raised for conference collections, $14.25.

LEWISTON.

H. B. Terry:—This is a new charge, six preaching places, two organizations—Upper Taminy and Marion. Attendance good; 15 adults have been baptized. Raised for incidentals, $10; missions, $15; books and periodicals, $50; church building, $80; ministerial support, $123.50; subscription for church building, $800; 24 papers taken; 2 Sunday Schools and 75 scholars. Spiritual condition of the charge is good. General attendance upon the ordinances and social meetings. There is an inviting field for our church in this country, which I have traversed for 75 miles. A new circuit should be organized in Camas Prairie. This prairie is 30 by 20 miles, and comprises about 14 townships. It is said to be the largest tract of land lying in any one body in the State of Idaho. The prairie is watered by several living streams, which empty into the Salmon river. It lies between the Craig and Bitter Root Mountains. A good many people who express themselves as anxious for a preacher of our church. I had invitations to preach at 8 different places, but could only preach at 3, with good congregations at each place. Brother Mounce, a lay-delegate, says there is a great need of a preacher at Craig Mountain and Camas Prairie. The church is in fine condition on the charge.

SPOKANE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The first session of the District Conference of Spokane District, East Columbia Conference, M. E. Church, South, met in Palouse City, Washington, June 25, 1891, Reg. B. Swift, P. E., in the chair, and was opened with the usual religious services conducted by the P. E.

It is a significant fact that every preacher in charge and twelve of the lay delegates were present the first day, and then came later. The following were in attendance: Spokane, R. G. Isbell, P. C.; Palouse and Moscow, J. W. Compton, P. C., W. B. Gray, L. P., D. L. Staley, William Gray, S. A. Banks, John S. Randolph, lay delegates; Potlatch Circuit, W. S. Hornbuckle, P. C., C. W. Yockey, T. F. Hunter, W. L. Chaney, lay delegates; Oaksdale, A. Y. Skee, P. C., A. H. Crow, lay delegate; Big Bend, F. F. St. Clair, P. C., W. S. Spencer, Geo. Priest, lay delegates; Ruby Creek, T. E. Kirkpatrick, P. C.; Colfax, A. Anderson, P. C., W. R. Winnifried and Hiram Gragg, lay delegates; Lewiston, H. B. Terry, P. C., W. J. Eakin, Geo. H. Ruddell, Isaac Mounce, lay delegates.

F. F. St. Clair was chosen Secretary, and H. B. Terry assistant. The order of exercises was as follows: Devotional exercises from 8 to 8:30 a. m., business session from 8:30 to 10:45, and preaching service from 11 to 12 a. m. The afternoon session commenced at 1:30 and continued till the preacning service at 3 o'clock. Preaching also at 8 p. m. each day. Prominence was given to religious services which were most refreshing and profitable. Sermons were preached by the members upon the subjects assigned them in the program published some time ago in this paper, and the sermoms showed careful thought and preparation, and their delivery was in demonstration of the Spirit and of power.

Committees were appointed on Missions, Quarterly Conference Records, Spiritual State of the Church and Sunday Schools, and all the interests of the church were carefully reviewed.

The following persons were elected delegates to the ensuing Annual Conference: C. W. Yockey, W. B. Gray, William Priest, W. R. Winnifried; Alternates, J. C. Wiliiams, A. H. Crow, E. P. Dyer, D. L. Staley.

Rev. J. B. Chamberlain, a local preacher from Dayton charge, Pendleton District; was present as a visitor, and by preaching, talking, praying, and in other ways contributed much to the interest of the Conference. His missionary speech on Sunday night made a profund impression and will not be forgotten.

E. J. Stanley, of Montana was introduced to the Conference, and spoke of the pleasure of meeting with the brethren and hearing the reports directly from their fields. Being a member of the Board of Missions this will enable him to more fully represent this Northwestern work before that body. He spoke of the interest that he felt in all this Western work, and rejoiced at the prosperity that is crowning our efforts to preach a pure Gospel and build up the Redeemer's kingdom. He thanked the brethren for their cheering letters to the MONTANA METHODIST. Brother Swift stated that his heart was first stirred to come West by reading the letters published by Bro. S. in the "St. Louis Advocate:"

The following is the substance of the report on

THE SPIRITUAL STATE OF THE CHURCH.

It is improved very much in a number of charges, as shown by the increase in the number who hold family worship, subscribe for our church papers, and the advance in all the collections ordered by the Conference, as well as by the enlarged contributions to ministerial support. There are many causes for rejoicing, but there ought to be and will be great improvement. To aid in this we recommend the following:

1st. Family worship, which duty is incumbent upon every member of our beloved Methodism.

2nd. Fasting, and while preaching to others, see that we practice what we preach.

3rd. Every family should have at least one of our church papers, if we have to give the subscription.

4th. Reading and keeping the rules of our church.

MISSIONS.

The brethren decided that the ministerial force in the District should be increased by six new men, and instructed the Presiding Elder to try to get them, promising to share their small appropriations, and some of them to give all claim on the Missionary Fund for the sake of enlarging the field. The laymen present entered heartily into the spirit of self-sacrafice manifested by the preachers and promised to double their assessments. It was recommended that one thousand dollars be assessed upon the Conference next year for Domestic Missions, and that the preachers and laymen co-operate in striving to raise that amount.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following were adopted:

Resolved, That we appreciate Bro. E. J. Stanley's visit to our District Conference, and his words of encouragement and wise counsel have greatly blessed us, and that we are glad to know that the MONTANA METHODIST is doing well and is altogether self-supporting.

[Signed.] { R. G. ISBELL, H. B. TERRY.

Resolved, That we deeply regret that Bishop Joseph S. Key was kept away from us by the sudden and severe illness of his wife, and that we deeply sympathize with him and pray God to restore Sister Key's health and to to direct the Bishop unto us yet.

[Signed.] { R. G. ISBELL, A. Y. SKEE.

The session was one of great harmony. Not a discordant note was heard. A most encouraging feature was the number of laymen present. some of whom had come from 100 to 175 miles by private conveyance, and at no little expense to be present. They expressed themselves as well repaid, and the result will be seen in the new life imparted to the work.

The Conference was held in a house of worship owned by the Baptists. The business session was concluded on Saturday evening. There was religious service at no other church in town on Sunday, and the house was filled to overflowing, both morning and night. A spirit of fraternity and good will prevailed. The children's service in the afternoon was one of great interest and power. The love feast—a regular old-fashioned class-meeting—conducted by Bro. Chamberlain, was an occasion of great spiritual refreshing. Something over sixty dollars was raised for missions on Sunday night. The meeting was continued, and there had been three or four conversions up to the time we left.

The next District Conference will be held at Oaksdale.

The reports showed that there have been 215 additions and nearly as many conversions since Conference. These are 11 Sunday Schools and 330 scholars; increase something over 50 per cent. since Conference.

WALLACE NOTES.

—The Fourth was celebrated in royal style at Wallace, Idaho. Rev. W. O. Waggener offered a very appropriate and impressive prayer. Mr. Arthur J. Craven, a talented young lawyer from Helena, delivered a well prepared and masterly oration. This is said without endorsing all that it contained. The speaker won many laurels on the occasions. Judge Angel read a beautiful poem. The singing by the choir and music by the band were of a high order. Altogether the exercises at the hall were of a pleasing character, and made a delightful impression upon the immense audience.

—We rejoice to see the friendly relations that exist between the people of Coeur D'Alenes in Idaho, and those of Missoula, Helena and other portions of Montana.

—It is expected that the new railroad between Wallace and Missoula will be in operation by the first of August. But for a bad cave in the large tunnel on the divide it would have been completed before this.

—Forty four "sticks" of giant powder were exploded on the summit of a mountain overlooking the town of Wallace on the evening of the fourth. The effect was strangly pleasing as the report echoed and re-echoed through the gorges and canons of the adjacent mountains.

FROM EAGLE VALLEY.

Dear Brother Stanley: We had a good service yesterday morning and evening. I remembered you and our little Montana Methodist, and got one name for you to place on your list. Our People are alive to the work of the church in all lines. Our prayer is that you may be spared to visit this lovely valley. It would heartily encourage our people who, though scattered, are faithful. May the great Head of the church bless our Zion in all her borders.—R. B. Crego.

We thank our brother for his interest in the the Methodist, and would greatly enjoy a visit to that garden spot beyond the Rockies. Our people there are doing nobly. We hope they will go forward.—Editor.

—As. Dr. Brunner states, we were uneasy because he ordered his paper stopped, and frankly asked the reason why. The result is his excellent letter, for which we are very thankful. We wish there were many more Hiwassees, and especially that there were one or two here in our great Northwest. We trust there will be some day, in the meantime let the people who are able to send their children away to school be sure to patronize those institutions that are under the fostering care of the church and are known to do good work. We wish our brother great success.

FROM HIWASSEE COLLEGE.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—You wish to know why I asked you to cease sending the METHODIST till further notice from me. Well, I have nothing but love for you and the paper, but I was expecting to be on the wing for some time, and I thought you might hold up the paper till I settled down again. Did you know that every other college President in the U. S. and Canada has taken his position since I came to Old Hiwassee? I had planned to resign—to give the helm into younger and more vigorous hands—and to rest awhile. But "the best laid schemes of mice and men oft gang aglee." After the board had voted to accept my plea, they hesitated and appointed a committee to entreat me to serve them another year. Reluctantly I consented to a re-election. So here I am, and you can send on the METHODIST!

Our commencement was a delightful one: weather perfect, attendance fine, and no failure or disappointment. Nineteen diplomas were awarded to the candidates in the different grades. Among the graduates were three sons of former students, and there were two young preachers that expect to join conference this year—the 103rd and 104th who have gone out from Old Hiwassee—one of the "smaller colleges" so-called. Two of these were made D.D.s last Monday--Rev. Inman W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. W. B. Stradley, of Los Angeles, California. Both of these are sons of former intnerant preachers. The law of heredity has a wide range and a wonderful significance.

But I must not digress further. God bless you and everybody.

J. H. BRUNNER.

FROM THE MISSION ROOMS.

Dear Brother:—We send you a copy of the 45th Annual Report, which is just from the press. You will see by the appropriations, page 208, that $4,000 was appropriated to your conference.

I can realize the disappointment you and your fellow-labouers will feel at the reduction of the amount granted the missions in your field. In this feeling I am sure every member of the board participated. Last year the board largely increased its appropiations, expecting an increase in the collections. In this it was disappointed, and it was confronted by an increase in its debt. To retrench seemed to be its only course. In doing this, it sought to guard as far as possible the wants of every mission. As all share in the entrenchment we must all appreciate the reasons which made it a necessity. We are bending all our efforts toward an increase in the collections. This is our only way of relief.

We trust our brethren in the field will appreciate the difficulties under which we labor at this end of the line, and meet as patiently as possible the present presure. May the Great Head of the Church arouse our people to their duty!

Very Truly Yours,
J. G. JOHN, Sec.

How to Love God.

A woman once said to her pastor: "I do love God very much, but want to love him more; how can I?" "You must become better acquainted with him," was his reply. "We love those who are worthy of our love in proportion as we become acquainted with them."

"How can I get better acquainted with him?" she asked.

"Study the Bible more," he said. "God speaks to you and reveals himself to you in the Bible. Read in the New Testament the life of Jesus, and imagine you had been with Him as John and Peter and Mary were, and pray more. Tell him all your joys and and troubles and needs. He will answer you, and every answer will draw you closer and closer to him. Then try to please him in everything you do or say. We love those whom we try to please. Love makes us wish to please the Lord, and love rewards us when we have done it."

The woman followed these rules, simple as they were, and her love to God grew and spread all through her heart.

It made her very happy, so that all who knew her said: "What a bright, cheerful person she is; I don't believe she ever has any trouble." And yet she did have a great deal of trouble, but the love of God so filled her heart that it seemed like wings to lift her above it all. If she had been asked if she had any trouble, she would have smiled and said: "I don't believe I have; the minute it comes Jesus takes it all away."

"Love is of God, and everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." "He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God and God in him."

The very essence of our religion is love. The love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost brightens life and prepares for death. Love is the atmosphere of heaven, and none can be admitted there who have not first learned to love.

"Teach us, Lord, at length to love."

—o—

Wrong to Worry.

Worry hurts us more than work; and as Christians we have no right to be the victims of worry, anxious care, depressions and forebodings. Instead of complaints, let us try supplications; instead of brooding over difficulties, let us tell them to Jesus, and spread out our needs within "the presence-chamber of the Almighty," where alone peace and strength abide. Some Christian people appear to hold that we are iuvariably bound to be stoical, and express no sorrow or regret whatever, because God chooses all; but He who is all-human as well as all-divine, knows that the flood overwhelms us sometimes, and that when ws seem in the lowest depths. I dare no more fret than curse or swear. —

HELENA DISTRICT NOTES.

BY A. C. COUEY.

MR. EDITOR:—

The meeting at Deer Lodge had only fairly begun when I last wrote of the Helena District. Bro. Squires continued with Bro. Tabor the pastor two weeks, doing excellent work all the while. The result as made visible to date from the meeting is ten accessions to the church. So now, the membership at Deer Lodge has been more than doubled since Bro. Tabor took charge of the work in October last.

BUTTE.

While Bro. Squires was with the pastor at Deer Lodge, I filled the pulpit in his charge Sunday 11 a. m. and 8 p. m., June 7th. There are signs of prosperity here, which declare faithfulness on the part of pastor and flock.

The house on the interor has been made fresh and clean, the walls and ceiling very tastefully papered. Beautiful fixtures put in, and gas turned on, giving such bright light, that when compared with the old, makes me wonder I did not have the improvement, while there as pastor myself. The seats have been re-arranged, and everything, given such new looks, that you would scarcely know the auditorium. Good work has been done during the quarter. The Sunday School is charming, the congregations at public services increased, the Epworth League is doing excellent work, In a word, Butte prospers. Here as elsewhere money is short—hence pastors salary behind. It will require very hard work to strike a balance sheet by Conference July 29th.

HELENA.

Price as a preacher and pastor maintains his high standard of excellence. Much hard work the past quarter. Finances well up but the work has not been the most prosperous, in large congregations and accessions.

TOWNSEND CIRCUIT.

Bro. Clark moves on regularly in his work, preaching at Townsend, Duck Creek, Wolf Creek, and Rock Creek Basin. The chief work on this charge during the year, has been to secure to the church a splendid church edifice at Townsend. The pastor has done so at no little personal sacrifice. The prospect is favorable for Townsend to grow to an importance which justifies the out lay of money in the church we now have, so Bro. Clark thinks.

BOZEMAN.

Goulder and Bozeman have been a "fit" all the year. Good work has been done there. The Sunday School, and Epworth League are the chief signs of growth and prosperity here. Both do well. The pastor's salary is very short just now, but I have reason to believe will come up by Annual Conference.

BOULDER AND ELKHORN.

I was with Bro. Johnson in regular order on the fourth round. Although the Quarterly Conference came the last of May, Bro. Johnson had full report on the Annual Conference collections with the exception of a small deficit on Foreign Missions. This, however, was raised at 11 a. m. on Sunday. I am glad to know that Boulder is in line with several stronger charges on the district in the collections. For ministerial support the work has done quite well, and yet was in arrears when I was there. Removals from Boulder lessens our strength in numbers. May the Lord inspire the workers who remain. Bro. Johnson will make additional improvement on the parsonage before Conference.

THE STATE S. S. CONVENTION.

In addition to my District work this year, I have the Presidency of the State Sunday School Association. of Montana. It has given me much concern, a great deal of correspondence, and I thank the Lord, a broader view of Sunday School work than I ever had before. Our State Convention held in Bozeman June 23–25 was pronounced by all a grand success. We had a splendid delegation from our church. The year's work by the protestant denominations taking part, has been one of marked advance. The statistics as gotten by the secretary show an increase of about 34 per cent over last year's report. The Convention was inspiring and I believe will awaken new zeal among all the workers. Forty-eight delegates were enrolled. I hope it will be larger next year when we meet in Butte City. Lieu. Gov. Jno. F. Richards was elected President for the enssuing year.

THE KAWS AND THE PAWNEES.

A NARRATIVE OF INDIAN TIMES—A MISSIONARY DESPOILED.

Brother Stateler's account of the killing of a Delaware Indian preacher and his companions by Cheyennes in Kansas, in Indian missionary times, leads me to write the following:

A few years ago I dined at Westport, Mo., with an aged Frenchman, Chouteau, a son of one of the founders of St. Louis. In his youth he became a trader among the Kaw Indians on the Kaw or Kansas river, in the vicinity of Topeka. He spent many years there and was there when William Johnson, a brother of Thomas Johnson was operating as a missionary among the Kaws, Thomas being Superintendent of Shawnee Mission not far from Westport.

The Kaw Indians were in a state of perpetual war with the Pawnees upon the North Platte, and the tribes visited each other's settlements in hostile bands of a dozen, twenty, fifty or a hundred, doing their adversaries all the harm they could and escaping as best they might. Sometimes a war party was exterminated as was the hunting band of Delawares mentioned by Bro. Stateler. A Kaw chief related to Mr. Chouteau an account of disastrous expedition of which he was the leader. With a hundred braves he went to the Pawnee country, found and killed a number of women who were working in a field a mile or so from their wigwams. Then the murderers went near to the village, showed themselves and made tantalizing signs of defiance to the Pawnee warriors. The Pawnees were swift to give battle, and routed the Kaws at the first onset, who fled before their assailants, and were eagerly pursued till all were killed except the Chief, who eluded his pursuers and finally reached his home in safety and threw the Kaw community into intense grief and lamentation over the "ninety and nine" that were lost, and it may be presumed there was no less lamentation among the Pawnees when they found their wives and daughters and sisters dead in the field.

The Kaw Indians were not like their pale face Christian successors along the Kaw river—prohibitionists—but were strong supporters of the whiskey traffic, and embraced every opportunity to buy and drink it. "Moonshiners"—white men who managed to reach their settlement with fire water, and whiskey lovers would exchange furs, skins and ponies for whiskey. Sometims a big carousal would terminate in a fire fight. Indian women, like white women, were more inclined to sobriety than the men. But whether so or not they rarely got the opportunity to indulge. The men claimed the right to do the whiskey drinking for their families.

When the women saw that a fire fight was determined on they hid all the weapons of war, then built fires of brush and sticks, and let the drunken men enjoy themselves. Dividing into two parties, each combatant made a raid on a pile of burning sticks and seizing the colder end of one went for an adversary of the opposing band. The air was full of burning coals and of drunken Indian yells and howls. The howls of pain excelled in intensity the yells of the warrior when a hot stick was thrust against his corporosity. It was understood that there was to be "no gouging." Eyes were not to be put out nor handsome Indian countenances marred, hence the fire thrusts were at the body, which was naked. The day following a fire fight the combatants were in a sorry plight. Disfigured and suffering from blisters and raw places, from which the blistered skin had peeled off and their treasures gone. They were in a condition to sign a temperance pledge and vote a prohibition ticket.

The Kaws were good eaters, but at times they had only corn to eat. A kettle was always on a fire and corn was ever boiling. They had no regular meal times, but ate when appetite moved them. They would dip into the boiling corn and eat it when only half cooked. A head chief was welcome at every lodge and found hospitality everywhere. Such a dignitary called at supper time on the merchant man and was invited to eat. He declined, saying he had eaten fifteen times that day, but every meal had been boiled corn. He had a belt around him, and showed where the tongue of the buckle was in the morning, and that his body had enlarged in circumference about six inches during the day.

Rivaling this story of the French trader is one told, by the Rev. R. A. Austin, of the Missouri Conference, of a Montana Indian.

Austin and others were in "wonderland" during the stormy period of the war—for their health or other cause. One day a hungry Indian visited their camp. Three grown Jack rabbits were given the son of the mountains. He took off the hides, threw the rabbits on a bed of coals, and ate the whole of them at one meal, rubbed his outer man with satisfaction, grunted "Ugh" and departed. His later history was not learned.

Mr. Chauteau said the Government supplied the Kaw Indians with a large number of cattle and hogs to raise others from.

The Kaws understood the arts of killing and eating deer and buffalo, and practiced their arts on the Government animals before experimenting in the white man's ways for multiplying them, and it was not many months till all were dead and devoured except one sow and several little pigs, belonging to the principal chief. The merchant bought them with a firey red blanket in which the king arrayed himself. Chouteau declared war against any Indian who might kill any of the swine. As he was a licensed trader he could invoke the aid of Government officials in his own behalf. The Indians therefore had a wholesome fear of the trader. But one very bad Indian killed one of the pigs. The merchant witnessed the act himself and had other proof. The offended merchant man was like the King of Italy to the New Orleans gentlemen, was very mad, and demanded "blood for blood." The head chief offered to pay for the pig and ransom the killer. But the aroused Frenchman said, "Blood! Blood! The blood of a bad Injin." "How will you take it?" quoth the Chief. "Tie him to the National whipping tree, and let the official whippers whip him with switches till I cry enough," said the pig owner. It was done. While the culprit hugged a convenient sappling with his hands tied, two stalwart barbarians rained heavy blows on their "fellow citizen's" bare back, till the blood freely flowed, and the wrath of the Franko-American was appeased. The poor larcerate dIndian was laid up in his wigwam for weeks—laid on his stomach. The only complaint the injured Indian ever made to the Frenchman was, "Whip Injin too much." It was a wholesomeless as to the balance of the tribe. Chauteau never lost another pig. His swine herd increased till it numbered two hundred, and they ranged at pleasure over Indian village grounds.

When William Johnson was sent as missionary to the Kaws he made his headquarters at the Chauteau trading post. He wondered with great wonderment at the presence of so many fine hogs, and thought "what good Indians these Kaws must be, not to kill and eat the trader's hogs." He concluded he would buy the whole lot, raise hogs, and by a wise distribution of a reasonable portion of them among his parishoners, teach them the art of swine growing and self support. He bought and paid for the hogs, and caused it to be noised abroad among the Indians what he had done and what he proposed to do in the matter of swine growing. The Indians inwardly rejoiced that there was no danger of the whipping post from the good missionary, and in a few weeks they had eaten up all his hogs. Then the Frenchman let the missionary into the secret of making honest Indians of the Kaws.

The reports of the missionaries among the Kansas Indians shows that the Kaws were the most incorrigible of all the tribes, on which Methodism was brought to bear and that but little was accomplished among them. Though William Johnson did the best he could for their religious enlightenment and moral elevation. The Kaws and the Pawnees are now in the Indian Territory.

FROM THE COEUR D'ALENES.

I am in a repentant mood—Alas! I am often that way, and alas! again and again I fail to "bring forth fruits meet unto repentance"! How many opportunities of usefulness I let escape me! How sorry I am for their neglect, yet how little I profit by the sorrow! Wonder if anybody else feels just as I do? Snow-flakes, like feathers from the North Pole birds, have been falling thick and fast all day. I persuaded myself that my head was going to ache, and that my throat felt a little ticklish, so what easier than to be satisfied to remain indoors by a good fire, and day-dream the hours away until sunset, and then with a start wake up to a sense of duty undone. Too late! A day is numbered with the past, but it will appear again—I must meet it. How shall I meet it, and so many other days just like it? I don't wonder at the old monks lashing themselves until the blood ran, for I feel that a whip of scorpions, with some serpent's fangs thrown in for good measure, would not be too severe for myself at times—slothful about my Master's business—indolent, when work that would tax the strength and brain of an angel lies all about me—careless when men are sinking into hell! God forgive me, and all others like me, if there are any such!

The world does its work with so much more heartiness than I do mine, and it keeps at it, at it, at it, morning, noon and night. One day's work for Jesus sometimes makes me feel so tired. Servants of mammon around me dig and delve seven days in the week—working, working, and robbing God of even the one day that He has commanded to be kept holy! I, whose business and calling it is to try to save the souls for whom Christ died, and who claims to be working for the inheritance that belongs to the King's Sons. I can't suffer a little self-denial, can't run a little risk, yet he, that has no higher aim than money, who worships a little gold and a silver god on a pedestal of lead, can and does labor day in and day out, and risk and loses sometimes in the labor both life and Heaven! I have simply been looking into my own heart, not trying to pull motes out of anybody else's eyes. Felt like I had to "talk out in meeting." Haven't any class here, so tell my experience in THE METHODIST. I tell you, brother, when I think of the hard work that you and other pioneers have done and are doing, it makes a "tenderfoot" ("shorthorn" the Texans would call me) get on his thinking cap. I look about me! How wide the field, and how few the laborers! I listen! How urgent the call—it echoes and re-echoes through the gorges of these mountains, and united with the cry that comes across the Pacific from other shores, fairly thunders its trumpet notes of need in our ears! I look within! How little prepared and qualified am I! I look above! For the first time in my quest sunlight of usefulness falls upon me, for there is God, who has promised grace, and wisdom and strength and blessing The sky begins to brighten for even such as I am, and with the brightening is born the desire to have some share with my brethren out here in winning this wondrous land to the sway of the scepter of Jesus. Its going to be worn with Him. The "pine tree and fir tree" together shall bow before the Lord. "He, whom the armies of Heaven follow" is going to have the victory. The streams of salvation shall "flow off" all these hills. Hard hearts shall become tender—churches shall spring up—the Sabbath be observed, and wickedness in the highest places of wealth and the lowest dives of sin shall be overthrown. God is in the fight, on our side, and we are going to win, and Methodism is going to be in the lead in all this work. From the beginning she has been the church of the poor, the church of the masses, the church of God; for not only since Wesley uttered the words, but from the hour of Wesley's heart conversion on to the present and on for the future she says and will ever say, "The best of all is, God is with us."

The Montana Conference is going to keep abreast with the best. The old patriarch who for so long alone in these regions contended against Baal, is with us yet. The cloud the size of a man's hand he has seen grow, and the droppings of the shower he has heard, and ere long there will be the "Sound of abundance of rain." Stateler! Long may he yet abide with us! When he goes hence "My father, my father the Chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." "May a double portion of his spirit be upon us." Then your own work, Mr. Editor, a grander in God's sight I am sure than that of your illustrious namesake. Unlike him you will not be honered by the crowned heads of earth, but you will be among the crowned heads of Heaven. You'll not get a thousand dollars for a lecture, but you will get "wages unto life eternal." You will not often ride in a special car, but may your eyes be too dim that you may yet see these mountain tops in this grand West filled with the chariots of God and horses of fire. Then there are Parnall, and Price, and Squires and Lee, (I feel like I already know them, as by letter they have reached hands of welcome over the mountains to us, and gotten hold of my heart.) Then Couey, and Tabor, and Flowers, and others equally good and true, no doubt whose names I cannot recall just now.

One of the late recruits, brethren, with uncaressed head and heart open to love you, greets you. God bless you every one, and help me to follow you, as you follow Christ, and while I have no desire for the impossibility of the "Last being first," yet I do hope and pray, by your sympathy and prayers, and by the blessing of God to stand, when the final set comes, neither before nor behind you, but by your sides with shields locked and heart touching heart. Then when the foe is vanquished we'll all shout together, "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. "TENDERFOOT."

[The above excellent communication was lost in the mail, but turned up the other day, together with several other splendid letters which were in the same predicament. They are too good to be lost, and will be enjoyed by our readers all the same.—EDITOR.]

Temperance.

—"What we want now is a tremendous movement all along the line in the direction of fighting the drink! When the drink is discarded the saloon loses its customers; the traffic is undermined; the way is prepared to shut up saloons, and keep them shut. Oh, what a glorious year 1891 will be if it should see an old-fashioned revival of united assault, with God's help, on the drinking customs of this land! Quarrels in our own ranks are suicidal. Jealousies are a disgrace. In the face of an enemy set on fire of hell, let us unite in a common crusade set on fire with zeal from heaven! One year of such labor will work wonders!"—Dr. Cuyler.

—Bishop Ninde, at the recent anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education Society, speaking in admiring praise of his Kansas home, told of a Sunday-school mass-meeting where eleven hundred children were assembled. All who had ever seen a saloon were asked to hold up their hands. Out of the multitude, only about a dozen had ever seen one, and they were either new-comers into the State, or had been taken on a visit to Kansas City, Mo. His hearers agreed with him that it was a great thing to be permitted to bring up children where the saloon has no existence.

—Ether-drinking is so common in Ireland that it has been declared a poison, and its sale restricted to regular chemists. We can see in this question how silly are the objections to a restriction or suppression of the liquor traffic. If some person were to urge that a man has a right to drink ether if he wishes to do so, he would be laughed at. If the anti-sumptuary law people were to raise objections to the action of the lord-lieutenant, they would be hustled out of court very quickly. So must similar persons be dealt with in this country.

—It is stated that there are 160 members in the English House of Commons who abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor.

—The idea of having laws to prohibit the sale of liquors is not at all new. We read that prohibitory liquor laws were made in China three thousand years ago by Emperor Bao, and that he punished with death any who broke them. These laws were afterward taken to Japan, and were enforced nearly two thousand years, but passed away long ago, greatly to the injury of the country.

—Here are some Bible questions on Temperance: Who was the first drunkard? (Gen. ix, 20, 21.) Who took the first temperance pledge? (Judges xiii, 13-15.) Did anybody mentioned in the Bible ever take a pledge of his own accord? (Daniel i, 8.) Was he any healthier and wiser in consequence? (Daniel i, 15-17.) Ought kings to drink wine? (Proverbs xxxi, 4.) Ought we to make companions of drunkards? (1 Corinthians v, 11.) Can any drunkard enter the kingdom of heaven? (1 Corinthians vi, 9, 10.) Does God pronounce woe upon drunkards? (Isaiah v, 11–22.) Is intemperance a vice? (Galatians v, 22,)

—The National Temperance Society has issued a call for a National Temperance Convention to be held in the first Methodist Episcopal Church of Saratoga, New York, July 15, 1891, beginning at ten o'clock a. m. The various churches are called upon to send delegates, each conference or presbytery being entitled to seven. The call sets forth that we are at the threshold of a new era in temperance effort. As evidence of the imperative need that something further be done to stay the progress of this evil, the call directs attention to the unscrupulous deeds of the liquor interest, the bold steps taken to destroy the force of restrictive legislation, the open violence to prevent citizens from voting against them, which has even struck down in broad daylight those opposed to their nefarious schemes, the high license craze which has swept over the country, the perplexity occasioned by the Supreme Court decisions, and the heartless indifference of multitudes to the increase of intemperance, poverty and crime, are the direct fruit of the liquor traffic. Dr. Theodore Cuyler is president of the National Temperance Society. Arrangements have been made for reduction of fare on the principal railroads and at the hotels.

—The Young Women's Christian Temperance Union of the larger cities will give special attention during the coming year to "college settlements," a plan by which refined and well-to-do women take up their residence for a time in the most undesirable quarters of the city, there to give an object lesson in cleanly, healthy home life.

Christ in All Things.

A German writer says: "Look where you will, you will see scarcely anything beautiful and grand and lovely, which does not suggest the name of the Lord Jesus. Do you see the sun by day? Christ is the sun of righteousness. Do you gaze into the starry heavens by night? It is said of Christ, "A star shall arise out of Jacob." Do you see the morning star? It is said of Him, "He is the bright and morning star." Is it noonday, when all things are bathed in a flood of light? Does not the gospel of John say of Him, "That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world?" Look around, and observe the creatures in the field. There is a sheep feeding. It is said of Christ. "He was like a sheep dumb before its shearers." Or a lamb. Is he not the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world? Do you see a shepherd? Christ says, "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep and am known of mine." Do you come upon fountains, or streams, or great bodies of water? He is "a fountain opened for sin and uncleanness." Do you see a lovely tree loaded with fruit? He is the tree of life. Do you see a rose or a lily, or any charming flower? He is the "rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley." Do you array yourself in you own apparel? It comes again, He is a garment. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."—Golden Censer.

Vol. 3. JULY, 30, 1891. No. 46.

Editorial.

Retrospective and Prospective.

The Conference year draws to a close. By the time this paper reaches its readers the Montana Annual Conference, which commences at Helena the 29th of July, will be in session. It is a fit occasion for reflection. Has all been done that could be done for the cause of the Master? Have we been "instant in season and out of season?" Have we observed the spirit of that injunction that Paul gave to his son in the Gospel when he said: "O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust;" and have we, as laymen, observed the charge given by the same inspired apostle, "and we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you and are over you in the Lord?" Have you prayed for them, ministered to their wants and stood by them, and held up their hands as they were leading the hosts forth to battle against sin? Alas, there are too many of us who, if weighed, would be found wanting! And, sad thought, opportunities that we have let slip are gone forever. That man or that woman to whom you felt prompted to speak a kind word, but did not, is perhaps gone forever. That drowning man struggling with the angry waves of sin and passion whom you might have saved, but would not, has been borne beyond your reach. Oh, brother, will his blood be required at your hands? What a mercy that God has not entered into judgment with us.

While we are sad that there has been no greater ingathering, yet there is much to be thankful for.

First of all, we rejoice that death has not invaded our ranks, and we hear of no strifes nor bickerings among our brethren of the Conference.

Genuine revivals have attended our ministry, and many have been converted and built up in the faith. The work has been better and more thoroughly organized, and put upon a better and stronger basis every way. The building of a home for one of our presiding elders is no ordinary achievement. The paper, our organ, has steadily increased its circulation. Our preachers have been better supported. It has come to be generally recognized that we have a work to do in Montana, and our permanency is no longer a matter of uncertainty. Brethren of good standing in older Conferences are coming to our assistance. We begin to cherish hopes of having a college. Our borders are enlarging, and still there is a call for us to occupy many fields in "regions beyond." For these evidences of God's favor and blessing we are devoutly thankful.

Our Conference is the first on the list to convene this year. Though small in number, it is not insignificant. God often uses small things to accomplish great ends. The streamlets that are born amid the clouds on our mountain-tops are small, but much depends upon their character and the course they take. They help to swell the mighty rivers that sweeps through valleys and plains, and prairies far below, both East and West. So, under the blessing of God, the course that we pursue, the spirit and thoroughness that will characterize our Conference action may fix a standard and exert an influence upon other larger bodies throughout our great church the coming autumn.

Let us, as heretofore, pay up every dollar of assessment upon our Conference, and determine to raise $1000, for domestic missions, thereby turning our great disappointment into a great blessing. Let us come together in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ. Above all, let us sound the keynote of a deeper consecration to God, a stronger faith, a richer experience of God's love in our hearts; and let us be sure to preserve the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. May our Annual Conference session at Helena prove a very Pentecost to both preachers and people, wherein many shall be converted and a fire kindled that shall spread to every circuit, and station, and mission within our bounds during the coming year.

From Bishop Key.

Eureka Springs, Ark.
July 9, 1891.

Dear Brother:—This heading will supprise you. My wife's health declined so rapidly, and finding no relief from any source, whatever, I decided as a last resort to bring her here in the hope that this air and water will do what medicine has failed to do. I can neither take her with me nor leave her, so Bishop Duncan has kindly consented to hold your Conference for me, and will go out as soon as he can. I cannot begin to express to you my disappointment in all this. I had proposed a long stay among you, but an overruling Providence has ordered otherwise. Of course I submit. His way always is right, and His preference is my choice. Pray for us. The Lord be with you in great peace at your Conference.

Affectionately,
Joseph S. Key.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—We greatly regret the absence of Bishop Key, and sympathize with him in the sore affliction that has fallen upon his wife, but we bow to the Divine Will, and welcome our good Bishop Duncan to the Northwest, and trust that his coming may prove a great blessing to our work and to the church at large.

—You can say to advertisers and other friends that the circulation of the MONTANA METHODIST has reached nearly one thousand and is rapidly increasing. If our friends everywhere will exert themselves we can make it fifteen hundred in another six months. What say you? Let those who are in arrears please remit as early as possible. It will help to make needed improvements in the paper.

—Com. Booth, stated in one of his speeches that the Salvation Army exists today in 38 different countries, has no less than 10.000 centers. 1.-000.000 members, and reaches millions through its literature.

—The corner stone of the Scarritt Bible and Training School was laid at Kansas City with appropriate cermonies on the 2nd of July, 1891. The point is strategic, the site beautiful, the event an auspicious one, and the services were impressive. Among the visitors were Bro. Sudzuki (a Japanese student) C. F. Reid, Dr. Walter Lamberth, Dr. Potter, and Miss Belle H. Bennett, the agent. Bishop Hendrix was Master of ceremonies. The building will cost $50-000. It will be remembered that Dr. Scarritt gave $25.000, and Miss Bennett has raised the other $25.000.

—From Missoula to Spokane, (the "Fall's part has been left off the name) the distance is 268 miles, by the Northren Pacific Railroad. Traveling westward from the former place, leaving the beautiful valley just below town, we cross a high mountain divide, over the famous Marent's trestle, 225 feet high, thence down to Jack o valley, on the Flat head Indian reservation, from that to Clark's Fork of the Columbia, and on down that through dense forests, and cayons, wild and grand, to Hope, Idaho, on the banks of the picturesque Pend d 'Oreille (Pon-de ra) lake. Crossing portions of the lake at two points, a ride of 30 miles over an undulating timbered country, across a low divide, we came out into a beautiful prairie, almost level, with mountains to right and left, to Spokane, crossing Spokane river, the out-let of Coeurd' Alene lake, on the way. The last 30 miles ride is through a beautiful country.

—Spokane is 438 miles from Portland. It was first settled in 1872, incorporated in 1881, and its population in 1890 was 25,000. It is the county seat of Spokane county, is located on Spokane river, at the falls, on a broad bench with a commanding view of ranges of mountains that tower up in the distance to the northeast, and southeast. August 4, 1889 a great fire swept away 20 blocks, and millions of dollars were lost, and thousands of citizens were left homeless. But wonderful energy has been shown, and it now boasts of the finest buildings in the Northwest. The fire limit covers 40 squares miles. Its water works are unsupassed, and its fire department is complete. The city boasts of 40 miles of motor lines.

—The water power of Spokane is the wonder of the Northwest. The river divides into three channels and falls 156 feet by a series of drops within the limits of the city. It furnishes 114.000 horse power at low water, with double that at high water. It has not begun to be appropriated. There are large flouring mills, two alone having a capacity of 375 barrels a day. There are numerous saw mills, a sash and door factory, an oatmeal factory, laundries, printing presses, a cable line, an electric motor line, the electric light plant, and other things all harnessed to this mighty reservior of power that God has placed here for the use of His children. It is the life of the city. It houses the people, feeds them, warms, lights, informs, cleanses and transports them from place to place, while the wonderful volume, as it pours over the last great precipices, with a mighty roar, and with a cloud of sprays, adorned with rainbow colors ascending into the air, pleases, enthuses and inspires every beholder who is a lover of the grand and the beautiful in Nature. When you visit Spokane don't fail to take a good look at the falls. They are fascinating in the extreme.

MISSION OF METHODISM.

BY W. O. WAGGENER.

This paper was read before the Miisoula District Conference, and its publication requested by the Conference.

Methodism's mission is "to spread Scriptural Holiness" over this, and over all lands. Her mission, then, is Christ's mission, to send the Gospel "to every creature," or varying the expression, to carry the Gospel to all men, of all classes, and all conditions; carry it in hearts made "fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost," and then to tell it to all out of a heart experience, and with lips touched by a live coal, fresh from the altar, like that which touched Isaiah's hallowed lips with fire." Practical, aggressive Christianity, on foot, on horseback, on car, on boat; in the valley, on the plain, up the mountain side, over the mountain tops, across the oceans, out to the very ends of the earth, is what Methodism teaches. By her patronage of, and love for education, and for the highest culture— a culture, consecrated to God and his service, she is qualified to make her appeal to the most intellectual, the most cultivated. By a sympathy born of the great, deep, bounding love of God in her heart, and by an earnest desire to save and snatch men as brands from the burning, she makes her appeal to the vilest of earth. Permeated, filled, inspired, by God's Spirit, like God, she could touch humanity at every point and from every chord in every heart that forms the scale of being, from its lowest to its highest note, would draw the music of salvation, that all, God attended might sound in unison the anthem of praise to a common Father, yet the Lord over all, "and blessed forevermore."

How Methodism is peculiarly adapted to saving the great mass of mankind is a subject too large of scope for any full discussion in the limits of this very imperfect paper. At best I can only hope to make a few points that I trust will prove somewhat suggestive to this Conference.

First, then, Methodism's liberality of creed, peculiarly fits her for evangelizing the world. She allows the largest liberty in non-essentials, and has bound up in a cast-iron jacket no man's conscience, but has allowed every man the full privilege of private judgment. Holiness of life, rather than mere mental assent to or entire accuracy in the statement of formulated dogmas of creed, has been her demand of all who have sought fellowship with her. Again, how harmonious and concordant is her entire system of theology? No part contradicts any other part. Let our people read and study our doctrines more, and they will find the above statement true. Again, in the name of Him who "died for all," she offers salvation unto all, on the Scriptural conditions of "Repentance toward our Lord Jesus Christ." Hence, she can go to the proudest and say "You need salvation, but Christ has died, and wants to save you." She can go to the lowliest, the vilest, the most despairing, and with a voice quivering with love and sympathy say, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." "His blood cleanseth from all sin." "He comes to seek and to save the lost." "He is able to save unto the uttermost."

Again, Methodism's spirituality is a wonderful endowment for her work. She has not theorized so much as believed. Therefore, her teaching is not theoretical only, but also experimental. A godly life, rather than a correct theory, has been her demand. Therefore, her ministers and members have spoken with an emphasis and power, born of the truth and power of God as experienced in their own hearts. "Come and see," Methodists—"what religion has done for me, it can and will do for you." "This one thing I know, whereas I was blind, I now see." Her ministers have experienced what they preach, her members what they testify unto. It has been with them a matter of internal consciousness. Hence it is to the world a matter of external realness, and it carries the force with it that anything born in the heart ever carries. Out of the heart to the heart, Methodism's principle and method. Again, she has ever proclaimed a present salvation, and hereby met the most crying need of men's lives and hearts. "You need not wait for to-morrow, or next week, or eternity to be delivered." "Now is the accepted time"—"Now Jesus waits to save you, now Jesus will save you." "We which have believed do enter into rest." "Being justified by faith we have peace with God." "We may know that we have passed from death unto life;" "now become heirs of God and joint heirs with our Lord Jesus Christ." Another fact, Methodism has gone to the people, and from the people from the masses has goten many in her ministry. Such know by their own post what the people need. They can speak to them in the language of the street, shop and ranch. They have been diseased, they know what cured them, and they can point others to the "Balm in Gilead," "to the physician there," as the school man cannot. Again, nearly, if not the whole theology of Methodism is found in the songs of the church, and by the tender touches of sacred melody that theology has entered ears and found lodgement in hearts, that had else been "as the deaf adder," or as the hardest adamant. Our own beloved Southern Methodism is peculiarly fitted for saving the masses. She has ever preached a pure gospel, and kept herself free from all outside issues and entanglements. She has kept out of politics, and kept politics out of her pulpits. She wants "religion in politics," but has set her face as "a flint," against "politics in religion." By a safe conservatism, preaching nothing but the "truth as it is in Jesus," she has accomplished much, and to-day her mission is grander and wider than ever, and it is still widening. A great work have we to do. Are we of the Missoula District, faithful to Methodism's doctrines, traditions and practices? Are we reaching and helping the masses? To hold and widen her influence over the masses, our church by practical helpfulness must make them see and feel that nothing pertaining to them is a matter of indifference to her. She must by deeds, write upon the hearts of the masses the fact that they have no friend so faithful and true and helpful as the church. She must convince of her friendliness by unceasing efforts to help men —their souls, and their bodies too. Her ministry of blessing must be made as extensive as the race of needy man, and as all comprehensive as the wants of the great dying world that God has laid on the heart and conscience of the church. Jesus died for the race. He has called an entire world in its vastest extent to His heart, and he wants every one of us to help draw it to Him, its rest and its glory.

If "Christ be found in us, the hope of glory," then the world, not our families, not the Montana Conference alone, but the whole world is bound to our hearts, and we will feel for it somewhat as Christ felt, and we will help to save it. Let all Methodists do this, and their Methodism's mission will be done, for the world will be won, and the millenium will have come. Lord, pour upon us all the Holy Ghost! That's our chief need.

During the war a little color-bearer fell at the head of the column. After the battle as the dead were being collected, one came to the body of the color-bearer—in his hands was still his flag. The one who had found him thought him dead, and reached down to unloose the hands from the flagstaff—but no sooner touched he the banner, the thing to the boy dearest of all, because it was the symbol of what he loved most and best—no sooner was that touched, than the eyes of the dying boy opened and in a faint voice he asked, "Are you friends?" "We are," was the answer. Then said the little hero, "If you are friends, let me hold the banner till I die." Death came, but he was still holding the banner. Brethren, as Methodists, we hold a banner on which is written, "Christ for all the world, and all the world for Christ"—may you, may I, may all our people hold it "till we die"—and then may our children and children's children take it, and carry on, on until at last it shall float out in the breezes that blow from glory's hill-tops, and wave over a world ransomed, saved and glorified!

ALONG THE LINE.

DEER LODGE.

S. B. Tabor: Our work in Deer Lodge moves on with just enough friction to keep us on the lookout. Our Sunday School is doing fairly well. Our League and Bible Reading Circle are doing well. Our prayer-meeting is growing better. The Word has a larger and more attentive hearing now. The influence of our church is gradually widening. [Praise the Lord—Editor.

Later—Our Ladies' Aid Society sent Dr. Morton $100 to-day on our church debt—three months before it is due. They also have $50 of the last $100 in hand. The carpenters are working on the District parsonage.

The pastor and wife are happy over a recent addition to their family. —Brother Lear, good man that he is, gave us a saddle pony recently.—[We congratulate you—Editor.]

On the Fourth our streets were thronged with a fine and orderly a concourse of people as I ever looked upon. Not a disturbance or accident occurred during the day.

TOWNSEND.

Rev. R. S. Clark writes: Plenty of rain here, and everything in the way of vegetation doing well. Stock getting fat. Had assistance in preaching at Duck Creek last Sunday, and a profitable time, I trust.

PALOUSE CITY.

The meeting continued after the adjournment of District Conference, and a powerful revival was the result. Up to the time that St. Clair left, on Friday, there had been 11 accessions and as many more conversions. Brother Swift, who was called away to Spokane, returned and assisted in the good work.

SPOKANE.

While stopping in the city a few hours waiting for the train, on our return from Wallace, we hied us to the parsonage where we spent a delightful evening with Brother Isbell and family, and gathered the following items: One member received on the previous Sunday. A donation of a lot worth $400, together with a subscription of $100 toward the building has been made, towards establishing a mission chapel in Stafford's addition. A house worth $800 will be built there by next November. It is well located, will give us 8 new members and a larger Sunday School than the one we now have at Hargrove Chapel. Finances much improved. A new system. Members and friends subscribe and pay so much weekly to the general church fund, out of which all expenses are met. The amount doubled in seven weeks what it had ever been before in same length of time. Prayer-meeting well attended and greatly improved, and a good attendance at the official meetings, a good indication. Bro. Isbell expects to attend Conference at Helena.

COLFAX.

Since the District Conference Rev. A. Y. Skee has visited this town and says there is a fine prospect for our church, and we ought to have a mission station—a man to devote his entire attention to that field. He says that he was mistaken and that Bro. Anderson was right in the position he took at the District Conference in pleading for a man to be sent to this field.

CORVALLIS.

Brother T. W. Flowers has done most of the regular preaching on this charge the past year. There are three regular appointments and two or three other places that might be occupied. Brother Flowers has many warm friends among the people, and good congregations attend his ministry, though, sad to say, but little has been done for his support. The Fourth Quarterly meeting services were held at Olford's Schoolhouse, five miles north of Corvallis. Congregations were large and very attentive. At the afternoon service some fifteen or more persons came forward and gave their hands in token of a purpose to make heaven their home. It was a melting time. The Lord was present in power. We rejoice to find our friend and brother, John Wood, superintending the Sunday School at this place. When people "have a mind to work," and have the Lord working in them and through them, they can accomplish wonders.

FAIRVIEW, WASH.

F. F. St. Clair: Enclosed find name of another subscriber for the spicy little "Methodist." It is the name of a lady who is not a member of our church, and it is an entirely voluntary request for the paper to be sent to her. [We appreciate this most highly, and trust that she and many others may be greatly benefited by it. Will not other pastors and readers take the hint and kindly show the paper to their friends? Editor.]

Well, I am at my work again, on my circuit. Had a glorious day Sunday. Preached twice; the Spirit of the Lord endorsed, and we expect fruit yet from the services. Pray for us. God bless you and the paper and all who read it. By the way, I send you another name, a member of our church. And still they come. Glory to God! Amen.

DEMERSVILLE.

E. L. Lee: I shall indeed be very much disappointed if the Bishop does not come to dedicate our church. The people are all expecting him, though it has not been definitely announced that he would come. There will be about $325 to raise, which, of course, we will have to do before we dedicate. Messrs. Graham and Bogart have taken it in hand to buy a bell, and have $100 subscribed for it. The bell is ordered, but not here yet. It weighs 600 pounds. We have now been kept out of our house four Sabbaths on account of the plastering. We have been holding our services in the school-house, however, and carrying on the regular work of the church. Expect to be in the church next Sunday. Mrs. Lee's health has been poor, and she has gone to visit her father.

WALLACE.

Nearly a week was spent with our good Brother Waggener and family, and visiting and interviewing friends in Wallace. The pastor is universally popular. He has won his way to the hearts of the people, and with one voice they clamor for his return. While apparently so little has been accomplished in the way of additions to the church, yet a great work has been performed in preparing the soil, we trust, for a rich harvest in the future. The new church will be commenced at an early day.

BOULDER.

J. H. Johnson: We expect to complete two new rooms, additional to the parsonage before Conference. All my Conference collections are paid in full. The material aspects of the work have progressed this year. Otherwise the year has not been so hopeful. Congregations are as large as could be expected. I am meeting my regular appointments and preaching twice a month at Boulder Hot Springs. Only one conversion and addition by profession of faith to report.

BUTTE.

J. E. Squires: Have been pounded by our people here, and are having good services. One accession and another at the after-service yesterday.

STEVENSVILLE.

J. B. Parnall: Another "old-timer" has just passed away from our midst. Dr. R. A. Wells, who for many years past practiced as a physician at this place. He was born in Virginia, lived for several years in Missouri, served as a soldier through the Mexican war, was in charge of the post hospitals at Jefferson City, Mo., as a physician during the Civil War, and removed to this part of Montana about 14 years ago.

All who knew him loved and esteemed Dr. Wells, as an upright, conscientious, Christian gentleman. For many years he had been an elder in the Presbyterian Church, in which communion he remained a consistent member till the day of his death, on July 8th, at the age of 71 years. His end was peace. For some months previous, he had realized that it was near. We visited him frequently during his last illness and always found him calm and trustful. On being questioned as to his hopes for the future, he replied: "I know whom I have believed." At another time he said: "There is one passage of Scripture which has been a great comfort to me, 'where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.'"

In the absence of his pastor, Rev. E. M. Ellis, who is on a lengthened visit east, we were called upon to officiate at the funeral service, which was held in the Presbyterian Church, and numerously attended. He leaves a wife and four children (comparatively young) to mourn his loss, to whom our deepest sympathies go out.

We had a red-letter day at Lo Lo, on Sunday last. At the close of the morning service, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, and in giving the usual invitation, "Ye that do earnestly and truly repent of your sins," etc., we stressed the point that the present was preeminently a fit and proper occasion and means through which a penitent sinner might come to Christ and be saved. In the sermon previously I had mentioned the fact of Mrs. Susanna Wesley, having received the "Witness of the Spirit" at the sacramental table. In response to our appeal, a dear brother, hitherto a non-professor, with whom I had had in the past (particularly during the the protracted meeting last winter), earnest conversations about his soul, came forward, and whilst the others were yet standing, he knelt at the altar and began seeking the Lord.

After carefully explaining the spiritual meaning of the ordinance, we administered the Sacrament to him along with the rest, and a most gracious time we all had altogether. He then, with his wife, who had previously been a member of another church, but not then in active association, offered himself as a candidate for membership in our church. After a careful examination of his case, during the interval between the morning and evening services, and deeming him to be a fit subject for baptism, we accordingly at the latter service, administered to him that ordinance also, and he and his dear wife were formally received into the church in full membership—a joyful finale to the year's work at that interesting but hitherto somewhat unproductive appointment.

EAST HELENA.

L. Bramble: At our children's service we had a good congregation. The children performed their part well. Credit is due to our school teachers, Mr. Hutchinson and Miss Ramsey for the part they took in arranging the programme and training the children. Miss Carrie Burns presided at the organ. Many others deserve credit for the assistance rendered. I took a collection of $32.75 to buy a bell for the church, which with what we hope to get from others, we trust will enable us to purchase a good one soon. The organ debt is paid off, and hymn books paid for. The next move will be to build a parsonage. [We believe you will succeed with that also, from the way things are moving over that way.—Editor.]

We are deeply pained to hear of the decease recently of little Joseph Marshall, the only remaining child of his parents, at St. Joseph, Mo. A friend writes: "He was lovely in life, but more so in death." He was a Christian for several years. I cannot think of him as being dead, but alive forevermore. Just before he passed away he exclaimed, "Oh, Auntie. I am so happy. You have made the way so plain, and heaven seems so near that I can just put my hand into it." His face was radiant with the light of heaven. The better land seems nearer since he has gone there.

—Captain Hiram Cook, one of the early pioneers of Montana, died at his home in Boulder City on the 30th of June. He settled in Jefferson County, in 1868, and at the time of his death was about 75 years of age. He had been nearly blind for several years past, was a member of the Baptist Church, and commanded the respect of the people among whom he lived. He leaves several children and grandchildren and a number of great-grandchildren. His honored and faithful wife survives him.

Glum Religion.

The religion of Jesus has in it no elements to render its possessor morose, sullen, unattractive, glum. It is essentially cheery, pleasant, joyous. It removes all that terrifies and darkens, and sudstitutes whatever tends to lighten, beautify, sweeten, and make the heart leap for joy. The curse of sin is removed because it has been borne by Christ, the wrath of God toward the sinner has been quenched in the blood that cleanses from all sin, the sin that separated the soul from God has been removed, the peace of God that passeth all understanding keeps the mind and heart, the spirit of love takes possession of the whole man, "the mountains and the hills break forth unto him into singing and all the trees of the field clap their hands." "There is now no condemnation to him," "Christ dwells in his heart by faith," "it is formed in him the hope of glory," and "all things are his because he is Christ's;" he has the promise of God for everything that he needs on earth, safe conduct through the vale of death, and an eternal home with God and all blessed ones beyond. What a falsifier of the Saviour, what a caricaturist of his Master, what a stumbling-block to others in the way to heaven, and what an offense to "the little ones" in Christ's fold, is the professor who has nothing to exhibit but a glum religion.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—There is no prettier location for a quiet country town than Corvallis. It is in the very heart of the Bitter Root valley, which has been aptly styled the garden spot of Montana. Waving grain fields, extensive meadows, numerous orchards, blooming gardens, cozy cottages embowered in shade trees, together with beautiful landscapes and great majestic mountains towering up in the background greet the eye of the beholder. There is a fine large school house in the place, and a good opportunity to secure good homes, each surrounded by a small tract of land and coursed by a crystal stream. It could be made a fine educational center if steps were taken to secure a first-class school in the place.

—A severe hail storm visited the Bitter Root valley the 4th of July, destroying almost entirely Brother Thomas Gibben's grain crop, together with a number of other crops in the valley.

—While in Walla Walla valley we started one night with a Bro McMinn, who went there from Southwest Mo., about 8 years ago, rented a ranch, and though in poor health when he got there, in two years made enough on the place to buy it, paying $30 dollars per acre. A short time ago he was offered $200 an acre for the forty acre tract he lives on, but would not take double that amount, he says. It was refreshing to see the thrifty prune, apple, peach and cherry trees laden with choice fruits. What we saw there convinces us that there is a great out-come to portions of our country in Montana where there is a fine climate. good soil and a splendid market right at home, for vegetables and fruits such as can be grown here. Let our people bestir themselves. It is said that the fruit crop on the Bass Brothers farm in Bitter Root valley, Montana, this year will bring $20.000.

—Commander Ballington Booth, son of Gen. Booth, and his wife recently made a tour to the Pacific coast. They were greeted at the great cities with as much enthusiasm and by crowds of people scarcely less in number than those that welcomed President Harrison. They spent about twelve hours in Helena, where the Commander addressed an audience of 1000 people, including many of the leading citizens of this place. Among other things he said: "I believe that the sucess of the Salvation Army is due to the fact that we believe in divine enthusiasm. The Salvation Army is an ark floating on the waters of sin and iniquity, picking up poor souls who are floating on the waves of eternity, it is a moral broom sweeping the gutters of society. We are carrying the waters of life to the poor, panting heart of humanity. Some say the Salvation is going down. It is going down the right way, thank God. Religion has been in the steeples too long. It is now going down into the gutters. You ask us why we beat our drums on the street. For the same reason that ministers beat the bells of their churches. If you are going to reach the element that will not cross the door steps of your fine churches we must introduce some novel way to get their attention. Too long the hand of mercy has been held from this moral drift wood of society."

—Look at the advertisements in another column, of Central Female College, at Lexington, Mo., and Howard College, at Fayette, Mo. These are both excellent schools. We take pleasure in recommending them to all who have daughters to educate,and who expect to send them away from home. Let us patronize our own colleges, especially when we have such good ones. Send and get catalogues.

The Quarterly Review of the M. E. Church, South, edited by W. P. Harrison, D. D., is on our table. We have had time only to glance over its pages. The table of contents is inviting. Among the articles are, "Preparatorv Education from a Southern Standpoint," by Charles P. Curd, "A Wesleyan Armenian Confession of Faith," by Wilbur F. Tillett, "The negro in the South," by H., "Early Days of Methodism in the Blue Ridge Section of Virginia," by B. W. Fielder, "Raise of Arminiasm in Holland," N. H. D. Wilson, "The Beginning of Religious Persecution," E. E. Hass, "Crownwell and His Times," W. J. Scott, "The Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D.," by Bishop Galloway, "Editor's Table—Bishop Simpson as a Politician—The modern Evangelist—The case of Dr. Biggs."

—Miss Annie Johnson, of Corvallis, recently closed a very successful term of school on willow Creek, about four miles east of town.

—We are thankful for a copy of the Ninth Annual Report of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South for the Fiscal year, ending March 31, 1891. It is neatly printed, and as full of matter about Church Extension work as a publication of the same size (59 pages) could possibly be, and all systematically arranged in Doctor Morton's peculiar style. It contains the names of members of the General Board, and officers of every Conference Board in the church, together with the amounts contributed by each Conference, and the number of churches and parsonages receiving aid in each Conference, the amount of such assistance, and the value of property secured thereby. It also contains a map of the United State and a portion of Mexico, showing the location of churches and parsonages that have been helped. Every member who is interested in church work should have a copy of the this work. Send 4 cents postage to David Morton,Secretary, Louisville, Ky., and get one. The report shows that 383 churches and 27 parsonages have been helped the past year. There is no department of our church work that can show more tangible and substantial results for the investment of money and labor than our Church Extension work. There is no waste. Every dollar goes into brick or stone, or wood, is insured against fire, and when it ceases to be useful in one place, may be called in and put to work in another and more fruitful field. Let every one be sure to give something for Church Extension.

—We acknowledge the receipt of the Annual Catalogue of Harrell International Institute at Muskagee, I. T., for the scholastic year ending June 6, 1891, of which Rev. T. F. Brewer, A. M., is President. The school is under the control of the Indian Mission Conference of our church. The list of students indicates a good degree of prosperity, at which we rejoice.

—Rev. T. F. Brewer resigned the editorship of Our Brother in Red and is suceeded by Rev. W. M. Baldwin, editor, and Rev. J. W. Baldwin, assistant editor.

—The city of Spokane, Wash., has been greatly agitated in an effort to enforce the law closing the saloons and gambling houses on Sunday. A committee of 25 leading citizens, appointed by the Law and Order League, recently waited upon the Mayor and gave him to understand that certain officers would be expected to perform their duties in protecting the law-abiding people. We are glad to see the Spokane Review, a secular paper, enrolled on the side of the laws of good order.

—It is surely a great oversight upon the part of a committee in arranging for a general celebration of our Nation's birthday, in which all the people are expected to participate, to provide for a public dance upon the ground, an amusement that a great proportion of the Christian people of this country are conscientiously opposed to, and do not desire to witness nor have their children do so, though they are just as patriotic, and public spirited as any, and enjoy a grand rally on the glourious Fourth in company with their neighbors as much as other people. They might just as well insist upon a prayer meeting under the arbor, as for others to persist in tripping the fantastic toe in the same place. Let us have exercises in which all American citizens can join heartily, and the great purpose of the occasion will be gained, and good feeling promoted.

—The announcement of the death of Dr. Wells at Stevensville carried sorrow to many hearts and homes in Bitter Root valley. He was an excellent physician, a good citizen, and a devout Christian. A wide circle of friends mourn his loss. He will be greatly missed. We deeply sympathize with his bereaved family,and greatly regretted our inability to attend the funeral services. One by one the old-timers are passing away. May they all be as well prepared for the change as was our departed friend and brother. What on earth is equal to living the life and dying the death—if we may call it dying—of the Christian?

—Mr. William Jones, son of Garl J. Jones, died at his home near Corvallis, the 2nd of July, leaving a wife and one child.

—Rev. Rush McDonald, a superanuated preacher of the Southwest Mo., Conference, who it will be remembered spent several months last winter at Alhambra Springs, Montana, died at Edmund, Oklahoma, June 20. He was a useful, consecrated, Christian man, and died in peace.

—Several valuable communications are crowded out, and must lie over. But they will keep.

Our Great Need.

(Canon Fleming.)

Preacher and people, we need more of Christ. More of Christ would make that sad home bright, that wavering soul steadfast, that breaking heart happy, mourning spirit, glad, that burdened conscience light that selfish nature generous, and those who parted in enmity stand with clasped and forgiving hands. More of Christ would smite down sectarian walls, and win outcasts to the fold. More of Christ is what we all want in our hearts and homes, in our business and politics, in our schools and universities, in our churches and pulpits.

A Week of prayer—Aug. 9th-16th.

To the preachers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Our solicitude for the increased spiritual power of both preachers and laity with the needed quickening of interest in all the interests of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ has led to our making this call for a week of prayer on the part of the entire church for the second week in August. Nor can our prayers be without humiliation before God that we may be more alive than in the past; to the salvation of our fellow men, both at home and in other lands.

We suggest the following topics for the week of prayer:

Sunday, August 9th—Sermons on the Baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Monday, August 10—Prayer for greater spiritual power for our preachers.

Tuesday, August 11—More spiritual mindedness, a higher estimate of spiritual things on the part of our people.

Wednesday, August 12—For increase of home religion, more family altars and greater fidelity to the religious needs of our homes.

Thursday, August 13—For the divine blessing upon our youth in our Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues and our institutions of learning.

Friday, August 14—For our missions and missionaries in China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil and among the Indains and Cubans.

Saturday, August 15—For our missionary workers among the unevangelized in our cities and on the frontiers of our own land.

Your brethren in the Lord,

The Epworth League: Its Object.

BY MISS LULU BIGGS.

(Read before the Epworth League of the M E. Church, South, in Bozeman, Montana.)

The preachers of the Helena District were present, and on motion of Rev. D. B. Price, of Helena, the paper was ordered sent to the "Montana Methodist" for publication.

The objects of the Epworth League are to promote godliness in our midst; to benefit the church; to build up the congregation; to give the people something to do and to bring them to a closer relation to one another. With such objects in view we can accomplish much for our Master.

Let us look at them separately—First: To promote godliness in our midst is our first and highest object. This alone is enough for us to labor. How are we to promote godliness: By meeting from time to time, and listening to the Word of God explained and by studying it;

By reading and reciting such pieces as will honor and glorify our crucified Saviour;

By singing praises to His great and glorious name. To come for the purpose of worshipping God and no other. By daily and prayerfully studying His Holy Word, and trying the more closely to follow the example Jesus left us.

Second: To benefit the church Our coming together one evening every week, except Sunday, for the purpose of worshipping God will make us purer and better Christians.

Show me a church where its members are pure, true and humble, and I will show you a prosperous church; a church that people honor; a church which God blesses. The purpose of the league is to make such members.

In this way we can benefit our church, honor our God and build up our moral character.

Third: To give the young people something to do.

The young people naturally wait for the older members to take the greater responsibility.

They feel as though they have had no experience. And a great many young Christians think there is no place for them to fill, nothing for them to do.

But in the Epworth League of young people they find plenty to do, the sick to visit; the poor to help; the stranger to make feel at home in our midst; our companions and friends who are out of Christ to influence by a good example. If a young lady or gentleman comes to our community it is our duty to bring them to our league; and if they are not Christians it may be the means of their salvation.

And Lastly: To bring us into a closer relation to one another. Our meeting together socially will do this. It will enable us to become better acquainted with each other's needs and desires. And to meet together for a common purpose, the purpose of worshiping God, will as a natural consequence bind us together with the tenderest chord of Christ-like love.

With such purposes we should labor untiringly.

"Go work in my vineyard," is our Master's command. There is plenty to do, the harvest is waiting for the reaper. In the language of the poet we exclaim: "The harvest is white! the laborers are few. Work is abundant for the Christian to do; the poor and the famishing are crying for bread. The sick must be cared for; the hungry must be fed."

Obituary.

James Rose, son of David and Sarah Rose, was born in McMinn Co., Tennessee, July 21st, 1844, and died near Victor, Mont., Mar. 20th, 1891. Whilst an infant, his parents moved with him to Arkansas, where his father died. When he was fifteen years of age, (his mother having married again to her present husband, our esteemed brother Rev. Isaac Patty), the family removed to California.

At the age of eighteen, Bro. Rose professed conversion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which communion he remained a faithful and consistent member until about three years ago, when he united with the "Church of the Disciples."

He was married in 1866 to Susanna Fleenor. Four children were born to them, three daughters and one son, who, with their sorrowing mother, survive to mourn his loss.

Coming to Montana in 1881, he settled on Eight Mile Creek, where he engaged in farming and stock raising.

For about three years previous to his decease, he had been in rather declining health, his lungs being weak. Whilst on a visit to his mother, who was sick with La Grippe, he was stricken down with Pneumonia, and died in a very few days after being taken.

Bro. Rose was an effectionate son, a devoted and loving husband and father, a kind and obliging neighbor, and we believe a faithful and sincere Christian. We trust he is now "where the wicked cease to trouble, and where the weary are at rest." May all the members of his family, including his five brothers and one sister, strive as do their aged parents to meet them there.—J. B. PARNALL.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY. and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the and help double our list

BUTTE LETTER.

Dear Methodist:—I am rejoiced to know of your increased subscription list and the hopeful outlook before you.

As we come to the close of the conference year, I am possessed with mingled feelings of gratitude and joy for any good we may have done in the name of our Master; and with regret and heaviness of heart in that we have done so little for the glory of our God, and the upbuilding of the church. We ought to have doubled our membership in the Conference during the good year which now closes. And our field should have grown to practical self-support by this time.

It is a shame to our cause that in the midst of so much wealth, and much of it in the hands of our own people, or the friends of our church, we should be dependent upon the Mission Board for our life. May the Holy Spirit move upon the hearts of our people out here to rise up in their self-respect and Christian manhood and womanhood and say, "We'll build our churches and support our preachers." What a foundation for a great revival of religion this would be!

The last Quarterly Conference was held yesterday evening at this place. Thirty-nine additions were reported for the year; 18 on profession, and 21 by letter and otherwise. The attendance upon worship, collections, and Sunday School work all seemed to be in a hopeful condition. All collections reported full except that for P. C., which will be added to, before Conference.

We will report 69 members in the charge, and 95 Sunday School pupils. We believe God has great things for us to do in this great and wicked city, and we are getting in shape to charge the enemy — not simply "Hold the Fort."

Now a few words to all of my brethren in the Conference concerning some matters of vital importance to our cause here. First of all we must have an educational institution in our bounds somewhere if we are to gain and hold the place in the uplifting influence of this country that the people expect of us and duty demands of us. Let a day be set apart during the session of the Conference, say Friday, 31st, for fasting and prayer—the evening given to a mass meeting—that God will open the way and raise up a man who will give us the money to build and open to our people a college worthy of our cause in this great Northwest.

Again, let us arrange during the Conference session, for the wisest and most vigorous attack upon the enemy during the coming year—each man helping his brother and in turn being helped by him, not waiting till fall or winter for the campaign. Once more, let us have our paper made a w-e-e-k-l-y, and have the Conference minutes published.

Faithfully yours,
J. E. Squires.

FROM BOZEMAN.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

Our State Sunday School Association has just closed the most interesting and most profitable convention of this body.

Our gifted President, Rev. A. C. Couey, presided with equity and grace. His sweet spirit and the efficient manner with which he presided won for him the hearts of all who attended from time to time.

The attendance was good. Most of the churches were very well represented. All went away from the Convention stirred, as perhaps never before on the Sunday School work. Of the preachers there were present of the M. E. Church, South, Rev. A. C. Couey, President; Revs. S. B. Tabor, J. E Squires, D. B. Price, J. H. Johnson, H. B. Cockrill, B. E. H. Warren, W. T. Goulder; of the M. E. Church, Revs. J. W. Bennett. R. M. Cravan, F. E. Brush; of the Congregational, Rev. W. S. Bell; of the Presbyterian, Revs. T. V. Moore, J. W. Sanderson, of the Disciples, Rev. Geo. Barnaby.

The churches were all represented by the lay delagates from the different charges.

Our city churches were all well represented and added much to the interest of the session. At the close of the afternoon session, Thursday, a line of carriages were in waiting at the door, and the convention was treated to a ride over our beautiful city, and out up to a point where they could have a fine view of the city and the surrounding country.

The visitors to our city were made to exclaim: "Wonderful! wonderful!!"

While upon the hill looking down over the city and out over the fertile fields surrounding, three loud cheers were given for Bozeman, and our sweet singer, Butte's gifted pastor, Rev. J. E. Squires, could not contain the joy he felt at so wonderful a sight, and standing erect in his carriage, with his hands lifted he warbled forth one of his sweet songs while all listened in silence, enraptured by the beauty of the hour. At the close of the last evening's session an informal reception was given to the convention by Mr. and Mrs. Gen. Wilson, at their beautiful residence. They tarried till a late hour and were loth to leave. All went away from beautiful Bozeman (by the way, our future capital, Mr. Editor), with a determination to let no opportunity pass in the future to visit our city.

Friday morning the preachers and delegates nearly all left for their homes and fields of labor. Rev. T. V. Moore remained over to preach for Dr. Sanderson, the Dr. going to Helena to preach for him. Rev. S. B. Tabor remained with us, allowing the P. E. to take his pulpit at Deer Lodge. Bro. Tabor won the hearts of my people. Sunday afternoon, at the M. E. Church, South, at 6.30 the young people of the different churches, representing their Young People's Societies, gathered together and spent an hour in a Union service. Our hearts were stirred, and we were all blessed together. We had a happy time. The only displeasing feature was that the house would not accommodate all who came. Our young people in Bozeman are alive and active, and are working with a will. There is no envious strife between our churches in Bozeman, especially the young. All are working in harmony. We are going to take this city for God. [Amen. Editor.]

One interesting feature in the Sunday School Convention I forgot to mention. Miss Minnie Buzzell, a young lady who has labored in the Missionary fields of China three years, having returned for a rest and to recuperate her health and strength, was with us and captured a large audience Tuesday evening. She delivered the finest lecture it has ever been our pleasure to hear on the Missionary cause. She is a young lady, scarcely more than a girl.

The officers of the Sunday School Association for the coming year are: President, Lieut.-Gov. Richards; Recording Secretary, E. Sharp; Statistical Secretary, H. C. Arnold; Treasurer, A. Barrett.

I could write much more, Mr. Editor, but because you did not accept our invitation to come over, I shall punish you by not writing any more. [We accept it with the best grace possible. Editor.] Yours in peace and truth,

W. T. Goulder.

Yielding.

"Yield to the wave and it will carry you," shouted back an experienced surf bather to a friend who was being tossed about mercilessly by the billows, against which he sought to oppose his pigmy strength; and as in obedience to the command, he cast himself unresistingly upon the approaching wave, it bore him easily and gently toward the shore.

May we not find in this a parable in which there is much teaching? How often do we seek to oppose, with all the feeble strength of our will, the approaching wave of suffering or misfortune which threaten to overwhelm us, and as we thus resist, we are overwhelmed, cast down, and sometimes utterly destroyed.

Well for us if we can early learn the lesson, and instead of allowing the sorrows and troubles that must, so inevitably, come to sweep the solid ground of our faith from beneath our feet, yield unresistingly, and let each wave of misfortune sweep us nearer to that heavenly shore where "sorrow and sighing shall flee away," and there shall be "no more pain."

"How can we?" do you ask? By simply believing that He to whom we pray each day "Thy will be done," is fulfilling that will for us.

Cruel, unjust, pitiless as the circumstances of our lives may seem to our feeble sense, He the all powerful, the all-loving, the all-pitiful, knows, cares, directs,—and this realization comes to the poor, tired soul that has fought so ineffectually against the tide, rest comes with it.

"Let not your hearts be troubled," He has said. "Why?" "Ye believe in God." Is not that a sufficient reason? And although our earth-born troubles may reach us through strange instrumentalities, the acceptance of them in a Christ-like spirit—the faith that casts itself into the "everlasting arms" in the moment of despair is most precious to the Father's heart, and to such comes His most gracious promise, "Peace I give unto you."

Accept the thought that a yielded will is a fulfilled will, and every wave of anguish will only accomplish its mission of bearing you closer to the heart of Him whose name is love.—

NORTH-WESTERN MISSIONS. How Oregon was Saved. Dr. Whitman's Tragic Death.

BY L. B. STATELER.

Before closing this part of my narrative, I want to refer to some other laborers in that distant land. Rev. Mr. Spaulding and Dr. Whitman were sent by the Presbyterian Board of Missions, and accompanied the Lees on their first journey over the plains. The first named stopped with the Nez Perces on the Snake river, and the latter went on and stopped with the Walla Wallas in in the valley of the Columbia river. They established missions at each of these places. Mr. Spaulding returned by sea, after having established his mission. Dr. Whitman remained for a number of years, teaching the Indians the principles and usages of Christianity, and also how to till the soil. He built a water-mill with which to grind their grain into bread He appears to have been in great favor with them, for being a physician he often ministered unto them in their bodies as well as their souls.

Being so closely connected with the British Possessions on the North, our friends, the British, were desirous of owning Oregon, which extended from the Pacific coast to the top of the Rocky Mountains and south to the Mexican boundary. Dr. Whitman overheard the conversation of the fur traders of the Hudson Bay Fur Company in which they said: "Very shortly this country will become the possession of Great Britain. "For," said they, "our minister at Washington is negotiating with the Secretary of State for this Oregon country, and we will soon own all of it."

Though it was then late in the fall, Dr. Whitman determined that he would go to Washington and endeavor to save this plan from being carried out. So, taking his wife down the Columbia to the nearest Methodist Mission, near the Dalles, he left her there and departed on his long and perilous journey overland, on horseback, with pack animals, going by Santa Fe. From New Mexico to Missouri, he had to travel over those arid plains, about 800 miles, in the midst of stern winter. He arrived at our Manual Labor School, near Kansas City, sometime in the month of February, 1843, having made the long and tedious journey with a lone hired man, with a pack animal to carry their provisions. The animals had to make their living on what grass they could pick during the night, while lariated with ropes. It being mid-winter, the ground was covered with snow most of the time, and had to be raked off before a fire could be made, even when they were fortunate enough to find fuel, which was not at every stopping place. The animals had to paw for their living.

The Doctor stayed at my house. He was clad mostly in skins, had a buffalo coat, vest and pants and a buckskin shirt; had not changed since he left Santa Fe, and he said was going in that very garb to plead his cause before Mr. Webster. His face and limbs were nevertheless frozen when he reached my house. He was free to communicate. The man he brought along was a Mexican whom he strongly suspicioned of treachery. Fearing lest he might be tempted to take his life and return with the animals to New Mexico, he said: "I would make him first lie down on the buffalo robe, with his back towards me, then I would lie down with my face to him, put my arms around him so that if he should awake I would know it. Thus we slept every night, I having thus to keep a constant watch to protect my life and save the animals from being stolen, for they were my only means of getting to the settlements.

Doctor Whitman tarried a few days dressing and nursing his frozen limbs, when, leaving his ponies, he took the stage and departed for St. Louis, going from thence on to Washington.

Negotiations were pending at this time between Daniel Webster, our Secretary of State, and the British minister, in which the Territory of Oregon was to be exchanged for water fisheries along the coasts of New Foundland.

When Whitman arrived in Washington the trade was not yet perfected, and he went at once to see the Secretary of State and assured him that he was misinformed in regard to the supposed barrier presented by the Rocky Mountain to travel between the States and Oregon, and that if the Secretary would give him the means, he would take back with him a colony across the plains and over the Rocky mountain range, in wagons, through to Oregon.

Mr. Webster being informed by Dr. Whitman of the vast resources of the country, which were urged upon his attention most earnestly, declined to further consider the proposition to transfer; it and thus Oregon was saved to the United States, as I verily believe, through the prompt, self-sacrificing effort and wise counsel of a missionary in the person of Dr. Marcus Whitman.

In the spring of '43 Dr. Whitman returned from New York on his way to his mission field in Oregon. He stopped with us at our mission, securing pack animals and the necessary outfit for making the long journey on horseback. He had with him a 12-year old boy—a nephew—and none other. They went in company with a caravan—some emigrants, perhaps, and mountain traders. Caravans, up to that time went with pack animals only.

The Doctor arrived at his field, got his wife home from the Methodist mission where he had left her, and continued his labors from '43 to '47, when through the treachery of the principal chief of his tribe, in whom he confided and who frequently sat at his table, he was brutally murdered. The chief came to his house professing to want medicine for his sick child, followed the Doctor into the room, and while the latter was preparing the prescription the fiend stepped up behind him and with one fell blow buried the hatchet, which he had concealed under his blanket, in the Doctor's brains, killing him instantly. Other Indians rushed up stairs and caught Mrs. Whitman by her hair, dragged her down stairs and murdered her in the room where her husband lay dead. About a dozen others who happened to be at the mission as employees were also murdered. A few, however, saved their lives by escaping through a trap-door into the cellar where they were not discovered.

There had been considerable mortality among the Indians, and evil characters had represented to them that they had been poisoned by the missionary. Hence the excuse for his cruel murder.

Troops were called out at once. Many volunteers came from the Williamette valley, the murderers cut off, and the tribe severely punished for the rash and cruel murder of one who was doing all he could for them. Thus the labors of that faithful man and his noble wife were suddenly brought to an end, for the war which followed cut off all hope of successful missionary work among them.

I have thus referred to the incidents related in the last few chapters that the present generation may be reminded again of the efforts that have been made by the church and something of the labors and sufferings performed and endured long years ago by men and women who went forth into the howling wilderness and laid down their lives that the Gospel might be preached to the Indians, and who thus became the avant couriers in opening up for settlement this great West and Northwest.

[The editor recently visited the site of the old Whitman mission in Walla Walla valley, and the place where the missionary and his wife are buried, of which we desire to write more in detail when time and space permit. Bro. Stateler's reminiscences hereafter will contain more of his own personal experience, and will be very interesting—Editor.]

Accident to the Editor.

The readers of this paper, who as yet may be unacquainted with the fact, will be grieved to learn that on July 20th, the editor whilst extinguishing a fire at his home, near Corvallis, Mont., was badly burned about the head, face and hands

The fire started in an upstairs bedroom through the thoughtlessness of the hired girl. Fortunately help was at hand sufficient to subdue the flames before they extended beyond the one room, the contents of which were destroyed. In the heroic endeavor to suppress the fire almost alone at first, and at close quarters, Brother Stanley seems to have received his injuries, which though painful and serious at present, will not we trust greatly disfigure him in the future.

Up to the present date, Aug. 1, he has been confined to his home, and deeply to his personal regret and sorrow, and that of his brethren, for the first time since the organization of the Montana Conference, he has been unable to meet with it. His genial presence is greatly missed amongst us; many prayers have gone up to heaven on his behalf and much sympathy has been felt. We trust that his restoration to health, which hitherto has been slow, will now become much more rapid, so that he may again resume his beloved work.

J. B. Parnall.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

The fourteenth session of the Montana Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in Grand St., Methodist Ch., Helena, July 29, 1891 at 9 a. m., with Bishop W. W. Duncan in the chair. After the singing of the old familiar conference hymn, "And are we yet alive," the Bishop led in prayer, and then read a Scripture lesson from 1 Thess. 2, including the first twelve verses. His terse, wise and affectionate remarks on the same will not soon be forgotten by all present. How much a member of an Annual Conference or visitor to the same, misses by not being present at the opening exercises! They have invariably been to us, seasons of rich grace and religious enjoyment.

The administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper followed, a fitting prelude to, and index of, the free, hearty, fraternal intercourse and fellowship that characterized the session of the Conference.

Only three ministerial and five lay members of the Conference were absent at the first roll-call; two absentees of the former and one of the latter class, arrived later on in the session. It was very gratifying to note the presence of so many of the laymen.

When the official members of the church are ready and willing to make sacrifices on its behalf, such as are required of the preachers, then a new era will commence in the history of Zion, in which, not only will the work of the church be accelerated, but also the graces and enjoyments of its members will be wonderfully augmented. Are we already entering upon this new era?

J. B. Parnall was elected Secretary of the Conference, with W. T. Goulder as assistant, and J. E. Squires as Statistical Secretary. The usual committees were also appointed.

There was scarcely a dry eye in the Conference room when the Bishop read, on the second day, part of a letter just received from Bishop Key in which the sad intelligence was conveyed of the death of Sister Key on July 25. Her departure was most triumphant and victorious. The following resolutions of sympathy and condolence with the dear sorrowing Bishop, were adopted by the Conference:

"Resolved:— 1. That we have through Bishop Duncan learned today with profound grief and deep sorrow, of the decease on the 25 inst, of the wife of our esteemed and beloved Bishop Key, who but for the previous sickness of his dear companion would have been our presiding Bishop this year.

2. That we hereby express the heartfelt sympathy which we feel with our afflicted Bishop in his great bereavement; we are comforted, however, in the assurance of the triumphant entry into glory of our departed Sister; and we earnestly pray that in this fiery hour the abounding consolations of Christ and His Gospel may be, as we believe they are, graciously realized."

L. B. Stateler,
A. C. Couey.

A copy of the above resolutions was at once mailed by the Secretary to Bishop Key at Columbus, Ga.

Immediately after the name of E. J. Stanley was called and his character passed, the following resolutions were passed:

"Resolved, That we, the members of the Montana Conference in session at Helena, do hereby express our sincere regret at the absence of our beloved brother, Rev. E. J. Stanley. That we love him tenderly and pray most devoutly for his speedy and complete restoration to health and entrance upon his useful career among us."

J. E. Squires,
W. T. Goulder,
B. E. H. Warren.

A very pleasant episode, was the receipt by the Bishop on the fourth day of the Conference, of a telegraphic dispatch from Great Falls, Mont., containing the fraternal greetings of Montana Annual Conference of the the M. E. Church (North) which was then in session, under the presidency of Bishop Bowman.

L. B. Stateler and B. E. H. Warren were appointed a committee to suitably respond by telegraph to this brotherly message. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

At the close of the Saturday afternoon session through the generous courtesy of C. K. Wells, President of the Helena Electric Railway Co., who placed a car at the disposal of the Conference free of charge, we visited the far famed Broadwater Hotel, distant about three miles from the center of the city. The Hotel is beautifully located and handsomely furnished. In conjunction therewith is a spacious natatorium provided with warm water which is conveyed thither in pipes from the hot springs some distance away. The original cost of the whole establishment we understand was about a quarter of a million of dollars.

It was very gratifying to note from the report of the Treasurer of the Superannuated Preachers' Widows and Orphans' Fund, that the fund now amounted to the sum of $1528.35 with other moneys as yet uncollected. Nearly the whole of this amount is bearing good interest, and before long will yield a nice revenue to the Conference. As yet there are no claimants on the fund. At the request of the Conference the Bishop appointed an agent to represent this important interest, and very fittingly L. B. Stateler the man to whom, with his sainted wife, we mainly owe the existence of this fund, was selected. As will be seen from the list of appointments, our aged brother is this year relieved from circuit work to enjoy comparative rest in looking after this interest alone.

With a view to the above fund, and the holding of any other moneys that may come into the hands of the Conference for special purposes, steps were taken to have the Conference legally incorporated. L. B. Stateler, A. G. Clarke and B. E. H. Warren were appointed as trustees for that purpose.

We are heartily glad that the way now seems clear for these necessary and important steps to be taken. Donors of money or property to the Conference for any particular object may now be assured that the best possible care will be taken, and the wisest disposition made of the fruits of their generosity.

We hope that during the present Conference year, the Agent will be able to secure considerable additions to this fund. Remember it in your will, my brother!

It rejoices our heart greatly to note the numerical advance we have been enabled to make during the past year. The total number of members now reported is 530 as against 448 a year ago, an increase of over 15 per cent. We are cognizant of the fact, however, that more members do not indicate accurately, the strength of a church.

"Then let us not of numbers vaunt,
Or make of art a snare,
For men like Moses most we want,
To bless the church by prayer."

All the assessment made on the Conference for Church Extension, Missions, &c., were paid in full. What was not collected on the various charges (and we are gratified to note a good proportionate increase on last year from this source) was raised at the Conference. The collection for missions, both Foreign and Domestic, averages more than one dollar per member. How does that compare with most of our older Conferences? Surely those of our brethren in the South who have been in the past objecting to the appropriation of so much missionary money to the West, ought to see by this that we are developing a Methodism here, that at least knows how to open its pocketbook, in grateful recognition of the favor shown us by the General Board.

The sum of $150 was raised and appropriated for Domestic Missions, and an assessment of $200 made for the ensuing Conference year under that head. Another charge—Butte Station—has entered the honored list of self-supporting charges. We extend to both pastor and people our hearty congratulations. "Who'll be the next to follow?" We know of some that are struggling hard in that direction.

For several years past we have been talking of taking steps towards the establishment of a college or school of high grade within the bounds of the Montana Annual Conference. A much needed institution as an auxiliary to our work here. Now the Conference has begun to act. J. E. Squires, S. B. Tabor, W. O. Waggener, A. G. Clarke, H. B. Bell, A. C. Couey and E. J. Stanley were appointed a committee to determine the character and grade of the proposed institution, also to solicit donations and receive bids for the location of the same. We wish for the committee speedy and abundant success.

The Secretaries of the Conference, along with E. J. Stanley to assist in the editorial work were instructed to publish the Conference minutes in pamphlet, form as speedily as possible. A brief synopsis of the minutes of the intervening Conferences since the last publication, some seven or eight years ago, will be embodied in the same, and possibly then will be added wood cuts—pictures— of Bishop Duncan and Rev. L. B. Stateler. The nominal price of ten cents will be charged. We are expecting a large demand for these minutes, which will be valuable to keep for future reference. Send orders with money to J. B. Parnall, Stevensville, Mont., or if more convenient order through your preacher.

The report of the committees on Publishing Interests contains the following reference to the "Montana Methodist." "The report of the editor and Business Manager, Rev. E. J. Stanley shows a healthy financial condition of our Conference paper. 1000 copies are printed and circulated, and there are about 600 paying subcribers. Aftet paying all expenses connected with the paper, there is a balance in hand of $37.95, with additional assets amounting in all to $59.75. We recommend the continuation of Rev. E. J. Stanley in his present relation to the paper. We also recommend the publishing of the paper weekly, as soon as practicable, and do hereby commit ourselves to the circulation and support of it as our Conference organ.

We recommend the appointing of the following Board of Publication for the ensuing year: A. G. Clarke, the preacher-in-charge at Helena, S. W. West, E. J. Stanley and J. E. Squires.

In the absence of the Editor, and without his knowledge, we feel like exhorting on this text. Why can we not, by a united effort, preachers and people, increase the subscription list of the paper to at least 1000? This could easily be accomplished, we think, if only our hearts and minds were set on it. Let each subscriber, when renewing his subscription, send along the money for at least one new subscriber, and do it at once, and thus the desired result will be realized. Send to E. J. Stanley, Corvallis, Mont.

The Conference closed on Monday afternoon, August 3rd, the session having been a very pleasant and profitable one. Hymn No. 231 "Blest be the dear uniting love" was feelingly sung, and L. B. Stateler led in prayer. The Bishop called Question 35 "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" and after a few pertinent ren arks, read the following list of appointments:

Notes.

—The Sunday-school literature issued at our Publishing House improves all the time. The weekly Visitor, for young people, is par excellence. Prof. Gross Alexander writes the expository notes on the lessons in the monthly Magazine. They show the marks of a masterly mind while Bishop Haygood's "doctrinal teachings" are worth the subscription price of the pamphlet, to say nothing of the splendid productions of Rev. H. L. Bacon, on "Primary Class Teaching", and of President Carlisle on the practical application of the lesson.

—There is strong talk to the effect that the great Anaconda copper mine at Butte City, together with the immense reduction works near the town of Anaconda, has changed, or is about to change hands. The purchaser is anEnglish syndicate backed by the Rothschilds. The consideration will doubtless run far up into the millions.

—Bihop Haygood, in speaking of his removal to Los Angeles, in the Pacific Methodist Advocate, says: "I enter my last campaign and it will be the hardest fought of any I ever passed through. I am not deceiving myself with vain visions of accomplishing such visible results. If I do much, most of it will appear when I am "in the high countries" where the redeemed are." He has the right idea. This is not the reaping, but the sowing time here in the great West. The Bishop, ere this, is housed in his California home. May his labors there be abundantly blessed of God in the advancement of His kingdom. We believe they will be.

—The fourth Quarterly Meeting at Stevensville was a red letter day for our Methodism there. There was a large attendance. The sacramental services were solemn and impressive. The attention was excellent. There were a number of valuable additions to the church. At the suggestion of two of the Stewards the congregation joined in raising the balance of $129 yet due on the salary of the P. C. and P. E. It required but a few minutes and everybody was happy over the result. May this record be kept up from hence forth. Stevensville was never in so good working condition before. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

—Brother M. U. Cannon, of Burnt Fork, is delighted with the Montana Methodist, and takes a lively interest in its circulation. He recently subscribed and paid for it out of his own pocket for five of his old friends back in Georgia. He says he wants the people there to know what kind of a country and people we have and how Christianity is progressing here in the North West. Let others follow his example. Who will be the next? Send on the names of your friends. Don't delay.

—The editor is disabled on account of injuries received while fighting the flames, which on the 20th of July came near destroying our home. We praise God for the wonderful deliverance wrought, and are grateful to our many friends for words and acts of kindness in our affliction. Our old standby, Rev. J. B. Parnall, kindly gets out the paper for us this week. It was one of the greatest afflictions we ever experienced not to be able to meet with our brethren in Conference. But those assurances of remembrance and of tender regard, coming from the bishop and from our brethren beloved, how they warmed and refreshed us in our sick room. Thank God for the tie that binds. We will soon be ready for work once more, and shall strive to render more and better service for the Master than ever before.

From Council Grove, Kansas.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

I have just finished reading the last number of your little paper (little in size only, not in make up,) and want to tell you that before I get through, my heart and eyes were both full. I think it is one of the best little papers I have ever read, I enjoy the experience of our preachers in the North-west, I had a dear brother who spent the last six years of his ministerial life in the Columbia Conference, and then came home to us to die, and of course I have a peculiar interest in that part of our work. The communication in the last number from "Tenderfoot," will I fear, find a great many of us in like condition, how often we hear the call to go out and do something for the Master, but make no response. May his stirring article set us to thinking and acting. My husband has been talking of writing you, and sending something more substantial than thanks, but he is kept so very buzy, that he has neglected you. I have felt for some time that I must send you a private note, and thank you for the paper, and the good it has done me. Personally I have only a passing aquaintance with you, but I feel like I know you well. May the Lord continue to bless your work.

Now, Bro. Stanley, I presume this Scribbling is the result of a spell of nervous prostration I am having. Perhaps I will keep real well hereafter. Mrs. S. A. Gross.

We are much obliged for this kind letter, and know that our friend will pardon its publication. We felt like it would refresh other hearts as it has our own. We are just selfish enough to hope that she will not keep real well hereafter; if that means no more contributions to the Methodist. We have had an eye on brother Gross for some time for the work iu Montana just as soon as the brethren can spare him from Kansas. But we fear that will not be very soon.

Editor.

FROM LEWISTON, Idaho.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

The Montana Conference opens to-day, two weeks later the East Columbia Convenes. Bishop Duncan transferered me to Lewiston circuit, East Columbia Conference from Dyersburg, Memphis Conference, Nov. 17th 1890, and now he is coming to call for an account of my stewardship. We are not ready, but will start to Dayton, Wash., Aug. 10th. with a consciousness that some honest efforts have been made to save the lost. The Spokane District Conference recommended a division of the circuit at its recent session in Palouse city, Wash., by forming a Camas Prairie circuit. Every charge in the district reported open doors and work enough for another man. Therefore, it was decided to double the force next year if possible to get the men. I never enjoyed a Conference more. Such fervent prayers for laborers! Such consecrated preachers and laymen I never met before. I felt that I had never expierenced such self-denial, or met men and women with such heroic spirits. I sympathize with those young men who are circumscribed in the Eastern Conferences. If the Spirit moves you to; come West and we will give you all latitude. We don't need your sympathies as long as you refuse to "go or send." People sympathize with, pray for, and contribute to the wants of those whom they feel an interest in. Therefore your sympathy, prayers, nor cash will not benefit us unless it reaches out in person, or by proxy. Rev. Reg. B. Swift, P. E. was not able to hold my fourth Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday. He sent our beloved pioneer, Rev. J. W. Compton, who preached with power and gave us words of wisdom. Six months ago we begun without a member on this charge, now there are three Societies; Upper Tammany, in Tammany Hollow, has the foundation of their new Church building started, Mason, on Craig's, Mountain and Camas Prairie, between Craig and Bitter Root Mountains, with 36 members in all. Contributions to all purposes $15.30 per capita. Good subscription enough to build with out calling on the "Church Extension Board". Baptized 16 adults and one infant, with his father, both have the same name; W. J. Eakin. This father was first to call for the Gospel, first to accept it, first steward, Sunday-school Supt. and delegate elected. He accompanied me to the district, and expects to go with me to the Annual Conference. May he long live, together with his wife and little Willie, to cheer and comfort other preachers and furnish them the "prophets chamber". Your readers will be surprised to know that the thermometer has been 108 this far North already.

Lewiston Idaho, July 29th 1891.

Howson B. Terry.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

—This number of the paper will necessarily be issued late, as the writing up of the matter takes place at the close of the Conference, and an amateur is at the helm.

—Major P. Gallagher of Pocatello, Idaho, formerly of Virginia, came all the way from that distant point to Helena in order to be present at the Annual Conference and enjoy the fellowship of his brethren in the church, although previously they were unknown to him personally. "Blest be the tie that binds." The Major has been for many years a member of our Church, and if we understood him correctly, he has had the distinguished honor of being a delegate to our General Conference. We extend to him a hearty invitation to visit us again next Conference.

—On account of sickness in the family, Brother Johnson was unable to be present until the third day of the Conference. He now transfers to the Pacific Conference where we trust he will find a wide and congenial field of labor in which to employ his varied talents. Our prayers for his abundant success go with him.

—We are glad to learn that the Epworth League recently organized at Deer Lodge, is getting along finely. The meetings are well attended and an earnest religious tone prevails amongst the members.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

--Among the first to greet us on our arrival in the Conference room, the first morning, was the Rev. W. M. Britt, who had already returned from his charge in the Kentucky Conference, to which he was transferred last year, on accouut of his wife's sickness. His dear partner in life having taken her departure to the better land, he now comes back to us to resume his arduous, self–denying labors. We welcome him again to our midst. As a friend and Bro. we love him, and as a preacher and pastor we admire and honor him for his varied excellences.

—Rev. H. B. Cockrill, at his own request, takes a location. He will return at once to Kentucky and be associated with Rev. H. C. Morrison on the Editorial Staff of the "Kentucky Methodist". The following resolution which was passed, well expresses the sentiment of his brethren in the Conference:

"Whereas Bro. H. B. Cockrill, who has faithfully labored in our Conference, for the past three years, has been granted a location at his own request.

Therefore, be it Resolved, that as a Conference we express our sorrow at losing Bro. Cockrill from our ranks, and we hereby express our high appreciation of his character and labors while with us, and we assure Bro. Cockrill that we shall follow him with our affections and prayers.

W. O. Waggener.
A. C. Couey.

—The next session of the Montana Annual Conference will be held at Bozeman. Brother Goulder and the friends there, will, we are sure, accord the Conference a right royal welcome, on that occasion.

—During the session of the Conference the renowned Temperance Lecturer, Francis Murphy, was holding a series of meetings in the St. Paul's Methodist Church which was usually filled every night. The meetings still continue and great good is being accomplished. We were able to be present one night only, after the Conference closed. It was gratifying to note, how emphatically the need of Divine grace was insisted on by the speaker, in order that the victim of intemperance might be effectually delivered from the fascinating influences of the intoxicating cup.

"None but Jesus,
Can do helpless sinners good."

—The lady visitors to the Conference, including several preachers' wives, met one afternoon and reorganized the "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society." The following is a list of the officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Lulu Couey. Vice Presidents, Mrs. Sallie Clarke, and Mrs. Cassie Squires. Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. K. J. Parnall. Recording Secretary, Miss Laura Dawes. Treasurer, Mrs. S. B. Tabor. District Secretaries; Helena District, Miss Maggie Evans. Missoula District, Mrs. Lulu Stanley.

—The legal incorporation of the Montana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as ordered by the Conference, is now an accomplished fact, taking affect on the 5th day of August. The trustees feel themselves under great obligation to Governor Toole for generous services rendered in drawing up the necessary papers free of charge.

—The following estimates in regard to the relative number of church-going people in Helena, were made during the Conference and reported by Rev. D. B. Price. The population ofHelena is about 12,000, of these 7000 are Protestants, 2000 of whom are regularly found every Sunday in the various churches in the city. A very fair showing for a western town.

—A new church at Wallace, Idaho, is already in course of construction. The Pastor, Rev. W. O. Waggener, expects the building to be completed by the end of September. Success to him, in his difficult, isolated field of labor!

—At an evening service during the Conference, when the Bishop was preaching, Bros. Bramble and Flowers were sitting together on a front seat listening intently. The Bishop spoke of rooting out the brambles and planting the flowers, and an observer thought he had an inkling of some appointments, but he was mistaken.

—We cannot speak too highly of the generous hospitality of the kind friends of Helena manifest in their entertainment of the Conference, or of the untiring efforts of Bro. Price in striving to make our stay in that attractive city as pleasant and enjoyable as possible.

—Did time and space permit, we would like to give the readers of the "Methodist" an account of our trip to Demersville, made in the place of the Presiding Elder of the Missoula District, the week before the Annual Conference. Suffice it to say, however, that we had a good time with Bro. Lee and the friends at Demersville. The Sunday services were very interesting and profitable. The sum of $78 was raised to pay pressing accounts due on the beautiful church edifice which has just been completed. A debt of about $260 still remains. It is expected that this amount will be raised without much difficulty early in the fall, when it is hoped that Bishop Duncan, on his return from Oregon, will be able to visit Demersville and dedicate the church. The delightful trip to and fro, over the lovely Flathead Lake we shall not soon forget, the stage ride also may have made equally as deep an impression on our mind, but we prefer not to say anything about it just now, other than that we managed to live through it.

—By the following resolution a change was made in the law of the Annual Conference regarding the constitution of our District Conferences:

Resolved, That the lay members of the Quarterly Conference of each charge in the Montana Annual Conference, shall elect annually, by ballot, two delegates to the District Conference of their district, and that the laws relating to the appointment of lay delegates to the District Conference be and are hereby repealed.

BISHOP DUNCAN.

The following Sketch of our esteemed Bishop, who presided over the deliberations of our Conference with great acceptability, appeared in the Helena Journal during the session: Bishop W. W. Duncan, D. D., is a resident of Spartinburgh, S. C., but he is a typical Virginian of the old school, both in appearance and speech. His style is plain and deliberate and he is not slow to express himself decidedly on any question. It is immaterial to him what side of a question the majority takes, as his keen insight generally tells him which has the most authority in the Scriptures, then decides accordingly. Bishop Duncan was born at Randolph Macon College, Va., December 27. 1839. He graduated at 20 years of age from Wofford College, at his present place of residence.

In 1860 he joined the Virginia Conference and engaged in pastoral work, which he continued till 1875, with the exception of serving as an army chaplain throughout the war. He was in 1875 elected to the chair of mental and moral science in Wofford College, serving in this capacity until elected bishop. He was a member of the Ecumenical Conference in London and has been a delegate to many General Conferences. He has a fine mind, is well informed. observant and practical. As a pulpit orator he is calm, clear and fluent. In personal appearance he is tall, well proportioned and carries his excellent physique with the proverbial dignity of the Southern orator, yet his manner is pleasant and cordial.

At the close of the Conference, the following resolution was adopted. "Whereas our beloved Methodism in Montana has suffered greatly because of its distance from the great centre of our church life and whereas we feel that a resident Bishop in the Conference would greatly vitalize and encourage our people, therefore Be it resolved; That we most earnestly solicit our good Bishop W. W. Duncan, to arrange to make his home with us, and as an inducement to his coming, to dwell among us, with his family, we as a Conference hereby offer to raise the money to build him a home at the city of his choice, within our bounds, and donate it to him".

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Bro. Stanley:

Before leaving for Kentucky, I feel like dropping the Montana Methodist a line. We have had a pleasant Annual Conference. Meeting with the brethren and having good preaching at the Conference are among the many blessings enjoyed by Methodist preachers.

I start to Kentucky this afternoon but with a very kindly–I might almost say-affectionate feeling for Montana. I love her Mountains, her streams, her valleys, her plains, her pure air–and more than all, her people, and leave with a feeling of deeper regret than I did Kentucky three years ago.

I very much appreciate the sympathy of my brethren on entering my new work and assure them that I shall continue to take the liveliest interest in our western field, and promise to do what I can to interest the church at home.

Though no longer an itinerant, it is not my purpose to do less work than an itinerant, nor shall my sympathy for the work of a traveling preacher be allowed to diminish. I have rejoiced with them,and suffered with them too long for that.

I wish you to know of the Kentucky Methodist (many of the brethren here have subscribed for it) and so will be glad to exchange with your excellent paper.

Sincerly wishing you great and continued success.

I remain as always
Your friend and brother
A. B. Cockrill.

Helena, Mont. Aug, 4th 1891.

--Dear Methodist: After a long silence I greet you again, and this time from the old home field. You followed me in my travels, told me of what the brethren where doing in my absence, and in the hour of sore affliction your words of sympathy cheered me. I ought to love you and I do. Your inspiring words have given courage to every reader in the hours of despondency. And such hours come to all. It would be strange if your Editor had not many such lately in his unfortunate affliction. We know his disappointment in not being able to attend the conference, and we have no doubt that he knows the source of consolation in such times of trial. He has the sympathy and prayers of all the brethren.

I left Kentucky a month ago, and though the ties drawing this way and the sense of duty, were strong, I came away with regrets on many accounts. I had a pleasant charge and have reason to believe that my sojourn among that people was profitable both to them and myself. A visit of several days with friends in Chicago, and a longer visit with the dear ones at the old home in Missouri gave me a pleasant vacation. I am anxious to get down to hand work again, and doubtless I will find enough to do since I have charge of the work of two men last year. I am hopeful and pleased with the outlook and will report progress later.

Truly and fraternally
W. M. Britt.

The Government of the American Saloons.

The Latin lyrist said to ancient Rome, "While you bear yourselves subordinate to the gods, you hold empire." Our rapid growth in population and wealth, our national treasury bursting with fulness, peace and unity within our borders—all these cannot perpetuate national life and glory if there be the breath of the pestilence upon us and a gigantic wrong permitted to sit in all the places of political power in municipality, county, state and nation.

A heavier yoke than that the British king placed upon the neck of our Revolutionary fathers is upon us and our children. By a long train of abuses and usurpation King Alcohol, through the liquor traffic in this goodly land, openly declares his ability to reduce us to his despotic rule by his control of the dominant political organizations of the country. Let us make a new Declaration of Independence. Let us resolve to throw off the government of the American saloon.

How many men there are—moderate drinkers—that would not be drunkards at all if there were no open saloon doors in this country. Let us slam that door to. I hold up before you rum-selling and rum-drinking as the foes of national existence. The danger of the republic is that men do not realize the truth of this. I wish I could make all the men who love their government see this great peril of the nation. Let us not shut our eyes to the danger. The republic must triumph over rum, or rum will triumph over the republic. All history teaches this; observation and reason confirm it. The sale and use have not ceased, nor "materially diminished," but, on the contrary, largely increased.

Not less than 80,000 victims go annually to the drunkards' graves from the homes of this land. Pestilence and war combined do not, in this country, equal its destructive energy The waste of human life wrought every five years by our 200,000 saloons is equal to the destruction of life by both armies—numbering millions of armed men—during the entire war of the rebellion. In their hands strong drink is a weapon so fatal that the 500,000 drunkard makers are able to accomplish more in the same period than four times their number could with shot and shell, fire and sword, and all the appliances of modern warfare. The cruelty of war is not measured by the number of those who fall in battle, but by the unutterable woe and bitter anguish of broken hearts and desolated homes. Most emphatically is it true that the mere destruction of 80,000 lives every year affords no measure of the relentless cruelty of the liquor power in its war against society. To realize this you must go to the dishonored homes, question the broken hearts, read the voiceless misery in wan and haggard faces, hear helpless children cry for food, see them stricken down by drunken and infuriated fathers, and sometimes even by besotted mothers; witness the debauchery and ruin of youth, and the utter degradation, ignorance, poverty, and misery which everywhere and always accompany the victims of the saloon.

Alas! how true and terrible is this indictment of the saloon. Oh, that from every hill-top and valley, from mountain and prairie, from city and hamlet, from lakes to gulf, and from sea to sea, there might this day arise the united voice of our sixty millions of people in most solemn Declaration of Independence of this cruel King, whose injuries and usurpation threaten the destruction of our fre Government.—Clinton B. Fisk.

A Daughter's Plea.

Some time ago in a town in West Virginia a liquor dealer applied to the Court to have his license renewed, so he could go on selling liquor. Some of his neighbors appeared and protested against the license being granted, for a saloon is always considered a nuisance, and makes property near it of less value than it would be if the saloon were not there.

Of course, the liquor dealer had a lawyer to plead for him, and after hearing both sides the Court decided to grant the license. But just at that moment the daughter of the saloon keeper came in and demanded to be heard.

The Court permitted her to speak, and for twenty minutes she held them pell-bound as she begged them not to give her father a license to sell rum, and told what a terrible curse it had been to the mother and children. After hearing her earnest appeal the judge reversed the decision and refused to grant the license.

It is not possible for every daughter who has felt the curse of the demon whisky to carry her grievance into Court. But it is possible for every girl to put all her influence at all times on the side of total abstinence.

The Donation Party.

A minister has just arrived on his new field of labor, and is met by several of his members, among whom was the steward, who shook hands with the minister and wished him God's blessing. "We are great on donations here," said the steward. "The people out here at Beantown are number one for that." "I have never found donation parties very satisfactory," replied the minister, "I would greatly prefer having a stated salary, and having it paid in cash." "Well, yes, I suppose you would," said the steward; "That's what all the ministers say; But, you see, it wont do here in Beantown, nor it wont do at the next appointment, Queerville, and I am sure it will never do at Ragtown. You'd get the folks all down on you, if you put your foot down on donations. You see we must get out of the community all we can; it would never do, no, never, never!" "Well, then," said the minister with a sigh of resignation to the inevitable, "I suppose it will have to be." He remembered the last Donation party, with his half-dozen loads of rotten wood; it had been cut so long that it was worthless. More than once his wife's temper had been sorely tried with the miserable stuff, it was too rotten to burn.

After the evening service the steward requested all the members to stay behind for a little while. "A donation party will be held at our preacher's home next Wednesday evening, the Lord willing, and it is hoped everybody will turn out, and bring something for the support of the Gospel; 'The Lord loveth a cheerful giver.' We expect the good folks from Queerville and Ragtown to join us." Immediately there was a buzz among the female members at Beantown church, and little groups of women put their heads together and began discussing what to carry in the shape of eatables, while the men got together in the vestibule and consulted each other on what they will donate. "I reckon, I'll take beans this year," said Mrs. Smith, "It's been a great year for beans, I havn't raised so big a crop for many years, I can give beans without feeling it very much." "So can I," said Mrs. Jones, "I raised a big crop off the hillside, I can spare 'em better than anything else, and they aint a going to sell for much this year." Several others also concluded to take beans to the donation.

The night of the donation arrived. The first arrival at the parsonage was Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones, quickly followed by others. The minister came to the door in answer to the knock. "How do you do, minister, beautiful night for this donation, aint it?" was their greeting, as they shook hands with the minister, "I've brought some beans for you, first-rate beans, too, you will find, beans is a healthy living. We were raised on them. Nothing better for growing children." "You can put them in the kitchen," said the minister. Just then quite a number filled the house. "Iv'e got some beans," said one. "Iv'e got some beans!" said quite a number of them, with sacks and baskets full of beans. Then others followed in rapid succession and three out of every four from Beantown had beans. "It's going to be beans this year!" whispered the minister to his wife. "I've counted fourteen bushels already—and still there's more to follow." — The folks from Queertown arrived next and brought quite a large amount of butter, potatoes and goods that were useful, and from what the minister said, he thought they were not so queer after all. — Next arrived the people from Ragtown, with bundles in their arms, some on their backs. "We've brought you a lot of clothes," said the folks to the minister as they entered. They opened their bundles and filled up a large table with cast-off clothing of all kinds. The minister's wife examined them carefully: "I do believe there's enough to last the children till they are all grown up, if they'd fit till that time; I can imagine the appearance they'd make in them. No two alike, and probably not one that would fit one of the children. It's too provoking for anything. If it wasn't for making the people mad, I'd sell the whole lot for rags to the first rag peddler that comes along."

"Brothers and Sisters," said the steward, when the party was about to break up, "the proceeds of this donation amounts to twenty-seven bushels of beans, three turkeys, a big two bushels of potatoes, and some butter, and a large amount of clothing and some other things. In behalf of the minister and his folks I thank you—your kindness is appreciated; truly, as the Psalmist says: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive!' " —

One afternoon in the following week the minister sat down to prepare a sermon for the following Sabbath. As it was often the case, he talked it over with his wife; the chapter was selected as a scripture lesson and the text was chosen. During the week the minister wrote to a friend in the city, asking him if there was any sale for beans there; he had twenty-five bushels to dispose of at a very low price. —

When Sunday morning came, the minister's wife sent the minister a little ahead of her, under the plea that she had not her children quite ready. "Don't wait for me," she said, "or you may be late. We'll get there in time for the sermon." He was reading a chapter when the family arrived; they passed slowly pue impressively in— "Verily I say unto you, Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these!" The boys' pants were a foot too long, their coat-sleeves big enough for a man. The girls wore jackets about three sizes to big, each article had a peculiar color of its own. The minister, having paused while the folks took their seats, commenced again by repeating: "Verily I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these!" — — — —

The minister and his wife lived long enough to see another donation party, but old clothes and beans were not the important features of the next donation. The minister at last succeeded in disposing of the beans, but he had to do it at a sacrifice.

How Old should one Be to be Saved by the Gospel?

The question as to when a person should become a Christian is not so much a question of age as of intelligence. When one has learned of a Savior and wishes so serve him; when he understands what he requires, and wishes to obey him, we think he ought to be encouraged to do so. When the child is old enough to understand that Jesus offers salvation to all on the conditions of theGospel; Faith in Him, Repentance, Confession, Baptism and Prayer. He should be taught to obey the Gospel and to rely fully and wholly upon the promises of the Gospel. Of course infants and idiots are not subjects of the Gospel, that is, it was not designed by the Master that it should be preached to them; that they should believe it and obey it. They are saved without this; being the recipients of the blessings of Christ's death as unconditionally as they are of the evil effects of Adam's sin. For all the evil which came upon them by Adam's disobedience is by the obedience of the Lord Jesus as unconditionally removed. "For (Rom 5; 19) as through the one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, even so through the obedience of the one shall the many be made righteous". So all that the infant and idiot loses in Adam is as unconditionally restored by Christ; and the personal sinner is responsible to God for the obedience of the Gospel. And when one learns the duty of obedience to Christ it is sin to neglect it, and they should come to Jesus for salvation in the way he has appointed, "ere their feet have grown familiar with the paths of sin, and sown to garner up its bitter fruits." Remembering theirCreator inthe days of their youth, they should "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness" and give unto Christ their whole heart and entire life.

Learn to Forgive.

Learn to forgive. Do not carry an unforgiving spirit with you through all your life. It will hurt you more than any one else. It will destroy the happiness of many around you, yet its chief feeding-ground will be found in your own heart. You hate your neighbor. Yonder is his dwelling, one hundred and fifty yards away. You pass by a wood fire, you pluck a half-consumed brand from it, flaming and gleaming, and thrust it under your neighbor's dwelling to burn it. Who gets the worst of it? You find your garments on fire and your own flesh burned before you can harm your neighbor. So he who carries an unforgiving spirit in his bosom. It stings his own soul like an adder shut up there. I know of some who are calling themselves Christians, who are miserable because of their own revengefulness. Forgive your enemies, and get down on your knees and pray for them, and salvation will come into your soul like a flood. "Father forgive them." Sweet prayer and blessed example!

Wrong to Worry.

Worry hurts us more than work; and as Christians we have no right to be the victims of worry, anxious care, depressions and forebodings. Instead of complaints, let us try supplications; instead of brooding over difficulties, let us tell them to Jesus, and spread out our needs within "the presence-chamber of the Almighty," where alone peace and strength abide. Some Christian people appear to hold that we are iuvariably bound to be stoical, and express no sorrow or regret whatever, because God chooses all; but He who is all-human as well as all-divine, knows that the flood overwhelms us sometimes, and that when ws seem in the lowest depths. I dare no more fret than curse or swear. —

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Brother Stateler's letters, published in the "Methodist" during the past year, contain many interesting facts connected with the first missionary labors of Methodist preachers in Kansas, the Indian Territory, Washington and Oregon. Those yet to be published, commencing with the one in this issue, will give the reader some idea of the trials of frontier life amid the wilds of Kentucky, on the prairies of Missouri and Kansas, the plains of Colorado, and amid the mountains of Montana, Idaho, and Oregon. They read like a romance, and contain items of religious history connected with Methodism in the West, that will be of thrilling interest to many. Don't fail to read them.

—The week after Conference we were taken somewhat by surprise (for we had given up their coming) by the visit to our home of Bishop Duncan and our venarable father in Israel, Rev. L. B. Stateler, who came all the way from Helena, on purpose to see us. We would not have felt more highly honored, nor been half so agreeably entertained and refreshed in spirit, if the President of the United States and his chief cabinet officer had come to our humble home. By the failure to notify us beforehand we were robbed of several hours of the Bishop's company, as he could stay but one night and had to start very early next morning. The godly counsel, the kind and comforting words, and the earnest prayers of these men of God, was as precious ointment poured forth, the sweet perfume of which lingers with us still. By the grace of God we will labor on, and pray, and strive ever to be counted worthy the confidence of those who are engaged in the Master's work, and above all, to enjoy the presence and favor of God.

—Bishop Duncan expressed himself as delighted with our country and pleased with the outlook for our church in Montana. His heart was so stirred that he offered to help build a parsonage at one point, and pledged assistance toward the support of a preacher for a charge to which there was no appropriation. At another point he was studying the town-plot, taking steps to secure an eligible site for our church in a promising town. This shows the spirit of a true Bishop.

—Rev. J. B. Parnall was so prostrated by excessive labor that he and Sister Parnall concluded to spend two weeks in an outing at the Lo-Lo Hot Springs. Brother Stateler fills his appointments while away.

—Our people in Bitter Root Valley, feel that it is a great treat to have Brother Stateler with them. He is still full of plans, and labors, and solicitude for the extension of the Redeemer's Kingdom.

—We can never forget the kindness shown us by the many friends who visited us, and others who sent messages of sympathy to us during our recent affliction. The Master says, "Inasmuch as ye did unto one of the least of these ye did it unto Me."

—It is just harvest time about Corvallis. The yield is good. The weather is bright and sunny. It is quite refreshing as we sit and write these lines to look through our window up at the banks of snow glistening in the glare of the sun and through another window out upon the waving fields of grain. "We also behold another field that is white unto the harvest," but, alas; the laborers are few. May the Lord send forth many laborers into the whitening fields to gather precious sheaves unto eternal life.

—Some of our farmers say that their crops amount to but little on account of wild oats. This specie of grain takes deep root, is a thrifty growth, ripens early and seeds the ground before the good grain matures. It chokes out everything else, is hard to get rid of, and is only fit for the flames. We have heard young people say they must "sow their wild oats." Ah! boys, remember that "whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." If you sow wild oats you will reap wild oats. Ere you are aware of it they will get such a deep root in your nature that they will crowd every good growth out, and when the time of harvest comes the Master will pronounce them worthless, and will give orders to bind them in bundles and cast them into the fire to be burned, and your life work will be a failure. How sad will be that wail; "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved!"

—Bishop Duncan expects to preach at Demersville, on Sunday, the 13th of September, and dedicate the new church building there.

—Our young friend, Miss Maggie Evans, who with her sister Dorothy, attended school at Fayette, Mo., the past year, is one of the most zealous workers in our growing church at Deer Lodge.

—The boards and standing committees of the Conferences, should be so arranged as to give each of our new transfers a place and something to do at Conference. This will identify them more closely with our work and make it lighter on the "old guard."

—The Denver Conference was held at Rye, Colorado, August 5-9, Bishop Hendrix presiding. The reports showed that substantial progress had been made. The Conference refused to re-admit a brother who had received money on salary raised by a dance, and had attended sociables which were turned into dances and horse races. "The Conference is determined to stem the tide of worldliness," says the "Rocky Mountain Methodist," and to keep our church from being compromised, by yielding to these things or by endorsing them by their presence. They endeavor to keep to the plain, straight Methodist path." To all of which the "Montanta Methodist" gives a hearty Amen.

—We rejoice that the "Rocky Mountain Methodist" is continued, and that Brother Needham is the editor. He is making it a live paper, and deserves the hearty co-operotion of all our people in that region. The Lord give him great success in his work.

—P. L. Stanton is P. E. of Pueblo District, and J. M. Major, P. E. of Durange District. Rev. John Moore, formerly of this Conference, goes to Rye. We are sorry to notice that four of the preachers transfer to other Conferences. We trust their places will be supplied, next year, at least. Of the presiding officer, the "Methodist" says: Bishop E. R. Hendrix did his work bravely, and well. His addresses were admirable, and his presidency was firm, yet easy and affable. He often convulsed the Conference, or congregation with his wit and reparte. But where occasion required his words were weighty. This is the fourth time he has presided in our Conference, and he is welcome still.

GENERAL NEWS.

—The assessed valuation of all the railroads in Montana is $8,649,700. The total number of miles of railroad in the state is 2,283.

—The new line of railroad—a branch of the Northern Pacific—has been completed from Missoula, Montana, to Wallace, Idaho, and turned over to the operating department. It reduces the distance between the two places, by the ordinary route of travel, from 370 to about 127 miles, and brings the rich and promising Coeur d'Alene country into direct communication with Montana towns, and offers a splendid market for Montana products. The event was celebrated on the 15th inst., by a grand excursion of 500 citizens of Wallace and neighboring towns to Missoula, where they were the guests of, and all expenses of the trip paid by the citizens of the latter place. We are glad to see such cordial relations existing between the citizens of the two sections, whose interests are so closely identified, and hope they will ever continue.

—The total assessed valuation of real-estate in Montana for the year 1891, is $72,783,492. Live stock has a total valuation of over $18,000,000. The statistics showing the valuation of every class of property in the state are not yet tabulated. The wealth of the state is increasing at a wonderful rate. Would that it were all consecrated to God.

—James Russell Lowell, the famous New England poet, essayist and diplomat, died at Boston, Mass., August 12. He has been styled "the hereditary representative of the heart and brains that founded New England." He was born in Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 22, 1819. He was once joint editor with Charles Elliot Norton, of "the North American Review." The last few years of his life were spent in comparative retirement.

—Mrs. James K. Polk, relict of the tenth President of the United States, died at her home in Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 14th. She was represented as a noble, true woman, had full possession of her faculties till near the last, and died surrounded by friends. The death-bed scene was very affecting.

—The Czar of Russia has issued an edict prohibiting the exportation of rye and rye meal. It has greatly depressed the price of that cereal in Russia, and advanced it with that of potatoes and breadstuffs in Germany, which depended largely upon the former country for bread. Germany is now dependent largely upon the United States for bread. This has already caused a panic in the wheat market in Chicago and New York.

—The Davis will case in Butte City, draws its weary length along, the lawyers growing fatter and fatter and the heirs, whoever they may prove to be, poorer and poorer. Whither the carcass is there the vultures gather.

Christ's Humiliation.

It is said that when the story of West India slavery was told to the Moravians, and that it was impossible to reach the slave population because they were so separated from the ruling classes, two Moravian missionaries offered themselves and said: "We will go and be slaves on the plantations, and work and toil under the lash, to get right beside the poor slaves and instruct them." And they left their homes and went to the West Indies as slaves, and lived in the company of slaves, to get close to the hearts of slaves. And the slaves heard them because they had humbled themselves to their condition. That was grand, it was glorious; and yet Christ's example was more glorious, for he stepped from heaven to earth to get by our side; he laid himself down beside us that we might feel the throbbings of his bosom, and be drawn so close as to hear him whisper, "God is love."—Bishop Simpson.

ALONG THE LINE.

HELENA.

D. B. Price. Yesterday was the opening day of the new Conference year, and if the rest are to be as good, this will be a year of prosperity in Helena Station. The day was bright and cool, the congregations were large and attentive. At the morning service there were two additions on profession of faith. The citizens, as well as the church members,give me a cordial welcome to this work another year.

PALOUSE, WASH.

J. W. Compton: Palouse will show a gain on all lines, and I think all assessments will be paid in full.

MT. HOPE, KANSAS.

J. E. Vick: I send a postal note which please place to my credit on account. Your paper gives me inspiration whenever I read it. May God continue to inspire its editor and all those brave men who are pushing the battle to the very gates. May God bless the "Montana Methodist" and send it with its trumpet notes all over the land.

WALLACE.

W. O. Waggener. Since returning from Helena, have been sick in bed with a bilious attack and threatened with pneumonia. The church is moving along well, and by a little extra effort I have tided matters over the straits. The audience room will be a beauty. I don't think you will pronounce it too large. The first coat of paint is going on to-day. It is now being lathed, and will be plastered next week. The workmen are the heaviest donators. We expect to occupy it early in September. In fact, will not rent the hall any longer than this month (August.) Our Sunday-school is better than it has been since I came here. Congregations good.

EAST COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—

Our Conference adjourned last night. I am on the train going home and can only write briefly.

We had a most enjoyable and profitable season. Reports showed a most encouraging advance on almost all lines. There has been a gain of 14 Sunday-schools during this year.

Church Extension and Domestic Mission paid in full and a little over. Bishop's claim in full.

Your suggestion was adopted as to Domestic Missions and an assessment of $1,000 made, and $500 of it pledged last night.

Bishop Duncan gave great satisfaction, and has apparently made the wisest disposition of the men in the field.

The "Montana Methodist" was not forgotten, and many good words were spoken for it.

We were much disappointed that you could not be with us.

I must close with the appointments:

THE "HOUSE-RAISING."

In the early days when people were less independent than now, a man who could not alone raise his log-house was wont to call in his neighbors and in return held himself in readiness to lend a hand at his house-raising. It has never been recorded, that when a neighbor's house, the man whose house was being raised, was wont to quit work, fold his arms and look on while his neighbors did the work; or, of a man when called upon to help, replying "I haven't any house of my own and I won't help build any other man's till I get one;" or, "I have no house of my own, and don't need your help, so I won't help raise your house." We may be sure if such selfishness prevailed it was promptly and effectually rebuked by the arbiter of those days, Public Opinion.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society was organized largely in the interest of our Western work. The bulk of the money thus raised has been expended in the West, and the West has needed all and more than it has received, but have we been Western in our readiness to lend a hand at this "house raising?" Are there not a few charges, although totally unable to build a parsonage for themselves, that have not a half dozen or more women who could give $1 a year to help build some other parsonage, and be none the less ready financially, and all the more ready spiritually to help build their own parsonage as soon as such work becomes practicable? Do we consider that this money that we are so free to receive from the Parsonage Aid Society represents more self-denial than we seem willing to make for ourselves or anybody else? I know much of it is paid by women who have little of this world's goods, and who often deny themselves necessities to pay their dues, and I know that a dollar is easier earned in the West than in the South. I know one woman, in N. C., who walked five miles to attend the missionary meetings, and sold eggs at ten cents per dozen to pay her dues. If we think the treasuries of our church are filled by the rich only, we are very much mistaken.

The conditions of our Western work are peculiar. I often think of it as compared with the Lost River the pioneers tell me about. After traveling all day without sight of water, they would perhaps unexpectedly come upon a cool flowing stream, and rejoicing, refresh themselves, and camp by its banks that night. In the morning they looked out and lo! the water was all gone, no one knew where, the river lost! It seems hard with a shifting population to hold organizations, and perhaps the shifting population receives more than its share of the blame, but carrying out the figure of the Lost River, which always turned up again somewhere else, to refresh other weary travelers, may we not take heart, and labor on in the hope that our lost labor may show itself somewhere, some day? We do not hesitate on this account to organize churches, why Parsonage Aid Societies?

Another peculiar condition is that a great many church registers holds gaged in it, and though the sum [redacted] the aggregate enables the board to extend its work, the regular dues from any one society need neither impoverish the preacher, nor cripple local work, while the probabilities are, the advancement which comes from such a course in the broadened view, and enlarged sympathies will not only make itself felt in the spiritual, but also in the material interest of the church.

As a member of the Central Committee, I stand ready to endorse all legitimate appeals for aid from this section, but I can do so with a much better conscience and much more effectively when I am convinced that we realize our own obligations, and are ready as far as in us lies to lend a hand at this work of "house-raising."

Mrs. D. Atkins.

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

Sermon by Rev. J. E Squires.

"The text of Scripture on which I base my remarks this morning may be found in the gospel by St. John VII—32—and 36 verses, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "If the Son shall make you free you shall be free indeed."

The Bible makes much of liberty--magnifies it always. It tells its true meaning and points out to men the road to it.

"The truth shall make you free." That is, shall give you liberty, make you "free indeed" when you know it fully, as it is in the Son of God.

God has never designed that men should live in ignorance, but has offered to open their eyes. The human mind was slow to see the light. Object lessons must be given for many generations, but at last their eye is opening and a full orbid day with all of its splendor beams down upon us.

Wherever the truth, as it is in the son of God has gone, men have been lifted out of ignorance and servitude, and in exact proportion as men and nations have accepted the truth and molded their life by it has light and happiness and blessing followed to the individual and the nation. I mention our own American, "The land of the free and the home of the brave."

While we have not reached the ideal of perfection, yet I think that no man will question that we do represent the highest type of liberty and of civilization of any nation in any period of the world's history, and that this is the direct product of the principles which underlie our institutions which principles are deduced from the "Ten Commandments" and "The Sermon on the Mount."

Love for man as our brother, reverence for God our benefactor and preserver, to whom we shall account "for the deeds done in the body." The truth as it is in the Son, making us free as men and as a great nation.

The truth does not teach that a "great barbarian with club in hand" "reigned in the clouds." And that we are to destroy our fellow-man; but records these things as sad comment upon the impotence of human intellect and corruption of the human heart. How utterly unfounded and absurd to say that the human mind liberated from the bondage of priestcraft and churchism, has attained these ends of itself, and therefore deify it and idolize it.

Take the mass of the nation, which has been freest of all true ideas of God or bands of ecclesiasticism, and watch him beat the air.

See him conquer the enemy with the sword, and then in the very midst of victory fall a victim to his own passions and ignorance. Rome carried her arms over the known world, but was herself captured by Greece whose freedom of intellect has been the theme of the centuries. But Greece was not free. "The God whom they ignorantly worshiped Paul declared unto them."

These people among whom it was easier to find a God than a man, must know and accept the truth before they can be free. But if you turn from the nation of many gods to that phenominal epoch in history and that strange land of the Napoleons where "Reason" was crowned king and God was legislated out of the nation, you find a kind of liberty, a sort of freedom; but not the sort that comes from a knowledge of the truth not "free indeed," as the text puts it.

Intellect was unfettered and speech was open, and men did what they lived. In the language of Dr. John Cummings, "Around the tree of liberty the sanguinary Jacobins of the French revolution danced with the hearts and heads of their fellow countrymen upon their pikes. Proscription, rapine, murder and carnage were reckoned meet holocausts to liberty. Professing to the free actors in civil things, and free thinkers in religious matters, they plunged France into a fiery whirlwind and struck upon its brow a scar which shall never be effaced."

Men carried about in their hand their little torches, which were generally not lighted at all and looked in vain for the way, but to the star in the east they did not turn their faces. You know that this so-called "Age of Reason" was followed by the "Reign of Terror," with its inquisition and guillotine. But the truth came at last with its freedom. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light," and the very house in which was written the famous "Age of Reason" has been turned into a house for printing of Bible.

"If the son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." The mind free to think and to know the truth. The soul free, that it no longer be driven the unwilling servant of a hard master–a habit or passion which enslaves and controls it. The body free to run in the way of peaceful toil and requited labor. Not to disturb your neighbor and spoil his peace and happiness.

Under such liberty the home is built upon a foundation of purity and virtue. Not only does he own the house, but his own wife and their children united in love and made free by the truth, make melody in their hearts—a very paradise on earth. This is the "hobby" of every good man, of every Christian man and woman in the earth.

The school-house becomes the "tallest in the city," and not only so, but the germ of all teaching is recognized. "The truth" is known and those profound problems of mind and heart—"Whence am I? What of these wondrous faculties with their multiplied functions, and myterious relationships whether tending," Land "What is duty?" All of them are answered.

The truth makes men free, the whole of truth makes them "free indeed." Nothing else does this; nothing else can do it.

It propagates "liberty"—carries it to others. It builds homes and schools and hospitals and asylums and churches. It cares for the sick and makes them well. It lifts men and nations out of ignorance and degredation. It cares for the poor—its ministry goes into the hovels of poverty and suffering, and comforts the sick and points the dying to the hope that was spurned and rejected, it may be, for a so-called "liberty," which was championed by a man, who has no word of cheer for the poor victim now, as he comes down to the edge of the water of the river of death.

Let us stand fast in this liberty "where-with Christ had made us free." Let no man move you from the faith of your father and your mother, unless he give you a better. It is much easier to pull down than to build up. It takes less capital to object and criticise than to carry on any other kind of literary business.

For mony there are men who will stand between you and the devil, by their theories and arguments or sophistries. Some of you have heard of the poor fellow who, with a multitude, was listening to a noted lecturer on the proposition, "There Can Be No Hell," at $1 a head; and when the speaker was about to pass on to a conclusion, leaving the last point of the argument, called out in a broken tone between his hiccoughs: "Make it very strong; lots of us fellows depending on you."

I submit that it is an anomaly that such a man should be the product of this nation and this period of human history.

Owing all that he is or has attained to the principles of "truth" which he labors to destroy. The very blood in his veins as well as his attainments being possible only as the truth made his progenitors free and gave the true liberty to the nation in which he was reared. Let us rather listen to the truth which shall give us true freedom.

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY, and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list

SOME THINGS THAT IMPRESSED US.

When at Great Falls last, we called in at the Baptist Association which was in Session there. We were cordially received, and had an enjoyable time. We were much impressed with the stress we there heard, placed upon the importance of the Holy Spirit in the Salvation of man—His aid in preaching the word, in convicting the conscience, in regenerating the Soul, and in completing the work of redemption. We hail with profound delight the presence of that people whoever they may be, that seeks the divine presence and power to qualify them for the administration of His word, "not in enticing words of man's wisdom, but in the demonstration and power of the Holy Spirit." It is certainly time to emphasize the importance of this divine agent in the church, under whose direct Supervision alone the plan of Salvation is effectual in redeeming men—when the tendency of the times are to exile Him from the Bible, the pulpit, the heart and from the world. The genius of the world seems to be taxed to its utmost capacity to devise some means for man to live successfully in the world, and when compelled to leave it get to heaven without Him, who is here to reprove the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment." Another thing that impressed us was the conservatism of these people. They seem to be striving to walk in "the good old way" a self-denial and faith that accepts God's word as the only rule for successful living and triumphant dying. We notice that among some of their churches, at least, they stand opposed to the modern plan of gambling for the Lord, that He may obtain means thereby for the destruction of sin, or which may be a more refined, but hardly less objectionable way through a tempted palate and a carnally excited eye and ear. Of course, Mr. Editor, in this day of progress along all lines of human thought—"the faith once delivered to the Saints" not excepted—when optimists are gaining the heights and signaling the restless multitude on to more inviting fields beyond, none but hopeless pessimist will admire, in this or any other people their adherence to the Simple, God appointed plan of raising means for His use in carrying forward His cause in the world, by each one laying by, for himself and herself in Store for this end, "as the Lord hath prosperod them." But be it so. The people who have an unyealding zeal for this evident way of the Lord in Zion is, in this, "my people, and their God is my God." Think of two churches in the same village, Squabbling about the chance of furnishing the dancers of an approaching ball with tempting dishes to get money for church uses! If these churches are not of the world, any effort to define the line of demarkation between them would prove a failure. In these relations, outsiders see that the Church is worldly, and how can she save the world if she is of the world? This would-be Darwinian evolution gone to seed in the moral conditions of life. Give us a people, whatever may be their name, or nationality, or sectionality, or whether the peculiality of their faith is derived from John the Baptist, or Westley, Luther or Calvin, that enthrons the Holy Spirit in the Church and keeps it unspotted from the world. Our prayer and most ardent desire is for the rapid increase of such a people, and for the prevalence of such a faith and life. Is it not high time to speak out against such methods as the above in obtaining means for the Lord? And also, against the desecration of God's house by the uses that are now made of it other than that of "a house of prayer?" Should any thing be brought into the Temple of God but the Salvation of the soul by the blood of His Son? Is this the place to bring moral questions of any kind for discussion, to secure them against abuse by the use of social and legal restraints? We we'll remember when a boy the Sacredness that attached to God's house when it was entered with that reverence that a sense of His presence inspired, and when it was used alone for His service. The present uses to which church houses are put destroy this regard for God in His house. And we should not feel disappointed if His presence is denied us when we assemble there for His worship. O for the zeal of the Master to purge it of its desecrations and make it "a house of prayer" and thus separate it from all other houses.

Townsend, Mont. B. S. Clark.

For Reflection.

—When a man lives to please himself he lives to please the devil.

—One of the saddest sights to be seen on earth is a wicked old man.

—Good sense is one of the good things it is hard to have too much of.

—Every time you do anything for God you take a step toward heaven.

—If the devil gets you by the finger he will try to get your whole arm.

—Nobody has ever found happiness who did not seek for it in God's way.

—The prayer that does not bring us nearer to God puts us further away.

—If you don't know whether a thing is wrong or not, notice who endorses it.

—No man prays earnestly who does not work with fully as much earnestness.

—If you belong to Christ he knows your name and the number of your house.

—Every day you put off repentance you will have another day's sin to repent of.

—o—

—The whole church, yea, the whole Christian world, ought to set about missionary work in greater earnest, sending out a thousand missionaries where we now send one, and contributing a billion dollars where we now contribute a million. It would richly pay.

LETTERS

From the Orient

By Mrs. A. W. WILSON.

With an Introduction by Rev. Samuel Rodgers.

"The ADVOCATE has received with pleasure this anticipated volume. It is charming in its physical make-up, but much more so in its breathing contents. It is a book with a soul, and that, too, regenerated and aglow with the spirit of the mighty Leader, who is still lifting up his eyes unto the whitened fields. We learned to admire the author's literary style, as well as the evangelistic trend of her thought during her now famous tour through the East accompanying the Bishop and gleaning, like another Ruth, in his footsteps; but we were hardly prepared for this delightful book. It is scenic, graphic, soul-stirring, and will be worth many thousands to the missionary treasury. That a woman, sharp-eyed and cultivated, should have looked upon the modern abomination of desolation at the chief seats of its ignorance and misery, and then have written down her impressions in thrilling sentences, would be epochal in the history of the Church; but the present volume has a much greater significance and should circulate everywhere. Next to its piety, that which impresses us most is its literary perfection. The illustrations are numerous, and both illustrate and narrate. It is a marvel for cheapness—the price being one dollar; but we apprehend for quite other reasons than the last mentioned that the book will have a great sale."—NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Mr. Robert Owen once visited a gentleman who was a believer. In walking out they came to the gentleman's family grave. Owen, addressing him, said: "There is one advantage I have over Christians, I am not afraid to die. Most Christians are afraid to die, but if most of my business were settled, I should be perfectly willing to die at any moment."

"Well," said his companion, "you say you have no fear of death?" After a solemn pause, he replied, "No!" "Then," replied the gentleman, pointing to an ox standing near, "you are on a level with that brute; he has fed till he is satisfied, and stands in the shade, whisking off the flies, and has neither hope nor fear.

ON THE WING.

On Sunday, Aug. 23rd, we heard Rev. L. B. Stateler preach an earnest and effective sermon to a good congregation at Victor, Montana. At 5 o'clock p. m., we worshipped again at the same place; at night, on our way home, we stopped and heard Bro. T. W. Flowers preach to a house full of deeply interested people at Olford's school-house. With wife and wee ones in the buggy, we reached home at half-past ten o'clock p. m.; and next morning, after a hasty preparation, and bidding farewell to all, at seven o'clock we were on our way to the depot, starting for Hillsdale, Kansas, the seat of the Western Conference.

After a delay at Missoula of only a half hour, at 11 a. m., we were fortunate enough to get on a train that had been delayed, and were soon on our way eastward on the main line of the Northern Pacific, going by way of Helena. Through the courtesy of the Superintendent at Missoula, and of Mr. A. D. Edgar, at Helena, we procured the usual clergyman's rates over the line to St. Paul.

We have always found the officers and employees of this road very obliging, and we take pleasure in making mention of it here.

We were most agreeably surprised when Brother Couey, P. E. of Helena District, boarded the train at Townsend. He had been holding quarterly meeting there, and was just ready to start back to Helena, when sighting us through the car window, he jumped aboard and journeyed with us as far as Bozeman. It was our first meeting since last May. How we talked and talked and talked during the two and one-half hours to Bozeman. The time seemed less than one hour.

It was a feast of fat things, and furnished refreshment and inspiration for the long journey across the plains, until one should see the faces and shake the hands of fellow laborers in Kansas or Missouri. When shall this wide gap in our ranks be filled, and our lines in Kansas and Nebraska be joined to those extending eastward from the mountains of Montana? May God speed the day.

Our train ran "wild," but was favored and rushed ahead of the regular time and reached St. Paul at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning—just 46 hours from Missoula, a distance of 1254 miles. Surely the ends of the earth are being brought closer together. We had to lay over until 7:30 p. m., before starting southward, and so made our way to the top of the immense buildings erected by the "Globe" and the "Pioneer Press," where we obtained a fine view of the great city with its population of 133,000 souls, and of the Mississippi river, which could be seen for miles up and down the stream. Minneapolis is 11 miles above St. Paul, on the Mississippi, and numbers 160,000 people. The two cities are fast coming together. What a great center of wealth and activity! There are some immense structures in each of these cities. Business men seemed elated over the good wheat crop and advancing prices, though there was not a little concern felt about the recent heavy frosts that had proven destructive to gardens and late crops in portions of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

At 7:30 p. m., rolled out of the great Union Depot on the "Maple Leaf" line, leading through Minnesoto, Iowa and Missouri to Kansas City. Next morning at 7 o'clock we got a glimpse of the beautiful city of Des Moines. There is a rich country around it. Crops are good all through this region. It was refreshing to see the immense fields of growing corn. What memories came trooping up as we passed through Savannah, St. Joseph, on down near Platte City to Leavenworth, then over the prairies that we once traversed on horseback, on to Kansas City. A thousand scenes and events, connected with our boyhood and young manhood, were called up during this flying trip of a few hours along the banks, through the forests and over the prairies on either side of the great Missouri river. Some of them were "scenes of sacred peace and pleasure," while others were those of sorrow and sadness, when the dark mantle of war hung heavy over the sky, and homes were desolate, and hearts were breaking because of the ravages of war. While waiting at Kansas City for a train south, we had just 2 hours in which to hunt up and visit a brother who lives in an adjacent village; but we succeeded in finding him and his family, shook hands, spoke a few words, and were off to Paola, where we had to go and stay over night, because that train would not stop at Hillsdale, and return seven miles on an accommodation train next morning. We reached the Conference room on Friday morning just at the opening of the session. Bishop Hargrove was in the chair, presiding with his accustomed dignity and grace; W. J. Comer was Secretary, and the business was well under way and progressing harmoniously. It is needless to say that we received a cordial welcome in this our old Conference, and that we were greatly refreshed at meeting with so many of our brethren beloved and friends of other years.

Hillsdale is 36 miles south of Kansas City, on the line of the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis road. Its population numbers about three hundred and fifty. It is in a farming community, where the soil is productive and the people, many of them, well-to-do. The residences are embowered in shade and fruit trees. It has a good school building and a number of churches. We have a handsome and commodious church here, and a good society of substantial and enterprising people. We shall speak more of the Conference in another column.

The Western Conference

met to hold its 22nd annual session at Hillsdale, Kansas, 26th of September, 1891, at 9 o'clock a. m., Bishop Hargrove in the chair. W. J. Comer was elected secretary, and T. C. Downs and J. L. Sells, assistants. Every preacher on the effective list in the Conference was present, and about half the lay delegates. James L. Sells and James L. Smith were admitted on trial. J. E. Vick, James B. Graves and Richard A. Parker remain on trial. W. P. Owen, H. H. Kincaid, John R. Patterson, Andrew J. Notestine and J. W. Purcell were admitted into a full connection. Kincaid, Owen and Parker, had been transferred from the Missouri Conference, and Patterson from the S. W. Mo. Conference. The entire class admitted were also elected and ordained deacons.

J. T. Smith was also ordained deacon, and A. H. Moore elder.

Superannuated: C Boles, A. J. Lawless, A. A. Lewis.

The preachers were all found blameless in their life and official administration.

The following are some of the statistics: Local preachers, 34; Members, 3375; Infants baptized, 121; Adults baptized, 242; Sunday Schools, 41; Teachers, 340; Scholars, 2478. There were $855.40 raised for foreign Missions, and $265.35 for domestic Missions. The reports show 47¼ (save the fourth!) churches, valued at $89,100, and 17 parsonages, valued at $12,500. Near the close of the session on Saturday afternoon, H. D. Hogan, president of the Preacher's Aid Society of the Conference, announced, that he greatly desired to secure some additional contributions to this fund. In a very short time the amount of the fund—$1500, donated by Rev. M. U. Payne, that godly layman of Hamburg, Iowa, was increased by the addition of $2150, given by preachers and laymen in notes, payable in five years, drawing interest at 6 and 7 per cent. per annum.

We were reminded of a remark made by Bishop Galloway at a session of the Montana Conference, once when we were starting a similar movement, that he "never saw such a big little Conference in his life." One of the young preachers just entering the work gave $1000. A noble layman, venerable with age, and devoted to the Master's cause, put down $500. It was refreshing to be there and witness the devotion of these men to the cause they love so well. It gave a wonderful impetus to the life of the Conference.

The session was harmonious throughout, and one of the most delightful in the history of our work there. There had been substantial progress in every department of work. Rveivals had crowned the labors of the preachers; the work is becoming more systematized, and the preachers and people are in better spirits, and have greater confidence in the permanence and final success of our cause there, than ever before. The next session of the Conference will be at Elk City, Kansas, in the southern portion of the state. The following are the LIBERALITY.

The Tenth No New Testament Gauge.

What moral or religious right has one man to live on nine thousand dollars a year, while his neighbor and brother, equally gifted and useful, consumes only nine hundred? The latter giving one hundred out of one thousand gives ten times as much as the former who contributes one thousand and retains nine thousand for luxuries. The ten-thousand-dollar man should give his nine thousand, and live on an equality with his poor neighbor. This would take the caste out of much Church Society, obliterate money distinctions, put the surplus of wealth of the Churches now consumed in luxuries into God's coffers, and bring a Pentecostal baptism to the Christian world. Certainly, a man should reserve out of his contributions what is absolutely necessary for the present to run his business, but beyond this and his living, if he goes into luxuries, he does so at the hazard of his soul's best interests. It is spiritual death to lay up treasures on earth, just as certain sudden death overtook Ananias and Sapphira, who sold their possessions to distribute to the poor, but kept back part of the price, and lied to God. The new-born soul feels no limit to his giving except the extent of his ability. Love and faith go out beyond financial possibilities and problems, and ask God to make all things possible. Given a soul consecrated to God—then large financial gifts are of minor importance, but normally follow. The same word—so expressive of the love and effects of divine grace in providing for the salvation of souls—is used by St. Paul with reference to giving—that word is abounded. In a great trial of affliction the abundance of joy and deep poverty of the Macedonian Churches abounded unto the riches of their liberality. 2 Cor. viii: 2. The exponents of true, pure love are liberal—not stinted—gifts. For an individual or church not to be liberal enough to provide means to enter open doors, and improve opportunities for good, argues not simply a weak state spiritually, but opposition to God's plans, a love of this world that amounts to idolatry, a hell-ward tendency. A love of this world that allows only such gifts to God as can be conveniently spared—keeping back the best for self—like Dives allowing Lazarus to have the crumbs—will just as effectually and eternally destroy a soul as any out-spoken wickedness. J. H. Johnson.

Satan's Sharp Practice.

If you were to invite a friend to your house and make a feast in his honor and then engage in or permit exercises there that were known to be distasteful to him, would it not be, to say the least of it, a great breach of etiquette? And so, to get up an entertainment out of respect for, and to assist in the support of, a Methodist minister and then to engage in, or permit dancing—something that is known to be distasteful to every true Methodist preacher, and is most strongly discountenanced by the church he represents—under the same roof, is offering the highest insult to him and the cause he represents.

We know of a number of persons who not long since went several miles to a church entertainment that they might assist the minister, encourage the work, get better acquainted with the people in that community and have a sociable time with their friends. But to their great astonishment and chagrin, they found they had come to a dance, and as they had conscientious scruples about engaging in, or encouraging by their presence such a manner of diversion; and as there was no other place convenient for them in which to stop and spend the evening but in the ball room, they were compelled to return to their homes, disappointed and mortified. These things, whether intended or not, bring a reproach upon the cause of Christ. We sincerely hope there will never be another such occurence in the state. If the young people desire to dance and are determined to do so, it is their privilege; but we respectfully protest against its being carried on under the guise of religion or in any way associated with it. "These are contrary the one to the other." "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." It were better to have no church sociables, and that our preachers go unpaid, than to encourage practices that are at war with religion. This is some of Satan's sharp practice. "The wiles of the devil" against which we are to watch and fight and pray.

REMINISCENCES OF EARLY LIFE

BY L. B. STATELER.

My father remained at Hartford about three years, in which time he was often engaged with others in conflicts with the Indians. In those days, in order to have bread, the laborers, in preparing the ground for cultivation, and also in cultivating it, found it necessary to have placed around them a guard to watch for Indians, and defend against their attacks. Like Nehemiah and his companions building the wall around Jerusalem, they labored with their implements in one hand and their weapons in the other. My father spent his time in hunting and dressing skins for clothing and other purposes, for the space of about three years, by which time he had accumulated sufficient means to purchase a horse and traveling out-fit, with which he started, in company with others, over the trail across the country back to his home. They received him with expressions of surprise and gladness, having believed him to be dead for years. He did not tarry long there, but took boat and returned to his new-found home in Kentucky. Not long after his return there arrived in the settlement Rev. Ignatius Pigman, from Baltimore, Maryland, who had, for many years previous, been a regular itinerant preacher in the Baltimore Conference; having commenced his labors as an itinerant preacher in 1780—four years before the regular organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, that is, before the famous Christmas Conference in 1784. There my parents first became acquainted with each other in that wilderness country. That acquaintance ripened into affection which resulted in their happy union—my mother being the daughter of Ignatius Pigman—where for half a century they lived together and now slumber side by side in the cemetery on the old farm.

My parents early became religious, and were among the first members of the Methodist church where they lived. This was the old Bethel Church, where scores and hundreds of persons have been converted and saved, who have gone up to swell the hosts of the redeemed in the spirit-land. Their house was for half a century or more, the home of the itinerant. Their children were all consecrated to God by holy baptism in infancy.

I was the youngest of six children; left my parents, when quite young, nearly sixty years ago, to enter the itinerant ministry; joined the Kentucky Conference on trial in 1831, and immediately transferred to the Missouri Conference which was then a newly settled country.

Having been raised by religious parents, I joined the church at seven years of age, and very early in life experienced, what I now believe to have been the power of divine grace in my soul, renewing my nature and causing me to rejoice in God and my Saviour. I was at first licensed, after the old-fashioned way, as an exhorter in 1829, and began exercising my gifts.

The same authority that had licensed me to exhort, not long after gave me license to preach. This was done at a Quarterly meeting held on the camp-ground at old Bethel Church near where I was born.

A sore temptation came upon me in regard to my call to the ministry, which wrung my spirit and cast me into the deepest gloom. This temptation, which I now believe to have been directly from the enemy of my soul, was a fear that I had entered upon this work without being called—that I had run without having been sent. So fierce was the temptation that, like Jonah, I would gladly have fled to the uttermost ends of the earth and hid me from any eye, that had ever beheld me. At a late hour on the last night of the meeting, while I stood thus cast down, there was a young woman at the altar, who during that year had been converted and joined the church, but had been banished by her father from her home for Christ's sake. He had made but one condition—that she should give up her religion or leave his house. She chose the latter and went to unite with a Christian family not far away. She was at that meeting. She had been in the altar singing and rejoicing. Her face shone with the presence and the glory of God. While I stood looking at her rejoicing, she repeated these lines:—

"Shall angels have their songs to sing,
And we no tunes to raise?
Oh, may we lose these useless tongues,
When we forget to praise!"

And before I was aware of it I said in a loud and earnest manner, "Amen!" when the glory of God shone about, and a glorious, gleaming light blazed all around me. My eyes were turned heavenward and I attempted to praise God, but could only utter the words, "My God! My God!" My mouth went wide open; I broke out into a loud, ecstatic religious laugh; the power of the Holy Spirit came from above and filled my very being. To have refrained from this exercise, would have destroyed my physical being; my soul would have fled away. The exercise continued for hours. A flood of life and glory from the fount of God continued to pour into my soul. The moment I would try to give utterance to words I would break forth again into that laugh. There were two experiences in that exercise. One was, I was so near to God, that after awhile when the exercise was over I had a longing to see my Saviour. I begged to depart. Those that stood about me said: "No, brother, you cannot go yet. Your work is not finished!" Somehow, a feeling came over me that I could not depart, and an overwhelming consciousness that a dispensation of the Gospel was committed to me, and I said: "I'll go!" And then the last doubt fled forever from me, in regard to preaching the Gospel. I then started with a full consciousness that I was sent by the great Head of the Church to proclaim His precious Truth, and have been going ever since. And this consciousness has sustained me in every trial, and touching this great question, Satan has ever since been behind my back and never confronts me any more.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—The writer joined the Missouri Conference on trial in 1869. He has been a member of three other Conferences since then, though never discontinued nor transferred in the usual way. Though the "powers that be" have drawn several lines between us and the dear old place where we first started, each time cutting us farther away toward the setting sun, yet now and then we cannot help breaking over and returning to the old stamping-ground, where we enjoy the times of refreshing with brethren beloved in the Lord. What memories are awakened! what emotions are stirred within us on these occasions!

—T. C. Downs is the only man now belonging to the Western Conference, who was a member when it was organized 22 years ago, and he and the writer were on trial together. Our brother is one of the leaders of that noble band of heroes that the Lord has called to carry forward His work in that field. His bow abides in strength. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his brethren, and has many seals to his ministry.

—It was with sadness that we noted the absence of Brother C. Boles from Conference. For many long, long years he stood in the front rank leading the hosts forth to the battle. He is now on the superannuated list. May his last years be serene, and his final departure triumphant and glorious.

—The speech of Brother A. A. Lewis to the Conference, when taking leave of his brethren as he entered the superannuated list, was very affecting. There were not many dry eyes in the congregation. He has been in the effective ranks for 17 years.

—Rev. A. J. Lawless longs to be again in the regular work, but his brethren would not permit it. It is often harder to suffer the will of God in the sense of submission, than to do it. It is easier to rush forth with the multitude and the martial music to the charge in the day of battle than to lie in the hospital or stand on some lonely outpost or even in the ranks in front of the enemy. May God bless the noble men who have worn themselves out in his service. Their very presence is a ministry and an inspiration to the younger men who are just girding themselves for the fray.

—It is a great satisfaction to meet with such venerable laymen as J. S. Chick and J. A. Tuggle, men upon whose hearts has laid the burden of our work in Kansas these many years, who have given of their means to its support and who show their interest by their presence at the annual gatherings. Our preachers can accomplish but little without the co-operation of laymen, and when both are consecrated and in hearty co-operation the results are incalculable.

—The presidency of Bishop Hargrove at the Western Conference gave universal satisfaction. He holds a tight rein, protects the body, presses the business, yet allows ample time and liberty when required, and is gentle and courteous to all. When the interests of the church demand it he is ready to render decisions and grapple great questions. He is a friend of the West, has great confidence in its outcome, and by his wise counsel and prompt action is contributing not little to its development. His sermon on John 1:29, delivered in the grove before an audience of one thousand people, was full of Gospel truth, just such as was needed for the time and place, and made a profound impression. His address to the class admitted into the Conference was one of the best if not the best one—ever heard on such an occasion.

—We had the pleasure of meeting with Dr. J. C. Morris, our Church Extension Secretary. He is just as gentle and tender as ever, and we told him that he had grown in the grace and knowledge of Church Extension speech-making. His address was a departure from the usual order, was characterized by good common sense, was full of Methodist doctrine and the gospel of Church Extension. We hope to see it in print in tract form for general distribution among our people. It would open the eyes of many, and do much good.

—The Western Conference followed the example set by her sister conferences in the Rockies and raised the assessment for Church Extension in full. We rejoice at this, and hope that every conference in the West hereafter will see that this record is not broken. It can be done if the preachers will only take it in hand and say it must be.

—There was universal regret at the transfer of Brother Gross from the Western Conference where he has been very useful. Many prayers follow him to his new field in Oklahoma Throat trouble prompted the change.

—Rev. H. D. Hogan begins to show the effects of the years of arduous toil spent in the up-building of our church in Kansas. But during these years fruit has been gathered unto life eternal. Many persons have been converted under his ministry, one of whom is now a member of the Western Conference. This is surely great cause for thanksgiving.

—We met our old friend, Dr. W. B. Palmore, at the Western Conference. While reporting the St. Louis Advocate in a good condition, yet in his speech he said there had been a lack of interest among the preachers in pushing the paper since the Southwestern and the Advocate had been consolidated. We were mischievous enough to suggest that a little opposition might do good-- the Montana Methodist, for instance. We wish the grand old St. Louis abundant success. We almost learned our a b c's on its title page, and we hope it will live forever.

—As we saw the great throng of interested people who attended the religious services at Hillsdale, we wondered how any one could doubt the fact of our church having a work to do in that field. There were several accessions to the church on Sunday night. The Conference love-feast was a melting time. The Spirit of God was there in mighty power.

—The Western Conference contains some of the truest and noblest men in the Church. They are self-sacrificing and consecrated, and deserve more sympathy and assistance than they have received. The work is growing and is in a better condition than ever before. The class of young men admitted would be a credit to any conference. We note with joy the fact that some of them were raised up in that field, and that so many of those coming in, say that they are there to stay. That is what is needed in all of our western fields, men who will become fully identified with the work and remain in it.

—The appointment of Rev. J. W. Faubion presiding elder, was a just recognition of long, faithful, heroic and efficient service in other relations. There is much hard work before him, but we wish and predict for him great success in his extended field of labor.

—While at Hillsdale we just got to shake hands with Dr. J. E. Godbey, who left on the train that brought us in, and were permitted to meet with our Brother, Dr. G. C. Rankin, now of Kansas City, and greet him in this western field. He expressed himself as pleased with the West.

—We greatly enjoyed a brief visit to the elegant home of Bishop Hendrix at Kansas City. The Bishop had just returned from a preaching tour in Iowa, near Lineville, where there were 1,000 or 1,500 people present on Sunday, and where our cause has enjoyed great prosperity the past year. What a change in the household since we visited it at the parsonage in St. Joseph in 1874, when the oldest child was but a babe. Now, mother, grandmother, and all, were busy getting the next eldest ready to depart on the afternoon train for Dr. Price's school for young ladies at Nashville, while the youngest boy, Nathan, accompanied us and the Bishop conducted me over the grounds and through the rapidly rising structure of the new Training School, and explained in details the plans for the same. The site of this institution is not far from the Bishop's home, and could not be surpassed, commanding, as it does, a fine view of the Missouri river and of the surrounding country for a radius of twenty or thirty miles. The plan is as near perfect as we could imagine. The building is of pressed brick, best quality, has reached the second story, and is being rapidly pushed. We took occasion on the spot to hand over a few mites contributed by friends in Montana to this grand work. It has a wonderful future. We were also shown through the Melrose Church, which was built principally by Dr. Scarrett, and when completed according to the original design, will be one of the finest churches in Kansas City. We were glad to find that the Bishop had not lost his interest in the Montana work, but was full of questions concerning it. There is not a more strategic point in our Methodism for an Episcopal residence than Kansas City, and we are glad that our Missouri bishop occupies it.

—We made a flying trip from Kansas City out to Circleville, Kansas, where we stayed all night and were allowed to spend only a few hours with the folks at the old homestead, and were denied the satisfaction of seeing other loved ones and of meeting many old friends. Our journey from there was by way of Seneca, Hiawatha, Troy and St Joseph, to Maryville, Mo.

—The Missouri Conference convened at Maryville, Mo., September 2nd, 1891, Bishop Hargrove in the chair, John D. Vincil secretary (of course), and A. V. Baily and Z. M. Williams assistant. It was the Bishop's first presidency here, but he soon won his way to the affections and esteem of all. Rev. M. B. Chapman, editor of the St. Louis Advocate, and E. M. Bounds, D. D., assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, are both members of this body. Dr. W. R. Lambeeth, our missionary from Japan, now traveling in this country, was present and added greatly to the interest of the occasion. He was born in Shang-Hai, China, is highly cultured and deeply consecrated and spiritual. His talks on China and Japan made a profound impression. We shall refer to them again.

—Dr. Potter addressed the Conference on Missions. He is venerable looking, with gray hair and full beard, also gray; has the cause of missions at heart and can plead it ably and eloquently. Your heart is made to burn within you as he pours forth his earnest and eloquent words.

He hopes to visit the Northwest by another year. His plan of raising the amount of the missionary debt is to secure in pledges from individuals, Conferences, Sunday Schools, etc., to support certain missionaries to whom appropriations have been made; this in addition to regular assessments. This will bring the people into closer contact with the mission field, and it is believed will be beneficial all around. We commend it.

—There is much that we could say about the Missouri Conference, and our visit to this grand body of men, but space forbids it now. We came hoping to secure two single men for our work in Montana, but found it impossible to get them at this time. There seems to be a shortage in this old Conference. Is it not high time that the churches were praying the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers? There were very few applications for admission into the Conference this year.

—Rev. J. H. Shelton was the host of the Conference at Maryville, where a $12,000 church has been completed this year. He will depart for his field at an early date. We bespeak for him a cordial reception by the brethren of East Columbia and the good people of Dayton.

—Mr. W. W. Dyer and Mrs. Eva J. Moren were united in marriage at Bozeman, Mont., July 31st, 1891, Rev. W. T. Goulder, officiating.

Will the pastors of Helena Dist. during the First Quarter take the Collections for the Domestic Mission Fund in order that those who receive the appropriation from this fund may get their full Quarterly installment? This is important and we must not neglect it.

PERSONALS.

—The Western Missouri Conferences have ovted to relinquish all their legal claim in the St. Louis Advocate, that was deeded to them by the late Logan D. Dameron. It was a wise movement, and one that will, we trust, result in greater harmony in the conduct of the paper.

—During our recent trip we heard many kind words spoken for the Montana Methodist. A newspaper man complimented the mechanical make-up of the paper, and wondered that there are so few mistakes, while several have expressed their determination to take it so long as the interest is kept up to its present standard. This is an inducement for our friends to rally to the support of the paper, and do all they can to make every issue better than the previous one.

—Our friends at each of the two Conferences lately visited, gave us a good list of new subscribers, while but two persons in our entire rounds asked to have the paper discontinued.

—Maryville, Mo., is a beautiful town of 5,000 inhabitants, located in a rich, rolling country in the north-eastern portion of the state, and is the county seat of Nodaway County. Its citizens are enterprising and hospitable.

—Rev. D. M. Proctor, a faithful minister of our church at Platte City, Mo., writes: "Wife and I read the Montana Methodist with a great deal of interest. God bless the work in Montana." An excellent lady in St. Joseph, Mo., writes: "Your paper is like a letter from my friends in that field. We are always glad to see it."

—Rev. T. W. Flowers recently had four additions to the church at Olford's school house near Corvallis, Montana. May this prove to be but the first fruits of a bountiful harvest.

A Much-needed Reform.

Some time ago I officiated at the funeral of a little girl, 14 years old, who had died near Florence the day before. At the request of the father, the usual custom of removing the coffin-lid, in order to give the public an opportunity of viewing the remains was not observed—a course which received our hearty commendation.

What good reason can be given for the continuance of the above custom, which is so objectionable to many?

Among the many reasons that might be adduced for its discontinuance we would deferentially offer the following:

1. The remains of our departed are too sacred to be exposed to the irreverent gaze of the curious and unsympathetic look of the stranger. Near friends and relatives might previously, if they chose, take their last look at the house.

2. The custom tends to create a morbid desire for the sensational, particularly amongst the young.

3. The danger of infection in many cases is not a trifling objection.

4. Grief is too sacred and personal a thing to be unnecessarily paraded before the public, as must be the case when the "last look" is taken by the relatives at the funeral.

5. Is it not better, by far, if such can be the case, to remember our friends as when alive, than as where locked in the icy embrace of death?

6. What after all to the general public is a corpse but a tenentless house of clay already falling into corruption? Surely not a desirable object on which to feast one's eyes.

For obvious reasons, funeral reforms are necessarily slow; all the more reason, therefore, for us to begin early the correction of any abuses, such as the one referred to, which may have crept into the customs of society.

J. B. PARNALL.

HERE AND THERE.

—Rev. J. W. Payne is one of the successful men of the Western Conference. Having married a Kansas lady, he is now fully identified with the work there and has succeeded in getting a number of promising young men transferred from other conferences and appointed on his district. We hope they will follow his example and stay—that is, not go East again. Of course, if any of them should want to come farther West—to Montana, for instance—we should not object. That is understood.

—The corn crop is fine in North Missouri and northern Kansas, when it was planted early and the weeds kept down. The wet weather interfered somewhat in certain sections, which will make a lighter yield.

—It seemed odd to see the farmers in Kansas and Missouri hauling apples to market by the wagon-load, at twenty-five cents a bushel, and carefully culled at that. My!

—At a meeting of the Educational Aid Association of the Missouri Conference on Sunday afternoon, which was addressed by Bishop Hargrove and Dr. Hammond, President of Central College, about $500 were added to the fund, the object of which is to assist worthy young men in obtaining an education. A strong argument in favor of young men in the Conference, who have already been assisted in this way. It is a commendable work.

—After careful observation we are convinced that there is no more friction between the two Methodisms—if as much on account of "creating altar against altar" in Montana and Washington as in the grand old state of Missouri, and some farther South. If we are to abandon, or even neglect, our work here for that reason, we would be under obligations to vacate much territory elsewhere. Of course, this will not be done. Let us be true to our principles, seek a deeper consecration to God and His cause, and go forward. The truth will triumph in the end.

—The writer is indebted to his brethren for many courtesies at both the conferences that he recently attended. Through the kindness of Brother Shelton, and at his suggestion, we had the privilege of presenting the claims of Montana and our Northwestern work at an afternoon hour. Not a few manifested their interest by subscribing for the Montana Methodist or by renewing their subscriptions. Many inquiries were made by old parishioners and friends concerning the welfare of our Missouri boys at the front, earnest prayers offered in their behalf; and great joy expressed at the good news of their success—and that of all our noble men in the northwest.

—With all the pleasure of association with brethren beloved at the Conference lately attended, we could but come away with a sad heart because of our inability to secure two earnest, efficient young men; one for Helena District, and the other for Missoula District, in the Montana Conference. Our brethren complain of a scarcity of men there, and the Bishop could not spare us even one. We were sad to see so few coming up for admission.

—Our good friend, Brother J. B. Chamberlin, sends us a subscriber from Walla Walla, Wash., and adds: "We were very much grieved at your misfortune, and greatly disappointed that you were not at our Conference. We remembered you in all our prayers."

We appreciate such kindly remembrance, and are happy to report that our affliction is not as serious in its results as our friends had feared it would be. We are again at our post trying to do our duty, and trust that the "trial of our faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, may be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

—The matter for this issue of the Methodist is made up while the editor is "on the wing," part of it written at railway stations and part while rushing along at the rate of thirty or forty miles an hour. If any portion of it appears hastily written, disconnected and scattering, the reader will please make allowance. We do not habitually parade our performances in the way of traveling, but if we make connections and meet with no mishaps, ere these lines are in type, we will have traveled 4,000 miles since the manuscript of the previous issue left our hands. Surely the West is a country of magnificent distances. Thanks to the railroad, which is doing so much toward annihilating them, so far as time is concerned, and for the courtesy of the railroad companies which make it possible for the minister of the Gospel to traverse them in carrying out the great commission given by our Lord and Master.

—Let every preacher, upon ending this paragraph, "sit down quickly and write"—a postal card report of his work. We mean you. Now please don't forget it. Write whether you have something interesting or not. Let the Editor judge as to that. But write.

—We left Maryville, Mo. early Monday morning, the 7th inst. It was thought the Conference would adjourn that night. The Bishop preached a fine sermon on Sunday morning from the words "What must I do to be saved," to an immense audience, and Dr. Hammond preached a very thoughtful and well prepared discourse at night, which was listened to with rapt attention. Seven preachers were ordained at the morning service and about the same number were made elders at night.

—On our return trip we rested for a few hours at the Bacon House, St. Joseph, Mo. Our friends passing that way will find this a good place to stop.

—It is said that there are over 100,000 students in the colleges and universities of the United States.

ALONG THE LINE.

HELENA DISTRICT NOTES.

BY A. C. COUEY.

I began my work the first Sunday after the Annual Conference at Deer Lodge, this being at home if a P. E. can be said to have such. Of course, the report—so early in the Conference year—was necessarily limited. Liberal provision was made by the Stewards for the pastor for the present Conference year. At the rate of increase allowed the preacher over the past, indicates a lively, growing faith in the Deer Lodge Charge, and if it continues, (and I truly hope it will) will bring it to a self-sustaining work in two or three years more. But this is as it should be. The very moment our western charges can take care of themselves they should do so for conscience sake and their duty to God and the more needy fields. [Amen! —Editor.]

At the very first service of the new Conference year, we had an accession of the head of a family to the church. It helped the service of that hour greatly.

BOZEMAN STATION.

I was with Brother W. T. Goulder Aug. 16th and 17th. I found him cheerful. The work there begins well. The pastor takes time by the forelock, and though it was only the second Sabbath after the Annual Conference, plans were already in operation to secure the Annual Conference Collections. A marked feature in Goulder's work is his live Sunday-school. It is a real inspiration to any one to go there. Even the summer season does not lessen the interest. Do you know the reason? Faithful, efficient teachers—careful superintendency by the pastor, and good, soul-stirring singing.

Two applications for membership the first Sunday of the new year's work.

TOWNSEND CIRCUIT.

At Townsend we have no pastor as yet for the present Conference year though I believe the way will open for us to put a man there in a short while. It has pained me no little that the Bishop had to read: "Townsend, to be supplied." Lack of funds was the cause. Such was the interest felt by Bishop Duncan, that he told me in "the Cabinet," he would give $100 toward supplying this charge. I preached in Townsend at 11 a. m., Sunday, Aug. 23d, and at the close of the service told the people the situation. Again at night, down at Duck Creek. Stated the same to the people there. In the Quarterly Conference next morning I brought the matter before the stewards. They pledged themselves to do more than they had been doing, to meet the emergency. So I believe that which has been a trial to us, will turn out to good account and cause the people generally to see the necessity of helping themselves in sustaining the cause of God in our work. The truth is, our church everywhere could do more than the majority think.

A very sad accident occurred near Diamond City to one of our Townsend citizens, Saturday, Aug. 22nd. Mrs. Dean, daughter of Mrs. McCormick, a member of our church, was accidentally shot while out camping. The fatal wound too was made the more serious, being by her own brother. No one blames him—knowing the facts. She was buried from our church, Monday, Aug. 24th. A large concourse of sympathizing friends were present.

Her remains were carried to the Deep Creek Cemetery.

Your correspondent conducted the funeral services at the church—the members of the Eastern Star at the grave.

The Lord over-rule the sad event for his own glory, and a warning to us, who survive.

The Preachers all start off well in their work—so far as heard from.

The District Parsonage receives the last touch of the paint-brush today. We take possession Tuesday, Sept. 1st. We extend a cordial invitation to all our friends to come to see us in our new home. To us it is very dear. We thank all who have so generously aided us in securing it.

While the Presiding Elder is away, amidst the cold blasts of winter, he can feel great relief to know that his dear ones at home are comfortably quartered.

Mr. Editor—I am writing this by snatches at Rail-road Stations on my way to Boulder, to hold Brother R. S. Clark's first Quarterly Conference. I hope to find him and Sister Clark domiciled in the lately repaired parsonage, ready for a good year's work. More anon.

[Most of the editorial matter of this paper is written under the same circumstances as indicated above—at stations, and while the train is flying over the broad and beautiful prairies and thundering through the forests of Missouri and Kansas. —Editor.]

FROM ALABAMA.

MR. EDITOR:

Doubtless you will be surprised to receive a letter from the far-away sunny South. Having read your paper for sometime past, and my brother (Rev. R. G. Isbell) being among you, and as my heart is with you in the good work of the Lord, I thought I might add a word of cheer to the workers in the Lord's vineyard. We are among the mountains of Alabama, in the center of the coal region. Our home is only a mile from two mines. We have every nationality represented, from the Italian to the African. There are about 300 miners at each mine. They nearly all have families. We have erected a church at the mines where the miners and their families can have the Word preached to them. Conversions are few among them. As a class they are a roving people, not staying long enough in one place to become interested in the salvation of their souls. Brother Simson has just closed a protracted meeting at Mount Zion. Our minister, Brother Finch, has laid out enough work to keep him busy till winter sets in. The Methodist is a most welcome visitor. Now, Brother Stanley, I want you to admonish my brother not to forget his friends and his old congregation that he left behind him.

MRS. J. M. CROWNOVER.
Patton, Ala.

FROM SPOKANE.

REV. R. B. SWIFT writes: —

We missed you very much at our Conference. We were very sorry of your illness and of your absence. We had a very gracious season. The Lord was with us. Everything moved on smoothly. "Onward and upward on every line," is the word. Collections largely increased, membership increased — everything improved. Praise the Lord!

Following your suggestion we assessed the $1,000 for domestic missions and got $500 of it pledged in extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY, and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list

25 minutes, the last night of Conference. We believe it will all be raised. I regard that as the most important step taken at our Conference, the full significance of which is only to be revealed in coming years. It presages a forward movement, of whose magnitude we little dream to-day. We still have "growing pains," and are calling for aid. We are also beginning to help ourselves as never before.

Your paper is wonderfully in favor with our preachers and people. So mote it be.

For all our North-western work I trust this will be the most prosperous year we have known. The Lord give us such success in every line as will most glorify His name.

—o—

EAST COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

My Dear Bro. Stanley:—

You can imagine the disappointment which we underwent, when you wrote us that you could not attend our Annual Conference. "To learn to labor" is, comparatively, easy; "to wait," is when the struggle begins, and the Jacobic wrestling is repeated. May the Lord graciously sustain you in this trial, and "as thy day, may thy strength be." Amen!

It is sweet to pass under the rod when we reflect that a hand Divine holds it. "Fear not, I am with thee." Amen!

Well, we had a most delightful session of the "Baby Conference." All the preachers were present; but only a few of the boy delegates, it being in the midst of harvest with them.

Bishop Duncan captured or captivated, or both, the whole Conference, by his gentle administration, Words of Wisdom, Church Extension, and Missionary addresses, and sermons. His sermon, Sunday morning, from Philippians 4: 19, convinced us of God's willingness to supply all our needs—not our wants, and made each of us desire to show in "that day" "an armless sleeve." Amen!

Two were received on trial:—C.C. Eagle, C. E. Kirk.

W. S. Hornbuckle and Henry Barnhart remained on trial, and advanced to class of the second year.

W. H. Hodges, of S. C. Conference, and John H. Shelton, of Missouri Conference, were transferred to us, and stationed respectfully at Spokane and Dayton.

P. M. Bell, F. C. Adkins, and F. F. St. Clair, were received into full connection and ordained deacons. Michael Larkin and G. H. Gibbes were received into full connection, having been local deacons before.

W. S. Hornbuckle was elected a local deacon and ordained.

None supernumerary, superannuated or died during the year.

We have now over 1,200 members. 48 infants baptized.

Giant strides in the number of Sunday Schools and scholars, the latter exceeding the number of members of the Church in the Conference.

Last year about $4,000.00 collected from all sources; this year over $10,000.00, a net gain of $6,000.00. Praise the Lord!

The preaching was of a high order of spirituality. Bro. Isbell's sermon from John 20: 21, will linger like a tender memory for many days to come. It gave us a new insight into the dignity of our vocation.

The pastors of the town were truly fraternal, and on Sabbath evening three of us, Brethren Swift, Skee, and the writer, filled pulpits in the City.

Bro. Ford, the Northern Methodist pastor, with whom I stayed while there, had the misfortune to lose his parsonage, and part of his household effects, on Monday night after our adjournment.

The preachers "made up" a purse of about $50.00 and presented it to him. Some of them had to borrow money upon which to go home. No higher honor could be conferred on a man than to be counted worthy to be only one of their number. The world is not worthy of such men, and when the books are opened over yonder, the heroes of the Western Frontier, and their devoted, heroic wives, will doubtless be among the jewels that shall flash in the royal diadem of King Emanuel.

The next session will be held at Palouse City, Wash.

The little "Montana" was not forgotten. The Bishop spoke kindly and encouragingly of it.

We wish we could be more minute in the statistics; but you can get that when our minutes are published. I shall see that you get a copy.

We trust this year may be the grandest of our lives We want the victory "In His Name." Amen! O, that we may "go forth weeping," and "sowing beside all waters" and then "come again rejoicing, bringing our sheaves with us." Amen, and Amen! With nothing to discourage us, and the assurance of our Heavenly Father's continual presence, we ought to double our exertions; with the blood-stained banner of our Lord unfurled to the breezes, and bearing down on the enemy, show no quarter, until this great North-west shall acknowledge Jesus as "Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

We wish for the "Methodist" a most prosperous year, and will do all in our power to extend its influence throughout the bounds of our Circuit.

Praying God's richest blessing on you and yours, we are,

As ever,

Fred St. Clair.

P. S. Will all the preachers who paid me at Conference, please write me the amount? I lost all my books of record in the fire. St. C.

Drink and Work.

"I drink to make me work," said a young man, to which observation an old man replied thus:

"That is right. You drink, and it will make you work: Hearken to me, a moment, and I'll tell you something that may do you good: I was once a very prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife, and two as fine lads as ever the sun shone on. We had a comfortable home, and used to live happily together. But we used to drink ale to make us work. Those two sons I have laid in drunkards' graves. My wife died broken-hearted, and she now lies by her two sons. I am 72 years of age. Had it not been for drink, I might have been an independent man; but I used to drink to make me work, and it makes me work now, At 72 years of age I am obliged to work for my daily bread. Drink! drink! and it will make you work." There is a powerful warning in this incidental anecdote that ought to be heeded by every boy, or young man; and it is forced home as a true outcome of dabbling in strong drinks. They will beat you in the end. —Southern Star.

LETTERS

From the Orient

By Mrs. A. W. Wilson.

With an introduction by Rev. Samuel Rodgers.

"The ADVOCATE has received with pleasure this anticipated volume. It is charming in its physical make-up, but much more so in its breathing contents. It is a book with a soul, and that, too, regenerated and aglow with the spirit of the mighty Leader, who is still lifting up his eyes unto the whitened fields. We learned to admire the author's literary style, as well as the evangelistic trend of her thought during her now famous tour through the East accompanying the Bishop and gleaning, like another Ruth, in his footsteps; but we were hardly prepared for this delightful book. It is scenic, graphic, soul-stirring, and will be worth many thousands to the missionary treasury. That a woman, sharp-eyed and cultivated, should have looked upon the modern abomination of desolation at the chief seats of its ignorance and misery, and then have written down her impressions in thrilling sentences, would be epochal in the history of the Church; but the present volume has a much greater significanee and should circulate everywhere. Next to its piety, that which impresses us most is its literary perfection. The illustrations are numerous, and both illustrate and narrate. It is a marvel for cheapness—the price being one dollar; but we apprehend for quite other reasons than the last mentioned that the book will have a great sale."—NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

HOLDING OUT.

Sometimes young Christians say to me, "I am afraid to make a public confession of Christ; I may not hold out." They have nothing to do with holding out; it is simply their duty to hold on. When future trials and perils come, their Master will give them help for the hour, if they only make sure that they are his. * * Some of us at the beginning of a year's work are tempted to overload ourselves with the anticipation of how much we have to do; we need not worry if we will only remember that during the whole year there will be only one working day, and that is to-day. Sufficieut each day is the labor thereof. —Sel.

SELF-DENIAL.

—The Christian religion is pre-eminently a religion of self-denial Sin in its essence is selfishness. There is no word that is a more perfect synonym for sin than this latter term. The history of sin, from its inception, so far as we know, is a history of selfishness, seeking to exalt self, living unto self, striving to gratify selfish ambitions, selfish appetites and selfish desires. It prompted the arch-traitor to rebel against the law of heaven and caused him to be cast out; it moved our first parents to eat the forbidden fruit, "seeing it was pleasant to the eye, good for food, a tree desired to make them wise and become as gods." It prompted Cain to slay his brother, and Judas to betray his Lord. It ruined Alexander who had conquered the world, and Cæsar who had triumphed on a hundred battle-fields, while Napoleon dominated by it, though he had conquered nearly all of Europe, died in exile. And nearer home, in every day life, alas, how many of us are turned aside from the way of righteousness because we do not resist or overcome this temptation and tendency to selfishness, and crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts. Selfishness would seal up every fountain of tenderness and sympathy and destroy all regard for the well-being or happiness of others. It knows nothing of pure love. It sacrifices nothing, bestows nothing, gives nothing except in the hope of getting more in return. It calculates closely—"considers one," and that number one, but never gets as far as "another," in the divine injunction. It is deaf to the cry of the helpless; it sees not the man who fell among thieves, or if so, passes by on the other side, and never hears the Macedonian cry, "come over and help us." The same principle in the physical world would tend to stop every fountain from flowing, cause every rose to cease blooming and blessing the world with its beauty and fragrance, and every tree to cease yielding its fruit. It would stop the sun, moon, and stars from giving their light, veil the world in darkness and reduce it back to chaos. It is receptive altogether, and hence destructive as a principle to true life wherever found, be it in the material or in the spiritual world.

Christianity is right the opposite of all this. God is love. Love gives. Love bestows. Love sacrifices for, and seeks to benefit its object. God so loved that He gave, bestowed the highest gift in all the universe, that nearest his heart, nearest himself. His only Son. Christ so loved that He gave—gave Himself. Though rich He became poor. Though equal with God he made himself of no reputation, became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. He is the embodiment, and the most perfect example, the highest expression of unselfishness in the universe. He came not to be ministered unto—not to be petted and pampered—not to receive honor of men, but to minister and give his life for the world. Ah, was there ever love so divine, so absolutely unselfish?

Here is the essence of true religion—unselfishness. Here is the secret of true discipleship. Hence the Master says: "'If any man will be my disciple let him deny himself and take up his cross and come follow me." Here is the gateway to the holy temple, and the condition of remaining therein. There can be no genuine repentance, no true faith, until self is renounced. Then, once initiated, the work is to go on. We are to mortify the deeds of the body, cut off right arms, and pluck out right eyes that offend; avoid every needless self-indulgence, lay aside every weight and besetting sin, and with patience run the race that is set before us.

True self-denial boasts not of its sufferings and sacrifices, and almsgiving, and fastings, and punctiliousness in observing rites and ceremonies. It attaches no merit to these things in themselves. It consists of such devotion to Christ and his work that self is forgotten, the flesh is crucified, and everything is made subservient to the one great purpose of doing His will. This was the spirit that characterized the apostles and early Christians. They counted not their lives dear unto them so that they might finish their course. They counted it all joy when their goods were spoiled, and they were beaten and banished. But they turned the world upside down. It is just in proportion as we are filled with this spirit that we become perfect in love and fitted for the work the Master has given us to do.

There is philosophy in all this. Christ is no usurper, no arbitrary ruler. His words are spirit and they are life. His law is perfect, converting the soul. He is the revealer of life. Yea, he is "the Way, the Truth and the Life." Just in proportion as human nature is brought into possession of the mind that was in Christ, is willing to deny self and spend and be spent in doing the will of God, is it brought into harmony with its true environment and into the true life.

Reader, how is it with you? Are you living unto Christ, or wholly to the world and self?

—o—

KIND WORDS.

Dear Brother Stanley:—We have received several copies of the "Montana Methodist," which you so kindly sent us. We are well pleased with it. It is a welcome visitor in our home and a great help in Christian work and walk. It is a pleasure to read your paper because we knew the editor so well in days past and gone. We hope some day to see him again. I send you two subscribers and hope to send some more soon.

Mrs. G. W. Shoemaker.

The above cheering words come to us from Sheridan, Montana, and revive many pleasant memories of long gone days and years. We heartily thank our sister for the interest she takes in the circulation of the "Methodist," hope that she may send us many new names and that others will be encouraged by her success to join in the good work. Many of the preachers and lay members have testified that the paper is a comfort and an inspiration to them in their work. Then let all unite in enlarging its circulation and increasing its usefulness.

Another friend writes from Slater, Mo., enclosing a dollar and says, "Continue to send me the paper. The longer I take it the better I like it. I hope it may have a wider circulation this year than ever before. I am so glad to see our dear old church prospering in Montana. The work there will come out all right yet. I am trying to get you some subscribers. Most of the people offer as an excuse that they are taking a religious paper. But I am going to keep on trying. May the Lord bless the work in Montana."

Mattie E. Keith.

Yes; many of our people think it a great burden to take more than one religious paper, and some will not even take one; while at the same time they are paying for a half-dozen secular papers, some of which contain matter that ought not to go into a Christian home. When will Christian people take as much interest in religious as in political and secular affairs? We trust our friend will keep on trying, and in the meantime we shall try to make the "Methodist" better and better, so that people cannot help subscribing for and reading it. We believe in "going on" to perfection in this as well as in other kinds of Christian work.

A note from our dear old friend "Grandma" Lightfoot at Deer Lodge, expresses deep sympathy for us in our recent affliction and adds: "May you enjoy more of God's holy love than ever. There are greater heights in God's love for us if we only believe and trust in Him for it. Praise the Lord. Have you read Brother Caradine's book? My soul was filled with joy when I read it. Oh, how I do trust that all of our preachers may enjoy more of this great blessing that fits us for living and fits us for heaven. Glory be to God."

Our dear sister is one of the lights standing along the shore, ere long, to be transferred to the other side of the river where they have no need of the sun, and the moon, and stars, for the Lord God and the Lamb are the light thereof. We praise the Lord for a religion that fits us for both worlds.

HERE AND THERE.

—We had heard of the wheat fields of Dakota and Western Minnesota, but never saw them until on our return trip from St. Paul, over the Northern Pacific Railroad. It was just harvest time. At times we could see little else than one vast sea of wheat shocks stretching out and studding the horizon in every direction. The sun seemed literally to go down in a wheat field amid the grain shocks. The columns of smoke helped us to locate the numerous threshers that were at work separating the wheat from the straw. The latter is burned at once, some of the engines being so constructed as to use it for fuel. The wheat crop is abundant, and the farmers in that section are happy.

—The country is very rough in portions of eastern Montana, and the casual observer would think it produced but little. Yet we were told that 1700 cars would be necessary to convey the stock shipped from one station on this road this fall.

—The country improves as we ascend the Yellowstone valley. The grain-fields, and timothy and clover meadows, watered by irrigation, are quite refreshing, after the ride through the bad lands. The sight of the grand old Rockies is always exhilarating to this scribe, no matter from which direction we approach them, or how long or how short the time we have been absent from them. As we passed up and down the great Yellowstone Valley, so near the Little Big Horn, we could but think of the fate of poor Custer and his men, and of the hundreds of others who fell in the desperate conflict that was inevitable before the savage would yield this fair domain to the scepter of the pale-face. Here was his home, his last great hunting-ground, and here he make his final stand. The presence of the countless thousands of buffaloes that once darkened these prairies, and of the hordes of savages that lived by the chase alone, was prophetic of the wealth that it would produce, and is now producing under the general influences of civilization.

MISSOURI CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Rev. W. E. Dockery is the soul of good nature and contributes much to the life of Conference. When he takes the floor there is sure to be a good hearty laugh before he sits down. He is one of the finest preachers we recollect of seeing in our home when a boy. He holds up well, carries weight with him and much sunchine when he was young. Hon. A. M. Dockery, now in Congress, is his son. May his bow abide in strength until the Master says, "Come up higher."

—Rev. John Anderson is the debater of the Conference. We heard him make a fine speech, though unfortunately our brother was on the wrong side of the question. He is one of the strong men of the Conference.

—It was thrilling to listen to such men as Uncle Daniel Penny, William Warren, C. I. Vandeventer, Elmore Carlisle, R. A. Austin, E K. Miller and Walter Toole, relate their experience in the Conference love-feast. They are the nestors of the body, blazed their way through the forests and broke the trails over the broad prairies of Missouri, before many of us were born. Their very presence is an inspiration. God bless all of them and keep them free from want until they go up on high.

—It was refreshing to once more look into the honest faces of our former yoke-fellows in the work in Kansas, G. J. Warren, W. A. Hanna, D. C. O'Howell, and A. V. Bailey. They are strong. active and efficient men. The sweet spirited Caples (W. P.,) who who was with us then has been called home.

—I. D. Woodson, Dr. Perkins, Brothers Proctor and Smith appeared to be the principal speakers among the laymen. They are all true Christian men. Proctor is a parliamentarian, and Smith smote them hip and thigh by his humorous speech and carried the Conference, preacher's wives and all invited, with but little opposition to Montgomery City for the next session.

—We were drawn nearer to our Brother J. H. Pritchett than ever before, after hearing that pathetic and soul-stirring prayer; (it was indited by the Holy Spirit), at the close of Dr. Lambreth's talk on missions.

—The face and form of Fielding Marvin, reminded us so forcibly of our dear departed Bishop that we could hardly control our emotions when we met him. May the father's mantle, and a double portion of his spirit rest upon the son. We remember hearing the Bishop say that he believed his son would yet be a preacher.

—Miss Belle H. Bennett writes acknowledging receipt of a check from Montana friends for the Training School, and says: "Please accept thanks for same. We now have something over $13,000 on the endowment fund, and God's blessing is resting on the work, as it has from the very beginning."

We rejoice greatly at the success of this noble enterprise. It is in excellent hands. Miss Bennett has her heart in it and she is well qualified for it. It is one of the greatest movements of the present day. God is in the work. Let all our friends who are able send contributions to Miss Belle H. Bennett, Richmond, Ky.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

HELENA DISTRICT—BOULDER.

Brother R. S. Clark, our pastor at Boulder, and his good wife, Sister Clark, were exceedingly busy in the parsonage, adding some very necessary improvements and putting things to rights for housekeeping when I reached their home on Saturday, for holding the First Quarterly Conference.

Sunday gave us two very good congregations. Preached myself at 11 a. m. Brother Clark preached at the evening service. There is in some way as much inspiration to me preaching at Boulder as anywhere on the District, although our membership is not so strong there as at other points. We always have good congregations there, and the people listen well.

No preacher doubts but that there is as much in the hearer as in the preacher in having liberty.

The prospects seem favorable at this point. and Bro. Clark begins his year's work quite hopefully, I thought.

AT HOME.

To meet the first payment on the District Parsonage which was turned over to us per contract, Sept. 1st, move my family, and to do much other work incident to going into a new home, where lack of money must be substituted by your own muscle, I made no appointment on the District for the first Sunday in Sept. It was a real luxury to spend a Sabbath at home with my family and hear our pastor preach.

Bro. Tabor gave his flock a good, practical sermon at 11 a. m., on "Christ the Bread of Life."

At night I kept the little ones and Mrs. Couey and the eldest went to church. To teach the Bible Class in Sunday-school; follow Tabor at 11 a. m. with an exhortation, and a short address before the League at 3 p. m. was the only exercise I had that day. Enough for a rest day if it were well done.

Bro. Tabor received by letter that day, Sister Blackwell, and her daughter, Miss Annie, wife and daugter of one of the deceased preachers of the Missouri Conference. They come from Moberly, the church letters bearing the name of Thos. G. Whitten, pastor. We receive them gladly. Miss Mary the older daughter, and brother had preceded them to Montana about one year ago. Miss Mary had joined by profession of faith some months before.

It is needless to say we are greatly pleased with our new home for which we have already worked enough to make it dear to us. Much is yet to be done.

HELENA STATION.

Sunday, Sept. 13th, I preached for Bro. Price's people in Helena. By pre-arranged plans, he and wife had gone to the National Park. Both were in need of an outing. I hope the inspiration of wonderland and three weeks camp life will prepare both for full work on their return. The Quarterly Conference, by arrangement previously, was deferred to some week night later when the pastor could be present.

The Helena charge, is to my mind, the most difficult one in the District, possibly in the Montana Conference. Some of the members doubt, and speak their minds freely, but I am glad to say, that those who have stood there longest, praying, working and giving, are very hopeful and greatly encouraged. They tell me they consider our cause there prospering. From all sides I learn that Price maintains a standard of excellence as a preacher. The Lord bless the pastor and flock, with courageousness of purpose, and perseverance to the end. Faithfulness surely has its reward.
